Looks Very Sweet at the Box Office

Bebe Daniels in "Dangerous Money" was the big film sensation on Broadway last week. A mop-up at the Rivoli and at any theatre in the land.

"Bebe Daniels' first starring vehicle is a case of good showmanship. She is now ready to take her place at the very top of her profession."
—American.

"Miss Daniels outshines any of her previous performances." —Times.

"An excellent picture and will go far. It has everything—an engrossing story, beautiful settings, a charming leading lady and good direction."

"One of the few really good films of the year. Be sure to see it." —Eve. Post.

—Morning Telegraph.

"Frank Tuttle has done excellent work in the directing. Bebe Daniels is more attractive than in anything we have ever seen her."
—Herald Tribune.

In choosing an alliance with Warner Brothers, Lee Ochs is a good enough showman to take into consideration that most of the productions produced by this firm are based on well known books. Therefore, whenever a Warner picture is presented at the Piccadilly it arrives with an advance welcome ready and waiting.

"This Woman" belongs in that category. As a book it met with a unanimous response from all lovers of popular fiction. As a picture it is true enough to the written word to receive the same flattering welcome.

The BELOVED BRUTE

By Kenneth Perkins

Here's picture drama. Here's pep and go and punch. Here's the kind of men every boy wants to be and every man wishes he might have been. Sturdy, rough and ready, quick to hit for honor's sake, fighting, scrapping, big men, living in a world of hard fisted fellows, where brawn and muscle and a lightning eye win and hold the right to live.

The winds of the open road, the joy of the endless trail, the romance of vagabondia, with the right girl along to safeguard and to fight for; that's the life! The fun of trouping show folk, the merry ballyhoo, the prophecies of the fortune teller and the turning of the death card, the wide flung challenge of the champion wrestler to the whole town and the match staged right there in the square.

Tex Rickard never put on a better show than that one!

Hard men and vicious men, crooks and lawbreakers, brutes of the waste lands, and among them one fighting upward seeking the light of goodness and the right to offer his love to the girl of his choice. And, a girl who knew when the man of her heart had found his soul!

A drama of everyman's dream in youth. You'll see yourself as you had hoped to be, and your sweetheart will see in these heroes of the open ways the man she KNOWS YOU ARE in your heart!

That's "The Beloved Brute!"

ALICE JOYCE has come back. Famous Players-Lasky has offered her the feminine lead in THREE BLACK PENNYS, Joseph Hergesheimer's greatest novel. And at the same time, Warner Brothers approach her with offers to feature her in Edith Wharton's prize-winning novel, THE AGE OF INNOCENCE, one of the screen plums of the year.

Here's a prediction—the seasoned artist, Alice Joyce, will make a far greater success than the old Alice ever enjoyed.

"SUNDOWN"

by E. J. HUDSON

Directed by

LAURENCE TRIMBLE and HARRY HOYT

Opens to capacity houses in Washington D.C.

Times

THE WASHINGTON TIMES—"'SUNDOWN,' Earl Hudson's super-Western at Crandall's Metropolitan this week, is worth going to see.

"'SUNDOWN' is a successor to 'THE COVERED WAGON' and none can say it is unworthy. Washington will see other pioneer pictures, but 'SUNDOWN' will rank as one of the best."

Post

THE WASHINGTON POST—" * * * Earl Hudson's epic of the trials of American cattle raisers surpasses anything in the line of Western pictures that has been shown here for some time. The opening yesterday was to full-capacity houses in the afternoon and evening. * * * The picture is one of the best put together in years."

Star

THE EVENING STAR—"'SUNDOWN,' the First National picture at Crandall's Metropolitan this week, presents an imposing spectacle of the last of the cattlemen of the great Western ranges.

"A tremendous stampede of what must have been thousands of cattle, which actually wreck an entire house; a sensational prairie fire; long, long trails of cattle, winding off into the distance, as far as the eye can reach; the story of a great love developed in the face of dire hardship—these elements all fuse into a whole which breathes of the grandeur of heroics."

News

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS—"There are big moments. There are some impressive scenes. There is an effect of a river rising to flood in the start of the big drive of 150,000 cattle from the plains of Wyoming or Nevada or somewhere like that to Mexico. We see motionless herds, and then a gradual gathering of momentum as the moving herds behind push those in front on in irresistible flood. That's big. The effect of it is big. It was no tryo in the engineering of effects who staged those feet of film."

MOVING PICTURE
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

The Editor's Views

SMALL town history is being made these days. Small town theatre men are discovering that there are more days in the week than they had ever counted.

"The Covered Wagon" is doing it.

The story deserves a chapter in any history of motion pictures that is ever written. For the small town men will never forget those extra days. They will watch for "The Iron Horse," "The Sea Hawk," and other big ones that will keep those days on the calendar.

A few weeks ago we published as a page feature what we considered one of the most interesting exhibitor letters ever appearing in a trade paper. An exhibitor in a town of four hundred population played "The Covered Wagon" for three days to an attendance of over sixteen hundred!

He had spent a hundred dollars advertising the show. If you don't know what a hundred means to the small town man, just glance at your right arm. But they responded in flivvers, on horseback, afoot, and in buckboards—for miles and miles.

And when it was all over the exhibitor rushed to his typewriter to tell our "Straight From the Shoulder" department about it.

We thought that an outstanding story.

But we've got another one for you next week. Another small town man. Some good salesman talked him into seven days on "The Covered Wagon." Then he had a misout on the first day, a dark house, and irate patrons. But with it all, the next six days killed the grouch, fired his enthusiasm—to the point where he wasn't satisfied till he told The World about it.

That's making history.

That's adding untold thousands to the possibilities on all big pictures—right in our own country. Why shed tears over the market in Timbuctoo when there are thousands of exhibitors all over this land waiting to be shown that there are more than three days in the week—waiting for the right pictures, and the right seat-selling help?

THERE'S a man in the back row sneering because I am talking about small town theatres in the same breath with "money." "Put them all together," he says, "and you won't have the price of a good meal."

Which reminds me of the job I'm having selling Moving Picture World to a certain advertiser. "Admitting that you have the most circulation," he grunts. "Big circulation must be all small town circulation—and that doesn't mean anything."

So I ask him to list from the contract register the first run and circuit bookings on a certain picture. He does it; we check against the subscription record, and the result astounds him.

But he isn't licked. "Oh, well," he grunts, "those real exhibitors get ALL the papers. That doesn't mean anything."

Coming and going. I've got too many small towns; the first runs who pay me cash don't mean anything; the answer must be that I've got too blamed many of all kinds.

IF there are any of you who think that Will Hays has a soft snap consisting of holding down a title and holding up a lot of dignity—here's an inside slant at the family's opinion of his job. Apropos of my recent editorial suggestion that the General prevail on his brother to tackle a clean-up in the magazine field, I receive the following letter:

HAYS AND HAYS
Attorneys-at-Law,
Sullivan, Ind.

Dear Mr. Welsh:

Will has just called my attention to your editorial and I have read it with interest. I have always thought I would like to have something to do with publishing, but if the proposed job would require as many hours as Will gives to his job, I would not touch it for ten times his salary. And that part of the suggestion is not any joke, either.

With kindest personal regards, I am,
Sincerely yours,
HINKLE C. HAYS.

There's a ring to that note telling me the Hays qualities must run through the family. In the event that overwork brings Will Hays to the necessity of a vacation, that is good news. He can put a capable substitute on the job and still keep the salary in the family—and the firm.

Robert E. Welsh

First Then— and Now!

When Adolph Zukor's only studio was a former armory on West Twenty-sixth Street;

When Carl Laemmle was a straight-from-the-shoulder trust buster;

When Richard Rowland was handling General Film in the Pittsburgh territory;

When David Griffith was producing for Biograph, and two reels constituted a feature—

Moving Picture World was on the job; HAD been on the job—

Serving the industry;

Serving exhibitors then, as it serves exhibitors today.

Serving the industry by building on the solid foundation that READER interest, support, and loyalty are the qualities that a trade paper must offer advertisers to SURVIVE.

Seventeen years of success is the best testimonial to the soundness of that policy.

The Hamilton National Bank

130 West 42nd Street

There are thousands of ambitious young men in the motion picture industry out of whose number tomorrow's leaders will be chosen.

Or rather, from whose number a FEW will forge to the front.

When that day comes, and you read their stories of success, we'll wager that you often find the first step in their climb was made the day they became acquainted with a modern bank's facilities for counsel and service.

Hamilton National confidently expects to play its part in the development of today's young men into tomorrow's leaders.

It offers the means of taking the first step: A Compound Interest Department.

A means of saving and earning — that is important, for no success is won without it.

But also: A means of demonstrating by actions that you are preparing for the day when that same bank can serve you in the bigger business operations that spell Success.

Go up Broadway to the Central Theater, any afternoon or evening. Stand around, if you can find standing room, and watch the crowd that mills around the lobby, takes in every photograph, and then finds its way to the ticket window. "Dante's Inferno" is the picture. One of the chief conversational topics on the main highway. In its fourth week and still packing them. Before the opening you could meet any two picture men and get two different views of what "Dante's Inferno" was going to do. Unless you happened to meet two old-timers simultaneously—and heard them talk about the pre-historic days of the picture business when you had to call the police out if you were lucky enough to have a print of one of the old time "Inferno's" billed. Then you got a positive answer. That has been borne out by the Broadway run. Score another bit of instinctive showmanship for Bill Fox.

The arguments are funny. One fellow says it's the lobby that does the trick. Then another pipes up, "Well, something had to pull them all the way downtown before they saw the lobby. It must be the title."

The third chap chimes in, "Rats, any real picture man could have told you there has always been a powerful freak pull to 'Dante's Inferno.' The church folks come to see a classic, the others come to see—oh, hell."

We know a big theater manager who has been begging certain producers for three years to make a modern, up-to-date "Inferno." That's what Fox has done. Now our theater friend is pacing the floor muttering, "I told you so."

Oscar Price speaking. With a new angle on the subject that is on everybody's tongue. Says, "I find independent producers worried to death because of all this exhibitor combination talk. It strikes me the opposite way. Katz, Mastbaum, Kunsky, Blank, and all those boys are exhibitors primarily, and will always remain so. They have no aching desire to produce all the pictures in the world. They have one ever-present problem—to fill thousands and thousands of seats. Keeping that in mind, I think anything that strengthens their own position stabilizes a market that will always be open to the independent with product to fill those seats. Shucks, I may step out and make some real pictures—aimed at filling seats. That strikes me as a good business to be in next year."

THE WEEK'S RUMOR

That the next big booking deal of the sort Sam Katz has been pulling in the mid-west will find Mastbaum in the spotlight. That it concerns extension into a neighboring big city. That like all rumor deals it is already simmering in the cup—but the cup may be spilled.

TAKE IT—OR LEAVE IT

Group of producers' representatives caucussing on who is the fastest-thinking, quick-on-the-trigger, over-the-desk-or-phone, executive with whom they come in contact. At last accounts the vote was a tie between Harry Schwalbe and Nick Schenck.

Anybody got nerve enough to make a nomination that will break into that tie?

While on producers' representatives. One of those gentlemen trying to sell to George Trendle, of Kunsky. Says George: "I don't want the picture. I want society dramas." The representative: "Well you don't want society dramas fifty-two weeks in the year, do you?" George: "Yes—if I can get them."

S. A. Jenkins and Bill Yearsley lunching at the Astor. Consensus of opinion seems to be that a certain up and coming young star by the name of Valentino might have vehicles worthy of the Popular Copyrights.

Bill Steiner returns to town hopping mad at the pessimists who persist in hanging crepe on the territorial market. "I just swung around the circle," says Bill, "and I'm not kicking. I'm sold out—and the studio can't step fast enough for me." On the way down the street we learn that Herman Jans has sold thirty-five per cent. of the country on his series—and he's only starting production. Then we encounter W. D. Russell, who is hitting the market with everything from Wesley Barry to westerns. Smile a yard wide. "Let the other fellows waste their time writing the obituaries," he chuckles. "I'm doing business at the old stand, doing nicely, thank you, and I'll be here tomorrow."

Sydney Cohen declares the exhibitor deserves a place in the sun. Various gentlemen in the business assert that they are already too hard-boiled.

Which reminds us. Eddie Eschmann's favorite greeting for Bill Cateret, of the Comerford circuit, is: "Hello, Hard-Boiled!" Bill says that propaganda doesn't kid him a bit.

Peter J. Brady spoke at the recent First National Bankers' Dinner and had to use half his speech explaining whether he was there as a labor leader, a bank president, or as editor of the City Record.

And by the way, how would you like to be sitting in Bruce Johnson's chair while an official of the Guarantee Trust told the guests—including your bosses—of the fine work you had done in England?

Or in Charles Pinkerton's seat while Vice-President Von Elm, of the Manufacturer's Trust, said: "Men like Pinkerton and Saunders are the ones who are bringing about the change in the banking attitude towards motion pictures."

Just after we got the views of Oscar Price in type we encountered Jack Woody and the slant he has on the booking combine situation doesn't go far from parallelling those of the former Government official. Jack went into the matter in detail, resulting in a story that you must read. It will be found on the second right hand page after this.

Look out for the Golden Tornado. Paramount's sales convention has held possession of the Pennsylvania Hotel this week. Soon you will see that Second Forty sweeping like a whirlwind through the country.

And in a few months you will hear some of the other boys saying: "Isn't it funny, Paramount got the jump on us again!"

And so it goes, year in and year out.

Put down for its money value to some exhibitor, somewhere, and because the statement came as a surprise, to us at least: An exhibitor at Atlantic City who books over fifty houses talking to the writer. "What line of comedies do you think average best all around at this minute?" "I dunno," answer we, cagily. "Fox," says the exhibitor. "And the new Van Bibber series he is just putting out are the best of the kind since the Drews. I thought that would surprise you—because there are a lot of things you New Yorkers don't know that we have to know out in the sticks—or buy red ink."

This Settles the Foreign Market

The Editor Serves Notice That the Following Reply of W. Stephen Bush to George Kann Closes the Subject in These Columns—For a Week or Two, at Least

By W. STEPHEN BUSH

I AM quite happy to note that my little article on the foreign markets, recently published in the World has evoked so many echoes. A discussion of the possibilities of the foreign market can only result in good.

Mr. Kann has recorded his dissent from my conclusions and thinks I am all wrong. He may be right. I am only an amateur prospector while he is a trained expert. There are some things, however, I would like to point out to Mr. Kann by way of enlightenment. He says American methods of advertising cannot be applied in Europe and cites the example of our most distinguished and accomplished publicity artist who seems to have been lost in Europe.

Mr. Harry Reichenbach, while not certain that he is the gentleman referred to, has, it seems to me, made a strong case out in his own defense. However, this may be a detail. Continental Europe and England differ somewhat. And it is of Continental Europe that I speak when I say I do not believe the need is for high-powered, specialized publicity experts. To convert the heathen in China, Africa, etc., we do not send famous theologians, but simple missionaries who can teach the natives the rudiments of doctrine.

There's your need: teaching the rudiments. Advertising the show is an unknown art. The very first principles of advertising are unknown. Mass psychology, brevity, condensation, differences between various forms of advertising are as mysterious to the European "ad" writers as algebra to the infant class. "Ads" are frequently written by distinguished scholars and literary heavy men, whose style harks back to the dull lustre of the mid-Victorian essayists. With us, brevity may be the soul of wit; in Europe, verbosity is the sure sign of genius.

Look at the billboards of Paris, Berlin, Rome, Vienna and other big Continental towns. Here in New York I can ride in a street car or on a bus, and, gazing at billboards and advertising signs, I can pick up what each writer has to say as I travel along. The only way to get the full meaning of the advertiser abroad is to stand in front of the billboard and study the "ad" as you would an inscription in Latin or Greek.

Only the exorbitant advertising rates of European newspapers keep the poets and essayists within limits.

Here's a startling statement appearing in Mr. Bush's letter: "EUROPE IS RECONCILED TO THE HAPPY ENDING!"

"Ads," as we look at it, ought to bring people into the theatre; the best that can be said for them on the other side is that they do not directly prevent people from coming to see the show.

There are Americans, Mr. Kann, who advertise in the American way and who have made a decided success of it. I mention my young friend, E. Zama, of Rome, who represents Universal in Italy. Drop him a line, care of Universal, via San Nicolo da Tolentino, Rome, Italy, and he will open your eyes. Ditto my friend Brink, formerly of Hodkinson and now engaged in the task of modernizing motion picture advertising in the city of Berlin. Ask him how he put over "The Ten Commandments." Even little Switzerland has tried American methods in showing and advertising films of First National. They will tell you at 383 Madison Avenue that it was quite a success.

Now, I uphold my contention that Europe stands where we were in 1907, and that in the next five years Europe will move ahead and cover about the same distance that we covered in those eventful five years. This is not at all an exclusive discovery of the writer. Jules Mastbaum, Sid Grauman and many lesser lights that have recently returned from abroad will tell you the same thing. Grauman wants to build theatres in Europe to be managed on American models and Jules is deeply interested in the possibilities. This naturally will mean more patronage, and more patronage means more films. No prettier "Sorites" or piling up of logical conclusions could be imagined —n'est-ce-pas Mr. Kann?

I persist in my firm belief that most of the films will be supplied from this side of the water. Three weeks in Europe will convince any person of ordinary powers of observation that European production is at its lowest ebb. I have been over there for three years. As a source of film supply, Europe cannot be considered seriously—not for the next five or ten years, anyway. You see, Mr. Kann, the question is not merely one of better photography, though that is important, too, and helps to account for the popularity of our films abroad. The cause of the favor our films have found in Europe lies much deeper. The American film takes a message of hope across the water. War-weary, tired Europe with its polyglot population, with its foolish notions of caste and dignity, afflicted with all the infirmities of age, knows of this new land beyond the seas with its youthful vitality, with its dynamic energy and its vast variety of huge cities and wide spaces. They all have heard and are hearing of this fabulous land, where you can travel from ocean to ocean without showing your passport or letting the police know where you sleep every night; this country where wages are high.

Believe me, Mr. Kann, Europe is tremendously interested in us. Europe admires our pioneer spirit which is always looking for new conquests now that the Indians are all on reservations and the stage coach has been replaced by the "Iron Horse." The new, free, happy, prosperous, romantic world beyond the sea is a subject of perpetual curiosity to the European. He wants to see the Americans at home. Maybe his imagination plays him false, maybe we are not half as romantic as he thinks we are, nor quite as free as we would like to be. Nevertheless, the European interest and curiosity persists. Our humor has a good deal to do with it—it is so fresh and spontaneous, perhaps rough at times and daring, but it makes them laugh. European producers take great care to label their comedies, lest they might be mistaken for scenics or tragedies or something—the American comedy needs no label.

Likewise, Mr. Kann, the European audience begins to like a happy ending.

American pictures have reconciled Europe's picture patrons to happy endings. By the way, even the European producers are adopting the glad finish. While formerly the rate of mortality in the cast was frightful, it is now confined to one, or at the most, two or three villains. The hero and heroine are generally permitted to live and marry; anyway, they are no longer extra hazardous risks. Whatever demand there still exists for horrible endings will no doubt be more than supplied by the native producer.

"Responsiveness in a Sales Force"

E. A. Eschmann, Caught in Offhand Moments, Succumbs to an Interview on Selling and the Men Who Sell — The Whip Versus Cooperation

By ROBERT E. WELSH

HERE is an interview that may never get into print. We have our doubts. For it didn't start out as an interview. It began as a series of informal chats with E. A. Eschmann, General Sales Manager of First National.

Then, one day, we suggested to "E. A." that we would like to put his words into the form of an interview. And we promised to "show proof" before allowing it to see print.

So here we are—approaching this task with reasonable doubt concerning its fate.

A sales manager will talk to you about his product—all day and half the night. He will talk to you about his men—for the extent of this page and the next. But when it comes to published opinions on the job of the sales manager his attitude is much the same as it is toward salesmen.

"Give me the man who will go out and SELL," he will tell you. "Rather than the man who can talk by the hour on theory and practice of selling. Deeds, not words!"

With which preamble we are going to do our worst. And hope for the best —with just a trifle of reliance on our own selling ability. If you see it in print we are good.

The problem of better selling is an important one—as important to the exhibitor as it is to the producer. For in this industry, as in any other, inefficient selling takes its toll of the customer just as certainly as it does of the manufacturer. The levy on the employer is direct; the penalty to the retailer is in the form that our schoolbooks called "indirect taxation."

When you mention "better selling" to E. A. Eschmann you discover that he harps on a single hobby. "To my mind," he declares, "greater sales efficiency is far more a matter of arming your men with information and confidence than it is of merely issuing the command, 'Go out and sell and get the price!'

"You can't send men to the firing line armed with the best rifles in the world—and a scanty supply of bullets. Put the home office back of the men with all the information, statistics, and resources at its command.

"Here at First National, for example, we are rather proud of what we call 'the little black book' and the results it has achieved. This consists of a pocket-size loose-leaf note-book which is in the possession of every branch manager. Each week he receives an additional page for the 'black book' on which is listed every essential fact concerning the operation of his office.

E. A. ESCHMANN

General Sales Manager of First National, snapped as he was strolling on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City.

"The sales top the page, followed by the expense total, which is then segregated into each item contributing to that figure—physical operation, rent, selling expenses, telegrams, and so on. In addition to the dollars and cents figure we give him the percentage each item bears to the whole, And we even go so far as to allocate the share of home office expense which his branch bears.

"At the end of every three-month period a different colored sheet is sent the manager giving him the same information by quarters.

"Mind you, this is all in such compact form that it could be slipped into a man's coat pocket.

"What is the result? It is every bit as if each manager had the services of a high-priced efficiency man. At a glance he can compare conditions week by week, can check against the same week the previous year. He not only acquires the feeling that he is in business for himself—that is valuable. But further, the home office has supplied him with service that he could not afford to hire were he running his own individual exchange.

"Isn't it to be expected that better selling and more efficient operation are the results? Arm the right men with all the information you can and the result is as certain as a two plus two calculation."

We spoke of "Contact" the First National sales department publication and volunteered the opinion that it was the best sales organ we had seen in the industry. We expanded: Why if we were a salesman in the Hochstetter territory we think we could get inspiration and a thrill out of "Contact." There's a certain spirit to it. It doesn't sound like a lot of high-brow theorists and hack writers back in the home office dashing off American Magazine articles on "How to Sell." It seems to be a product of an ENTIRE selling organization, to the extent that if we were the newest poster clerk in the organization it would convince us that we had become "one of the gang." Some sales organs, we ventured, seem to be edited by men whose sales experience began and ended the day they got the editorial job; others have "D-R-I-V-E" in big type so constantly that your real salesman soon learns that he can save the time of reading them; while "Contact" says "Pull Together" with every key on the piano.

And the greatest of these is "PULL TOGETHER." But just a minute, it is E. A.'s turn to talk:

"I am not in sympathy with the type of sales management that places all emphasis on the driving of men. I don't believe in constant, never-ending, high-pressure, super-heated belaboring of your men. You may get results that way, but it is my opinion in the end you succeed also in sapping strength, draining self-confidence, and quenching enthusiasm. If you want to drive from Here to Somewhere you don't do it by welding the whip at the starting point and continuing to swing it until the horse drops in the traces. You know your animal, you know the distance to be covered, you know the time at your disposal. Just add your judgment to the horse's strength and you'll get there on time—with a live animal still in your possession.

"We all want good sales organizations at our command; let us admit that we have the personnel that makes good organizations. But the way I see it the quality that raises the good sales organization to the level of great is the attribute of RESPONSIVENESS. That's a single word meaning the ability to respond to the call when occasion demands it—to respond with efforts even above the best of the past. You'll never get that quality of 'responsiveness' out of men

Coming and Going

Charles Skouras of St. Louis left New York for his home on October 22. He came East to attend the First National convention at Atlantic City, and after that was over gave Film Row the "once over."

Neal Hart, one of the stars appearing in William Steiner Productions for the independent market, arrived in New York October 18 from the Coast. He will return in about a week.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., arrived in New York this week. He will remain here for a few days.

Samuel Goldwyn left New York for Los Angeles on October 21. He expects to remain on the West Coast for about a month.

After spending two years in the Arctic region, where he utilized 75,000 feet of film in pictures, Captain Kleinschmidt, explorer, arrived in New York this week for an indefinite stay.

Ben Warner, father of the Warner Brothers, who operates a theatre in Niles, O., not far from Youngstown, O., has been visiting in New York for the past few days.

H. M. Warner has arrived in Hollywood at the Warner Brothers' West Coast studios, after his trip east, and expects to start construction work on the new theatre on his company's studio property.

Rex Ingram has arrived in Paris and is setting up headquarters in preparation for the filming of "Mare Nostrum," the Blasco Ibanez novel which he is to direct for Metro-Goldwyn.

J. S. Jossey, president of Progressive Pictures, Cleveland, is in New York for a conference with W. E. Shallenberger, Arrow Pictures Corporation.

Benjamin Glazer, playwright and scenarist, has arrived in New York from the Coast, having come east to assist in the production of his new play, "Foam." John Golden has scheduled its production for this fall.

Jackie Coogan and his parents are expected to arrive in New York from their European trip by November 3.

R. H. Gillespie and H. M. Tennant of the Moss Empire Circuit, England, left New York for their home on October 18.

Robert T. Kane left New York for the Coast October 18. He will not return East until he has completed a contract with Paramount for two pictures.

"Doc" Golden, Metro-Goldwyn's New England supervisor, is in New York from Boston for a few days.

Herman Garfield, producer for the state right market, is now in California.

Joseph Schenck and a party including Artie Stebbins left for California on the afternoon of October 22.

John C. Brownell, scenario editor, expects to leave New York on October 25 for the Coast where he plans to spend about three months.

Ben Amsterdam returned to Philadelphia on October 22 after spending several days in New York.

M. J. Mince of the Cameo Music Company is spending several days in Chicago. He expects to be back in New York early next week.

Tony Luchese of the DeLuxe Film Exchange, Philadelphia, has returned to his home after several days in New York.

ALBERT E. SMITH

Vitagraph Chief and Mrs. Smith snapped just before their liner steamed out of New York for London.

Max D. Weinberger, who was recently appointed by J. G. Bachmann as sales manager of Schulberg Productions, left this week on a sales trip through the middle west.

Albert E. Smith, head of Vitagraph, and Mrs. Smith left New York last week for London. There Smith will confer with Rafael Sabatini and make arrangements in that city for the formal opening of "Captain Blood." They will also visit the Vitagraph office in Paris, returning home in about six week.

J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of B. P. Schulberg Productions, arrived this week in Hollywood where he is conferring with Schulberg on production plans for the coming months. Bachmann will return to the East in about seven weeks.

Harry Weaver of the H. B. Weaver Productions is in New York City from Tacoma, Washington, for a special conference with F. G. Conklin and with national distributors, regarding the distribution of four pictures to be made on the coast.

F. C. Munroe president of Producers Distributing Corporation is on a tour of the company's branches in the Eastern and Central divisions.

Claude Friese-Greene, inventor of the Friese-Greene Color Film Process and his business manager, Stuart M. Johnson, who were in New York city last season, are returning from London on October 24 to establish laboratories in America similar to those owned by the inventor in England.

Charles H. Christie of the Christie Film Company arrived in New York this week. He will confer with executives of Producers Distributing Corporation on methods for handling a number of current Christie features.

Edwin C. Hill is expected to leave this week for the William Fox West Coast Studios, where he will have an important position in the production department of Fox Film Corporation. For the past few months, Hill has been in charge of the Eastern production department.

Allan Dwan is going to Paris the latter part of this month for a rest and incidentally to film exterior scenes for Paramount's "Coast of Folly," which will be Gloria Swanson's next picture under his direction.

After spending ten weeks supervising production in Hollywood Jesse Goldberg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, is scheduled to return to his offices in New York this week.

Court Decides for Fox

Rules "Art Mix" in Large Type Is Unfair Competition

The Superior Court of California has upheld Fox Film Corporation, the latter announces, in its action to restrain Art Mix Productions, Inc., from use of the name Mix on motion picture accessories and in advertising in a manner which they contend, was misrepresentation designed to thrive on the reputation of Tom Mix, the Fox western star. The court has held that use of the name "Art Mix" in large type was unfair trade competition, according to Fox Film Corporation.

Fire at Universal

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the contents of a two-story concrete building at Universal's plant at Coytesville, N. J., on October 23, but was prevented from spreading to the laboratory or studio buildings nearby. At the present it is impossible to estimate the intrinsic loss, from a sentimental and historical standpoint, however, the loss is irreparable as the building was used exclusively to house films made ten or more years ago, including Mary Pickford, Owen Moore, Louise Fazenda and Lon Chaney pictures. Negative of President Carl Laemmle's first production "Hiawatha" is believed to have been in the building.

A Film Export Record

August Shipments Total in Value Over $1,000,000

Washington, D. C.—A new high record in film exports was made in August, which shipments to foreign countries totaled more than $1,000,000 in value, it is announced by the Department of Commerce. Our exports in that month, reports to the department show, included 6,357,739 linear feet of raw stock, valued at $139,476; 1,188,238 feet of negatives, with a value of $244,339, and 19,636,791 feet of positives, worth $685,140.

Analysis of the figures shows that England, during the month, imported 4,933,557 feet of positive film, valued at $155,371, also a record. Exports to Australia included 2,419,173 feet of positive film, valued at $88,043, while Canada took 1,996,615 feet, valued at $80,365, and Argentine 1,679,136 feet, worth $63,133.

Col. Joy Touring South

Hays Unit Executive Advocating Saturday Morning Kid Shows

Colonel Jason S. Joy, executive secretary of the committee on public relations of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, left the Hays headquarters on October 22 for a tour of 25 Southern cities.

Joy expects to be absent from New York for about one month. He will address local exhibitor organizations and stress the importance of Saturday morning matinees for children, which is already being promoted with much success, the Hays organization reports, in several sections of the South.

Rapf Recuperating

Harry Rapf, associate production executive of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, is convalescing from a minor operation recently performed at Hollywood Hospital.

Woody Scouts Alarm Talk; Doesn't Fear Buying Groups

DISTRIBUTION isn't endangered by expanding circuits or the tendency toward combination booking. Trade developments along these lines may occasion problems, but they are not conditions which justify alarm.

Such is the opinion of a distribution and production executive—J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors.

"The World's editorial of last week, growing out of comment heard at the First National convention," he comments, "was quite as interesting for what it did not say as for what it did say.

"But wasn't a more definite answer really available to the inquiry regarding the effect upon rentals of changing buying conditions? Indeed, is there a better reply to be found than in First National's own franchise rates?

"These contracts, or many of them, were taken several years ago. They had a long time to run and were supposed to span the future safely. They were arrangements for service, which, if unaffected by changing conditions, should have stood solidly until their legal termination.

"But have they so stood? Are the rates at present in effect even fairly comparable to those originally paid? I do not imagine anyone would argue there is much doubt about the answer.

"However, I'm not citing First National franchise as a horrible example. It furnishes a continuing comparative, that's all; it reaches out of the past into the present; is a trustworthy record of minimum price variations. Any other set of rentals from any other distributing concern, covering the same period, would show similar fluctuations and equally as satisfactorily answer your inquiry.

"But First National is an exhibiting as well as a distributing and producing organization. And if there have been variations in rentals is it not safe to assume that they have been permitted as a result of first-hand knowledge of actual retailing conditions? Whether the immediate tendency in prices is upward or downward is not so much a matter of centralized buying power as of the general business situation.

"I'm not in the least worried by the unquestioned steady decrease in the number of picture buyers or the corresponding increase in unification of theatre ownership. Canada is very nearly a one-man territory, but that development has not robbed distribution of a profitable market.

"From the standpoint of insuring adequate distribution returns, I would much prefer to do business with a few large buyers than with a multitude of small ones. Reduced selling costs would alone almost compensate for any inconveniences which might be suffered.

"I have no fear that buying power will ever dominate this industry, or any other, sufficiently to make productions and distribution unprofitable. To me, combinations such as now are taking place seem but the inevitable results of development. You will notice, however, that they are by no means confined to exhibitors. The mass is solidifying, top, center and bottom—production, distribution and exhibition—and it probably will continue so to do for some time to come.

"No one questions that attempts are made here and there to take unfair advantage of a situation. Unquestionably there are exhibitors in non-competitive towns who utilize their temporary advantage to the detriment of those who give them service. But do distributors, righteously incensed by these awful examples, attempt always to point the better way by declining to exact their pound of flesh when bargaining among competitors for the sale of pictures?

"The alarmist, like Big Ben, goes off automatically. He can show you one day that the large producer-distributors are slowly dominating exhibition, leaving nothing for either the small exhibitor or the competing distributor, and he can argue just as effectively and noisily a week later against the manifold dangers to the distributor and producer of the leech-like circuits and booking combinations.

"Probably it's true that the blue sky days of the motion picture business have melted into history. But what right have we to compare the present more reasonable conditions of manufacture and sale with an obviously unstable and temporary situation such as existed a few years ago?

"Production once consisted of turning a crank, and so did distribution and exhibition. Today, all three departments of the business require money and brains. And they will require more and more of both as time passes. Let that worry whomever it may."

Balaban-Katz and Kunsky Agree

A complete agreement, it is announced, between the Kunsky Theatre Circuit and the Balaban & Katz Circuit has been reached, under the terms of which the new Balaban & Katz theatre and the Kunsky chain become one company.

This agreement includes the purchase of a block of stock in the Kunsky Circuit by the Chicago people, and is a constructive advance for the entire industry, as it not only gives the Kunsky Circuit the benefit of the strength of the Chicago Circuit, but will prove a wonderful thing for Balaban & Katz.

With this new theatre in Detroit, together with the new State Theatre now being built by Kunsky, Detroit will be prepared to adequately take care of all high grade motion pictures.

Lay Foundation for $1,500,000 and 2700 Seat Chicago Theatre

EXCAVATION has started for the new $1,500,000, 2,700-seat motion picture theatre in the Lincoln-Robey-Belleplaine building, Chicago, to contain also stores and apartments. The theatre has been leased by Andrew Karzas, operating the Woodlawn Theatre and the Trianon. The design will have many unique details, according to Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect.

The exterior of the theatre is to be of chamois colored brick trimmed with cutstone and Adam period design. The facade or entrance will have a pediment of carved cutstone and a rich cast iron marquise from which floodlights will illuminate the arch. The passage to the theatre will be through a high elliptical lobby done in richly carved stone and plamed plaster.

The foyer will have a heavily coffered ceiling in walnut polychromed in antique golds, reds and blues contrasting with a black and white marble floor. On one side of the foyer is to be a carved fireplace with low divans.

The auditorium is to be horseshoe shaped and of Spanish renaissance style with a fringe of boxes. The ceiling over the boxes will be of polychromed walnut beams. A large dome with ornamental border with a large plaster sunburst where the dome adjoins the proscenium will serve as a ceiling to the auditorium. Joseph Holpuch has the general contract. The public will be asked to give the theatre a name in a prize contest.

Bed Is Desk

You can't keep a good man down. From his bed in a hospital at Duquoin, Ill., Tom McKeen, an exchange manager of St. Louis, who was injured in an automobile accident on Thursday, October 9, has closed a number of contracts for the new product of his organization, according to Moving Picture World's correspondent in St. Louis.

Fox is Golf Wizard

With One Hand, Big Producer Makes Ninth Hole on Difficult Course

William Fox has qualified as an active member of the "Hole-In-One Club" as the result of a remarkable golf game in which he participated on Sunday, October 19. Playing with one hand, his left arm being incapacitated by an old injury, Fox succeeded in making the difficult ninth hole, with a water hazard, at the Woodmere Country Club, in one stroke.

Fox was playing a three-some at the time. The other players in the match were Leo C. Teller of the Shubert-Teller Theatre in Brooklyn and J. L. Rubenstein, a New York merchant.

Fox's card showed a 92 for the 18 holes.

Meighan Accorded Honor

Thomas Meighan, widely known screen star was elected Shepherd of the Lambs at their annual meeting recently. This is the first time a motion picture actor has held the office of Shepherd, that post having been filled for the last fifty years by famous actors, stage directors and widely known persons in professional life. The Lambs is the oldest and most celebrated theatrical organization in America.

Kate Lester Dies

One of the most tragic deaths in the picture colony occurred when Kate Lester, veteran actress and screen character woman, died at the Hollywood Hospital from burns received in an explosion in her dressing-room at Universal City. The explosion was heard by studio attaches who rescued the actress after breaking down the dressing-room door. Miss Lester was found unconscious with hair, face and hands badly burned by a burst of flame.

Discuss Music Tax

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware are in special session today, October 23, at the Hotel Vendig, Philadelphia. The main topics under discussion are the emergency lighting situation, particularly pertinent to Pennsylvania, and the music tax problem.

Made Technical Head

H. W. Wilcox, for the past three years technical director of the William Fox studios in Los Angeles, has been appointed in the same capacity at the Peninsula Studios in San Mateo, California. The experience he has had in the south makes him a decided asset to the northern studios where production is now being carried on in a regular program.

Change Branch Heads

Changes in the managerial heads of their Kansas City and Minneapolis branches were announced by Producers Distributing Corporation upon the appointment of Charles Knickerbocker as manager of the Kansas City exchange to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of L. W. Alexander.

Mr. Knickerbocker has been in charge of the Minneapolis branch and in transferring him to Kansas City the Producers Distributing Corporation has promised Mr. Feldman from the sales force to the position of Minneapolis manager.

F. P.-L. Sales Session

Under the general direction of Sidney R. Kent, the semi-annual Paramount Sales Convention has been in session all this week at the Hotel Pennsylvania. All district and branch managers are in attendance. Product and policies for the next six months are being discussed.

Takes New Offices

The Independent Pictures Corporation, of which Jesse J. Goldburg is president, has just moved its New York executive offices into new quarters which occupy twice the space in the Loew State Building that were used by the offices heretofore.

One Killed, Thirty Injured, in Kentucky Theatre Panic

THE worst stampede ever known in a picture theatre in Kentucky occurred on the night of October 22 at the New Castle Theatre, operated in Ross Hall, owned and operated by F. J. Jahrie, at New Castle, Ky., and occupying the second floor of the building. One 10-year-old girl was killed and over thirty injured, ten seriously, and three of them may die.

The stampede was caused when flames broke out in the projection booth and there was a rush to the main stairway. It was reported that out few persons tried to use the other exit. There were about 250 or 300 persons in the hall, viewing a showing of "The Covered Wagon." Jahries was in the projection room, a fireproof 7 x 7 room, hung from the ceiling at the rear. He got out with slight burns, and the fire burned itself out within a few minutes without doing any damage to the building.

However, the panic-stricken crowd rushed the main doorway, jammed the stairway and many were knocked down and trampled in the rush for the street. A political meeting was underway at the court house. People from the courthouse tried to rush into the picture theatre, which further blocked efforts of those on the inside to get out.

There has been a fight against picture theatres except on ground floors, and in many towns of the state there are ordinances prohibiting second-floor picture theatres. Indications are that as a result of the New Castle catastrophe legislation will be enacted at the next session of the Kentucky General Assembly prohibiting the use of anything but ground-floor theatres equipped with proper exits.

It is said that there was an abnormally large number of children in the crowd. Parents had left them at the theatre while attending the political meeting.

A Wedding Anniversary

More than seventy-five members of the Hollywood film colony attended the tenth wedding anniversary celebration given by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Warner at the Montmarte Cafe, Wednesday, October 15. Sam Solomon, father of Mrs. Warner, was among those present.

Mr. Warner—who is the particular one of the four Warner brothers known most intimately by the folks on the Warner lot on the West Coast—expects to do a little more honeymooning in the near future when he and Mrs. Warner will spend a couple of months in Europe. Their sailing is being arranged for some time in December, or just as soon as Mr. Warner's duties at the studio are lightened a little by a letting-up in the production schedule, which has recently been a particularly arduous one.

Approves Hays' Plan

Will Hays' plan to provide an adequate pension for aged ministers and for their families in the event of their death was endorsed by the New Jersey Synod of the Presbyterian Church at its 102nd annual meeting held this week in Atlantic City, N. J., according to press dispatches from that city. The proposition of the head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who is chairman of the General Assembly's committee on ministerial relief and sustenation, calls for the support of about 4,000 ministers and their churches in the country to aid him to raise $15,000,000 for the pension fund.

Van Raalte Injured

Simon Van Raalte, 65 years old, prominent St. Louis capitalist, who is financially interested in a number of theatres in St. Louis and East St. Louis, was injured seriously on October 14 when run down by a speeding automobile in that city. The driver of the machine did not stop but sped away. He was taken to the Jewish Hospital where it was found he had sustained a fracture of the right leg and severe internal injuries.

Lopez Leaves Ochs

His contract with the Greenwich Village Follies, it is said, made it necessary for Vincent Lopez on October 24 to surrender his baton, as leader of the Piccadilly orchestra, to Lee Ochs, owner of the new Broadway Theatre.

Lopez's successor is Mischa Guterson, formerly with Sid Grauman on the West Coast. The new Piccadilly conductor left Russia, his native country, in 1904 when he came to America. He is hailed as one of the pioneers in the adaptation of musical accompaniment to the silent drama.

McConnell Appointed

Serial Expert Takes "U" Post Vacated by Fred C. Quimby

Fred McConnell, one of the best known men in the short product field is Universal's new short product manager, replacing Fred C. Quimby, who resigned from that position early in October. McConnell has been identified with Universal for many years. Recently he has been in charge of serial production at Universal City. Prior to that he was serial sales manager at the Universal home office.

As serial sales manager, McConnell had much to do with planning Universal's serial output.

Bankruptcy Proceeding

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Selznick Distributing Corporation was filed in the Federal Court Wednesday by the following creditors: Myron Selznick, Murray Garsson and Kaplan and Barnett. No statement has been issued by anyone at the Selznick offices. It is understood that the bankruptcy petition is the first step in a move on the part of Lewis J. Selznick to regain control of the company's affairs.

Irving Lesser Marries

Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal Pictures Corporation, was married Monday, October 20, to Miss Helen Shaw, member of an old Philadelphia family. After the ceremony the newly-married couple went away for a brief wedding journey. Only the immediate families of both parties attended the ceremony.

Open Sunday by Individual Appeal, Urges Bullock of Ohio

THERE is only one way to make legal the exhibition of motion pictures on Sunday and that is by individual exhibitor appeal to all state legislative candidates, followed where necessary by slide appeals to patrons to force the issue," says Sam Bullock, field representative of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio. He continues:

"It is of no use whatever to emphasize the friendship or enmity of whoever happens to be governor. Senators' and Representatives' votes are what you want. Governors are human and are seldom deaf to public sentiment expressed at the polls or through legislative members.

"If movie patrons and managers can impress 66 Representatives out of 130, favorable to a Sunday local option law like New York has had for years, those towns and cities that afterwards vote a majority 'Aye' will get Sunday movies and the blue law of 1881 will be repealed so far as they are concerned.

"Of course it will be necessary to pass that same local option law in the Senate, requiring 18 Senators' consent out of 35. These 130 Representatives and 35 Senators represent the 88 counties of Ohio. The smallest exhibitor with only a few thousand dollars invested has hundreds of voter patrons to support him in his demand for Sunday local option. It is up to him to make that demand now!

"The exhibitor is really the spokesman for his patrons. He should, with his investment at stake, take the trouble to personally interview the Representative and Senator candidates on both tickets. The personal touch is necessary. If there are several exhibitors they should bury their foolish personal animosities and call on the candidates together. This applies especially to small towns. The small-town statesman can be impressed only when you make it known to him that you have a following at each theatre whose innocent pleasure is at stake.

"The small-town statesman who does not hear from the small-town exhibitor will not listen to a big city exhibitor next January at the state capitol. You lose if you bet otherwise.

"I experienced that for three agonizing months at Columbus two years ago and found dozens of such who did not know the name of a single exhibitor, though all admitted attending the movies more or less. Is it any wonder 50-odd counties are closed?

"It is impossible in such cases for a representative of the M. P. T. O. to make an impression, for the Lord's Day Alliance paid lobbyist is always on the job with 20 or 30 form letters, duly signed by their kind, and though they may be thousands of voters in that constituency the exhibitor and his patrons are unseen and unheard among the lawmakers.

"The big city and big town 'locals' of Ohio will answer for their Representatives and Senators in these days of industrial unrest, and Cleveland is setting the pace in interviewing all candidates, although Cleveland is in little danger from the so-called Sunday Law. However, these constituencies alone cannot muster the necessary 66 Representatives and 18 Senators, and if the small-town exhibitor will do his part our Sunday local option bill will go through next session with a big majority as we should not be satisfied with a bare margin of safety of one in each House.

"A simple slide—'Patrons in favor of a local option law for Sunday exhibitions will please sign a petition in the lobby'—will prove wonderfully effective with misinformed and uninformed statesmen.

"As a last-minute experiment during last session I sent petitions to about a dozen exhibitors, applying this treatment to statesmen who were bitterly opposed to us through the influence of Lord's Day Alliance form letters. In some instances (Murphy of Wilmington and others) petitions were back at Columbus containing 600 names and over in 48 hours from time of receipt at the theatre and in every instance the statesman changed his mind—one in particular becoming very aggressive for us.

"You have 'sold' many ideas to your patrons for your town, state and nation. Now 'sell' something for yourself and the M. P. T. O. Send me your name for our legislative list—NOW!"

Ufa Heads Visit the U. S.; Expect Much of "Siegfried"

By SUMNER SMITH

DR. KALLMANN, president of the Ufa Film Producing Corporation, Berlin; Ehrich Pommer, one of the directing heads, and Fritz Lang, director of the Nibelungen Saga, "Siegfried," recently arrived in New York from Germany and are now proceeding to the West Coast for a survey of motion picture conditions and methods in the United States. They expect to return to Germany in about two months.

The intent of Ufa is to produce films with an international appeal, Mr. Pommer said, and in "Siegfried" he believes that the company has realized its intention. The stills of this ten-reel production, which he displayed, are remarkably beautiful and augur well for the finished product on the screen. It was eighteen months in the making.

Primarily this is a love story, according to Mr. Pommer, but one embellished with fantastic, mythological backgrounds that do not check the movement of the story or withdraw attention from it. The characters are not treated fantastically as to clothing or gesture, but more as the modern imagination would picture them. For instance, beards were taboo though they probably would have been historically correct, and the players are young and attractive to modern eyes.

To illustrate his point that the love story obtains precedence over the backgrounds, Mr. Pommer pointed to a scene of Brunhilde leaving her ship on the raised shields of soldiers, joined together to form a high, dry landing stage. This, he said, some American directors would have treated in a spectacular way, while Director Lang used it only as an incident in the development of the story.

The backgrounds are especially interesting. Wierd effects have been obtained through the use of artificial lighting outdoor at night. There are enormous dragons manipulated by a dozen or so men concealed within the body of the supposed beasts.

Mr. Pommer said Ufa plans from four to six big features a year, the number depending upon the speed with which each is produced. In answer to a question if American methods would be followed, he said that there would be no attempt to produce directly for the American market but, rather, an attempt to develop a point of international appeal in each film. He did not think that the way to artistic and material progress lay through copying the other fellow's ideas to the exclusion of exercising one's own brain powers of imagination and ingenuity.

First of Chain

Warner Bros. to Start Building Big Los Angeles Theatre Soon

Word from Hollywood is to the effect that everything is in readiness to begin actual construction work on the Warner Bros. theatre on their studio property immediately upon the return to the West Coast of H. M. Warner who has been east for some time.

Detailed plans have been perfected and even the decorative scheme, inside and out, has been worked out in a small model constructed by Louis Gieb, art director of the Warner Bros. organization.

The Los Angeles link in the Warner Bros. national chain of theatres is a very live issue and, incidentally, the box-office receipts from this house are expected to add materially to the Warner Bros. exchequer from the very start for there is no location in the country which figures better for a theatre than the one which the Warners are building.

Denial by Receiver

Francis G. Conklin, Receiver of Preferred Pictures, denies a report that the receivership has been cleared up. Conklin has been serving as receiver in equity under an order of appointment of Federal Judge Hand. The statement of the receivership shows that the gross and the gross collections of the Preferred Pictures, approximate what they were immediately before the appointment of the receiver.

New Exchange

In order to increase the efficiency of its service to exhibitors in the central section of New York State, Producers Distributing Corporation has established a new exchange at 680 Broadway, Albany, N. Y. F. S. Hopkins who has been covering the territory as a member of the sales force has been appointed manager of the new exchange.

New Beverly Playhouse

The new Beverly Playhouse, which is being erected on Canyon Drive in Beverly Hills at the cost of $250,000 for the West Coast Theatres, Inc., is now nearing completion. The structure, the exterior of which is stucco and art stone, will have an interior of Moorish architecture and seat some 1,500 persons. Of the investment sum, $150,000 is being expended on special decorative furnishings and concert organ.

No "Bomb" Throwing

Judge O. D. Wheeler in the district court at Council Buffs, Ia., last week signed a permanent injunction against the union motion picture projectionists restraining them from interfering in any way with the moving picture house owners of Council Bluffs.

The action came as the final result of a strike that started more than a year ago, when union projectionists were charged with throwing "stink bombs" into moving picture houses in Council Bluffs.

HARRY ENNIS

We stood in the Screen Club with him—how many years ago is that? We strode up and down Broadway with him stopping actors for stray bits of news—how many years ago is that? We argued the picture business with him—that's not so many years ago. And through it all—we stood at the side of a regular fellow; we walked shoulder to shoulder with a regular fellow; we argued with a regular fellow.

It's hard to say that Harry Ennis has passed away. But it's easy to say that we can only hope when our day comes the slate that we carry to the beyond will be as clean. And the good words that follow us as many, and as sincere. Good-by, Harry.—R. E. W.

Harry Ennis, who died at the Methodist-Episcopal Hospital on Sunday, October 12 following an operation for appendicitis, was ill only seven days. He was born in Brooklyn, New York, and had a career that included vaudeville appearances, music publishing and writing, and a long period of service on the staff of Variety. Shortly before his death he left Variety to become general press representative of the various motion picture enterprises sponsored by the Weiss Brothers.

Harry Ennis was a member of the Brooklyn Lodge of Elks, the Friars, the National Vaudeville Artists Association, the Knights of Columbus and the Burlesque Club. He was in his forty-fourth year and is survived by his widow, Sadie Ennis, his mother and father, Emma I. Ennis and Richard J. Ennis, and his brothers, Leslie and Bert.

Hundreds, members of the various branches of the amusement business, paid tribute to the memory of Mr. Ennis prior to his burial on Thursday, October 16 at Holy Cross Cemetery, at Brooklyn, New York, and the funeral was attended by several hundred people including Sime Silverman, editor of Variety and his entire staff.

Opens N. Y. Exchange

Paul Swift long known in motion picture circles, announces the opening of an Independent exchange, with temporary headquarters located at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York City, for the distribution of Independent product in the territory of greater New York and northern New Jersey.

Dempsey to Appear

Headliners Announced for Loew Metro-Goldwyn Club Ball

In addition to Mary Eaton and the entire company of "Kid Boots," the stars and girls of the Ziegfeld Follies, the principals and chorus of "Scandals," Eddie Cantor, Mayor of Broadway and other stage and screen stars too numerous to mention, Jack Dempsey will appear at the Second Annual Ball of the Loew Metro-Goldwyn Club, which is to be held at the Hotel Astor on Saturday evening, November 1.

N. T. G., the Gold Medal Radio Broadcaster of the WHN broadcasting station, New York, is in charge of the entertainment and has induced the champion to participate. Ned Wayburn, director of the Ziegfeld Follies, is staging the entertainment. Morris Gest is honorary chairman of the entertainment committee.

Wayburn has already secured the entire finale of the first part of the "Greenwich Village Follies," including the Dolly sisters, Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, and the "Totem" number from Arthur Hammerstein's musical comedy "Rose Marie." Earl Carroll's "Vanities" will contribute two spectacular chorus numbers to the festivities. Twelve orchestras in addition to the Lopez aggregation will play during the evening.

Weil with Artclass

Jesse Weil, well-known screen exploiteer and publicity man, has been engaged as advertising director and publicity manager for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation. This post was vacated recently by the death of Harry Ennis.

Levine With Sanford

George Levine has recently been appointed sales manager for the Sanford Productions of Hollywood, according to the advice of Frank M. Sanford, the president of the company. Levine is now making a tour of the distributing exchanges throughout the United States, and only left the coast a few days ago.

Portland Still Leads

First National's Eschmann Month drive passed the half-way mark last week with the field force still a-tiptoe in its effort, conspicuously successful so far, to roll up the biggest business that any sales drive in the history of the company has achieved. The sales contest has four weeks still to run.

At the end of the fourth week a new percentage record of success had been reached. The sales for the entire country were 98.97 per cent. of the assigned quota, a substantial increase over the second week with 98.63 per cent., the high mark of the first three weeks.

Portland still heads all of the branches with a bigger lead over its closest competitor than it had at the end of the third week. The race is not yet over by any means and any one of a dozen or more branches still has an opportunity to capture first prize.

Less than a year since its release date Douglas MacLean's first comedy triumph released through Associated Exhibitors, "Going Up", has reached its 50000th theatre. The production is still booking extensively.

Sol Lesser Gives Reasons for Publicizing Author as a Star

By TOM WALLER

NEXT to the Bible the works of Harold Bell Wright have the greatest circulation. This information Sol Lesser, president of Principal Pictures, said he found in a recent issue of Literary Digest. He quotes that periodical as estimating that the Wright circulation in America alone is in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 books. Figuring that about five persons have read each book he approximates that in excess of 50,000,000 Americans are familiar with Wright's literary style.

These are primary among other facts and figures concerning Harold Bell Wright which inspired Lesser to exploit that author's name in type as large as the title of his screened story. In other words President Lesser stars Harold Bell Wright in all of his advertising copy and publicity as well. It would seem that the Principal Pictures chief is establishing a precedent in this respect. He is satisfied it is bringing results which promise to exceed the return from the "playing up" of the name of the average star. But there are other reasons, just as important.

In the first place Lesser admires Wright as a man and as an author. Wright has a message to deliver in all of his works: that the surest way to achieve a fully developed world is to develop physical man as well as his intellect. According to Lesser, Wright advocates a certain amount of hard muscle as well as an acute cerebrum.

Lesser believes that it is Wright's sincere and consistent adherence to this message, an underlying theme in all of his novels, to which may be chiefly attributed this author's unusual popularity with the American masses.

Altogether Lesser has spent two months in direct contact with Wright. This time, of course, is a summary of periods the Principal chief has spent on the Wright locale. But two months has been for Lesser, a keen observer of men, more then sufficient time for him to reach correct conclusions as to the character of this author.

Two years ago Lesser secured screen rights to the highly successful Wright novels. It was no easy matter. Wright, first of all had to be hunted to the door of his haunt in a tiny Arizona hamlet. Like a true artist of the brush and palette, Wright and his typewriter get the genuine atmosphere by traveling to the landmark or the country where the embryonic story is budding.

When Lesser convinced Wright that Principal Pictures Corporation would convey the Wright message as well as the Wright story to the screen, Harold Bell Wright was won over to the cinema. Wright now collaborates with Sol Lesser and the director in picking the cast, writing the subtitles, and supervising production on all of his scenarized stories. They have to bear his "O. K." before they are released by Principal, Sol Lesser declares.

Realism is Sol Lesser's aspiration for every Principal production. "I have endeavored not to be an adaptor, in the strict sense of that word, but a translator." This Lesser gives as his own message and policy.

Author Supervising

Rupert Hughes, famous author and film director, has been made executive of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and will supervise the operations of several producing units of this company, according to announcement by Irving G. Thalberg.

Mr. Hughes' first production under the new arrangement will be "Excuse Me," from his own stage success.

Maude Adams Incorporates $3,500,000 Producing Company in Delaware

A DISPATCH from Dover, Delaware, reveals that on October 21, Maude Adams applied in that city for a charter "to produce motion pictures." The certificate of incorporation lists the capital of this new company at $3,500,000. Maude Adams Company, Inc., is the official title.

The incorporators of the new company are Frank Kewton and Thomas F. Compton of New York and Leander F. Sniffen of Yonkers. Speaking for the incorporators, Mr. Sniffen at press time refused to make public any details of the company's plans, but said that all information must come from Miss Adams.

Miss Adams has been interested in motion pictures entirely from a mechanical end, and particularly in the problem of lighting. Even before her retirement from the stage she was accustomed to work out the lighting problems affecting her own productions. After devoting several years to laboratory work Miss Adams evolved a new process of color photography, announcement of which was made in January of 1922. Subsequently it was learned that she had become a director of the Film Guild, and it was then believed that her ideas might be put into practice through the medium of this organization.

It may be that one of the missions of the new company is the filming of Kipling's "Kim," which has long been one of Miss Adams's ambitions. Permission was obtained from the author more than a year ago, and Miss Adams had expected to take a company to India last Spring.

St. Louis Is Seething with Theatre Building Activities

MARCUS LOEW will build a new vaudeville theatre in down-town St. Louis to cost upwards of $1,000,000. One site for the house has been taken under option, but has not been revealed publicly because the preliminary arrangements for the transfer of title have not been perfected. Two other sites are also under consideration for the new house, which is another reason for not giving its location to the public. This is the latest from St. Louis.

A definite announcement that he would build in St. Louis was made by Mr. Loew on October 12, during a brief visit to St. Louis, and following an inspection of his new Loew's State Theatre at Eighth street and Washington avenue, opened on August 21 which to date has proven a veritable gold mine.

Loew stated that he was convinced that the State Theatre had reclaimed down-town night life in St. Louis, and that there is an excellent field for a new vaudeville house in the district east of Twelfth Boulevard between Market street and Washington avenue.

Representatives of the Shubert theatrical interests are expected to arrive in St. Louis during the next few days to close a deal for a downtown site in which they propose to construct a new theatre and hotel building. Three sites are also under consideration for this house, one of them being at the southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive, just one block south of the present Shubert-Jefferson Theatre.

Until recently the Shuberts were considering a Grand boulevard location for their new house, but the remarkable success of the Loew's State Theatre has caused a decided revision in their plans, it is said. The lease on the Shubert-Jefferson expires on November 1, 1925.

It is also rumored that a prominent local motion picture syndicate has taken an option on a very prominent down-town location for a $2,000,000 theatre and office structure. Gossip has it that a substantial sum has already been paid to bind this deal, but confirmation has not been obtained from interested parties. However, it is believed certain that this deal will go through.

The new St. Louis Theatre at Grand boulevard and Morgan street is expected to open on June 1, 1925. The steel work is being put into place at the present time and construction will be speeded up so that the dedication may be held at that time. The structure is being erected by the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation of which David Sommers is president; Sam Koplar, vice-president; Emil S. Strauss, treasurer, and Lambert E. Welther, secretary. This house will seat 4,200 and will cost upwards of $1,000,000.

Plans have also been prepared by local architects for a 1,200-seat house to be erected at Union boulevard and St. Louis avenue, the center of a rapidly growing residential section.

Paramount Canadian Report Marks Increase in Surplus

THE fifth annual report of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, for the fiscal year ending August 30 last, which was issued by the company on October 17, shows substantial improvement both in corporation profits and those of its subsidaries. Profit prior to depreciation, interest and deferred charges is placed at $722,786.64 for the year, as compared with $609,738.17 for the previous 12 months. After provision for all charges, including income tax and $332,000 for dividends on first preference shares, surplus of $187,146.33 is carried forward, this being an increase of $66,886.48 over the surplus brought forward one year ago.

President J. P. Bickell, Toronto, states that the company is now operating over 70 theatres in Canada but that the earnings of affiliated and Allen companies have not been taken into account in the earnings statement. He has also announced that the $500,000 bond issue held last year by the corporation's bankers as collateral has been marketed and bankers' advances liquidated in full. Mortgages on theatre properties have been reduced from $675,594 to $603,640. President Bickell points out that, during the past year, chief effort had been devoted to consolidation of properties secured the previous year. He considers progress very satisfactory in view of general business conditions.

The financial statement shows that total assets have advanced during the year from $14,892,530 to $15,147,902, but the capital account remains unchanged at $12,550,000. Current assets have increased from $474,735 to $526,407, the largest part of the increase being in cash on hand at $273,657, compared with $171,434 a year before. Current liabilities show a reduction from $654,995 to $191,465. Bank loans, which stood at $400,000 at the end of the 1922-23 fiscal year, have entirely disappeared and mention is made of the paying of an item of $90,000, balance due on the 20 Allen theatres which were purchased during the previous year. Investments in affiliated companies are given a value of $413,532. Funded indebtedness amounts to $980,000.

Ottawa Exhibitor Fights Price of Admission Set by Producer

A DISPUTE between the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, Toronto, and Manager T. P. Gorman of the Auditorium Theatre, Ottawa, over a request by the theatre for a reduction in the admission scale for the presentation of "The Covered Wagon" at the Auditorium during the week of October 13 was given a public airing by Mr. Gorman in the issuing of a special statement explaining why the Auditorium company could not arrange a more popular price scale for the engagement. At the same time, announcement was made by Mr. Gorman that the attendance had been very large for the performances which were given nightly during the week. The Auditorium does not give matinee shows and it has, incidentally, a seating capacity of 11,000. The statement:

"When 'The Covered Wagon' was first offered to us, it was suggested that the prices charged in New York and elsewhere, $2, $1.50 and $1, be charged. This we refused to do. It was finally agreed that the minimum price should be 75 cents, with reserved seats at $1.

"The patronage at 'The Covered Wagon' has been very large, but regret exceedingly that we were forced to exceed our usual scale for the general public and that the Famous Lasky Company declined to allow us special prices for the children.

"For all future attractions at the Auditorium, popular prices will certainly be in vogue. Though 'The Sea Hawk,' which comes to the Auditorium next week, is playing elsewhere at much higher prices, it will be shown in the Auditorium at 50 and 75 cents, with a few reserved seats at $1."

Two New Exchanges

Two new independent film exchanges were organized in Minneapolis this week. Samuel Ludwig announced the formation of the Ludwig Film Exchange, and J. F. Cubberly is making plans for the opening of the Independent Film Exchange. The Ludwig exchange has absorbed Adventure Production and will distribute the product change will specialize in western, action and stunt dramas.

Zimmerman Retires; Turns His Houses Over to Stanley Company

J. FRED ZIMMERMAN, long identified with theatricals in Philadelphia and in recent years conducting his four theatres, the Liberty, Keystone, Orpheum and Fairmount in that city and the Edgemont in Chester, on November 1 will turn them over to the Stanley Company of America. M. W. Taylor, who supervised the construction of these houses and who has been general manager of them, will continue in his present capacity. He will have his office at the Stanley headquarters at 1916 Race street.

The five properties are splendidly equipped and without a dollar of indebtedness. The Orpheum in Germantown seats 2,000. The Keystone laccommodates 2,800. Each of these theatres presents Keith vaudeville. The Liberty seats 1,600 and the Fairmount accommodates 2,000. Those houses show motion pictures. The Edgemont in Chester, the most recently constructed house in the group, was opened in 1917. It accommodates 3,000 and is devoted to Keith vaudeville and pictures.

It is estimated that the value of these theatres is at least $3,000,000. Just what financial arrangements have been made in the transfer of the theatres is not stated. They will unquestionably be conducted with great efficiency and will have shows that will be thoroughly up-to-date and in accord with the best that the Stanley name has come to signify.

Zimmerman is one of the leaders of American theatrical managers. His career began in 1864 when on May 30 he accepted the position of treasurer of the National Theatre, Washington, D. C. Later his old friend, Augustin Daly, gave young Zimmerman the management of the English actress, Avenia Jones.

Business Career

Grand opera next attracted the attention of the budding impresario and he went with the Leonard Grover opera company. When Grover leased the Olympic Theatre, New York, Mr. Zimmerman became the treasurer of the house. During the Centennial year Mr. Zimmerman was interested in the exhibition of the cyclorama, "The Siege of Paris," and he also was concerned in the shows at the Coliseum at Broad and Locust streets where was shown "Paris by Night."

Zimmerman's first association with the South Broad Street Theatre, now known as the Broad and recently with the Garrick and Forrest here, the Apollo, at Atlantic City; the Nixon, at Pittsburgh, and Ford's, at Baltimore, taken over by the Stanley Company with Mr. Mastbaum as general director, dates back to 1878. In that year the young Philadelphian (for Mr. Zimmerman is a native of this city), formed an alliance with John T. Ford, of Baltimore, and at the Broad was most successful. Edwin Booth, John Sleeper Clark and other noted actors appeared under the Zimmerman management and later with Mr. Ford, there was organized a Church Choir Pinafore Company, to present "Pinafore" and it had a tremendous success.

Managed Noted Players

For five successive seasons Mr. Zimmerman managed tours of noted players and in September, 1880, he became associated with George K. Goodwin, lessee of the Chestnut Street Opera House. From 1882 until the closing of the season in 1913 Mr. Zimmerman was personal manager of the theatre and also one of its lessees. He was an important member of the theatrical group that brought about the present-day method of booking attractions in the leading houses and his interests extended to the Chestnut Street Theatre, now but a memory, and to a number of out-of-town playhouses. His sons, J. Fred Zimmerman, Jr., and Frank G. Zimmerman, have in recent years been his partners in his enterprises.

First National District Heads Will Be Groomed by Eschmann

A CALL to First National district managers to come to New York for a sales conference, beginning on Monday, October 27, and continuing for three days has been issued by E. A. Eschmann, chief of the Distribution Department.

The purpose of this three-day session in New York is to give the district managers instructions on the selling play to be placed back of the new group of First National pictures which will be marketed between February 1, 1925, and the 31st of the succeeding August.

Included in the new group of productions will be the next block of specials which First National has in active preparation. The marketing of the specials will continue under the direction of A. W. Smith, Jr., who is handling the current specials with conspicuous success.

Eschmann and his aids in the Distribution Department, A. W. Smith, Jr., Charles M. Steele, W. J. Morgan, and Stanley W. Hach, will spend three days with the district managers making them thoroughly conversant with the details of the sales plan for the new product which has been perfected.

The district managers will then return to their respective territories, reaching their offices by November 1, when they will issue calls for local meetings of the branch managers in their respective districts at which they, in turn, will instruct the branch managers in the details of the new picture group sales plan.

A few days after the close of the New York sales conference, Eschmann will leave on another swing about the branches mainly for the purpose of checking up on the results of the New York conference.

Title "Ten Commandments" Is Famous Property, Court Rules

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS are the exclusive property of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This was the decision contained in a report filed in the Supreme Court this week by Robert L. Luce, who, as referee, recommended the granting of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's petition for an injunction restraining Artclass Pictures Corporation and others from using the words "The Ten Commandments" either as the title or as part of the title of a motion picture, and from using those words and the picture of Moses in advertising a motion picture.

The defendants in the case, besides the Artclass Pictures Corporation, comprise Louis Weiss, Adolph Weiss, Max Weiss, Edward Grossman, Standard Office and Charles LaLumiere, officers and representatives of the Artclass Pictures Corporation.

The suit arose over the action of the Artclass Picture Corporation in changing their Biblical serial picture, "After Six Days" into a feature, which they advertised prominently as a picture, "featuring Moses and the Ten Commandments." This change in the type and advertising of their picture was made after Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount picture, "The Ten Commandments," had proved to be a big success, Famous alleged.

Not only does the report restrain Artclass and the other defendants from featuring the words "Moses and the Ten Commandments" in their picture and advertising, but it also makes theatres liable to action if they do likewise.

Referee Luce also ruled that Artclass and the other defendants must account to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for all profits which they received from their production and pay all damages sustained by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation resulting from such advertising.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

Somerville, Mass., Showman Now on Honeymoon in Europe

Their wedding on the night of October 17 was the culmination of a romance which began several years ago in high school for Miss Emily K. O'Brien of Somerville and Albert J. Locatelli, also of Somerville, one of the best known exhibitors in New England. The ceremony uniting the couple took place in St. Clement's Church in Medford and was performed by Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy. Mr. Locatelli is the son of John E. Locatelli, a former alderman in Somerville. The bridegroom is the managing director of a chain of New England theatres that bears his name. Mr. and Mrs. Locatelli now are on a honeymoon trip to Europe, having sailed on the Majestic from New York City. Upon their return they will reside in Somerville.

The Lyric Theatre is one of the live film emporiums in Somerville. And that for the very good reason that the Sirica Brothers, proprietors, have such an able manager as N. Jamele. Miss Elsie M. Seits, organist, has won renown for the excellent way in which she "plays" the pictures. Manager Jamele gets out a classy weekly program.

K. H. Forkey, manager of the Norfolk Theatre in Norfolk, is one of those alert exhibitors whose slogan is, "Nothing is too good for my patrons." "A good show for a fair price," he says, and these reasons combined with others bring them back to every show. He doesn't play the little films because he is in a little town, but shows such attractions as "The Covered Wagon." Manager Forkey distributes an attractive weekly program and in a recent issue included a message to his patrons which was entitled "You've Got to Come Back."

Connecticut

The erection of a $50,000 mausoleum in honor of his son, Edward Joseph Poli, who died in 1922, has been completed in St. Lawrence cemetery, New Haven, by Sylvester Z. Poli, owner of the string of theatres which bears his name. The mausoleum has nine catacombs, four on each side of an aisle which leads to an altar. It is 20 feet long, 21 feet wide and 35 feet high; built of Mount Airy granite, quarried in North Carolina. The interior is finished in Tennessee marble. Great bronze doors guard the entrance. The mausoleum will be the resting place for all the members of the family of Mr. Poli. The son had been the general manager of the Poli circuit. He died on November 11, 1922.

Beat This

James McGee is a Yankee exhibitor who for 23 years has been in the theatrical business. That sounds something like a record in itself. But—in those same 23 years Mr. McGee has not been absent from his theatrical duties more than one day—just one day. Surely that is breaking a record. For the past 18 months Mr. McGee has been manager of the Augusta Opera House in Augusta, Me. Now he is about to forsake the realm of the silver sheet and footlights and engage in real estate.

Rhode Island

Colonel Joseph E. Fletcher, for many years owner of the Opera House in Providence, died recently while on board his motor yacht at Pawtucket. He had been known as the millionaire woolen manufacturer. Colonel Fletcher was a member of the Lambs Club. He is survived by his wife and four children.

Detroit

The Grand Victory Theatre, one of the string of neighborhood houses operated by Ben and Lou Cohen, Detroit, is the latest to be victimized by safecrackers. The robbers secured very little for their trouble, as the house manager, acting on a hunch, took the receipts home with him that night.

The annual series of Sunday noon concerts given at the Capitol, with the combined orchestras of the Capitol, Madison and Adams —numbering about 80 pieces—will begin Sunday. This is the fifth season for the concerts.

The run of "The Sea Hawk," which closed at the Adams after four weeks, was one of the most successful from an attendance standpoint in Detroit's first-run history. Another Sabatini film, "Captain Blood," opened at the Broadway Strand last Sunday and appears to be in for a long run.

George W. Trendle and John H. Kunsky, after attending the annual convention of Associated First National Pictures and spending several days in New York, are back in the city and in personal charge of theatre operations again.

Harold Lloyd's "Hot Water" opened at the Adams last Sunday and will be there four weeks at least, judging by the opening crowds. The Detroit run is the second opening of "Hot Water" in the country, being preceded only by Los Angeles.

Members of the Minneapolis city council are discussing the advisability of raising the license fees of theatres. The move is being fought by theatre owners, who contend that the present license is higher than in most cities.

Jimmy Chest of Canajoharie Blossoms Forth as an Actor

Harking back to the days of yore, Jimmy Chest, owner of the Capitol Theatre in Canajoharie, blossomed forth in a brand new role last week when he played the part of the bandit in a home talent affair staged at the Capitol for the benefit of the Moose of Canajoharie. It was a great night for Jimmy, as he appeared before an audience that packed his theatre to its very doors. And it must be admitted that he was good in the portrayal of the Mexican bandit, even though it was whispered around later on that Jimmy used an Italian dialect instead of Mexican. Some of the Albany boys dropped in at the Capitol and declare that when Jimmy, swashbuckling, his eyes glinting in true Mexican style, strode forward, hand shading his eyes, and cried out, "Girls, there is an American Battleship in the harbor," the laurels of many a Broadway actor were endangered. This week Jimmy is once more entertaining Canajoharie with motion pictures.

In Syracuse, serials are going strong these days. A survey of the city last week revealed that twenty-five out of thirty picture theatres, including some of the first runs, notably the Empire, the highest priced house in the ciyt, are running serials this fall.

Several motion picture stars are expected to attend the ball to be given at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany on the night of November 10, under the auspices of the Albany Film Board of Trade. The apportionment of tickets to each exchange, as well as the demand from exhibitors and others, is expected to assure an attendance of over 300.

Well, Sam Hochstim, proprietor of the Star in Hudson, has gone and done it. Mr. Hochstim was married on Sunday to a young lady residing in Hudson and the two are now enjoying a motor honeymoon through the New England states and on into Quebec.

Joseph Saperstein, manager of the Griswold in Troy, is not letting his theatre run itself by any means these days. In other words, Mr. Saperstein is utilizing every ounce of his gray matter in putting over little touches that attract business. For instance, every Monday night at the Griswold is Jazz Night, with jazz dancers, a jazz singer and a jazz orchestra. Last Wednesday night there was a "perfect flapper" contest, with the audience deciding the winner. When Mr. Saperstein played "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," and second run at that, he used twelve living models. The night he played "Bread," every woman attending was given a full sized loaf of bread, while 50 banners on as many bakers' wagons attracted attention.

Five employes of the Troy Theatre dug into their jeans this week and paid for five turkey dinners for Ben Apple and his bowlers from the American Theatre. The unlucky five were Walter Roberts, Benjamin Stern, William Jarvis, John Gamble and Ernest Burleigh. Of course when one stops and recalls the fact that Mr. Apple, who incidentally wears a seventeen shirt and weighs in the neighborhood of 275 pounds, and has the capacity to eat 24 times a day, if necessary, it was quite a contract for the Troy Theatre boys to provide the turkey.

The Temple in Syracuse, which has been running pictures, swung the past week to vaudeville. The Strand in Syracuse, ably managed by W. A. McDowell, used a balloon last week floating high above the theatre and advertising the coming of "Sundown."

The Big Ben of Ilion, which has been closed off and on for some time past, and which has been largely used for western pictures of the shoot 'em up type, will now be open six nights a week with a higher type of pictures shown. The house has been taken over by Benjamin Young.

Benjamin Stern, assistant manager of the Troy Theatre, is certainly a lucky sort of an individual. The other day he hit a punchboard in the Collar City for a five dollar bill and a box of candy. He sold the latter for 75 cents, added a quarter out of his own pocket and is now sporting a pair of six dollar shoes.

Jay Makley of Potter Hollow, a hamlet in Albany County, was arrested during the past week on charges preferred by George S. Hall, inspector of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, who alleges that Makley had shown an unlicensed film at his theatre. Makley was arraigned and held for the grand jury, with bail fixed at $500.

"These dang film salesmen are certainly persistent cusses," remarked L. B. Tefft of Berlin, N. Y., the other afternoon, when one of the number perched on the ridge of the barn which Mr. Tefft was shingling and talked pictures so long that Mr. Tefft finally booked. Mr. Tefft is not only an exhibitor but a poultry man as well, not forgetting a complete woodworking and machine shop on the side. The other day the president of the Board of Education in Berlin was helping Mr. Tefft in laying a concrete floor in the creamery. All in all, Mr. Tefft appears to be doing very well these days.

Walter Hayes of Buffalo, one of the heads of the Mark Strand chain of houses, spent Friday in Syrcause, Saturday in Albany and Troy, and then continued on his way to Atlantic City.

The deer season is open and Nate Robbins and Rae Candee of Utica were on the ground with the first of them.

The Cameo, recently acquired by William C. Smalley and located in St. Johnsville, was opened under most auspicious conditions on October 15. Mr. Smalley was thoughtful enough to invite many from along Albany's Film Row to attend it.

R. H. Rhinehart of Ashland, N. Y., is the sort of an exhibitor who isn't afraid of taking a chance. His theatre seats exactly 96 persons and Ashland is credited with a population of 200. Mr. Rhinehart recently played "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," charging 50 cents admission and cashing in.

The American in Troy used two double features the past week in bucking "The Covered Wagon" at the Troy Theatre. During

Lyceum, Ithaca, N. Y., to Present Feature Pictures

Feature pictures will be shown at the Lyceum Theatre in Ithaca as soon as bookings can be arranged. This is the immediate result of the musicians' strike, reached by unanimous vote of the board of directors. The Lyceum Corporation will retain the same officers as it had while offering legitimate attractions, and Manager M. M. Gustadt is also being retained. Neither the musicians nor the theatre corporation has taken any action to settle their grievances and for the present the strike is considered a deadlock. Opinion, however, is that the Lyceum will operate as a picture house for a time and then swing back to legitimate offerings following a settlement of local difficulties.

When Manager John R. Osborne put on "The Marriage Circle" at the new Family Theatre in Batavia, N. Y., last week he got the consent of a couple to be married on the stage of the house. Local merchants cooperated in large newspaper ads and gave prizes to the couple. The stunt packed the Family.

Plans are complete for the annual ball of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo, which this year will take on the appearance of a Hallowe'en Frolic. The event will be held in the Hotel Statler, Friday evening, October 31. Tickets are practically sold out and Henry W. Kahn of Metro-Goldwyn, chairman of arrangements, promises the ball will be one of the events of the social season.

Rumor has it that a buying circuit has been organized in Western New York under the name of the Exhibitors' Service Corporation, which has been formed to negotiate all leasing contracts for film and to sign applications for such film service. The circuit has been formed to protect individual exhibitors in the smaller towns against the encroachments of larger circuits, it is said. The names of Sid Allen, Medina; Howard Smith, Buffalo; Robert Kane, Lockport, and Judge John W. Schatt, Gowanda, are mentioned in connection with the circuit just formed.

William J. Colhan has been appointed assistant general manager of the Border Amusement Company, operating the Marlowe, Ellen Terry, Star and other houses in Buffalo. Mr. Colhan succeeds John Maxwell, resigned. Mr. Colhan was formerly connected with the company as manager of one of the chain's houses.

Spiro Ford has purchased the Bijou Theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., from A. E. Van Vroix. Mr. Ford, who is in the confectionery business in the Chautauqua county city, plans to remodel and rename the house in the near future.

Richard Ullman, son of Frederick Ullman, owner of the Elmwood Theatre, has won the song writing competition staged by the Junior League of Buffalo. Richard is one of Buffalo's most talented musicians.

Jack Dempsey opened his tour of personal appearance in the Loew houses at the State Theatre, Buffalo, the past week and piled up the biggest business in the history of the big house, much credit for which should be given to the fine advance publicity given the big attraction by Manager Al Beckerich.

The fall fashion show staged the past week in Shea's Hippodrome was the finest Buffalo has ever seen. It was an artistic triumph and drew overflow audiences afternoon and evening. Much effort was put on the production end of the show and thousands of dollars' worth of new fashions were displayed on beautiful models.

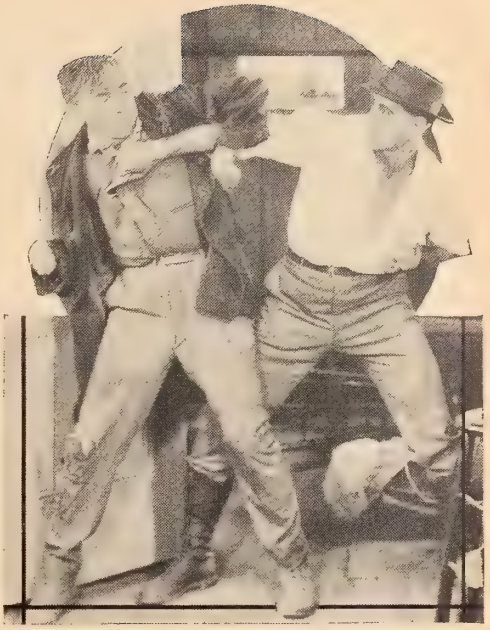
the next two weeks to come the American will run "Tarnish" for a straight week and "Flirting With Love" for the next seven days.

The Elite Theatre in Theresa, owned and operated by Charles G. Henry, had a close call last Saturday night when fire broke out in the booth, seven reels being destroyed. Luckily the theatre is located almost next door to the village fire department. The blaze was subdued by chemicals. Clifton Montondo, the operator, escaped with a few burns.

The Colonial in Troy, a downtown house, closed for many months, has just been leased to Buffalo parties. The Astor, a nearby house, also closed for some time past, was reopened on Columbus Day for the showing of an Italian picture.

W. E. Life, manager of the Community Theatre in Sherrill, is co-operating with the schools of the city in connection with running "The Chronicles of America." Mr. Life shows the picture that fits in with the period of history being studied by the children.

There is too much of the "love" sort of pictures being produced these days, according to Jacob Rosenthal, owner of the Rose Theatre in Troy. Not that Jake isn't affectionate or doesn't believe in love. But he contends that a different sort of picture will have to be produced for the smaller houses if they are to appeal to their audiences.



Hunt Stromberg presents Harry Carey in "Roaring Rails," released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

On the day celebrating the discovery of America by Columbus, Herman Vineberg, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, discovered the fact that some 5,000 or more residents of Albany were not close readers of the newspapers of that city. Although Mr. Vineberg had carried notices of the screening hours of "The Covered Wagon" in his newspaper advertisements, hundreds of persons telephoned the theatre on Monday, asking when the picture would be shown. Mr. Vineberg spent the entire morning doing nothing but answering telephones.

Double Feature Bills Again the Rage in Montreal Houses

Double-feature programs are again quite the rage among many exhibitors of Montreal, Quebec, notably among the managers of the seven theatres recently acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corporation from Independent Amusements, a local syndicate. Upwards of 15 of the centrally-located houses are regularly giving a double bill, with changes two and three time a week, the program comprising two feature-length pictures, comedy and news weekly.

The former Independent company's theatres offering the double features include the Regent, Strand, Papineau, Corona, Mount Royal, Plaza and Belmont. Practically all of these houses are modern, attractive places and have been doing good business. Famous Players also has two big theatres, the Capitol and Palace, which, however, are adhering strictly to the policy of presenting one feature with special prologues, vocal numbers and short film subjects. Starting October 19, Manager Harry Dahn presented "The Sea Hawk" at the Capitol and Manager George Rotsky of the Palace offered "Sinners in Silk," which followed a two weeks' engagement of First National's "Secrets."

Not only has the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, a Saturday-opening policy but Manager Leonard Bishop is now splitting the week with a change of bill on Saturdays and Wednesdays, the two-a-week plan being adopted October 18 with the presentation of "Wine of Youth," followed by "The Reckless Age" the following Wednesday, October 22. Another Famous Players house, the Capitol at Hamilton, Ontario, also follows this same arrangement of changing programs on Saturdays and Wednesdays.

The Provincial Treasurer's office at Toronto, Ontario, encountered a big shock a few days ago in the discovery that counterfeit amusement tax tickets were being quite generally used throughout various sections of Western Ontario and an investigation into the matter has been ordered by Hon. W. H. Price, K. C., the Provincial Treasurer. The spurious tax tickets are almost identical with the government issue and it was found that a number of exhibitors had bought them in good faith from someone who had posed as a government inspector. Considerable mystery is attached to the case but the government is running down a clue in Detroit, Mich.

Royal patronage was extended to several theatres of Ottawa during the week of October 13 when H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was a visitor in the Canadian Capital. The party from Rideau Hall, the official residence of Their Excellencies, Lord Byng of Vimy, Governor-General of Canada, and Lady Byng, attended the Auditorium Theatre one evening for "The Covered Wagon" and occupied the Royal Box at the Russell Theatre another evening. B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, of which J. M. Franklin is the manager, was also honored for the occasion by a visit.

"Monsieur Beaucaire" has been selected by John Arthur as the second two-a-day film attraction for the Regent Theatre, Toronto, Famous Players' special run house in the downtown section of the Ontario Capital. "Monsieur" opened at the Regent on October 20, following "The Sea Hawk," which had played an engagement of seven weeks. Top price at the Regent is $1.

Douglas Fairbanks' "Thief of Bagdad" is having its first run in Eastern Canada as a road show in the Princess Theatre, Toronto, starting November 3. The Princess is ordinarily a dramatic playhouse but the special film production is being shown there at prices ranging up to $1.50 twice daily.

Manager Ted Miller of the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, seized upon a most appropriate feature for presentation during the week starting October 18. The voters of Ontario voted on the Prohibition question on October 23 and Manager Miller hooked up with the popular topic by screening the picture called "Wine." The plebiscite returns were also announced at the theatre on the referendum day.

A new film organization in Montreal, Quebec, the Film de Luxe Company, has been offering a series of special pictures at the big St. Denis Theatre, Montreal, at prices ranging up to 35 cents. The first production to be shown at the St. Denis, which has 3,100 seats, was "In the Shadow of a Throne," an Italian feature. This was followed by "Temptation" and then "Empty Hearts." Film de Luxe Company has secured the Canadian rights for a number of features from C. B. C., New York, including "Temptation," "Marriage Market," "Innocence" and "Forgive and Forget."

Loew's Court Theatre, 27 St. Catherine street east, Montreal, has been reopened as the "Theatre Francais" for the presentation of pictures with prologue, programs being changed twice weekly. The new local management is catering to French-Canadian patronage, using French titles, while the prologues are also in the French language.

New Buck Jones Feature

To Play Star Role in Original Story by Charles Kenyon—Lucy Fox to Be Opposite Him

Buck Jones has been assigned to play the star role in an original story by Charles Kenyon, "The Man Who Knew Women." This production was started last week at the Fox West Coast Studios and will be released under the title, "The Arizona Romeo." Edmund Mortimer, who directed Jones in "The Desert Outlaw," is making this latest star series picture. Lucy Fox has the leading feminine role. The other principals are: Maine Geary, Thomas R. Mills, Hardee Kirkland, Marcella Daly, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Harvey Clark and Hank Mann.

Theatre Owners in Wisconsin Revive District Conventions

District conventions, an experiment which proved highly successful when tried prior to the last state convention, are being revived by officials of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin. Seventy-five exhibitors, representing houses in a score of towns in that vicinity, gathered a few days ago at Marshfield for a district rally, at which Henry Staab, executive secretary of the state association, stressed the value of organization and pointed out the strides made possible through unified action. A similar session followed at Superior and it has been announced by President Fred Seegert that other gatherings will be held in other key centers.

Sliding gradually, Ascher's Merrill Theatre in Milwaukee finally is down to a general admission price of 25 cents. Until the recent tax reductions, the Merrill maintained a 55-cent standard, but shortly afterwards announced a 50-cent price, then 35 cents and now the new rate. The reduction places the Merrill on a level with the Butterfly, directly across the way, which has been on a 25-cent basis for approximately half a year, it being the first Grand avenue house to drop that low with its prices. With the drop at the Merrill, Leo Landau's Garden and Alhambra and Saxe's Strand and Wisconsin are the only Milwaukee houses regularly charging 50 cents.

Two Milwaukee houses have just observed their anniversaries. E. W. Van Norman's Parkway, west side house, was three years old last week, while George Fischer's Milwaukee, north side theatre, was two years old. Van Norman observed the occasion by presenting a style show and seven vaudeville acts, in addition to his regular picture program. Despite a carnival on the street, business for the week was exceptional, mainly because merchants in the vicinity cooperated to make the style show a success. At the Milwaukee, an unusually heavy program of pictures was booked for the week. Mr. Fischer started with "Broken Barriers," followed with "The Fire Patrol," and wound up the week with "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

"Yolanda," the biggest picture of the year for the Garden Theatre in Milwaukee, opened last Saturday with hundreds of society leaders in attendance for the premiere showing. Special invitations to Milwaukee's "400" had been issued by Leo A. Landau, director of the house, who turned over the entire balcony to his especially selected guests on opening night.

George Fischer's Capitol Theatre in West Allis has a seating capacity of only 800, yet in two days last week, between the hours of 4 to 6 p. m., more than 1,900 children viewed "America" as a result of one of the greatest school tie-ups ever effected. Appearing before the school board, Mr. Fischer, after pointing out the great historical value of the film, won permission to have tickets placed on sale in every classroom and likewise a promise that teachers would urge all their pupils to attend. The tickets entitled the holder to enter the theatre by paying 5 cents. The first day's result brought 900 kiddies to the showhouse, while on the second day more than 1,000 responded and it became necessary to accommodate many by doubling two of them in one seat. To do the job up brown, Mr. Fischer donated 300 seats which were distributed free of charge to pupils too poor to attend otherwise, and in addition a special showing of the picture was presented one evening in the week at which 250 teachers, principals and members of the board of education were admitted free.

Louisville

Fine October weather has resulted in local theatres having an unusually heavy run of business. The Keith houses, running combined vaudeville and picture bills at two theatres and changing the bills twice a week, are getting capacity business. The regular picture houses have been very crowded. It has been a long time since any picture packed a house any tighter than has the Gloria Swanson picture, "Her Love Story," which will probably be carried over another week. Other theatres are doing a good business, and auto parking space in the downtown section at night is becoming mighty scarce and extending over a good many more blocks than formerly.

The Lincoln Theatre, a negro establishment, 914 West Walnut street, Louisville, suffered some damage and created a lot of neighborhood excitement in the black belt when a gas stove exploded, blowing out the doors of the room in which it was located and causing a considerable concussion. A negro, who was trying to light the stove, suffered burns.

Emptied the House

Patrons of the Burke Theatre of Kenosha several nights ago sniffed suspiciously, squirmed uneasily and then one by one deserted the picture that had been claiming their attention and stole towards the door, meanwhile holding their individual noses. No sooner had the advance guard reached the door, however, than a wild retreat began. For standing guard was a polecat, defying all to pass.

Someone managed finally to phone for a policeman. He, in turn, called for several other policemen, but nothing the bluecoats could do at long range had any effect on Mr. Skunk. Just when things looked darkest for those in the theatre, a farmer boy stole up behind the polecat and succeeded in placing a wooden box over the animal. All of which explains why garments of all descriptions flapped in the breezes from clotheslines in Kenosha that night.

At Falmoth, Ky., the City Council on the plea of the Rev. B. C. Gamble, Methodist minister, has issued an order that all places of business or profit must be closed on Sunday under enforcement of the old blue laws. There is an election in November.

Announcement was made at Owensboro, Ky., on October 11 of plans for a $150,000 theatre by the Selba Amusement Company, which paid $30,000 for a lot on which to erect the house. The company is composed of S. J. Gish, E. M. Gish, S. G. Gish, A. J. Mercer, A. M. Martin, L. Miller and Charles Wells. Work is to be started within thirty days, it is said. The new house will be one of the largest and finest in Western Kentucky, if not the king of them all.

Macauley's Theatre, Louisville, opened on October 13, 1873, is now fifty-one years of age and by far the oldest theatre in Kentucky.

San Francisco's Hospitality Typified by Theatre Opening

San Francisco believes in extending the hand of hospitality to visitors, and its Chamber of Commerce, Californians, Inc., and other civic bodies work unceasingly to attract newcomers and to make them feel at home when they arrive here. In casting about for a suitable film for opening his new house, the Bay View Theatre, Otto Roeder decided that none would be more appropriate than "Welcome Stranger," made by the Belasco Productions Company of this city, and his selection has been applauded by city officials and civic workers. The opening took place on the evening of October 11 and was the occasion for a great demonstration in the southern part of the city, where the house is located.

A fire on the roof of the Broadway Theatre, 622 Broadway, on the evening of October 9 sent several hundred picture fans hurrying to the street, where they watched the fire department put out a small blaze. When the blaze had been extinguished they filed back in and the screening of the picture was resumed.

Business at the Cameo Theatre, San Francisco, has been keeping up in fine shape of late and Manager R. R. Boomer is well pleased with the showing. The orchestra, known as the Cameo Melodists, is being directed by Walter Allen and use is being made of some fine stage settings. Leon Doane, formerly with the Granada and Warfield theatres, has been made assistant to Mr. Boomer. The baseball stunts pulled off by this house during the world series week made friends of hundreds of ball fans.

The Strand Theatre, a small house with frequent change of program, has been opened at Eureka by Henry Davis.

Extensive improvements, including the installation of a new screen, have been made in the American Theatre on Fillmore street, San Francisco.

The alleged failure of A. H. Moore and J. P. Dean, former owners of the U. C. and Berkeley theatres, Berkeley, to use certain films in accordance with a contract entered into two years ago with the Fox Film Corporation has been made the basis of a suit for damages in the sum of $3,035 filed recently at Oakland. The exhibitors have since disposed of their interests in both houses.

Walter Sachs, a well known San Francisco theatre man, has been made assistant manager and treasurer of the Lurie Theatre, Oakland, the appointment having been made by E. A. Brehaney.

Plans have been prepared for the theatre to be erected by Frank Atkins on Bancroft Way, near Telegraph avenue, Berkeley, and bids will be invited in the near future.

New seating equipment has been installed in the Bijou Theatre of M. L. Markowitz at Fresno. The house was closed for a time for redecorating and remodeling work.

The Cortland Theatre, San Francisco, has installed Preddey reflector arc equipment.

Seattle

Election of three new members of the Board of Arbitration was held last week, at which time the three film exchange members were named. Exhibitors will name their new representatives at an early meeting. Manager H. A. Black of Vitagraph, and George P. Endert of Paramount were re-elected. Jay A. Gage, Educational manager, was elected, succeeding Paul G. Lynch of Pathe, resigned.

Benjamin W. Fey, who recently returned from a summer spent in the East, has purchased a new house now under construction in Renton, Wash., by Joe Organo. The house will be completed some time in November.

Joe Bratt is manager of Zable & Wilson's new Capitol Theatre, Olympia, Wash.

B. B. Vivian of Anacortes and Mount Vernon cleaned up on a live one last week, when he took Andy Ward and His Band up for a week's engagement between his houses in those cities. So popular was the stunt that it was necessary to hold the band for a second week's entertainment.

"The Man Who Came Back" at the Million Dollar Heilig made such a cleanup that it remained for a second big week. This Fox special was well presented by Manager McGee on its Northwest premiere here, and was heralded by trailers during the extended run of "America," just previous, and by a big newspaper campaign.

A report has it that M. Spujt, owner of the house in Marysville, will sell out to his partner, Mrs. Harris.

G. M. Ballantyne, branch manager of Fox Films, Ltd., of Vancouver, spent Tuesday in Seattle, accompanied by H. Quagalto Romano, proprietor of the Colonial Theatre, Vancouver. Many of the later Fox releases were screened for Mr. Romano, who enjoys an excellent reputation for showmanship in the Canadian city.

Merle Davis, former manager of the Ansonian Amusement Company, owners of the Orpheum and Ansonian, Butte, Mont., is reported to have taken over the company.

Manager J. Von Herberg has signed one of the biggest contracts of the season covering the Pacific Northwest, which will bring to the Coliseum Theatre on October 25 Julian Eltinge, who is on a farewell tour of America.

Lubliner & Trinz Buy Site for Great Chicago Theatre

Lubliner & Trinz have purchased the site for a 3,500-seat cinema palace, with a 210-foot steel tower, 16 stores and 114 apartments, to cost $2,200,000, on a 300x248-foot site on Sixty-third street from Blackstone to Harper avenue. Meyer Fridstein is drawing plans. The site has been acquired from E. Browarsky and A. Raphael for approximately $1,500 a front foot. Completion is expected in October, 1925.

Harry M. Lubliner, Joseph Trinz and Sol Lubliner have organized the Sheridan Theatres Corporation with offices at 25 East Jackson boulevard, the headquarters of the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, to own, acquire and operate picture houses. The new company has a nominal capital of $10,000.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer will open the new Diversey Theatre, now building on North Clark street, next summer and will show only feature pictures with presentations and accompanied by a large orchestra.

Burglars forced the rear door of the Savoy Theatre at 4346 West Madison street and broke into the safe, making away with several hundred dollars.

The Aristo Theatre, containing 1,200 seats, at 2650 Lincoln avenue, has been sold by Dr. Abel P. M. Sandahl to a syndicate, title being taken by Jacob Rothschild for $95,000, subject to $40,000.

The final signatures were affixed to documents which assure the erection of the Fox Theatre and office building on West Washington street, announced a couple of months ago. It is not expected work will start for six months or more. No architect has yet been engaged.

Negotiations have been completed between Balaban & Katz and Charles Nathan of Peoria, Ill., whereby the Nathan houses join the Balaban & Katz Midwest theatre chain for booking purposes.

Peter Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, is in town from his Eagle Point, Wis., estate. Adolph Linick of the same firm is also back from California for a brief stay.

Aaron J. Jones and wife sailed from New York on Saturday for a six weeks' vacation at Nice, France. On Tuesday the members of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer Company and staff of McVicker's Theatre gave Mr. Jones a luncheon at the Morrison Hotel.

C. H. Smock has sold the Community Theatre at Raymond, Ill., to M. F. Weber.

The Garfield Theatre at 3527 South Halsted street, an interest in which R. H. Healy has purchased, will be known hereafter as the Healy-Garfield. Sam Rabinovitz still retains his interest in the house.

The McVickers Theatre is celebrating its second anniversary this week with an elaborate program of pictures, music and presentations.

Balaban & Katz's Riviera Theatre celebrated its sixth anniversary last week with a great stage show that included pictures, grand opera, jazz and a dance creation. There was plenty of good music.

The Schoenstadt chain of theatres now includes the Atlantic at 26th and Crawford, the Boulevard at 55th and Ashland, the Brighton Park at 42nd and Archer avenue, the Halsted at 55th and Halsted and the Archer Theatre at 35th and Robey streets.

The northwestern part of the city will have another fine picture theatre, as work will start soon on the Ritz Theatre to be erected on the northwest corner of Harding and Crawford avenue by the Crawford Building Corporation from plans by Gallup and Joy. The building will be devoted to theatrical purposes entirely, there being no offices or stores, and the new house will seat 2,000. Clinton B. Yarnell will have charge of the construction.

Simon E. Lantz, E. M. Peterson and Edward Ware have organized the Dells Amusements at Congorville, Ill., with a capital of $100,000, to conduct amusements of all kinds.

James Callison has been made manager of the Irving Park Theatre at 4003 Irving Park boulevard.

Bert St. John has sold the Majestic Theatre at Sigourney to Harry Simpson, who has taken charge.

The management of the State Lake Theatre says that more than 70,000 people enter the house each week.

"The Thief of Bagdad" will have its final showing at the Woods Theatre on November 1, according to Manager Frank V. Bruner, who reports a fine business throughout the engagement.

Lew Cody and Florence Vidor in a scene from "Husbands and Lovers," a First National picture.

W. A. Heilman, George C. Taubert and H. W. Toennings have organized the Crawfish Amusement Company at Pekin, Ill., with offices at 10 North Third street. The new company has a capital of $10,100.

Ten of the Ascher theatres will have an orphans' matinee during the week of October 20 to show the children "Robinson Crusoe" in co-operation with the Evening American movie department. More than 5,000 children will be taken care of.

Florida Amusement Co. Plans Its Third Lakeland Theatre

The Lakeland Amusement Company, Lakeland, Fla., has embarked upon a third building enterprise for that city in the erection of a new theatre on North Kentucky avenue. E. J. Sparks, B. B. Garner and M. C. Tally, who form the Lakeland Amusement Company, last week signed a contract with Boswell & Kinsinger, leasing for a term of years the building which is to contain several business rooms and a theatre.

At the present time the Lakeland Amusement Company is operating only one house, the Auditorium, but by December the Palace, which is near completion where the old Casino formerly stood, will open and make the second modern theatre in the city, representing an investment of $200,000, of which $125,000 went into the theatre building and equipment, to be one of the handsomest theatres in the state.

By January 1 the third building project will be completed, giving Lakeland her third theatre, which will be a duplicate of the theatre-arcade building recently erected in Plant City, Fla. There will be five business rooms, 19x33 feet, and the theatre entrance will be 33 feet long. It will seat 550.

Definite information that the new State Theatre, Gainesville, Ga., will open on October 20 has been received. Frank Plaginos is owner and Jack Lewis is manager. "The Sea Hawk" is the opening attraction. Gainesville has two picture houses, the other house, formerly owned by Mrs. Charles Cinciola, is now owned and operated by Freeman and Rogers.

Miss Violet Carselle is another one of Georgia's enterprising women exhibitors, conducting the only theatre in Commerce, Ga.

Bob Wilby, well known exhibitor operating theatres in Tuscaloosa, Selma and Birmingham, Ala., has secured the lease on the Alamo No. 1 Theatre on Peachtree street, Atlanta, formerly operated by Adolph Samuels and managed by Sol Samuels for a number of years. The change becomes effective January 1, 1925, and it is understood that the rental is to be $15,000 a year. It is also rumored that H. F. Kincey, who is now associated with Mr. Wilby in Selma, will be transferred to Atlanta as manager of the house.

The Coliseum, a beautiful new theatre which C. D. Cooley of Tampa will open in St. Petersburg, Fla., is expected to have its formal christening on November 1, giving St. Petersburg three theatres. It is located on Fourth street, one block off Central avenue. The Coliseum will seat 2,500 and have a policy that will bring to the theatre the biggest pictures and road show attractions. Mr. Cooley has gone to Cuba where he is interested in enlisting Cuban capital in a half million dollar picture theatre in Havana.

Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta, well known theatre and film man, owner of the Atlanta Educational exchange, suffered a fire loss in his residence in Atlanta last week.

The death in Cartersville, Ga., last week of Harry G. Cope came as a distinct shock to the film fraternity. Mr. Cope, one of the youngest and most enterprising exhibitors of the state, has for several years operated a picture theatre in Cartersville. He was athletic coach at the Howard University, Birmingham. Six members of the football squad acted as pallbearers.

Sig Samuels, owner of the Metropolitan, Atlanta, is back from an extended trip to Europe.

D. B. Dixon, formerly manager of the Strand Theatre, Winder, Ga., has concentrated his efforts in Lawrenceville, Ga., since he surrendered the management of the Windsor house to his aunt, Mrs. A. F. Carselle.

Cincinnati

Breaking house records seems to have become the favorite indoor sport with some exhibitors in this region. "The Ten Commandments," playing a four weeks' run at the Grand Opera House, prior to the opening of the regular legitimate season, kept 'em standing out at practically every performance. Manager Milford Unger announces that the picture hung up the attendance record. Over at Hamilton, John Schwalm, manager of the Rialto, reports that the attendance during the three days' showing of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" eclipsed all previous records at his house.

The Family Theatre, Cincinnati, has inaugurated a new policy, changing from a split week to a full week house. The change also carries with it a slight advance in admission prices, the new scale being placed at 25 cents, as against the previous rate of 20 cents. General Manager I. Libson reports that higher class pictures will be presented under the new policy.

Youngstown, Ohio, is to have a new theatre and office building, according to reports. The sum involved is $1,500,000. The building will be erected on the public square by the Palace Realty Company. At Cleveland the Senate Theatre has been incorporated by E. L. Mueller, B. D. Gordon and others.

January 1 is the date set by Garland Jones for the opening of his new Liberty Theatre at Franklin, Ky. About the same time, the Dry Creek Amusement Company will open a new house at War, W. Va., under management of J. R. Powell.

John Schwalm of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, had the public guessing during the engagement of "The Hunchback" as to the identity of the sweet-voiced singer who rendered "Ava Maria." The secret finally leaked out, however, and it developed that the junior Melba was none other than Mrs. Schwalm, who has had considerable volcal training.

STRAIGHT from the SHOULDER REPORTS

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

These dependable tips come from exhibitors who tell the truth about pictures to help you book your program intelligently. "It is my utmost desire to serve my fellow man," is their motto.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

Send tips to help others. This is your department, run for you and maintained by your good-will.

Associated Exhibitors

LONE WOLF. (6 reels). Star, Jack Holt. A very good crook play which pleased audiences. Drew fair business. Scenes showing hero changing from one plane to another in mid-air brought a laugh, although it was supposed to be the big thrill of the picture. Tone fair. Sunday, questionable. Fair attendance. High and middle class, city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

SPITFIRE. (7 reels). Star, Betty Blythe. Nothing much to this. Just the same old love story. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000 Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (178 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WHEN A GIRL LOVES. (5,867 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. Here is a good program picture. It will please those who see it but the title hurts its drawing power. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. High and middle class, city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

F. B. O.

LIGHTS OUT. (6,938 feet). Star cast. A different type of story which seemed to please and amuse. However, it will not stand very much boosting. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

LOVE PIRATE. Star, Carmel Myers. This will not break any house records. The titles will draw a few flappers, but the majority out here decided it was too high-brow for them. Sunday, no. Not much audience appeal. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

NORTH OF NEVADA. (5,000 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Not as good as some of his others. Too many heroics. He is surely a coming star and is a good box office attraction. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

First National

ASHES OF VENGEANCE. (10 reels). Star, Norma Talmadge. Very fine production, artistically. A decided failure at the box office. Just a few more costume pictures and we small town fellows will be out. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very little here. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

BOY OF MINE. (7 reels). Star, Ben Alexander. A one hundred per cent perfect picture. Very true to life. It holds the interest from start to finish. It is a pleasure to show such pictures. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

CHILDREN OF THE DUST. (6,228 feet). Star, Pauline Garon. All about Terwillinger, who is one of the best characters I have seen. Public opinion in this section seems largely to agree with me, since much hand-clapping and loud voices followed the showing of the picture. Tone fine. Good attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

DULCY. (6,859 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. A featureless feature that brought us the poorest two days of the fall season. Name is bad and star has no drawing power here. Story itself was of light comedy drama type and was fairly well done, but did not seem to please. Tone perfect. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. Ben L. Morris, Temple Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.

DULCY. (6,859 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. We played this one; old, but did a satisfactory business with it, considering our opposition. One of the best Talmadge pictures we have had and the people "ate it up." Play up the comedy and Constance Talmadge and you will get the business. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Farming and small town class, town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE. (7,120 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Our patrons went out after it was over wondering what it was all about. They stayed until it was over because they thought they might get the key to the mystery before it was all over. Splendid acting but a rotten story. Tone good. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Farming and small town class, town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

ETERNAL CITY. (7,800 feet). Star cast. Small towns, lay off this one. It has absolutely no appeal to the average small town American audience. There has been a lot of money spent on this one and they charge you enough for it, but it is simply not there for entertainment value. Tone will do. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, none for us. High class farmers, town of 2,000. Admission 10-35. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre, Sinton, Texas.

ETERNAL CITY. (7,000 feet). Star, Lionel Barrymore. No doubt but this is a wonderful picture and one which cost a fortune to produce. Yet it is not a small town picture. The acting is very good but the action drags and consequently it does not hold the attention. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

FLAMING YOUTH. (8,474 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. This picture, which I ran for a benefit performance, delighted a large audience. In my estimation, it is a fine picture and one which should please anywhere. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

FOR SALE. (7,840 feet). Star, Adolphe Menjou. Story and acting very good. Kind of unusual picture. Attendance good. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST. (6,600 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. A fine western production that attracted a large crowd of people who were satisfied that they saw their money's worth. Scenery is excellent as well as plot and development. Tone good. Good crowd. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

GOLDFISH. (7,145 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. A very good light comedy, though will not please everyone. Constance Talmadge's acting is wonderful, which carries the picture more than the story. The print —well, I spent thirty minutes putting it on double reels; no inspection was necessary. Tone very good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not so good as she used to be. Draw from mostly out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

HOTTENTOT. (5,953 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. It's old but if you haven't seen it, it's good. Kept them roaring throughout. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers, fishermen, town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

LIGHT IN THE DARK. (7,000 feet). Star, Hope Hampton. Pleased about fifty per cent of a very small audience, who admitted that they were prompted to see picture through mention of Lon Chaney in cast. Tone fair.

Sunday, yes. Weak audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

LOVE NEVER DIES. (6,751 feet). Star cast. Not much to it. Some thrills, but when that's said all's said, as the story is chopped and no ending anywhere to story. Tone, no. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Country and town class, town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

MAN OF ACTION. (5 reels). Star, Douglas MacLean. A fast-moving story that pretty well held the interest of the gang from start to finish. Some said it was better than "The Sunshine Trail." Tone good. Good attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD. (6,000 feet). Star, Bert Lytell. A good picture and is suited for the star. Pleased a good crowd on a Sunday night. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes. Admission 10-13. F. E. Wheeler, Strand Theatre (280 seats, Scotland, South Dakota.

OLIVER TWIST. (7,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. This is not quite the kind of picture for Jackie, but I had a good crowd the first night; the second it rained, so don't know what I would have done; but Jackie always draws for me. Small town and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

OMAR THE TENTMAKER. (8,090 feet). Star, Guy Bates Post. I booked this one for my own benefit and paid for it. A wonderful picture, but my type audience doesn't care for this class of production. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, sixty per cent. Farmers, fishermen, town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

PAINTED PEOPLE. (5,700 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. They better watch this little star or she will carry off the prize some day. Picture first class. They all fall for Colleen. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

PECK'S BAD BOY. (6,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A picture a little old but good and will please any audience as the title has a wonderful drawing power. Play it and see the kids come. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Country and town class, town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats). Lowry City, Missouri.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Played to capacity business every night. Business good entire week. Tone satisfactory. Sunday, okay. Very good audience appeal. G. A. Kinemer, Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. The most pleasing Colleen Moore picture I have ever shown. It has comedy, dramatic incidents, and teaches a fine lesson in an unobtrusive way. Everyone who sees it is a booster for it. The advertising accessories and title are both good. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Extra good audience appeal. All classes, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Best thing by far she ever did. Better than "Flaming Youth." Everyone liked it and it got more money than "Secrets" and was better liked. Cost us not half as much money. Colleen Moore possibly our biggest star. She is a real safe bet. Tone extra good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Successful business is always built on good will.

Good will means trust and confidence, faith in the business man's word on the part of the customer.

But the picture producer is up against something no carpet or wall paper salesman has to buck: he can't let the eventual consumer "look before he buys" and he can't tell how YOUR audience is going to like his pictures.

His salesman acts in good faith when he says, "The Yellow Terror" is a picture you can't lose on: That's what he hears from the big city premiere.

You book "The Yellow Terror" and it does a flop. Box office looks sick. All your town crosses the street when it sees you coming.

And yet the same producer's "Golden Fear" may have made you money.

Your only safe guide-post is the tip these generous exhibitors send to this dependable tip department.

Your only way to thank them is to send tips on your own hook.

VAN.

PONJOLA. (7 reels). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. Bood picture but did not come up to expectations. Did not draw. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (259 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star cast. A fine picture on the bootleggers and the hootch hounds. The title does suit the picture. Did not have a very good crowd. Will have it booked again. D. D. Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

TWENTY-ONE. (6,560 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. For the first time in this star's history he failed to please our patrons. It's a flop. Tone poor. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Better classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN. (6,910 feet). Star, John Bowers. This is a wonderful picture; played for three days to a full house each night. John Bowers is liked here by all. D. D. Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. Will attract unusual comment and attendance and should please any audience. Tone could be improved upon. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. College town class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-40. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. Splendid. Can't go wrong on this one. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,775. Admission 10-20-25. Wahl & Worcester, Kil Kare Theatre (579 seats), Wood River, Illinois.

WITHIN THE LAW. (8,074 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A very, very good picture. For me, the most entertaining picture with Norma Talmadge since "Smilin' Through." Why doesn't Miss Talmadge stick to this type of picture, rather than the costume plays? The supporting cast is exceptionally well chosen. Received many nice comments on this picture. Used slide, window cards, boards and mailing list to draw extra good crowd at increased admission. Suitable for Sunday. Print was poor. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall Theatre, Chester Vermont.

WOMAN ON THE JURY. (7,331 feet). Star cast. A very good picture with an all-star cast. D. D. Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

Fox

BLIZZARD. (5,890 feet). Star cast. A foreign-made picture with some good scenic effects. Not a good cold weather picture. Pleased fairly well. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

CUPID'S FIREMAN. (5,000 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Though I just received a letter from Fox bawling me out for reporting unfavorably on their new spectacle, "Dante's Inferno," and it doesn't make me feel friendly, I have to report favorably on this picture. It is one of the best Buck Jones has made, I think, in spite of the fact that he doesn't play western in this. Good story and plenty of thrills. General class, town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

CUPID'S FIREMAN. (5,000 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Others have done this style picture so much better that it does not measure up to expectations. Ordinary program stuff. Tone okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, sixty-five per cent. Neighborhood class, city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

EXILES. (5 reels). Star, John Gilbert. My patrons seemed to like this one. Business fair. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

EYES OF THE FOREST. (5 reels). Star, Tom Mix. Very good picture and pleased all

Narrow Escape for Our "Dependable Davis"

Way back in February of 1922 reports began to come in from L. O. Davis, and they have been coming with pleasant helpfulness since.

Naturally, we wondered what was up when none came in of late.

Here's the explanation, from friend Davis himself.

And we're all glad he got home safely.

"Having been in Europe all Summer I have not sent in any reports, but am now back on the job and will be shooting in lots of tips this season to try to help you make the World Reports the best in the business.

"Am enclosing a few made out on a blank sheet, as I have no regular report blanks—would appreciate you sending me some.

"On my return from Europe I thought I would never send another report, as I happened to be on the White Star liner 'Arabic,' which, as you know, was damaged considerably in a storm off Nantucket." L. O. Davis, Virginia Amusement Co., Hazard, Kentucky.

who saw it, including myself. Had excellent supporting cast. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

HELL'S HOLE. (6 reels). Star, Buck Jones. A fine picture spoiled by a dream ending. Good action picture from start to finish, with wonderful work by Jones and Lefty Flynn. Patrons were certainly disappointed when the picture story faded into a dream and the two leading characters were left where the story started. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal fair. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

HELL'S HOLE. (6 reels). Star, Charles Jones. Good picture, above program schedule, but paid too much for it. Worth seeing. Wonderful thrills and plenty of good, rapid-fire action. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

LADIES TO BOARD. (6,112 feet). Star, Tom Mix. A fair Mix picture. Audience seemed to like it. Attendance good. Good acting. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

LADIES TO BOARD. (6,112 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Tom will lose his popularity if he gets into many more like this. That is, in small towns where straight westerns are enjoyed. Picture is all right but Tom is not built to be a mammy's boy. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

LADIES TO BOARD. (6,112 feet). Star, Tom Mix. A very good picture but not the kind that the fans want to see Mix in. This one had a world of comedy in it and it was so balanced with the more serious side of the picture that all went well. However, Bill Fox should not put a good western star in a picture like this one. Tone good. Sunday, yes; some might object to banquet. Strong audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

LONE STAR RANGER. (5,259 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Good old Tom Mix. He has to make up a lot of losses for other stars and companies. The picture pleased exceptionally well and drew a big Friday and Saturday crowd. Zane Grey story adds to popularity. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

PAINTED LADY. (6,938 feet). Star, Dorothy Mackaill. Don't like the title, but must say that we consider it a good program attraction. Tone okay. Attendance very poor. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

ROMANCE RANCH. (4,471 feet). Star, John Gilbert. An average program picture, with nothing to shout about. Tone all right. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

SHADOW OF THE EAST. (5,874 feet). Star cast. An Oriental romantic drama with the inevitable triangle of an Englishman, an English girl and an Indian maid. A good story, characteristic of the East, well told and a cast that is exceptionally good. Mildred Harris and Frank Mayo have splendid roles. Will please both sexes. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

SOFT BOILED. (7,054 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Different, but everybody liked it. Had a good crowd on a Saturday night. Tone good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

TEMPLE OF VENUS. (8,000 feet). Star cast. Very fine picture. Something different. Colored photography good. Story not so good but will please majority. Tone good. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

THIS FREEDOM. Star cast. A good picture, but its preaching against the modern woman kills its appeal. Well staged and acted. Won't stand boosting. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. Neighborhood class, city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

TROUBLE SHOOTER. (5,702 feet). Star, Tom Mix. My patrons enjoyed this picture immensely and were very generous with compliments. The Mix pictures that contain a sprinkling of comedy are much more popular in this town than the more serious ones. Of this year's product from this star, "Soft Boiled," "Ladies to Board" and this one gave the most universal satisfaction. Of course, all Mix pictures are good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Small town and rural class, town of 2,245. Admission 10-20. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre (299 seats), Wellington, Ohio.

VAGABOND TRAIL. (4,302 feet). Star, Charles Jones. Entirely too many fade-outs, taking up too much film. Action too scarce. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. City of 200,000. Admission 10-20. R. M. Kennedy, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Birmingham, Alabama.

VAGABOND TRAIL. (4,302 feet). Star, Charles Jones. A fairly good western that gets away from the time-worn western plots. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

Metro-Goldwyn

ALONG CAME RUTH. (5,000 feet). Star, Viola Dana. A very good program attraction. If your patrons like Dana, this one will satisfy most of them. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

ARAB. (6,710 feet). Star, Ramon Novarro. Two days to very poor business. Personally we think this a fine production, but did not make expenses for us. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

BOY OF FLANDERS. (7,018 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A real nice picture, with Jackie doing his stuff as he alone can. Popularity, however, brings the crowds more than the real value of the picture. Tone good. Big attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

DAY OF FAITH. (6,577 feet). Star, Roy Griffith. Story bum. Not fit for a program picture. Half people walked out. Don't expect much and you won't be disappointed. Tone okay. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Rotten attendance. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

FASHION ROW. (7,300 feet). Star, Mae Murray. Dud. That in one word is the feeling expressed by a majority of the audience who saw this picture. Long drawn out, with a bit of good action in the last reel. Tone not so good for small town. Attendance rotten for second show. People going out told people coming in what it was. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. A very good special attraction. Pleased about ninety per cent. Average attendance. Tone okay. Sunday, questionable. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

IN SEARCH OF A THRILL. (5,500 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Very ordinary. Much overworked theme. Not as good as the comedy dramas she usually plays in. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (259 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

NELLIE, THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL. (7,000 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. Not a half bad show, although the novelty ending really saves it for a first class house. Tone fair. Sunday, possibly. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

PLEASURE MAD. (7,547 feet). Star cast. Good picture but rental too high for this small town. No profit left for us after paying rental. No more of this for us. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

RENO. (7 reels). Star cast. A good cast in a picture that my audience didn't like. Poor entertainment. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Fair attendance. Family and student class town of 4,00. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

SECOND YOUTH. (6,169 feet). Star, Alfred Lunt. Exhibitors lay off. If you contraced for this pay for it but do not run it or you will have a good night wasted. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, twenty per cent. Best class town of 2,200. Admission thirty five cents. Harry A. Kridel, Atlantic Theatre (700 seats), Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey.

SOULS FOR SALE. (7,864 feet). Star cast. A good picture although it only pleased about fifty per cent. Personally, I think it fine. The story is exceptionally good and the picture is educational. Tone, good. Farming community town of 800. Admission 15-25. A B. McCullough, Community Theatre (250 seats), Neosho Falls, Kansas.

STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT. (8,000 feet). Star cast. Just film that is all. Fair tone. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. All classes city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

TESS OF THE D'UBERVILLES. (10 reels). Star, Blanche Sweet. Too long. Unhappy ending, and the fact that everyone is in trouble at all times, makes a picture that cannot hope to please many. Tone, questionable. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 15-25. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

THREE WEEKS. (7,500 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. This has wonderful photography, good acting but a little too suggestive but the majority liked it. Doubtful tone. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, just fair. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

PRISCILLA DEAN

As she appears in "A Cafe in Cairo," released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

THROUGH THE DARK. (7,999 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. A real show. One of the Goldwyn's good ones. Forrest Stanley really the star. Although eight reels, this one holds them. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

THROUGH THE DARK. (7,999 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Can't go wrong if booked as a program picture. Not a real Colleen Moore picture as fans have learned to like this star. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Conservative city population city of 23,000. Admission twenty-five cents. D. J. Adams, Auditorium Theatre (1,100 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

UNDER THE RED ROBE. (12,000 feet). Star cast. Bought it cheap enough but it seemed to lack punch and was too long. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, sixty per cent. Agricultural class town of 1,600. Admission 10-25, 10-35. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (400 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

UNINVITED GUEST. (6,145 feet). Star cast. Same old society stuff. My but I sure get tired of these slow society stuff pictures put out by this company. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Poor attendance. All classes city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

WILD ORANGES. (7 reels). Star, Frank Mayo. Excellent melodrama. A very good picture for Saturday in small towns whose patrons like action and some realism also. Tone, okay. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 10-35. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre (374 seats), Sinton, Texas.

Paramount

ALASKAN. (6,738 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Why put a good gentleman star in a western or far north picture. Get Mix, Gibson, or Hoxie. Picture not worth the price they ask for it. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, forty per cent. Best class town of 2,200. Admission thirty-five cents. Harry A. Kridel, Atlantic Theatre (700 seats), Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey.

ALASKAN. Star, Thomas Meighan. A first class picture. Gold, and golden, glowing romance, living again those hammer and tong fighting days of Alaska. Every scene was taken on this spot. It's a red hot story of the frozen north and it is just like finding a gold mine of entertainment. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

BACHELOR DADDY. (6,229 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A one hundred per cent. picture. Pleased all. Had more comments on this than any picture we have shown for some time, good attendance. Tone, good. Farming community town of 800. Admission 15-25. A. B. McCullough, Community Theatre (250 seats), Neosho Falls, Kansas.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Ton Moore. Did not have much drawing power for us. The show in itself was good. The kid in it was great. It is rather rough in spots and is rather strong for children at times. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star cast. This picture was liked very much and held up especially well the second night. The acting of the "kid" was highly complimented, many saying they liked him better than any juvenile star they have seen yet. Tom Moore is an asset to any picture shown here. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Small town and rural class town of 2,245. Admission 10-20. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre (229 seats), Wellington, Ohio.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Tom Moore. Very fine picture. One of the best Paramount ever made. Pleased one hundred per cent. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

BLOOD AND SAND. (7,235 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. People might call it a good picture but it sure did not go in our theatre. Too much Roman stuff. Audience appeal, good. Mixed class town of 800. Admission 15-25. Jerry Wertin, Winter Theatre (250 seats), Albany, Minnesota.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE. (5,960 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Well acted and elaborate picture. If your audience likes pretty settings and costumes it will go great. Fair tone. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 600. Admission 10-20-10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE. (5,960 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is a very good picture with this popular star. Book it, it's good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

CALL OF THE CANYON. (6,982 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A very good picture. Played during the county fair. D. D. Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. A nice comedy drama pleased a good Sunday audience. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-20. Charles Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. An extremely pleasing comedy and well worth playing. Moral tone could be improved upon easily and without hurting the picture. I seem to be getting quite a few of this calibre of late. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. College town class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-40. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

CHILDREN OF JAZZ. (6,080 feet). Star, Eileen Percy. This one had a different twist in it that they never expected. It is a show that does not seem to get anywhere at all. It is only program show. Tone, fair. Not suitable for Sunday. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admissiion 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star cast. Fair picture that pleased majority. Paramount pictures too high so did not make any money. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. During my seven years as an exhibitor I do not recall running a single picture that had the audience appeal that this has. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Agricultural class town of 1,600. Admission 10-25, 10-35. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (400 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

COVERED WAGON. Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. A very fine production which any exhibitor should make money on if bought right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,775. Admission 10-20-25. Wahl & Worcester, Kil Kare Theatre (579 seats), Wood River, Illinois.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Went over good for three days. This will make money if you can buy it right. Price paid by us too high. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 15-25. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

DON'T CALL IT LOVE. (6,457 feet). Star cast. The picture is eight reels, should not be more than six. Action slow, rental high with a good many walkouts before it was over. Not a special by any means, or justice to the stars. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. College class town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

EBB TIDE. Star cast. A nice litte program picture that will please your audience. The price is right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

ENEMY SEX. (7,861 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Is a very good program, interesting and entertaining, although would have been more appreciated if cut to six reels. William Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

ENEMY SEX. (7,883 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Very good feature. Splendid cast and fine acting. Good, photography, direction and everything. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fine. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,750. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

EXCITERS. (5,939 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Just what the name implies. A picture that moves all the time and one that pleases, but we couldn't get them in. Tone, fair. Doubtful for Sunday. General audience appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40, 25-50. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

EXCITERS. (5,939 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. This is a cracker jack. We had comments on this several weeks after it had gone. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Country town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. Opera House Theatre (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Hiers. Good comedy. Will satisfy majority. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Hiers. Nothing to it, no good. Tone, okay. Sunday yes. Poor attendance. All classes town of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Hiers. A picture which greatly surprised me. I had read quite a few adverse reports on this one but I considered it to be a fairly interesting story but one that will not stand much boosting. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

FEET OF CLAY. (9,746 feet). Star cast. A super human production which can only be done by DeMille. Wonderful scenery, excellent photography. Should make money for very exhibitor. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Best class town of 2,200. Admission thirty-five cents. Harry A. Kridel, Atlantic Theatre (700 seats), Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey.

FEMALE. Star, Betty Compson. More deadly than the male is Betty Compson in the "Female." From "Dalla, The Lion Cub," alluring story of mysterious Africa, by Cynthia Stockley, author of "Ponjola." Betty Compson is Dalla untamed jungle girl, society love, lioness and always the primitive woman. William Noble, Majestic Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Cullen Landis. Fine. Good story of the old South. Cast perfect. Pleased all who saw ti. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star cast. A mighty fine picture that will be appreciated by the better classes. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal ninety per cent. Agricultural class town of 1,600. Admission 10-25, 10-35. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (400 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Ernest Torrence is a wonderful actor. Played this one day of the fair also. Had good attendance. D. D. Purcell, Muse-U Theatre, Cortez, Colorado.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star cast. An excellent picture that gave universal satisfaction to all who came, but one that did not do an average business at the box office. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. Small town and rural class town of 2,245. Admission 10-20. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre (299 seats), Wellington, Ohio.

FLAMING BARRIERS. (5,821 feet). Star, Jacqueline Logan. A great audience picture. It sure got the kids. It drew us one of the biggest Saturday nights for months. One of the best Paramount shows that we have had in sometime. Tone good. Great audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

FLAMING BARRIERS. (5,821 feet). Star cast. Fair picture but fire scene improbable. Nothing extra. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

GLIMPSES OF THE MOON. (6,502 feet). Star cast. If you are playing to society only this may please on account of beautiful gowns. Not the type for small towns. Okay for Broadway. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

GRUMPY. (5,621 feet). Star, Theodore Roberts. A wonderful picture. Get it by all means. Very clever detective story with Theodore Roberts. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Tourists town of 2,440. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

GRUMPY. (5,621 feet). Star cast. Gentlemen this is a fine production. If you have not played this one you have not treated your patrons right. Very, very good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

HEART RAIDER. Star, Agnes Ayres. Very good program picture bought reasonable. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Tourists town of 2,440. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

HOLLYWOOD. (8,100 feet). Star cast. Very entertaining picture. The best of all the Hollywood pictures. Tone, good. Sunday yes. Good audience appeal. Tourists town of 2,440. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

HOMEWARD BOUND. (7,000 feet). Thomas Meighan. Another good Meighan picture although not up to standard for this very popular star. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

HUMMING BIRD. (5,577 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. As good a feature as we have ever had the pleasure of seeing Miss Swanson in. Pleased one hundred per cent. Only objection too much rental. Advertised this feature big as it will please all. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House Theatre (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO. (5 reels).

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

Star, Thomas Meighan. Didn't please me and comments were divided fifty-fifty on the audience. Tone, okay. Audience appeal, fifty-fifty. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

LILY OF THE DUST. Star, Pola Negri. When you see this picture, you will have seen the soul of a woman laid bare upon the screen. The soul of Pola Negri, "Peerless Princess" of emotions. The picture is just a little bit of the European idea of morality, but still will not offend anyone seeing it. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

MAKING A MAN. (6 reels). Star, Jack Holt. Excellent program picture. Audience well pleased. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Excellent audience appeal. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A very good comedy drama. Swanson draws well, but rentals being too high, we cannot make any money. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 15-25. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Patrons well pleased. Gloria's comedy parts went over big. Tone, good. City of 10,000. Admission 10-25-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

MANSLAUGHTER. (9,061 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. One of the finest productions from any angle I have ever had the pleasure to show. Don't pass it up. Play it big. It will have the whole town talking. Tone, good. Splendid audience appeal. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Theatre (700 seats), Union, Maine.

MANSLAUGHTER. (9,061 feet). Star cast. Plenty of pep and action in this and did a great business. Go after it, it will show up at the box office. Tone, okay. Excellent audience appeal. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

MANSLAUGHTER. (9,061 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A very good production from start to finish. All Meighan's go one hundred per cent. in our theatre. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 800. Admission 15-25. Jerry Wertin, Winter Theatre (250 seats), Albany, Minnesota.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. Star cast. Very ordinary. Tone, not good. City of 10,000. Admission 10-25-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A good picture and one that will get the business. Pleased at advance admission. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. College town class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-40. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet).

"Nana, I won't have my head washed!" Philippe de Lacy as Michael and George Ali as Nana, the dog, in "Peter Pan," a Herbert Brenon's Paramount picture.

Star, Rudolph Valentino. Good business for three days. Good tone. City of 10,000. Admission 10-25-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

MY AMERICAN WIFE. (6,061 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. About the best Swanson we have played so far. The print was in good condition and we played to good crowds. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Country town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. Opera House Theatre (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

NEXT CORNER. (7,081 feet). Star, Conway Tearle. This certainly was a piece of junk. Beware of this one. Don't run if they pay you for it. Not suitable for Sunday. No audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,775. Admission 10-20-25. Wahl & Worcester, Kil Kare Theatre (579 seats), Wood River, Illinois.

NEXT CORNER. (6,081 feet). Star cast. Using Conway Tearle without a good leading lady is wasting a lot of good talent and film. Audience appeal, sixty-five per cent. City of 200,000. Admission 10-20. R. M. Kennedy, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Birmingham, Alabama.

NOBODY'S MONEY. (5,587 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Did Paramount business on this one and pleased everyone. Advise booking. Tone, okay. Excellent audience appeal. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

OLD HOMESTEAD. (7,606 feet). Star, Theodore Roberts. A truly wonderful picture from an audience appeal standpoint. Pleased nearly one hundred per cent. of my patrons. Play it. Will make you both friends and money. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Theatre (700 seats), Union, Maine.

PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS. (6,216 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Our first Swanson picture, and believe it pleased immensely. Have heard several favorable comments, especially upon the story value of the picture and the lesson it endeavors to convey. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40, 25-50. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

SALOMY JANE. (6,270 feet). Star cast. Another good Paramount offering. Price is right. You can buy good stuff from Paramount without mortgaging your house. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

Pathe

CALL OF THE WILD. (7,000 feet). Star, Buck. A corking Alaskan picture with wonderful work by the dog star. A typical London story and the film version follows the book pretty well. Will hold attention throughout. Tone, good. Good attendance. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatres (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. As usual, very good. Patrons enjoyed it immensely. Had good crowds but spent too much advertising it so did not come out with much profit. Pathe did not help the exhibitor with the exploitation any, not even supplying a trailer unless I'd pay for it. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. Residential class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

ISLE OF ZORDA. Star cast. An old one that did nothing remarkable one way or the other. Hardly worth bothering with. Tone, not much. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

JAMESTOWN. (3 reels). This is nothing but history and it sure is the "bunk." It is one of the "Chronicles of America" series. Some are in four reels and some in three so if you have a short feature you can work these in all right with a comedy or news. Tone, good, Sunday, oh my yes. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

PETER STUYVESANT. (3 reels). Another of the "Chronicles" series. I have only run two and this is better than the first one and there is still chance for improvement so far as interest is concerned. If you book this be sure and fill in with some good short subjects. Tone, good. Suitable for any day. Fair audience appeal. Family and student class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. This is a good one. Pleased all who saw it. It has thrills and plenty of them. Laughs every second. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Almost everyone has shown this and the review is printed about five times a week, however, let me add one more voice to the all around commendation of a real good thriller and comedy. Good tone. Big attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

LIGHTNING RIDER. (6 reels). Star, Harry Carey. This is an above the average Western but I lost money on it. As a Western doesn't seem to draw the crowd in my house tthat a society drama and society star will bring in. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, western. General class town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

United Artists

LOVING LIES. (6,526 feet). Star, Monte Blue. Pleased those who came but did not draw. A very good picture of program quality. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

MARK OF ZORRO. (7 reels). Star, Douglas Fairbanks. This might be old to some towns but it proved very satisfactory for us. We had a print in perfect condition. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Country class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

WAY DOWN EAST. (11 reels). Star, Lillian Gish. This one is old but it got the business for us pleased one hundred per cent. We put it on with a special orchestra and it certainly was worth while from the compliments we received from the crowd. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Should please any audience. Farmers and miners town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

Universal

BACK TRAIL. (4,615 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Jack Hoxie as usual pleases in this picture. Lots of hard riding and action. Print good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

BIG TIMBER. (4,650 feet). Star, William Desmond. A fair little program picture of the outdoor type. Got by on one day change. Tone fair. Fair attendance. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

BROADWAY OR BUST. (5,272 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Not so bad. Patrons' general opinion is that Hoot should stay in straight westerns. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

DANCING CHEAT. (5 reels). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. Only fair. Nothing to rave over. I ran it as part of a double feature program and got away with it. As a single attraction it needs considerable aid in line of shorts. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Small audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

DRIVEN. Star cast. A fair picture with a bad print and that is bad enough. Have not had a bad print on a Jewel yet. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre, Piqua, Ohio.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura La Plante. A very good program picture. A little different from the ordinary run of pictures. Print, fine. Fair shape. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers town of 150. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Casino Theatre (310 seats), Richmond, Iowa.

EXCITEMENT. (4,912 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. A dandy picture. A real comedy that will please one hundred per cent. Be sure and play this one and don't be afraid to boost it as it will go over big anywhere. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Country and town class town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

FOOL'S HIGHWAY. (6,800 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. A very poor audience picture. Run it before you show it. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Did fairly well on our first night but fell off after that. This is a strong K. K. K. town and they gave it a knock on account of it being of a Catholic nature. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Country class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

LADY OF QUALITY. (8,640 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Story good for five reel picture. Too dry. Our patrons want action. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Bad attendance. General class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

LAW FORBIDS. (6,262 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. An absolute puzzle. Can't put her over on a bet although she is a splendid little actress and looks like a safe bet, but people do not care for her here. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not much. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

RECKLESS AGE. Star, Reginald Denny. Patrons came out with nothing but praise for Denny and wanted to know when we could get another one. Tone, okay. Sunday. Country class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

STORM DAUGHTER. (5,303 feet). Star, Priscilla Dean. Can't see much in this picture although it was a good sea story. Priscilla Dean does not get any money here. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

UNTAMABLE. (4,776 feet). Star, Gladys Walton. This is a good one and price is right. Don't fail to buy it. Had fair business. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

WHERE IS THIS WEST? (4,532 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A far western. Nothing to brag on. Print in fair shape but not in fine shape, by all means. Tone, none. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers town of 150. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Casino Theatre (310 seats), Richmond, Iowa.

WHERE IS THIS WEST. (4,532 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Rather silly but I guess they liked it as I had a better than usual second night crowd and that is what we want, I think. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town class and farmers, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

Vitagraph

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. Previewed this picture. It is a big elaborate costume picture and in my opinion was too slow and there was too much repetition. While it may go big with large orchestra in cities, at advanced prices, do not see how it can get big play in smaller cities and towns. It does not compare with First National's "Sea Hawk." High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

FRONT PAGE STORY. (6,000 feet). Star cast. A very good comedy drama, but oh boy! what a rotten print we got on it. I never saw any worse. It sure was ready for the junk can long ago. I had to work on it four hours in order to get it fit to run through our projectors. If that is the best Vitagraph can do I wish they would keep them in their exchange and not send them here. This is a small town but the patrons are used to good service and that's what they're paying for so come on Vitagraph I want a square deal in prints and don't forget it, I'll have it or bust. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers town of 150. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Casino Theatre (310 seats), Richmond, Iowa.

LET NOT MAN PUT ASSUNDER. (8 reels). Star, Pauline Frederick. Star not popular here. Photoplay exceptionally good, although it did not please our people. The acting of all major players superb. Tone, excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, sixty per cent. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

MY MAN. (6,800 feet). Star, Dustin Farnum. A love story that is fair but nothing extra. Will do for a small house. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (178 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

ON BANKS OF THE WABASH. Star cast. Here is a real picture with a flood in it that is real. Will do for anybody. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (178 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH. (7,156 feet). Star cast. Put this on in place of "Dulcy" which had flopped and it trippled the business. Is a good action story, a little ovedrawn as to the rural types but gets over. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Ben L. Morris, Temple Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

PIONEER TRAILS. (6,920 feet). Star, Alice Calhoun. A very fine picture, some said it was just as good as the "Covered Wagon" and it can be bought right. Print was in fair condition. Book it and clean up. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Farmers town of 150. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Casino Theatre (310 seats), Richmond, Iowa.

SMASHING BARRIERS. (6 reels). Star cast. Unadulterated action. It is wild and improbable. Will appeal to only those who like action in preference to logic. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, lower class only. High class farmers town of 2,000. Admission 10-33. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre, Sinton, Texas.

Warner Bros.

BEING RESPECTABLE. (7,500 feet). Star Irene Rich. A very good picture which failed to bring them in. All those who saw it were pleased. Tone, good. Sunday, good. Poor attendance. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

BROADWAY AFTER DARK. (6,300 feet). Star cast. A very good picture and one which pleased everybody. A splendid cast, fine direction, and good story make this one one you can't go wrong on if you buy right. Tone, fair. Good attendance. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. D. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

BROADWAY AFTER DARK. (6,300 feet). Star, Adolphe Menjou. A fair picture of life on Broadway after dark. Spicy in places. Good attendance. On the whole a good program picture. Tone, not so good. Sunday, no. General class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre, (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

BROADWAY AFTER DARK. (6,300 feet). Star, Adolphe Menjou. This picture did a splendid business for me, holding up well for the entire week. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Splendid audience appeal. G. A. Kinemer, Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, Florida.

CONDUCTOR 1492. Star, Johnny Hines. Picture a scream. Run it. Johnny can sure act. Cast good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. General class town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

DADDIES. (6,800 feet). Star cast. A very good picture that will certainly delight any audience. Drew only fair at box office. Tone, very good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

DADDIES. (6,800 feet). Star cast. One fine audience picture. Nothing but praise for this one. Tone, splendid. Very suitable for Sunday. Great audience appeal. Residential class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. J. A. McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, JR. (6 reels). Star, Wesley Barry. Here's a good Wesley Barry picture. It pleased those who saw it, but "Kid" pictures do not draw anymore. Tone , good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

Laurette Taylor and Warner Oland in a scene from the Metro-Goldwyn production, "One Night in Rome."

Comedies

AGGRAVATING PAPA. (Educational). Star, Jimmie Adams. A clever two reeler that brought the delighted shrieks from the kids. Christie comedies are popular here. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

ANDY'S HAT IS IN THE RING. (Universal-Gumps). This satire on election is timely and a mighty good comedy tie-up with newspaper running Gumps or play up election angle with Andy on fourth party ticket etc. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Any audience appeal. Family class city of 100,000. Admission 25-35,50. Jack H. Roth, Liberty Theatre (1,000 seats), Kansas City, Missouri.

ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH. (Pathe). Star, Ben Turpin. Here's a comedy that will have them roaring most of the time. Dogs do wonderful work in this one. One of the best comedies I have played for a long time. Don't pass it up. Tone, good. Good attendance. General class town of 2,200 Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

BACK STAGE. (Pathe). "Our Gang." Another knockout comedy with the "Gang." Whenever you have a feature booked you are afraid of put on an "Our Gang" and it will pull you through. Tone, none. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

BUCCANEERS. (Pathe). "Our Gang. These are the best kid comedies I have ever seen. They please the old as well as the young. This one is one of the best of the series. Tone, fine. Sunday, sure. Fine audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

COBBLER. (Pathe). "Our Gang." "Our Gang" goes on a trip with a flivver and what Farina does in the watermellon patch brings them convulsions. There are many real laughs in this comedy as in most of this series. Henry W. Hauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

DON'T PARK THERE. (Pathe). Star, Will Rogers. Very good. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

EAST OF THE WATER PLUG. (Pathe). Very good pleased them all. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

EAT AND RUN. (Century). Like all Century comedies the photography in this one is equal to high class features. Some new and novel stunts. Above average. Tone, okay. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

EDUCATOR. (Educational). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. Pretty good comedy with a number of laughs. Lots of slapstick. What the average patron wants. Why? Because the action in a slapstick comedy is fast and furious and is "different" from the action in the feature photoplay on the program. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

ETIQUETTE. (Fox). Just two thousand feet of celluloid. Nothing else. Tone, fair. No audience appeal. Mixed class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

FIRST ONE HUNDRED YEARS. (Pathe). Star, Harry Langdon. A good comedy. Langdon is funny. Not foolish. Watch for his leading lady in this. Miss May to be starred in features sure. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

HEAVY SEAS. (Pathe). Spat Family. Another "Spat Family" comedy that went over fine. Plenty of funny situations. The Spat family are surely getting to be one of the leaders in the comedy field. Try a Spat and see! Tone, good. Attendance, good. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

HOT WATER. (Educational). Star, Neal Burns. Comedy with an old, overworked plot. Neal Burns did fine, though. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Weak audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

HUSTLING HANK. (Pathe). Star, Will Rogers. Somewhat better than the usual run of Rogers comedies. This one sure got the laughs out of everyone who saw it. Tone, the best. Suitable for Sunday and grouches. Fine audience appeal. Family and student class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

MONKS A LA MODE. (Fox). A good monkey comedy. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

ROMEO AND JULIET. (Pathe). Star, Ben Turpin. Ben is no favorite here but this made them laugh. It's the best of his I've seen yet. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

SECOND CHILDHOOD. (Educational). Star, Bobby Vernon. As usual, Bobby Vernon pulled off a good clean laughable comedy with a world of action. This comedy ought to please anywhere. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

SOUTH OF THE NORTH POLE. (Pathe). The Spats. Struck me as being a good comedy but lots of walk-outs. The reels did seem awfully long. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

WALL STREET BLUES. (Pathe). The usual Sennett formula with the chase better made than usual. Last reel advertisement for cough drops. Worth booking. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

WHY ELEPHANTS LEAVE HOME. (Pathe). Two reels too long. I just used the second reel showing the hunt and it went over. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Serials

ADVENTURES OF TARZAN. (Midwest). Star, Elmo Lincoln. This is as good a two reel serial as money can buy for small towns. I am running to full capacity every night. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

INTO THE NET. (Pathe). Star, Edna Murphy. Dandy serial. Book it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. All classes town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

LEATHERSTOCKING. (Pathe). Star, Edna Murphy. Have just run the first episode so can't tell much about it as I have yet to see a serial that didn't start out nice. However, it seems to have more Indians than history so I guess it will please the kids okay. General class town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

Short Subjects

DEMPSEY SERIES. (Universal). Star, Jack Dempsey. I don't think they're nearly as good as the Denny "Leather Pushers." Public here tired of fight films and keeps them away. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

FIGHT AND WIN SERIES. (Universal). Star, Jack Dempsey. "Winning His Way" the first of this series and the only one I have run so far, went over nicely and I think that I will do some business with Mr. Dempsey. Let's hope so, anyway. They cost enough. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

GRANTLAND RICE SPORTLIGHTS. (Pathe). The subject matter of these shorts are fine, always something new and interesting. However, I advise anyone to run them with a comedy rather than with a news as it makes a better balanced program. The prints that I get of these are poor. Tone, good. Sunday, I'll say so. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (Artclass). Nothing spectacular about it but it tells it's story just the same. These short pictures are bringing real literature to the screen in small doses so that even the most hardened thrill fan will applaud their screening. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

MERCHANT OF VENICE. (Artclass). With a comedy feature to follow this picture is a knockout. Scenery is scarce and actors few but the story is there and is interestingly told. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

PATHE NEWS. (Pathe). I firmly believe this to be the best news reel on the market. It covers everything. We are a little late in getting them down here but doesn't matter much as no one has seen them before. The prints are always good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

PLASTIGRAMS. (Educational). Paid as much for this half reel novelty as I do for some features but it was worth it. Advertise it big and it will get the business and cause a lot of favorable comment. Audience appeal, good. All classes town of 3 300. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

SWIFT AND STRONG. (Pathe Sportlight). This was a very entertaining single reel to anyone interested in athletics. Shows slow motion stuff of the Penn relay and is very well done. Tell your High School coach about it and he will bring the track team to see it. General class town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

WILLIAM TELLS. (Universal). Pretty good for novelty. Titles very clever. They seemed to like it. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Miscellaneous

AFTER SIX DAYS. (Artclass). Star cast. I haven't seen the "Ten Commandments" of Paramount but with the exception of the Red Sea scene I believe that the Weiss Brothers' picture is the greater of the two. There is no surplus explanation. Everything moves along step by step from the creation of the world to the court of the great Solomon. Big attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

BIFF BANG BUDDY. (Artclass). (4,500 feet). Star, Burry Roosevelt. Just a western but this boy is a comer. Plenty of action. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14 000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (178 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

BRIGHT LIGHTS OF BROADWAY. (Principal). (6,700 feet). Star, Doris Kenyon. People expected another "bright light" picture and didn't come. Those who did were unanimous in the expression that the picture was a good thriller and didn't deserve its title. Tone, not so good in spots. Poor attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

CAPTAIN KLEINSCHMIDT'S ADVENTURES IN FAR NORTH. (Lee-Bradford). A splendid picture if it had only been put together so that it could be run through a machine. Our audience thoroughly enjoyed this one except for the numerous stops, misframes and all the rest that goes with rotten film. It's a shame that they will spoil a perfectly good picture with bum prints. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, the far north. Farming and small town types town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

DAUGHTERS OF PLEASURE. (Principal). Star, Marie Prevost. Women and girls love this picture. Men and boys might call it silly. It will pass with most any audience. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Family audience appeal. Family class city of 100,000. Admission 25-35-50. Jack H. Roth, Liberty Theatre (1,000 seats). Kansas City, Missouri.

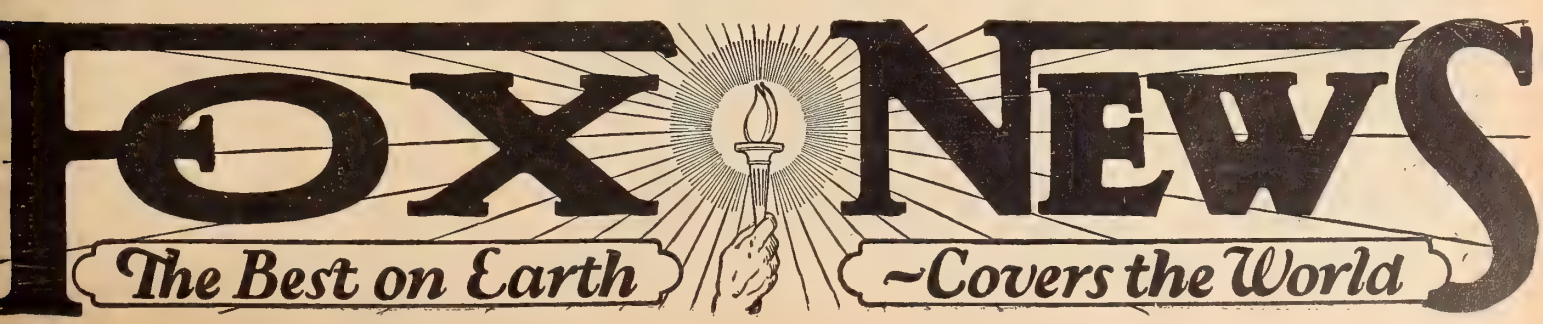
DEERSLAYER. (Mingo Productions). Star cast. Not in any way a really big picture but as a boy scout benefit show it went over big. Scenes of scouts in camp reading the book once in a while drawing attention to the fact that Boy Scouts are more or less of the same stuff as the "Deerslayer." Tone, good. Big attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

ENEMIES OF CHILDREN. (State Right). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. A good picture in the minds of many, with however, the reservation that the picture is too long to tell the story without becoming tired of watching it. Good tone. Poor attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

GOLD MADNESS. (Renown). Star, Guy Bates Post. (5,860 feet). Very few people knew that this story was adapted from a James Oliver Curwood book until they saw it on the title, after that they were "sold." The trailer doesn't show the best scenes in the picture. Why aren't trailers made to bring the crowds by showing real action parts of the pictures instead of discarded bits of the film? Tone, good. Fair attendance. Henry W. Nauman. Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

MARRIAGE MORALS. (Weber and North). Star, Ann Forest. (6,400 feet). Very good program but oh Lord why do we have to suffer such a mix up on advertising. They almost run us ragged saying they had seen the picture before. Good comments. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

POT LUCK PARDS. (William Steiner). Star, Peter Morrison. Very ordinary western feature sold at a rental that will get it by in a purely western house. Flopped here. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.



More Than 30 Productions Are Listed by Russell's 5 Companies

WILLIAM D. RUSSELL, of Hollwood, head of the William D. Russell, Inc., Crown Pictures, Sable Productions, Ermine Productions, Seal Productions and the William D. Russell Studios, has arrived in New York as advance courier to the first release of the Crown Pictures starring Wesley Barry, which has been completed and was being cut and titled when Mr. Russell left the Coast.

This release "Battling Bunyan," from the story by Raymond Leslie Goldman which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, is the forerunner to five other releases, the second of which will go into production at once.

"Our studios have never been so active as at present, and the prospects have never been so bright as at the present time," Mr. Russell declared to a representative of the Moving Picture World as he set foot on Broadway for the first time in many months. "Our first release will be the Crown Pictures featuring Wesley Barry, in the story adapted from the Saturday Evening Post, "Battling Bunyan," and the youngster whom we have signed for six months has never done such excellent work as he has in this, in which the climax is reached when he wins a prize fight before more than 4,000 spectators. This is the best story that Barry has ever acted and we have secured a fine cast for his support in which Frank Campeau has a very fine part. David Torrence, Molly Malone, Virginia Lee Corbin, Chester Conklin, Harry Mann, and the largest group of extras ever brought together for a picture of this sort, Wesley will surprise many of the ring sharps with his prowess in the squared circle, and well he may since we engaged Sammy Mandel, lightweight fighter, to train him. We shall start work at once on the second of the Barry releases. It will be a new American boy story entitled "Peanuts," and the scenes are laid in the lower East Side of New York.

"We have completed two of the proposed six pictures for the Sable Productions, 'The Valley of Hate,' has just been released and 'The Courageous Coward' is now ready for the screen, and just before I left the lot they had started on 'Another Man's Wife.' In addition to these three, others are ready to start on schedule time. Ermine Productions will also make six releases. Jack Meehan will be starred in these. The first three already finished and ready for the screen are 'His Own Law', 'The Passing of Wolf MacLean' and 'Hurricane Hal.' Johnny Fox is the featured member of the company making the Seal Productions. We all remember Johnny and his banjo in 'The Covered Wagon.' These Fox pictures are all Westerns of color and originality. The first release of this series will be 'Crooked Trails,' the other titles have not been definitely decided upon although the stories have been selected."

The Russell studios are among the most convenient, complete and commodious in Hollywood and they are being used day and night to hold to the active schedule prepared. The latest company formed by Mr. Russell in Hollywood promises to be one of the most important. It is the William D. Russell, Inc., and they will release six super-specials the first of which will be "The Robes of Sin." The titles for the six succeeding five will be announced by Mr. Russell later.

"I believe that we have a permanent cast for this series that will win recognition aside from the quality of the productions to be made. Among those now under regular contract are Sylvia Breamer, Jack Mower, William Buckley, Bruce Gordon and Lassie Lou Ahern. These pictures will justify the description of 'super-specials,' and they will play a star role among our various enterprises," concluded Mr. Russell.

Next summer Mr. Russell will offer a prize in the shape of a trip to Hollywood and return to the American boy who wins the "freckle" championship. In several of the Eastern cities the daily newspapers conduct annual freckle championship contests. It is in charge of the Evening World in New York. To the national champion freckled kid Mr. Russell, will on behalf of Wesley Barry, extend an invitation to Hollywood, a stay of a fortnight out there and the return home again.

Public to Pick Players

Novel Ballot for Selection of Cast for Thomas Ince's "Enticement"

A nationwide exploitation campaign has been worked out by the Thomas H. Ince organization and the Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company for the purpose of keeping the public interested in the forthcoming First National release "Enticement," from Clive Arden's new novel of that title.

The plan calls for the co-operation of the public in choosing the entire cast for the picture. Thousands of ballots inviting readers of the novel to cast the picture and mail their selections direct to Thomas H. Ince at Culver City, Calif., will be sent to booksellers, buyers, department managers and executives in book stores throughout the country.

The tie-up between the publisher of the book and the producer of the picture was arranged by Colvin W. Brown, Eastern Representative of the Thomas H. Ince Studios.

Wins Critic's Praise

Barrymore in "I Am the Man" Lauded by Milwaukee Dramatic Writer

Lionel Barrymore's second starring vehicle for Chadwick Pictures Corporation, "I Am The Man," the fourth picture in the famous unit—the Chadwick 9, now being distributed by the leading independent exchanges of the country—won the enthusiastic approval of the critics and public of Milwaukee last week, when it was presented at the big Merrill theatre there.

"Plenty of tense drama," wrote Peggy Patton, the critic of the Wisconsin News. "I heard exclamations on all sides of me—"Wonderful actor' and 'Oh isn't he grand'—about Lionel Barrymore."

"Barrymore certainly can act. He carries one away with a series of gripping scenes: the secret shooting of his brother, his accusation of the little flapper actress, the courtroom scenes when he learns she is his daughter, and the highly dramatic finale when he takes poison and confesses to his wife that he is the man, are some of the more outstanding and gripping ones."

Universal Shorts

"Robinson Crusoe," a Hysterical History comedy in one reel, stands at the head of Universal's short product releases this week. It is one of the series of travesties by Bryan Foy and Monte Brice.

Another strong release is "Her Rodeo Hero," a two-reel western drama starring Billy Sullivan. It was directed by Ernst Laemmle from a story by George Plympton.

'Painted Flapper' Goes Big

Chadwick Film Breaks Record of Schenley, Pittsburgh

"The Painted Flapper," produced by Chadwick Pictures Corporation for the independent market this season, as its third production in the Chadwick 9, bids fair to outdistance even such a master picture as "The Fire Patrol" in its box-office strength and in popularity with movie fans.

"The Painted Flapper," according to reports from Pittsburgh, last week broke the records of the new Schenley Theatre there, doing more business than the three presentations at the Schenley that preceded it. The Schenley, one of Pittsburgh's finest theatres, was opened four weeks ago.

Fox Buys "Havoc"

International Stage Success Secured for Early Production

William Fox announced this week he had purchased the screen rights to the sensational New York and London stage success, "Havoc," which Messrs. J. J. and Lee Shubert brought to this country with its entire English cast. This production recently closed an engagement on Broadway and is now being shown in New York up-town theatres and in Brooklyn.

First produced by the Sunday Repertoire Theatre, the English duplicate of our own Provincetown Playhouse, the production made such a hit that it was moved to the Haymarket Theatre in London where it ran for almost a year. The play is the work of Harry Wall, a young English writer, whose first attempt at drama proved a popular success.

This play is best suited for motion picture presentation, as the stage limits the scope of a play dealing with certain phases of the World War. Many of the scenes are laid in the trenches during the dark days of 1916 and 1917. The title, "Havoc," however, has a dual meaning and depicts the havoc wrought by a love vampire as well as by war.

All Territory Practically Closed on 2 Banner Series

WITH territory on both Banner series, the Banner Big Four and Ben Verschleiser Productions, practically one hundred per cent closed, George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, directing heads of Banner Productions, Inc., are highly optimistic over the outlook for the coming season.

The Banner Big Four includes "The Truth About Women," starring Hope Hampton and Lowell Sherman, and is based on the story by Leota Morgan, and "The Man Without a Heart," featuring Kenneth Harlan and Jane Novak, picturized from the novel of that name by Ruby M. Ayres. Both these productions have been released.

The third of this series is "Those Who Judge," from the novel by Margery Land May, which appeared under the title of "Such as Sit in Judgment." It has just been completed and will be ready for the theatres early in November. Patsy Ruth Miller and Lou Tellegen head the cast. All three were directed by Burton King.

The fourth and last of the Banner Big Four series will be "Daughters Who Pay," also from the pen of Leota Morgan. It will be put into production immediately following the release of "Those Who Judge."

The other Banner series is being produced by Ben Verschleiser on the Coast. His initial offering, "Empty Hearts," starring Clara Bow, John Bowers, Lillian Rich and Charles Murray, with a notable cast, is based on a story by Evelyn Campbell that appeared serially in the Metropolitan Magazine recently. Al Santell directed it.

Verschleiser is now at work on "The Three Keys," a mystery drama based on the novel of that name by Frederic Ormond. Edward Le Saint is handling the megaphone, with Edith Roberts, Virginia Lee Corbin, Jack Mulhall, Gaston Glass, Miss Dupont and Stuart Holmes as the principals. It will be ready about December 15.

"The Cracker Jack" to Be Next C. C. Burr Picture with Hines

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by producer C. C. Burr that Johnny Hines' next feature vehicle following "The Early Bird," will be a newspaper story titled, "The Cracker Jack." The story is by Richard Friel who is also the author of Hines' present feature, "The Early Bird." In "The Cracker Jack," Johnny Hines will be cast in the role of a cub reporter, which according to C. C. Burr, will give his versatile star a most unusual character role.

"The Cracker Jack" was chosen from a host of stories due to its excellently contrived plot and the variegated avenues of comedy and thrills it presents. Work on the continuity of this production will begin immediately after the completion of "The Early Bird."

Mr. Friel's long experience as a "gag" man for the Mutt and Jeff comedies and the series of All Star Comedies which C. C. Burr produced and released through Educational last year, has stood him in good stead since he has been able to successfully write what will be the latest two Johnny Hines features.

Johnny Hines upon C. C. Burr's purchase of the story of "The Cracker Jack" expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the wide possibilities of entertainment offered in this fast-moving story.

The same technical staff that surrounded the star in his last four productions will again be at the helm when production on "The Cracker Jack" begins. These include Charles Hines as director with photography in the hands of Charles Gilson and John Geisel.

"Spat" and Sennett Comedies Lead Pathe's Newest Releases

PATHE, for the week of November 2, offers one Mack Sennett comedy, one Hal Roach comedy featuring the "Spat" Family, and a "Chronicle of America," entitled "The Eve of the Revolution." "The Hal Roach-Spat comedy is entitled "Hot Stuff" and features Frank Butler, Sydney D'Albrook and Laura Roessing. The picture was directed by Jay A. Howe.

"Galloping Bungalows" is the Sennett offering. Directed by Del Lord, the picture carries a cast including Billy Bevan, Sid Smith, Natalie Kingston, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson and Andy Clyde.

"The Eve of the Revolution," of the "Chronicles of America" series has cast including: J. Moy Bennett, Warner Richmond, Edward F. Finlay, H. P. Woodley, Wilfred J. Donovan, Lee Beggs, Lew Johnson, Brian Donlevy and Henry Van Bousen. The direction was handled by Kenneth Webb, with the screen adaptation made by George Pierce Ba er and James P. Munroe.

The week marks the release of the fourth chapter of the current Patheserial, "Ten Scars Make a Man." This serial is adapted from the book by Phillip Barry and featuring Allene Kay. The cast also consists of Jack Mower, Larry Steers, Rose Burdick, Harry Woods, Leon De la Mothe, and Frank Lanning. The production was made by C. W. Patton under the direction of William Parke.

Pathe Review No. 44 consists of three subjects. The first is another chapter of the expedition through the Cuna Country in search of the famous "White Indians." "Pets of the Pacific" is the second subject, while the third, a Pathecolor, consists of interesting views of the city of Detroit. "Stunts," one of the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" series, and "The Cat and the Magnet," an animated cartoon comedy of the Aesop's Film Fables, are also listed on the week's releases.

To Release Comedies

Under a contract closed last week between the Sherwood MacDonald Productions of Los Angeles and the Rayart Pictures Corporation, Rayart have secured the world distribution on the series of twelve Butterfly Comedies now in work on the Coast, starring Gloria Joy. The Butterfly Comedies, it is understood, will be produced along the lines of Mack Sennett "Keystone Comedies," which were so popular several years ago. The first Butterfly Comedy will be released by Rayart, December 1, and one a month thereafter.

E. H. Griffith Signed

E. H. Griffith has been signed by St. Regis Pictures Corporation to direct its first production, an adaptation of "The Ultimate Good," by J C. Brownell, which appeared in Everybody's Magazine. The picture is scheduled for Associated Exhibitors release.

Complete Cast

With Warner Baxter, and Victor Varconi engaged for important parts in "The Golden Bed" by Cecil B. DeMille, the cast for this big Paramount production is complete.

Those already signed for principal parts in the Jeanie Macpherson screen version of Wallace Iwin's novel are: Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynolds, Lillian Rich, the latest De Mille "find," Henry Walthall and Emily Fitzroy.

Territorial Sale

Three Johnny Hines Pictures Placed in Still More Exchanges

Another important territorial sale consummated by C. C. Burr, general manager of East Coast Films was made this week on the three Johnny Hines features "The Speed Spook," "The Early Bird" and "The Cracker Jack" to E. J. Drucker of De Luxe Feature Film Company, 2020 Stout Street, Denver, Colorado, for the territories of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico.

This marks the thirteenth states-right territory disposed of, the others including Greater New York to Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Film Corporation, Upper New York State to Charles Goetz of Dependable Pictures Corporation, New England to Harry Ascher of American Feature Film Company, Minnesota to Fred Cubberly of F. & R. Film Company, Wisconsin to John Ludwig of Ludwig Film Exchange, Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Ben Amsterdam of Masterpiece Film Attractions, Ohio to William Skirboll of Skirboll Productions, Inc., Illinois and Indiana to Edwin Silverman of Film Classics of Illinois, Arkansas to J. K. Adams of Home State Film Company, complete foreign rights to Simmonds-Kann Enterprises, Inc., 220 West 42nd St., New York City., Washington, D. C. to Trio Productions and Oklahoma and Texas to All-Star Feature Films (distributed by Southwestern Film Exchange).

Clara Bow in East

Clara Bow will play the principal role in Howard Estabrook's next picture, "The Adventurous Sex," which is in the making at the Tec Art Studio. Miss Bow has been absent from New York for a year and a half. She went to the coast under the auspices of B. P. Schulberg.

Title Changed

The title of the second Walter Hiers Comedy to be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has been changed from "Slim Chance" to "Fat Chance."

A Circus Serial

Universal to Produce Chapter Play in Sawdust Atmosphere

Work has started at Universal City in a big, spectacular "circus serial," with Joe Bonomo, Universal prize stunt and strong man, in the leading role, and directed by Jay Marchant, maker of several popular serials. The chapter picture is called "The "Leopard's Lair." It will be in fifteen chapters, each of two reels.

As leading woman, Bonomo has Louise Lorraine, formerly one of the most popular leading women in Universal serials, but who has been away from Universal City for a year or so. She will be remembered as the heroine in "With Stanley in Africa," "Elmo the Fearless," and similar serials. She also was a Century Comedy star for many months. She is reputed to be one of the most daring women in pictures.

Universal engaged an entire circus, big top, animals, side show and all, for this serial. In addition to the personnel with the circus, the veteran circus performers from all over the United States have been called to Universal City to help in the staging of the various performances needed in the new chapter-picture.

The story is one of circus life in which Joe Bonomo plays the role of the circus strong man.

Jay Marchant, who is directing the picture, has had circus experience himself, which is one of the important reasons for his being assigned to the task of handling the production. The story was written by William Lord Wright and Isadore Bernstein.

The regular cast includes Robert Seiter, Robert J. Graves, Albert Prisco, Slim Cole and other well-known players have important roles.

First Reed Howes

Announcement by W. Ray Johnston from the Rayart offices this week are to the effect that the first picture of the Reed Howes group which is in work will be called "The Speed King." Ethel Shannon, star of the screen version of "Maytime," and other successes, has been selected as Mr. Howes' leading lady. The direction is by Albert Rogell and production by Harry J. Brown.

Preliminary Spring Plans Made by Producers Distributing Corp.

THE releasing plans of the Producers Distributing Corporation for the spring and summer season of 1925 are partially disclosed in a statement issued by John C. Flinn, vice-president of the company, in which he announces the signing of contracts with Renaud Hoffman, Regal Pictures Inc., and the Peninsula Studios of San Mateo, Calif. for a continuation of their product during the coming season.

Renaud Hoffman, who contributed the two successful productions "Not One to Spare" and "The Legend of Hollywood" during the present year has signed a contract for four more of his distinctive creations to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

One of the first of the Renaud Hoffman productions will be released under the title of "The Unknown Soldier." This will be an adaptation of a startling French story which is quite similar to "Havoc" the sensational stage play at the present time on Broadway, New York.

Full details of the productions to be made by Regal Pictures are not disclosed in Mr. Flnn's announcement, but it is understood that Florence Vidor and Jacquelin Logan will each be starred in at least one of the productions to be made by this company at the Thomas H. Ince studios.

The Edward Belasco Productions Inc., are to contribute at least one production to the spring program. This picture like their current offering, "Welcome Stranger," will be an adaptation of a famous stage play the film rights for which have been purchased by A. H. Sebastian, general manager of the Belasco Productions.

A contract has also been closed with William J. Connery of the Peninsula Studios at San Mateo, Calif., for the release of two big pictures to be made from stage plays. One of these will be produced under the supervision of Elmer Harris and the other under the personal supervision of Frank Woods.

The productions announced in this first statement are but the beginning of the elaborate program that Producers Distributing Corporation is planning for the coming season. Contracts are now being negotiated with a number of producers.

"White Man" Is New Film Type for Gasnier, Says Schulberg

"THE latest variation of 'follow the leader' which producers have been playing is responsible for tremendous number of society pictures being offered to exhibitors," states B. P. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, who believes that theatre owners are seeking a type of story that gets away from conventional backgrounds.

"During the past year about eight per cent. of the features released have consisted of society dramas and costume plays, with a conspicuous dearth of good outdoor stories. It was for this reason that we rearranged our production schedule of Preferred Pictures to permit the early making of what I am confident, is one of the finest outdoor pictures that has come the way of first run theatres in many days. I refer to George Agnew Chamberlain's novel, "White Man," which Gasnier completed last week and which will be released on November first.

" White Man' is a marked variation from the type of story handled by Gasnier for the last two or three years. He was selected to make it for the very reason that he expressed an enthusiastic desire to attempt something of this kind instead of the society dramas that have occupied his attention recently.

"Based on a book that has reached high records among best-sellers, 'White Man,' with its background of African jungles, consists almost entirely of sweeping exteriors of a picturesque country. I give my personal assurance to the entire trade that 'White Man' is different."

Another Special Scheduled In Fox List of Releases

"THE LAST MAN ON EARTH," the latest Fox special production; "The Brass Bowl," of the Edmund Lowe series; "Stolen Sweeties," a new Monkey Comedy; "The Nickel Plated West," a Sunshine Comedy and No. 9 and 10 Vol. 6 of Fox News will be released the week of November 9th by Fox Film Corporation.

"The Last Man on Earth," a comedy-drama of life in 1950, presents the unique situation of a world suddenly denuded of all men through a strange disease called "masculitis." For ten years women explorers kept up a search for an adult male, but without success until a hermit was found hiding in a forest. He is taken back to civilization and sold to the nation for ten million dollars. From this point on the story develops a series of amusing and thrilling surprises.

This highly imaginative story by John D. Swain, appeared in Munsey's Magazine and attracted wide attention. The screen production was made at the William Fox West Coast studios under the direction of Jack Blystone.

Earle Foxe, star of the Fox Van Bibber series, plays the title role and Derlys Perdue is cast in the feminine lead opposite him. The others in the cast are Grace Cunard, Gladys Tennyson, Maryon Aye, Clarissa Selwynn, Pauline French, William Steele, Jean Dumas, Harry Dunkinson, Fay Holderness, Jean Johnson, Buck Black and Maurice Murphy. Donald Lee prepared the scenario.

"The Brass Bowl" is the second production in which Edmund Lowe will be starred this season. Jerome Storm directed this screen play from the story by Louis Joseph Vance. The scenario is the work of Thomas Dixon, Jr.

Claire Adams will be seen as the feminine lead opposite Lowe. The other principals include: Jack Duffy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Leo White and Fred Butler.

Has All Star Cast

H. F. Jans has assembled an all-star cast for his initial feature of a series of six. In "Playthings of Desire" will be seen Estella Taylor, Mahlon Hamilton, Mary Thurman, Dagmar Godowsky, Edmund Breese, Walter Miller, Lawford Davidson and Frank Montgomery. Burton King began production at the Yonkers studios on Monday.

Imperial Comedy Changed

"Her Ball and Chain" is announced as the permanent title for the William Fox Imperial Comedy previously called "Who's Who," which was released October 26.

Sells Territory

Henry Ginsberg announces that he has completed arrangements for the distribution of "Flying Fists," starring Benny Leonard, champion lightweight of the world, with Louis Hyman, of the All-Star Feature Distributors, in San Francisco, and with Elmer Benjamin, in Los Angeles. Jacob Wilk reports that the Inter-Globe Export Corporation has concluded arrangements with distributors for the Leonard series in England, Cuba, Phillipine Islands, and the Argentine territory, which includes Peru, Chili and other nations on the west coast of South America.

Title Selected

First National has selected "Love's Wilderness" as the final title for its first production starring Corrine Griffith. This is the picture formerly known as "Wilderness," from Evelyn Campbell's story of that title.

who have been whipped to the point of exhaustion."

And when you think of the quality of "Responsiveness" think of what those boys at First National have done, and are doing, for "Eschmann Month." But that is another story—a story that will be told in the news columns and in the sales figures. It is the story of "Eschmann Month" that puts the "Okay" of authority on this interview.

Provided it becomes an interview by getting into print.

Novelty Listed

"Darwin Was Right" Heads Weekly Releases from Fox Studio

"Darwin Was Right," the eleventh of the new Fox special production: "Who's Who," an Imperial Comedy; "The Bull Fight," an Educational Entertainment, and No. 7 and 8, Vol. 6 of Fox News, will be released the week of October 26 by Fox Film Corporation.

"Darwin Was Right" is an original story by Edwin Moran and was directed by Lewis Seiler. The clever monkey actors, for some time featured in the Fox Monkey Comedies, have prominent parts in this production which sets a fast pace of laugh-provoking comedy throughout six reels. The novel treatment of this story will delight all critics who view the production.

The theme deals humorously with the Darwinian theory of the origin of the human species. A chemist believes he has discovered the elixir of youth and tries it on his friends. Through a series of humorous circumstances neighbors are led to believe the three men not only go back to their youth, but go farther and take the form of monkeys.

Those in the cast include Nell Brantley, George O'Hara, Stanley Blystone, Dan Mason, Lon Poff, Bud Jamison, Myrtle Sterling, Nora Cecil, David Kirby and Max, Moritz and Pep, the Simian actors.

Ince Signs Bedford

Thomas H. Ince has signed a year's contract with Barbara Bedford. Her first assignment under the agreement is the principal feminine role in Charles Ray's "The Desert Fiddler," second of Thomas H. Ince's series of Ray pictures for Pathe release.

Special Pathe Posters

In keeping with their plan to promote and enlarge upon the distribution of Pathe Review, Pathe officials announce this week that they will release special art posters with each release starting with Pathe Review No. 40.

Educational Announces Its Releases for November

RUTH HIATT, formerly leading lady with Educational-Mermaid Comedies and previous to that in the same capacity with Lloyd Hamilton, is given her first real starring opportunity in "Poor Butterfly," a Mermaid Comedy released the second week of the month. Jay Belasco, formerly leading man with the Christie forces, Jack Ackroyd, Otto Fries, Jack Lloyd and other well known Mermaid comedians will be seen in her support. The single reel subject for the week will be the Cameo Comedy, "Go Easy," with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance in the leading roles.

Larry Semon's second Special Comedy through Educational will reach the screen during the week starting November 16. "Kid Speed" is an auto-racing comedy with the inimitable Larry driving one of the high speed cars. James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, makes his film debut in this picture. The cast includes Dorothy Dwan as leading lady, Oliver Hardy and Frank Alexander. "Earth's Oddities," a Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, will also make its appearance this week.

Lloyd Hamilton's "Crushed," the subway comedy on which he has been working for the past two months, will be released November 23. A replica of one of New York's I. R. T. subway stations and a subway train were constructed for the picture and many of the gags are performed in this set. Dorothy Seastrom and Blanche Payson will be seen in his support. The comedy was made under the direction of Fred Hibbard. "Empty Heads," another Cameo Comedy with the team of Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance will be released the same week.

The two-reel comedies will be released the last week of the month. Walter Hier's second comedy through Educational, "Fat Chance," will present this rotund star in a hilarious comedy of the troubles of a fat man when he tries to reduce. Lige Conley will be seen in "What A Night," a spooky Mermaid Comedy with Conley supported by the well known Mermaid cast.

Seven two reel comedies, presenting the same number of well know comedy stars, will form the backbone of Educational's releasing schedule for November. Bobby Vernon, Jimmie Adams, Walter Hiers, Larry Semon, Lige Conley, Lloyd Hamilton and Ruth Hiatt, a formidable array of comedy talent, will be seen in one picture apiece. The list includes two Mermaid Comedies and one each of the Bobby Vernon Comedies, Larry Semon Special Comedies, Lloyd Hamilton Comedies, Christie Comedies and Walter Hiers Comedies. In addition four single reel subjects, two Cameo Comedies and one each of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge series, and the Earl Hurd Cartoon Comedies will complete the program for the month.

The first week of the month will present Jimmie Adams in a Christie Comedy, "Why Hurray?" Christie is putting more speed and action into his comedies this year than ever before and "Why Hurry?" is typical of the new style. A new leading lady, Kathleen Myers, will be seen in support of Adams. "The Sawmill Four," third of the series of Earl Hurd Pen and Ink Vaudeville Series is the single reel release of the week.

Two two-reel comedies and one single reel comedy will be released the second week of the month. "High Gear," the second release of the Bobby Vernon Comedies, presents this young star in what is without a doubt the best comedy he has ever made. Racing automobiles and airplanes in a fast mixture of road racing and dare-devil stunts speed this comedy up. Vernon's leading lady is Marion Harlan, cousin of Kenneth Harlan and daughter of Otis Harlan. The picture was directed by Achie Mayo.

In all a total of eighteen reels, in addition to the twice-a-week release of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, will reach the screen during November, the most pretentious program of the year for Educational, both from the standpoint of size and from the array of talent presented.

"Sundown" Receiving Its First Showings on Sunday in Many Key Cities

Next Sunday starts First National's "National 'Sundown' Week" and on that occasion its Western epic, produced under the personal supervision of Earl Hudson, will have its initial showings in many key cities.

"Sundown" opened last Sunday at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, after having been given an unusually extensive exploitation campaign; also in Crandall's Metropolitan Theatre, Washington. In both cities it met with an enthusiastic reception by press and public.

Openings on "Sundown" scheduled for next week are The Grand, Pittsburgh; the Piccadilly, New York; The Main Street, Kansas City; the Park, Worcester; The Hippodrome, Buffalo; The Eastman, Rochester; The Leland, Albany; The American, Troy; The Avon, Utica, The Liberty, Terre Haute; The Pantheon, Toledo; The Empress, Oklahoma City; the Rialto, Tulsa, and many others.

Fox Instructive

Released October 12, the Fox Educational Entertainment, "The Age of Oil," throws a new light on oil production. Seventy years ago petroleum was considered of little use except for patent medicines and hair tonics. Today, were the refineries to shut down, our railroads, ocean liners, warships, automobiles and airplanes could not be operated.

Nilsson Coming East

Anna Q. Nilsson has signed a contract with First National to do one picture in the East.

According to an announcement from the office of Earl Hudson, Supervisor of First National Productions, Miss Nilsson is to have the leading feminine role in "One Way Street," which is to be one of the early pictures made by the Hudson unit at the Biograph Studios, New York.

"Barbara Frietchie" Booked 98% in Key Cities

The bookings on "Barbara Frietchie" the spectacular American historical romance made by Thomas H. Ince and released through Producers Distributing Corporation has already reached 98 per cent. in key cities throughout the country, according to a statement emanating from the sales executives of the releasing corporation.

One of the latest contracts was that closed by Manager W. G. Humphries of Philadelphia Branch, with he new Fox Theatre, Philadelphia, which provides for a minimum run of two weeks.

Buys for Circuit

N. L. Nathanson has closed with First National Pictures for the showing of Joseph M. Schenck's Norma Talmadge picture, "Secrets," over his entire Canadian Circuit.

Woman Runs Exchange

The Only One in New York Territory Operated by Mrs. Iris

The John J. Iris Film Exchange, the only exchange in the New York territory being managed by a woman, Mrs. Iris, is successfully releasing some of the most novel and entertaining short reels on the market.

Contained in the program of Iris releases are 26 Burton Holmes Travelogues, 26 New Era Novelties, 6 Visual Symphonies and 10 Marvels of Nature. Beside these there are 12 Trick reels now being produced.

Some of the Iris product has been enjoying week runs at some of the leading Broadway houses. "Climbing the Jungfrau," a New Era Novelty, is now playing at the Cameo; "Trickery" has played at the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres; "Danse Macabre," a Visual Symphony, has enjoyed week runs at the Piccadilly, Rialto, Rivoli and Brooklyn Mark Strand.

The Iris releases have all been booked at the leading houses in New York and throughout the country.

Title Second of Series

The second of the series of six George Larkin newspaper stories known as "Metropolitan Melodramas," being released by Rayart Pictures Corporation, is called "The Pell Street Mystery." Joseph Franz is responsible for the direction. Jack Richardson, Pauline Curley and Olive Kirby are featured in support of Mr. Larkin. The story deals with the activities of a live wire newspaper reporter who clears up a Chinatown mystery.

Vital moments in "Greater Than Marriage." Vitagraph releases the Victor Hugo Halperin production.

HELEN HOLCOMB
As Trina in "The Greatest Love of All," with George Beban.

Stretching a Lady

The Hippodrome trick of "stretching a lady" has been outdistanced by George Beban, whose feature film, "The Greatest Love of All," comes to the Rivoli, New York, the week of November 9 after an engagement at the Tremont Temple, Boston. The trial scene of this romance of the East Side of New York is played in person by Mr. Beban and presumably the originals of the characters in the screen portion. But in the case of the pictorial leading lady "the long arm of coincidence" has to reach half way across the continent to bring her back for this personal appearance. The personal part of it is purely appearance, however, since Miss Helen Holcomb is on tour to the Pacific Coast with Martha Hedman. When Mr. Beban comes to New York she will be in Omaha, so a very deceiving "double" will take her place in the cast.

To Release Brown Specials

Under a contract just signed between Rayart Pictures Corporation and the Harry J. Brown Productions of Los Angeles Rayart secures the world distribution on the forthcoming Harry J. Brown Melodramas, the first of which will be "Easy Money," featuring Mary Carr, Cullen Landis, Gladys Walton, Mildred Harris, Gertrude Astor and David Kirby. The second production will be "The Beloved Pawn" from the book of that name, by Henry Titus. The first picture, "East Money," will be released on the Independent market on December 1. "The Beloved Pawn" will be released February 1.

Elaborate Publicity Campaign Used for "Barbara Frietchie"

A SPLENDID exploitation campaign of exceptionally wide scope was put over by Tom Reed and Robert Collier of the Ince Studio for the Los Angeles showing of Thomas H. Ince's "Barbara Frietchie" at the California Theatre the week of October 3.

A big tie-up was arranged with the Los Angeles Evening Express and its twelve subsidiary papers, giving a Chrysler automobile away in a popularity contest. More than forty inches daily were devoted to the contest in the thirteen papers in Los Angeles, Pasadena, Hollywood, Venice, Santa Monica, Redondo, Monrovia, San Gabriel, San Bernardino and West Los Angeles.

This contest was climaxed at a gala "Barbara Frietchie" costume frolic and ball held at the Cinderella Roof, Los Angeles, where Edmund Lowe and Lambert Hillyer presented the leading contestants to the Los Angeles public and on the following evening at the theatre the winner of the Chrysler car was announced.

Another newspaper contest was conducted by the Los Angeles News in the form of an essay contest covering a period of fourteen days. An essay was printed daily from hundreds submitted by school children of Los Angeles. The winners were announced at the theatre at the close of the contest and Edmund Lowe presented the prizes.

In a third newspaper, the Los Angeles Record, a series of stories were printed in the form of interviews with old soldiers written by Edmund Lowe. The series ran for more than ten days.

The billboard campaign consisted of a teaser two weeks in advance of the showing of "Barbara Frietchie" which read "STOP! DON'T SHOOT!" After a week's showing of this teaser the boards were covered to read, "STOP. DON'T SHOOT! 'TIS BARBARA FRIETCHIE!"

New Carey Liked

N. Y. Newspapers Laud Stromberg's "Roaring Rails"

Hunt Stromberg's "Roaring Rails" starring Harry Carey was given its New York premiere at The Cameo Theatre last week its reception by critics is reflected in the following excerpts.

American: "It is the sort of picture where the villain is a villain and the hero is a hero."

Daily Mirror: "Frankie Darra makes of Stromberg's 'Roarin' Rails', a beautiful little masterpiece of realism. If for no other reason than to see the youngster, don't miss this picture."

Evening World: "It has all the tear-pullers and heart wringers of old."

Morning Telegraph: "Thrills of the heart and the spirit are in the story; thrills of battle and heroism; thrills of struggle against odds, the elements, villainy; thrills of struggle rage struggling to right a wrong. It makes a dandy entertainment."

Post: "Gives Harry a great chance to do some typically moviesque he-man stuff which will, no doubt, prove interesting and perhaps thrilling."

Sign Lee Moran

Lee Moran, veteran screen comedian, has been signed by Mermaid Comedies and will appear in these comedies under the direction of Arvid Gillstrom, another recent addition to the Mermaid forces.

Other recent acquisitions by the Mermaid Company are Ned Sparks, of vaudeville and motion picture comedy fame and Joan Meredith, formerly with Century Comedies.

"A Fool and His Money" Cast

C. B. C. announces a big cast for their production of George Barr McCutcheon's "A Fool and His Money." The lead will be played by William Haines. The part of the romantic American girl countess will be played by Madge Bellamy. These two excellent leads will be supported by Stuart Holmes, Alma Bennett, Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Eugenie Besserer, Carrie Clarke Ward.

Finishing Leonard Series

Production of the last three of the series of two-reel features starring Benny Leonard under the title of "Flying Fists," was concluded this week at the Tac-Art studio in New York. Sam Hellman will begin titling and editing at once and the entire series of six will be ready for release in two or three weeks.

Opens at Gift's Theatre

"I Am The Man," starring Lionel Barrymore, produced by Chadwick Pictures Corporation, as its fourth picture in its famous unit for the independent market this season—the Chadwick 9—opened at Gift's Theatre in Cincinnati last Sunday. The picture is enjoying unusual popularity there as is evidenced by reports to the Chadwick offices.

Release Date Set

Associated Exhibitors announces that the week of November 23 has been set for the release of the Paul Schofield production, "East of Broadway." This is a screen adaptation of the Richard Connell Saturday Evening Post story, "Where is the Tropic of Capricorn?" and deals with the experience of a young Irishman anxious to get on the police force.

The featured role is handled by Owen Moore, supported by Mary Carr and Marguerite de La Mott.

Plays to Big Business

First National Specials Helping to Swell the Gross on Eschmann Month

Out of eighty key city points, the special sales staff assigned to A. W. Smith, Jr., by E. A. Eschmann to market "The Sea Hawk," "Secrets" and "Abraham Lincoln" (and the two Specials following), "The Sea Hawk" has been closed in seventy-three cities, "Secrets" in seventy-three, and "Abraham Lincoln" in sixty-one, making an efficiency record on the part of Specials staff of salesmen of 86 per cent.

Collections on the new business being booked this month on the specials is helping to swell the gross receipts for Eschmann Month. "The Sea Hawk" has now played forty of the eighty key city points while most of the remaining play dates are set for October and the balance for November.

Practically every key city point will have played "Secrets" by the end of October. It has now been shown in fifty of the eighty cities.

Close Big Foreign Deal

A big film deal of international significance was consummated by the Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation and the British Export and Import Corporation, Ltd., whereby the United Kingdom rights for the former's series of eight Buddy Roosevelt pictures were obtained by the latter.

George Smith represented the British concern in the contract while Louis Weiss looked after the Weiss Brothers' interests.

Books "Abraham Lincoln"

A. H. Blank booked First National's "Abraham Lincoln" at the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines, where it played to such excellent business that he arranged to give it an additional week at the Rialto in Des Moines. The Saenger Amusement Company has booked "Abraham Lincoln" for its circuit of theatres.

"Curley Top" Finished

"Curley Top," the fifth of the William Fox program features starring Shirley Mason, has been finished at the Fox West Coast studios. Frederick and Fanny Hatton adapted this story for the screen from the original by Thomas Burke, author of the famous "Limehouse Nights" short stories.

Maurice Elvey, an English director signed by William Fox to do several of the big specials this year, directed this production. Wallace MacDonald is cast in the leading male part.

Wm. Fox's "Dante's Inferno" Setting Records in New York

"DANTE'S INFERNO," the William Fox screen version of the classic of literature, is finishing the fourth week of a record-breaking engagement at the Central Theatre. This picture is making theatrical history for a popular-priced photoplay entertainment on Broadway.

Shrewd showmanship is reflected in the lobby display used at the Central Theatre. New lighting effects were used in the lobby this week, as the picture seems certain of an extended run. The receipts for last week were over nineteen thousand.

This is the second big film special to be presented on Broadway this year by William Fox and the second production to be placed in the Central Theatre at popular prices and continuous performance schedule. "Dante's Inferno" will open at the Fox Monroe Theatre in Chicago on October 25 after a strong advance campaign which was started last week in Chicago by Vivian M. Moses, director of advertising and publicity for Fox Film Corporation.

Buddy Roosevelt Series

Sixth Nearing Completion; Being Distributed by Artclass

Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures Corporation announces that Lester F. Scott, who is handling the Buddy Roosevelt unit on the Coast, is at present working on the sixth of that company's releases. The five completed are: "Rough Ridin'," "Battling Buddy," "Biff-Bang-Buddy," "Walloping Wallace" and "Rip-Roarin'-Roberts."

Louis Weiss, vice-president of Artclass, has just returned to New York from the Coast where he discussed plans for a second Buddy Roosevelt series with Scott. These, it is expected, will be started early in the new year.

Scott, in association with William T. Lackey, is also handling the production of eight five-reel Buffalo Bill, Jr., pictures which are being distributed through Artclass.

Exhibitors Praise

"Speed Spook" Accorded Eulogies in Letters to C. C. Burr

The fine reception accorded "The Speed Spook" is evidenced by the unusual number of theatre bookings it has received and the splendid business it has done wherever it has been played. An instance of this is evidenced by the wire sent by Stan Brown, manager of the Strand Theatre, in Milwaukee, who said: "The Speed Spook" closed a very satisfactory week financially. Must say that this is Hines' best and I have played them all.

E. R. Bourgeois of the Strand Theatre in Ocean City, New Jersey, is another enthusiastic exhibitor who wrote: "Your wonderful picture, 'The Speed Spook,' which I played recently, did two days exceptionally good business for this time of year. Johnny Hines surely makes a hit in this one and it should certainly spell success for his forthcoming release."

"Playthings of Desire" to be Sold on New State Right Plan

BEGINNING with his first new production, "Playthings of Desire," H. F. Jans, president of Jans Productions Inc., will inagurate what promises to be a revelation to buyers of state rights.

In a nutshell Mr. Jans plan is just this. Beginning with "Playthings of Desire" he will sell his productions to the various independent distributors outright, there will be no percentage arrangement and once the purchaser of a Jans picture has closed his contract the product becomes his to do with as he sees fit without any dictation from the producer.

In discussing his plans Mr. Jans said: "I have been in the business for over fifteen years. A great part of that time I have devoted to a conscientious study of the independent exchange. I believe that the productions I will make and the method by which they will be sold is bound to prove satisfactory. My selling plan makes every buyer of territory the absolute owner of the picture and after his contracts are signed and the deal closed he will have no one hanging around his neck asking for percentage checks, reports etc. The only way in which he will hear from us is through the continued publicity we will give all of the pictures and our untiring efforts to aid him in selling our pictures to the public.

"I haven't resumed production on a moment's notice. I have given the matter many months of thought and waited until the time seemed ripe to provide the independent market with an unusually high quality series of pictures, with casts composed of well known stars, produced under the direction of the most capable directors and with stories that stand second to none.

"From contracts already closed with many of the biggest independent exchanges, I am convinced that my plan is right and my contemplated pictures the sort that are needed," concluded Mr. Jans.

"Welcome Stranger" Is Liked by N. Y. Newspaper Critics

The Edward Belasco production "Welcome Stranger" released by Producers Distributing Corporation, registered another successful showing last week upon its presentation at New York's new theatre, The Piccadilly.

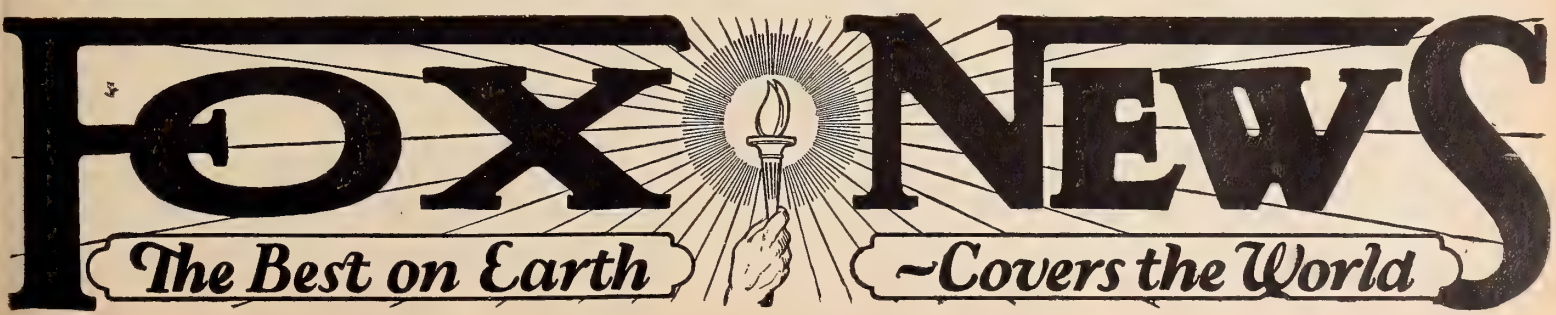
Prior to its presentation in New York "Welcome Stranger" had scored hits in six first run cities and the splendid patronage it drew at The Piccadilly was a duplication of its previous successes.

The New York newspaper critics in praising the production said in part:

American: "Good old-fashioned hokum with a tear and a laugh so close together that it is difficult to say whether one's tears come from laughter or pathos. It has heart interest and human appeal."

Bulletin: "The piece is full of the smile and the tear. It is good entertainment."

Daily Mirror: "The picture has its amusing and dramatic moments."



Scenes from "The Reel Virginian," a Pathe two-reel comedy produced by Mack Sennett, Ben Turpin being starred.

Buys Rayart Film

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures Corporation, announces that the new serial, "Battling Brewster," starring Franklyn Farnum and Helen Holmes and produced by Dell Henderson Productions, has been sold to Eltraban Film Company for Southeastern territory—this includes North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee. The Eltraban Company operates Exchanges in Charlotte and Atlanta.

Rayart has sold the rights to "Battling Brewster" for upper New York State to First Graphic Exchanges of Buffalo and Albany.

Make "Triflers" Next

With camera work completed on B. P. Schulberg's Preferred, "White Man," the film is now being cut and edited in preparation for the feature's general release on November first. As soon as Director Gasnier completes this job he will begin work on Frederick Orin Bartlett's novel, "The Triflers."

Favors Vitagraph

Six weeks of Vitagraph productions are scheduled for patrons of the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles. On October 6 "Behold This Woman" began a week's run. It was followed by "Borrowed Husbands." When this engagement is concluded there will follow in turn, each for a week, "The Code of the Wilderness," "Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life," "The Beloved Brute" and "Greater Than Marriage."

May Purchase Studio

C. B. C. Plans to Extend Plant in Hollywood

With the eight Perfection pictures practically complete and four of the Columbias completed, Harry Cohn production manager at the Waldorf Studios, which is the production unilt of C. B. C., is looking forward to another season of great activity. "'One Glorious Night,' 'A Fool and His Money,' are now in production," says Mr. Cohn. "The others will come along very soon and then our work for the year is completed. That means that we are now making plans for the next year's pictures. According to the information that I get from the east about the number and type of pictures we are to make next year we will have to extend ourselves somewhat. In fact I am now working on plans for the enlargement of our present studio. More and larger stages will be necessary if we are to keep up the work which we have done during the past season. We are also considering the purchase of another studio in Hollywood.

Gets "Far Cry"

First National Pictures has acquired from Arthur Richman, the author, and Robert Milton, the producer, the film rights to Richman's new play, "The Far Cry," which opened recently on Broadway, New York. The disposal of the picture rights is said to have been one of the quickest sales on record, the documents having been signed by First National and Milton one week after the play's premiere at the Cort Theatre.

Working on New Play

Constance Talmadge, having finished Hans Kraeli's "Her Night of Romance," is now at work on her next Joseph M. Schenck production for First National, "Learning to Love," by John Emerson and Anita Loos, who in the past have fitted the star with some of her best parts. Sidney Franklin is directing and Victor Milner is the head cameraman.

Players so far selected to appear in support of the star are Antonio Moreno, Wallace MacDonald, Emily Fitzroy, Johnny Harron, Ray Hallor, Alf Goulding, Byron Munson, Edythe Chapman and Edgar Norton.

In to Stock Company

Elated by the unprecedented territorial demand for the Buddy Roosevelt pictures that have been brought to the screen by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, work has been started on the sixth production of the series of eight. These Buddy Roosevelt pictures are being made on the west coast, with Buddy Roosevelt doing the best work of his film career.

Lester F. Scott, Jr., is making the production, with Alvin Neitz specially engaged to direct the sixth of the Buddy Roosevelt series.

In Stock Company

Zasu Pitts has been added to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stock company, and will appear prominently in forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions.

Scenes from William Fox's production, "The Brass Bowl," starring Edmund Lowe.

Scenes from Pathe's "Dynamite Smith," the first of a series of Thomas H. Ince productions starring Charles Ray, with a supporting cast including Jacqueline Logan, Bessie Love and Wallace Beery.

"One Night in Rome" Premiere Triumph for Star and Director

LOS ANGELES, the first important key center in the west to view "One Night in Rome," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture starring Laurette Taylor, which Clarence Badger directed from the play by J. Hartley Manners, received the film with tremendous enthusiasm when it appeared at the California Theatre.

"Laurette Taylor's 'One Night in Rome' is addressed to the sophisticated," says the Los Angeles Express. "This charming story of court intrigue and Italian temperament is another of Miss Taylor's stage plays intelligently given permanence in celluloid, a tale of tragic import, giving proof to the masses that the claims of many critical ones in America that Miss Taylor is 'America's greatest actress' may be true. 'One Night in Rome' presents Miss Taylor in a dignified, pensive role brimming over with emotional periods. She is graceful to her very finger tips and always delicate in her expression, especially in the subtler moments when repression governs action. The camera has caught her in her loveliest moods, and as the siren pre-eminent."

"'One Night in Rome' is a delightfully entertaining vehicle for Laurette Taylor," reports the Los Angeles News. "Her performance as the Duchess Danaili is delineated humanly, with fine skill and correct imitativeness minus any theatricalisms. It is, of course, Miss Taylor's photoplay, and she carries the honors for impersonation, but Tom Moore, Joseph Dowling and Ralph Yearsley show equally as much common sense in their respective interpretations."

The Los Angeles Record has this to say: "Far from the Laurette of 'Peg o' My Heart' days is the grand lady in 'One Night in Rome.' Miss Taylor is convincing in her new role, her first Italian characterization."

"Laurette Taylor has only made three pictures for the screen," states the Los Angeles Times, "but she has set a standard that she manages to live up to very acceptably. Evidence of which will be found in 'One Night in Rome.' She dominates the picture. Director Clarence Badger really deserves a good majority of credit for a well-told story in which the suspense is held creditably."

Says the Los Angeles Examiner: "The play is a delightful vehicle for the star. Interest centers about the work of Miss Taylor, who is coldly statuesque as the Duchess Danaili and deliciously warm and appealing as the fortune teller. Clarence Badger has used the thread of the plot to good advantage. The picture is entertaining, well photographed and in settings shows a nice application of the dignified and the fantastic."

Signs Robbins

Word has just been received from Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, now in Hollywood supervising next year's product of the engagement of Jesse Robbins, well-known director of feature and comedy productions, to direct Wanda Wiley, Century star in her new series of two-reel comedies to be made from stories by the well-known French humorist, George Fouret. Production of the special Wanda Wiley series will start within the next two weeks.

Griffith Explains

Gives Gen. Pershing's Urging as Reason "America" Plays Small Houses Early

Information that gives an interesting inside angle on the early appearance of D. W. Griffith's "America" as a regular release following its road show campaign in the larger cities only has just been available. It is the aftermath of high praise and hearty endorsement of the Revolutionary War romance by the ranking general of the United States Army just before his formal retirement from the most eminent post ever held by any modern military hero in this country.

General John J. Pershing advised Mr. Griffith of the value of "America" as a public education in patriotism and so impressed the producer with his ideas that the road show bookings were drastically limited and the picture put into general circulation by United Artists Corporation immediately with the opening of the present motion picture theatre season. "America" therefore is playing at popular prices long before such a picture normally reaches its wider public.

Mr. Griffith frankly states that he was influenced in this decision by the course of reasoning advanced by Gen. Pershing.

Gen. Pershing is said to have suggested in a talk with the producer after seeing the film: "It seems to me that if 'America' could be shown in those moving picture theatres throughout the country where the price of admission is within the reach of the poorest, it would contribute materially to the patriotic education of our newly adopted citizens and the younger generation of the masses."

In answer to these ideas Mr. Griffith hastened the picture house bookings.

All Capitol Theatre Records Fall Before "The Navigator"

BUSTER KEATON in "The Navigator," a Metro-Goldwyn picture, broke the Capitol Theatre's record for a single day's receipts last Sunday, October 12, by doing a business of $14,796.70. This surpasses any previous Sunday, New Year's Day, Thanksgiving Day, Washington's Birthday or any other holiday in the history of this theatre. And on Monday the receipts were $13,184.85. The total for Sunday and Monday, then, is $27,981.55, which is certainly a record "Buster."

This statement has been made public by Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, over his signature. In consequence of this tremendous business "The Navigator" has been held over at the Capitol Theatre from its triumphant first week's showing. It is the first production in two months to achieve this distinction at the Capitol.

Meanwhile reports from theatres throughout the country testify to the excellent business the picture is attracting. From Loew's Warfield Theatre in San Francisco comes the report that "The Navigator" has completed one of the greatest weeks of business ever known there, while a similar report has come in from the Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia.

"The Navigator" has been hailed by the New York critics as what is known on Broadway as a "wow."

"Buster Keaton's was the only solemn visage in the Capitol yesterday," reports the New York Evening Post. "The audience chuckled and whooped in one long debauch of mirth."

"If you are in need of a good laugh to aid your digestion," remarks Louella O. Parsons in the New York American, "go to the Capitol Theatre this week and see Buster Keaton in 'The Navigator.' I guarantee a laugh for anyone who has not forgoten how to enjoy the ridiculous side of life."

Says the New York Telegraph: "Yesterday the Capitol audience showed itself appreciative of Buster Keaton's latest Metro-Goldwyn picture in terms that stepped way over the bounds of polite, conventional admiration."

Quinn Martin in the New York World writes: "Buster Keaton's new picture is not only a success with the crowd but a landslide of merriment."

"The sun shines brighter in the movie heavens whenever Buster Keaton comes to town and performs his antics for us," testifies the New York Sun. "His latest picture is at the Capitol and ought to stay there a month. It is immensely amusing."

"Buster Keaton's most recent comedy was hilariously received at the Capitol yesterday and not without reason," exclaims the New York Bulletin. "The sombre-faced Mr. Keaton moving through a series of ridiculous situations in his customary grave and dignified fashion is sufficient to bring a smile to the face of the most reluctant."

Dorothy Herzog in New York Daily Mirror characterizes the picture as Keaton's "latest and merriest comedy," and goes on to say: "This is a sure-fire laugh hit, knocking 'gloom' cold with each crack from the cinematic rifle. Every grievous situation with which Buster and his girl have to contend is a laugh. Even the ending has a kick in it."

"Mouths were wide open in explosions of laughter and eyes sparkled with merriment," reports the New York Times. "'The Navigator' is an excellent panacea for melancholia or lethargy, as it is filled with ludicrous and intensely humorous situations."

New Comedies Finished

They Are Six New Aubrey and Laurel Subjects for Standard Cinema

Six new comedies for the new season, the first of two series of two-reelers starring Jimmy Aubrey and Stan Laurel, have been completed for Standard Cinema Corporation for release through Selznick Distributing Corporation.

The titles of the new Laurel comedies, the first Standard products of this fun-maker, are, in order of release, "Detained," "A Mandarin Mixup" and "Monsieur Don't Care." A fourth Laurel is now in production, under the supervision of Joe Rock, at Universal City.

The Jimmy Aubrey New Star Series starts with "The Cave Inn Sheik," followed by "Polly Voo" and "A Helping Hand." The last named picture has been completed at the west coast and a print is now on the way east.

Starts New Picture

Herbert Rawlinson, Earle Williams and Clara Bow have been engaged for Howard Estabrook's latest picture for Associated Exhibitors. The players are en route to New York and production will begin this week at the Tec-Art Studios. The picture, "The Adventurous Sex," will be released in the late fall or early winter.

Frazer with F. P.-L.

Robert Frazer has been signed to play the leading male role in the Paramount production "Miss Bluebeard" in which Bebe Daniels will appear as star, according to an announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production. Frazer will leave Hollywood Friday for New York where he will start work on the production at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Settle Foreign Question

Since our immigration laws are only letting them in one at a time at long intervals instead of a thousand a day, the interest Continental Europe takes in us has increased rather than otherwise. In Italy and Germany particularly, they are eager to see pictures just because they are American. If we cannot have our dreams come true, the next best thing is to see them bodied forth on the screen. Not a little percentage of the thousands now yearning to come over might make good Americans. They are the ones that never miss an American picture.

I have the assurance of a big producer-distributor for my claim that more films can be sold now in Europe than at any time since the war, and that the best way of selling is the direct way—sell through your own agency instead of using a chain of middlemen. There were days in Rome when more than half of the theatres showed Universal films, and I suppose it is not much different at times in other parts of Italy. I know that at this very moment two big companies are planning direct distribution of their product in Italy.

Mr. Kahn and I agree that the choice of films should be left to the agent on the spot, and this is certainly being done in Italy, where three big American companies have their own agents. Mr. Guy C. Smith, Continental representative of the United Artists, can give you a lot of valuable data on the foreign market.

Just one word more. The public in Europe do respond to every effort to improve the show. An exhibitor in Rome took special care in selecting his program. Instead of giving them a good picture one week, a fair picture the next, and a poor one the week after that, he aimed at a 100 per cent. He had his house crowded from opening time, 3:30 p. m., to 10 p. m. Another exhibitor departed from the deadly routine by putting on songs of old Rome. His reward was immediate. I congratulate in advance any enterprising American film man who will give them a real American motion picture entertainment; a news reel, a drama, a comedy with an occasional scenic or cartoon. No intermission between reels, courteous and wideawake ushers, ordinary comforts, good projection and just a little ventilation.

The crushing millstone around the neck of the motion picture business in Continental Europe is the almost confiscatory taxation. M. Jacques, editor of one of the French trade journals, told me in Paris that the exhibitor in Lyons, for example, has to give up more than half of his gross receipts for municipal and other taxes. If the industry had been properly organized, if it enjoyed the prestige and popularity it has been known to achieve here, the European situation would be a hundred times better than it is.

When I see the billboards of all the big cities in Europe covered with "ads" of American pictures, while the native producer is stopping work and losing ground. I cannot help feeling that the fame of our films for their international appeal rests on a pretty solid foundation.

Metro-Goldwyn Lists Six Big Films for November Release

"THE GREAT DIVIDE," "The Snob," "Along Came Ruth," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Silent Accuser" and "So This Is Marriage" are all to be released by Metro-Goldwyn during the month of November.

"The Great Divide" is a Reginald Barker production of the William Vaughn Moody play as adapted by Waldemar Young for the screen. Alice Terry and Conway Tearle have the leading roles in this picture, and are supported by Wallace Beery, Huntly Gordon, Allan Forrest, George Cooper, Zasu Pitts and William Orlamond. It is to be released November 3.

Monta Bell produced "The Snob" from his own adaptation of the Helen R. Martin novel. This feature, which is to reach exhibitors on November 3 also, has John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, Conrad Nagel, Phyllis Haver, Hedda Hopper, Margaret Seddon and other well-known players in its large cast.

Viola Dana is star of "Along Came Ruth," which is to be released on November 10. Edward Cline directed this Henry W. Savage stage production from the original French version by F. Fonson and F. Wicheler. Holman Day adapted it for the screen. Walter Hiers, Tully Marshall, Raymond McKee and Victor Potel are in the supporting cast.

On November 17 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release Victor Seastrom's production of "He Who Gets Slapped," the Leonid Andreyev stage success adapted for the screen by Carey Wilson. Lon Chaney plays the title role in this ambitious production, and heads a cast that includes Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Tully Marshall, Marc McDermott, Ford Sterling, Clyde Cook and others.

Release of this picture will be followed by "The Silent Accuser," which will reach exhibitors on November 24. This is the photoplay starring Peter the Great, the new dog wonder, directed by Chester Franklin through the scenes of an original story by Jack Boyle adapted for the screen by Director Franklin and Frank O'Connor. Eleanor Boardman, Raymond McKee and Earl Metcalfe appear prominently in "The Silent Accuser."

"So This Is Marriage," likewise set for release on November 24, is a Hobart Henley production of the original story by Carey Wilson which has been continuitized by John Lynch and Alice D. G. Miller. Conrad Nagel, Eleanor Boardman, Alan Hale, John Patrick, Clyde Cook and Thelma Morgan are in the cast.

Piccadilly Books Two

Will Run First National's "Sundown" and "Madonna of the Streets"

First National Pictures has closed a booking contract with Lee Ochs, manager of the new Piccadilly Theatre, New York City, whereby two of its new productions will play in that house.

"Sundown," written by Earl Hudson, will be shown for two weeks at the Piccadilly, opening on Saturday, November 1.

The other First National picture booked at the Piccadilly is Edwin Carewe's production of "Madonna of the Streets," from W. B. Maxwell's novel, "The Ragged Messenger," with Nazimova and Milton Sills in the lead.

Second Government Production Venture Inaugurated in Canada

THERE are now two Government moving picture studios in Canada, the second having been formally dedicated by officials of the Ontario Government at Trenton, Ontario, on October 9, before a gathering of 6,000 persons. The original of the picture producing plants in the Dominion is that of the Federal Government at Ottawa, Ontario, which has been a highly successful venture for the past five years. The new plant at Trenton is being conducted by the Ontario Provincial Government with G. E. Patton as general manager.

A unique feature of the dedication was the blessing of the structure by Canon Armstrong in a brief service, after which addresses were made by Col. W. H. Price, K.C., Toronto, Provincial Treasurer, and W. H. Ireland, member of the Ontario Legislature. A parade of school children, cadets and floats was held to the grounds and the pictures showing the arrival of the procession were screened in the studio before the ceremonies were concluded.

In his dedication address Col. Price announced that the Ontario Government was entering the producing field for the purpose of preserving Canadian traditions and that the Province would make five-reel features of a historical and dramatic nature in addition to the one and two-reel educational and scenic releases. The studio building, once the property of the Adanac Film Company, had been purchased at the very low price of $29,000 last spring and already the building had paid for itself through the marketing of two industrial films which had been made during the summer.

"The moving picture is propaganda that calls for a care," declared Col. Price, with reference to the decision of the Ontario Government to produce feature-length pictures. The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors was under his Department and he knew of pictures, he said, depicting scenes in the Canadian North in which a cabin was shown flying a flag that was not Canadian. Not one per cent of the pictures shown in Canada were made in Great Britain and not one per cent were Canadian made, he said. Canadian traditions could be better guarded by the introduction of Canadian films and this the Ontario Government intended to do.

The old Adanac Film Company produced a number of comedies and features at the Trenton studio, a star in one of the features being Tyrone Power. The studio is a one-story tile structure completely equipped with stage, laboratories, dressing rooms, offices and all other requirements.

Chadwick Starts Big Drive for "The Wizard of Oz"

TWO hundred first-run exhibitions of "The Wizard of Oz" during the holiday season is the aim of the intensive selling campaign inaugurated last week by I. E. Chadwick, President of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation, for Larry Semon's latest feature picture now in production, a screen version of one of the world's most famous fantastic stories, which was also a great stage play—the play that made Fred Stone a star.

Following the plans formulated by Mr. Chadwick, his organization is now establishing contact with the leading exhibitors in the country, an exhaustive campaign that is easily the largest and most embracing campaign ever conducted in the industry on a single production. Within a few days personal representatives of the Chadwick organization will leave for various territories and they will be supplemented by a nation-wide direct selling campaign from the home offices and by extensive trade and national advertising.

Contact has already been established with a number of nationally known manufacturers who will participate in the exploitation of the production. Details of these tie-ups will be forthcoming in the near future, and as with the rest of the campaign, they overshadow in magnitude anything hitherto attempted on a motion picture production.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

Welfare Work at Holiday Season Will Bring Good Will to Wise Exhibitors

NOVEMBER is nearly here and now is the time to plan for the special stunts which should mark the festival period. In most theatres Thanksgiving is not one of those holidays which mean extra money to the manager. It is a home holiday, and after the heavy mid day dinner few are inclined to seek amusement. That manager is fortunate who does a fair matinee and a good night business.

Thanksgiving is not a money maker, but it can be made to make both money and good will if handled right, just as the pre-Christmas season can be used to advance the general interests of a theatre even though it be a period of depression.

The manager who does not plan for some form of the old potato matinee is losing a golden opportunity. Even the large downtown house can use the idea by working on a larger scale and enlisting the co-operation of some friendly newspaper with a weather eye upon its circulation.

Easy to Work

Back in the early days, when there were few large theatres and most managers catered to a neighborhood trade, some forgotten genius evolved the potato matinee. The Saturday morning before the holiday he gave a special performance, admittance to which was one large potato or two small ones. Barrels were placed in the lobby to receive the "tickets," and these were sent off to a local charitable institution to help out the Thanksgiving dinner.

Since that early day the idea has been developed until it covers a wide range of schemes, but they are still classed by the old timers as "potato matinees" no matter what the requirement may be. And the idea is just as good as it was at the first function.

Make a Noise

The original idea was partly to get hold of something different. It was along the same lines as letting the entire family in for a quarter or offering free admission to persons of a certain height or weight. It was just to make talk. Probably the disposition of the potatoes was an afterthought.

But it made more than talk. It created a good impression. Most persons are in an expansive mood. They note that the theatre is doing something for the poor. They appreciate the sentiment and think more kindly of the house.

Potatoes alone seldom form the basis of the idea these days, but the collection of food and clothing for the poor is a standby with a lot of exhibitors, who work in with the local charity organizations.

If you have never tried it, work it this year. Start right in. Get the newspaper interested, if possible. Find out the institution most in need of aid. If you can find none, work in with the Salvation Army. If your town is too small, work in with the church societies, but get a definite outlet for the donations before you announce the stunt.

Tell your patrons of the idea two or three weeks in advance. Stress the "help others" angle. Play it hard, but without undue emphasis upon the house. Let them feel that you merely act as their agent for the distribution of their benefactions.

You can make it potatoes or you can offer an admission for any donation—a cake, canned goods, preserves or whatever the family can afford and the child can bring.

Every child who is interested becomes your press agent in the home circle. You will have a living advertisement at every dinner table in your locality.

And a Repeat

Make it a food donation for Thanksgiving, and on Christmas you can repeat the stunt with a request for old toys, half-worn garments and the like. Some of the toy matinees worked in cities of from 50,000 to 250,000 are local events through the interest worked up by the newspaper.

But you can't make up your mind today and have the matinee tomorrow. You must start in several weeks in advance to work up the idea, to advertise it to your patrons and the ones you would like to see patrons. Start right in and you'll know why some managers regard these special matinees at Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter and Decoration Day as fixtures. They pay, not only in money and good will but in your own satisfaction.

Cooperation

Most national co-operative campaigns are put over through letters, but the makers of Peter Pan clothing took a booth at the recent convention and exposition of the clothing trade in New York to put over the hook-up with the Paramount picture of that title. That's about the best yet.

Cinched Good Will With News Photos

Cliff Lewis, of the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, has frequently contributed hints on how to get the good will of the newspapermen. He and Manager Walter D. McDowell realize that good will means more than a large advertisement in the Sunday papers. That carries with it a certain amount of free space, but friendly relations with the staff mean a great deal more than full page displays.

They stand well with all of the newspapers, but their relations with the Evening Herald are particularly close, and the other day Cliff worked a stunt that is a classic.

The New York Central had a bad accident about forty miles out of Syracuse, and when reporters flocked to the scene a strong guard prevented them from coming close enough to the site of the accident to make any snapshots. As none of them carried telephoto lenses it looked as though no photographs would be made.

Cliff Got Stills

But Cliff hustled to the scene with his motion camera, hoping to get an addition to his news reel. He never got a chance to take the camera out, but between diplomacy and a few free tickets he did manage to get seven stills with his graflex, and he rushed back to town with these.

The Herald came out with two fine pictures in a five-column layout with a credit line "Photographed especially for the Herald by Manager Walter D. McDowell and Cliff Lewis, of the Strand Theatre." It was worth a lot of money, not alone in the good will of the newspaper, but in the suggestion of hustle conveyed to the public.

That's real press agentry.

A First National Release

HERE'S A SAMPLE OF EXPLOITATION FROM IRELAND

Jaunting cars are too small for 24-sheets, so the Metropolis Theatre, Dublin, used a lorry, which is the same as a southern dray and a northern truck. Horace Judge, exploitation head of the English agency, made a special trip to help.

A First National Release

ONE OF GEORGE J. SCHADE'S SPECIAL FRAMES

These ornate frames, carrying publicity for the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O., were built into the wall in several prominent locations to advertise the First National attractions which form the bulk of his program. This frame shows Secrets.

Sinners Drew Women Patrons

Aided by Raymond B. Jones, who is now doing publicity for the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, instead of the Howard Atlanta, John J. Friedl got the women for Sinners in Heaven, and of course the men followed, as they always do. It ran second only to Beaucaire, largely because the women had thrilled over the book and then found that the play carried most of these thrills and some of its own.

The best bets were 15,000 rotos and a mailing card reproducing the 24-sheets, which is a standard accessory. These were mailed to the women, and mostly to the unmarried ones, and paid back the largest patron percentage.

There was a classified ad tie-up along familiar lines and a very pretty window depicting the beach, with a painted background, a moon, palms and cutouts of Dix and Miss Daniels—also a Victrola with the argument that a victrola could make even the island castaways happy.

The manager who directs the bulk of his appeal to the women is going to get the larger business on this picture. Most men found the book rather stupid, but the flappers and their older sisters raved over it.

One Sheet Won

Usually it is the 24-sheets and the sixes which are counted upon to do the bulk of the work for a title, but the alert H. B. Clark, of Greenville, S. C., found the one sheet on Feet of Clay the most helpful.

This shows Vera Reynolds removing her shoe and on the strength of one of these sheets he got an entire shoe store window—just as you can.

He used two of the three-sheet surfboard riders for the lobby, and he was glad they wore bathing suits, for it rained during the entire run. With clear weather Clark thinks that some of the records would have been broken, for he came close to it even in the rain.

Hooked to Series

Tod Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, pulled a good one on the baseball series. Make it a couple of good ones.

One stunt was to get a spot for his Sea Hawk announcements just over the board on which the New Haven Union displayed the results of the world series.

The other was a two-column box on the sports page announcing that in the event of rain, which would make the use of the board impractical, the returns would be announced in the Olympia, adding that the current release was Tarnish.

He also hooked the same paper to the serial form of The Sea Hawk and gets a display line on the bottom of each instalment announcing the play dates at the Olympia.

He doesn't overlook a single bet.

TWO DETAILS OF THE LOBBY OF THE ORPHEUM THEATRE, CHICAGO, FOR CAPTAIN BLOOD

These panel pictures and the framed lithographs give a simple and yet very effective display for the run of the big Vitagraph special on its Chicago opening. The long panels are placed on the entrance doors to the auditorium and fit in well with the architectural scheme of the lobby itself. Very often these panels can be produced by cutting up the lithographs and varnishing.

Nature Honeymoon Helps Empty Hands

Harry Eagles, who broke into the Paramount exploitation staff with a big stunt, has beaten his own record with a three-time stunt for Empty Hands.

He worked it first in Seattle, where the Portland News parted with a double column space on the front page for an opener and gave six follow stories.

It's very simple—and not altogether new—now that it has been thought out. The basis of the story is that the manager of the People's Theatre gave a showing of Empty Hands to a newly married friend and his wedding guests.

The groom declared he could do as much with his jack knife as Jack Holt did in the picture, and the result was a bet that he could not take his bride into the wilderness and live off the country for six days.

A Timely Return

Their "diary" was published during the following week, and they got back to town, fatter and healthier for their communing with nature, just in time to appear the opening night of Empty Hands.

The stunt was repeated in Seattle and Bellingham and probably will be continued in other towns until the weather gets too cold.

Even where there is a suspicion that it is a press stunt there is sufficient human interest to hold the average reader.

The wilderness honeymoon makes it more interesting than where a staid married couple try it; but if you can't get newlyweds, perhaps you can get the next best.

It's one of the best dog stories pulled in a long time, and it is a regular space eater.

TO THE PUBLIC
THE HENNEGAN CO. CINCINNATI, O.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

TWENTY-SIX minutes was the time given to musical numbers on the program which had "In Hollywood with Potash and Permultter" as the film feature. This film required an hour and thirteen minutes, besides which there was the Topical Review running eight minutes and a third-dimension film called "Lunacy", also eight minutes long. This brought the complete show up to one hour and fifty-five minutes.

Outstanding features of the program were the two dance offerings, one for the ballet and the other a novelty solo with Benda masks. The first, the Rose Ballet, five minutes in time, had the premiere danseuse and ten members of the ballet. The rose hangings made up for the prologue of Valentino's picture were draped around two mirror mosaic vases. There were two balustrades painted in silver backing up the number just in front of the rose hangings. Behind the rose garlands was a deep blue plush cyclorama, and this was flooded by deep blue open box lamps from the sides. The dancers wore white pleated chiffon drapes, with wreathes of roses, red wigs and gold sandals. The musical setting was McDowell's "To a Wild Rose." White and amber spots from the sides lighted the dancers. A soft blue Mestrum flood on the musicians from the booth.

The novelty dance was done by Virginia Bell, recently of Greenwich Village Follies. The background for this consisted of a huge transparent Japanese fan of stage width and half stage high, and behind it was the deep blue plush cyclorama. The fan was lighted magenta from behind. At either side was a marble pedestal and upon one of these sat a girl in blue and silver Oriental costume holding a big mirror. Another girl brought on the masks, and still another was used for atmosphere. The dances were "Vanity," to "Love Song Oriental"; "Grotesque", to "March of the Dwarfs", and Silly Doll to "Waltzing Doll." Five minutes.

Another specially staged presentation was the baritone solo, "West of the Great Divide." The scenery for this was a painted mountain drop lighted from back and front to give distance. The half-width drop was masked in by gold draw curtains. Singer was costumed similar to Thomas Meigan in "The Alaskan." The large stage was in blue and a magenta flood from the dome covered the musicians. Four minutes.

The overture by the orchestra was a special arrangement of "Ray of Sunshine," "Song of Love," "Mandalay," "Blue Lagoon" and "Bagdad.' Lights: two orange Mestrum floods of 150 amperes on the musicians from the dome. Llama draw curtains closed over the production stage and pleats of same hit by four arch spots of green and orange from the sides. Blue foots small stage. Two entrance spots of straw on ceiling drapes, and pink borders on large stage. Seven minutes.

The Miserere from Verdi's "Il Trovatore" was also put on in a setting, it being the conventional prison exterior with the barred window through which the tenor sings. Soprano costumed in black. A light blue spot hit the prison window from above and there were two baby spots of blue from overhead to pick out the soprano. A light blue flood on the musicians from the dome, with blue foots and borders on the large stage. Five minutes.

Good Blotters

Just as the season opened at the University of South Carolina, the Imperial Theatre, Columbia, invested $15 in 1,500 perfectly good blotters, printed up with a program for the remainder of September and all of October. Included was the lead: "The Imperial Theatre announces a series of wonderful pictures. Keep this schedule and when you think of going to a movie don't say, 'Let's go to a movie,' but say, 'Let's go to the Imperial.'"

It cost three dollars to get them into every room in both the men's and women's dormitories, with a student distributor, but it was worth the money.

It would not have been worth thirteen cents had the blotters been of the sort too often put out, but these were real blotters and made you think kindly of the Imperial. It advertised fourteen titles to a specially good list at a cost of less than one dollar a title.

A Universal Release

JOHN SCANLON'S CLEVER FRONT ON NOTRE DAME

This is planned after a cut shown in this department and was built for the Alhambra Theatre, Torrington, Conn. That is Scanlon over on the left with Assistant Manager Jack Delaney on the right. He has made a very attractive structure.

Sold His Show

Sandusky merchants, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, give an annual style show in the fall, when all merchants made a special display of the coming fashions, each in his own store.

This year one firm decided to do better than that. It moved its style show to the Schade Theatre.

A deal was made with Schade whereby the store paid full price for all tickets presented and gave the show, in addition, which made things pretty easy for the manager, who merely supplied The Perfect Flapper and some small stuff.

Telephone Card Is of Simple Design

Following Beaucaire with Her Love Story gave two in a row. John J. Friedl did not want to advertise it as a costume play and he did not dare let the patrons come expecting a modern flapper story, so he straddled. He did not say much about the costumes, but he showed them.

THE TELEPHONE HANGER

One of the showings was in the window of a music store and had a cutout of the star draped in real fabrics. It's an old device, but it was newer in Dallas than in some other places and it helped to get a good business for the Palace.

A CUT-OUT OF GLORIA SWANSON DRAPED IN REAL FABRIC

This was one of the stunts used for Her Love Story to emphasize the fact that Gloria does not play a flapper without advertising that it is a costume play, since it followed Beaucaire and it was feared that two in a row might hurt business.

Another window showed the star and Ian Keith, the cutout being taken from the paper showing the scene in the convent garden. The draped picture was later used for the lobby. after playing a week alongside the piano.

A new style telephone hanger was used for this picture, the card being about 5 by 8 inches, printed in red.

The cross mark in the upper end is cut so that the card can be slipped over the mouthpiece without trouble. This is more simple than the circular hole generally cut. It appears to have been made with steel cutting rule set directly into the form. This makes only one handling in the press, but it cuts the rollers all to pieces and some printers object to this. Where they do, you can set the steel rule into spongy rubber and work as a special form without rollers. The rubber will clear the rule of the card after the impression.

PUTTING OVER THE WHITE SISTER IN DALLAS, TEXAS

This lobby was one of the features of a conservative but profitable campaign by the Capitol Theatre. Since the picture does not lend itself to much stunting, the lobby display and newspaper work must be trusted to carry it over—and do.

Found a New One

Write a nice letter to Ralph Thayer, of the Madison Theatre, Peoria, Ill. He has found a way to have a parade without newsboys, boy scouts, Coogan impersonators or orphans. Astounding, but true.

He had The Covered Wagon—and a big idea.

He invited the local tribe of Redmen to be his guests. Gave them red torches and let them follow his ballyhoo wagon from their lodge room to the theatre, by the longest route. Even the squaws came along, for there were free tickets for all in costume.

Pretty nifty? You bet.

Stubbed Stickers

C. D. Haug, a Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, has added a new touch to the windshield sticker stunt. Most of these are printed on the back with an offer of a free admission if the stickers are left up for a certain length of time, but is working the idea for The Red Lily at Columbus, Ga.

The stickers were 4 by 11 inches, exclusive of the stub, the latter reading: "Attention! If you would leave this sticker on your windshield until Thursday, and then drive to the Grand Theatre between the hours of 1 and 3 p. m., you will receive a free ticket to see Ramon Novarro in The Red Lily. This stub may be torn off as the sticker on your windshield will entitle you to admission."

Most of the 200 stickers stayed on the cars.

TEASING SEATTLE WITH A TRUCKLOAD OF FALSE ALARM

A huge truckload of wine cases was perambulated through Seattle for several days before signs were added to explain that the Wine was a photoplay to be shown at the Columbia. Probably it fooled no one for they are wise to the Vancouver bootleggers.

Eight Page Book His Own Letter

Generally when a manager wants to get something straight, he resorts to the open letter in the newspaper. C. E. Wagner, of the Story Theatre, Elk City, Okla., made his an eight page booklet.

"Facts you should know" was the title and the title alone showed on the cover. The second and third pages were given to a statement by Mr. Wagner to the effect that The White Sister in its photoplay form gave offense to neither Catholic nor Klansman. Then he added five pages of newspaper notice and he drew in a lot of persons who are not regular picture patrons, but who had become interested in the story through this frank discussion.

Mr. Wagner recently got back into the show business after a job with a Metro-Goldwyn exchange in that territory, and he knew that he would have to do something to correct a widespread apprehension if he wanted to sell the story to the business it deserved. He could not get it for an advance private showing, so he did the next best thing.

Took a Booth

Instead of being afraid of the State Fair, the Powers Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich., took a booth in which to advertise the approaching engagement of Marion Davies in Yolando. The main feature of the tasteful display was a lay figure in a costume worn by the star in the play. Advertising matter was distributed and the Fair authorities permitted the management to post paper around the grounds.

A radio show was also made to advertise through the engagement of a singer to take part in the broadcasting and sing the same song he was to sing in the prologue at the theatre. This carried with it an announcement of the engagement.

A local dairy used special milk bottle caps during the run of the piece instead of the usual hangers.

Harrison Welcomed Timely Endorsement

Do you believe in fairies? J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas, does. There's a reason.

The other day the local board of censors sent Harrison a letter thanking him for his personal support of the board in their endeavors to make the pictures clean, and commending the tone of the programs offered by the Hippodrome.

It was a sort of valedictory from a retiring board, appreciative of support instead of antagonism. It was something to brag about anyway.

In this instance, however, it was still more a gift from the skies. Waco was in the throes of a revolution. A local cotton show, receiving an annual appropriation from the city, was running the usual wheels and similar devices. The church people were up in arms and taking large newspaper spaces to denounce the show, the city administration and everything in general.

Harrison took a three twelves to reprint the letter. It was an intimate open-letter style of advertisement, incorporating the letter from the censors, rejoicing in their approval and adding a few words about The Covered Wagon. Not a line about the Cotton Palace, but everyone got the big idea, and the letter could not have been better timed.

And his second gift of the gods came when they booked Jackie Coogan in Little Robinson Crusoe just when the schools reopened and he needed something to draw the children back to the house.

Sure there are fairies, even in business, but you have to have the business sense to make use of their gifts if you want to cash in. Harrison was right on the job. Usually he is.

No Guide Needed

An ingenious hook-up was landed by J. P. Read, of the Joie Theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., on No Mother to Guide Her.

He got a women's wear store to announce that the girl with no mother to guide her could repose her faith in their good judgment as to clothes. It worked out a lot better than it sounds.

CELEBRATING METRO-GOLDWYN WEEK AT THE AMERICA THEATRE, PANAMA CANAL ZONE

Striking Portrait From Local Artist

strength because the line is more forceful than the halftone stipple. It would have been better still without the neck shading, which partly kills the vigor of the famous bob, but you can't get away from that glossy hair-comb. The costume sketch below might have been lighter in tone. There is too much black mass. We think that the best effect would have come had there been only that bob for color, but there is still plenty of strength and this forms the most noticeable display that has been put out for the Swanson production. The copy is well written, though pitched in rather high a key. Still Manhandled seems to have given greater audience satisfaction than any of her recent pictures, and extravagant praise seems justified. This drops about eleven inches across three, about the usual Ohio lineage, since all the houses fatten the newspaper bank accounts.

Too Much Copy Is Apt to Weaken Ad

Taking about a three twelves, or 170 by 3, the Columbia Theatre, Seattle, weakens a large surface by too much talk, particularly as this announces a holdover on The Signal Tower. The presumption is that the picture was sold on the first week and the fact of the holdover is sufficient guarantee of a worth-while picture, so that the space should have been given wholly to that fact. There is a certain appeal to the hyphenated words just above the signal, but not as much as in the statement that the picture was retained. It would have been better to have moved the signal and the title to just below the announcement of the holdover, taking the space below for a less cramped announcement of the smaller features. As it stands the space is too crowded with small type to be convincing. Probably this did not hurt much, since the selling was already put over, but it assuredly did not help. A display advertisement should be bold and striking. It should tell things in a large way. Smaller letters will not usually carry the same conviction, just as the small man does not make as convincing a speaker as a larger man. He must be half as clever again to gain the same results. This argument might seem to dispose of the open letter style, but that is something else again and here the boldness comes from the single bank of small type. The same effect cannot be won in display. The title itself connotes that fact.

Elaborate Design Marks An Opening

Alexander Frank, of the Plaza Theatre, Waterloo, Ia., sends in his large display for the opening of the fall season. The space is five fourteens, or a total of 70 inches, which affords plenty of room for an open display in which equal space is given the stage, the screen and the music. The frame works in the ears of corn, which are the chief product of Iowa; which the song tells you is where the tall corn grows, and it suggests a pick-up. It may have been specially drawn, or it may have been used for some other purpose first. The cutting of the side rules suggests that it was made to be used with rule of varying length. In any event, it provides a good frame and where it comes from does not matter other than to suggest that often the printer or some local merchant can loan you a cut that will keep expenses down and appearances up. Mr. Frank very wisely opens with a strong comedy offering, but we think it a slight error in judgment in not giving Hold Your Breath a better play-up than the music or the vaudeville act. All three may be of the best, but the big bet should be shaded over the others to get the best effect. Three equal stars are never as good as a star and two supporters. You must have one big point to talk about. Mt. Everest would not be the highest mountain in the world if the rest of the world were of equal height. You must have contrast to do the best selling, and in a picture theatre the film feature should stand out above the rest. Typographically this is good average work and probably the best the printer could do with the type faces at command. From Mr. Frank's end of it, he has put over the all-season impression very nicely.

Chicago Space Is Clean and Selling

If this 100 by 3 appeared in a small town paper it would be a nice advertisement. But this is a Chicago Sunday space, and Chicago likes to get as much ink as possible for the money, and so this clean and attractive display of the Chicago Theatre becomes more than merely a nice announcement. It is an achievement. It stands out from a rather smeary page like a patch of newly fallen snow in a coal yard. The cut is merely an attractor and not a seller, but it pays for itself many times over in the attention it gets to the type surrounding it. This is because the artist has refrained from working in a lot of shading on the face. He follows good newspaper practice in using only the essential lines. He does not leave out what he needs, but he does not work in a lot of cross batching and black mass that will collect the ink and smear things up. Even in the heavy mass of hair he has high lighted

One side or the other will get you unless you are determined not to go to any show. And it is all done in straight type. The only hand work is on the title, where hand lettering is permissible if it is as plain as this and often is to be preferred to straight type. About the only blot is the use of old English for the organ recital in the right hand panel. That does not get over. Apart from this the announcement is notably good.

Sells the Wagon On His Own Endorsement

It has been several years since Francis M. Kadow, of the Mikadow Theatre, Manitowoc, Minn., came into the department, but a natural pride in accomplishment led him to mail in his three tens for The Covered Wagon. He puts it over with a single column cut and some earnest words. He does more with words than he could do with a thousand inches of cut surface. He does not attempt fine writing. He just sat down and told what he thought of the picture as simply as though he were talking to a man in the same room. Because he was going into print he did not consider it necessary to go to the dictionary in search of seven and eight syllable words. He wrote as he speaks and conveyed a stronger impression of sincerity than would be possible with the most passionate prose poem. This really is the trick of writing good advertising copy. Write as you talk and as other people talk. Talk press agent style and you will sound press agenty and unconvincing. He did not start out with the statement that "The Covered Wagon is the greatest picture of the age." He knew that would be a fine way to waste thirty inches of space. He teased with "If I owned this newspaper." Everyone wanted to see what he would do if he did. By the time he gets to "If I could use every available inch of space in this paper to tell you about The Covered Wagon I would find myself cramped for space," you go on reading. You are interested, though you have found it is just an advertisement. If it is that good, you want to see how good he thinks it is. We presume that Mr. Kadow supplemented

Baltimore Tells It Is Open All Night

Open All Night is one of those non-committal titles which take some explaining, and phrased. The showing times are to be left the New Theatre, Baltimore, met this situation nicely in the display shown here. Using a two column cut in a three column space, the surplus is taken for a description of the story that is a nice piece of copy writing. It is intelligent and without the exaggerated note that so many copy writers seem to feel is the only selling angle. In three lines the idea is summarized and in four paragraphs the story is fully exploited without comment. The only splash line is found in the arrow, which tells that the New is starting Baltimore's greatest movie season with a greater movie. This is a story on which opinion seems to be divided. Personally we believe that it will please. Others contend that it is too sophisticated for the small towns. In any event, the New does not commit itself. It tells the story. It leaves the patron to form his own judgment. There is no comeback on the house in case the story does not please, and yet the play is well sold. And this applies not only to the copy, but to the typographical arrangement. Put that same side copy in a three column bank at

"The Border Legion"

Unusually Absorbing Paramount-Zane Grey Western Should Prove a Big Box-Office Attraction

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Vouched for by the author as being the story of an actual occurrence in the career of a well known bandit of the Old West, only the names of the characters having been changed, Paramount is offering "The Border Legion," one of Zane Grey's stories.

Several excellent pictures have been founded on Mr. Grey's novels, but we doubt if any of them has proved to be better screen material. Here is a picture that has all the action and punch typical of western stories, but at the same time there is something bigger and better than usual, that focuses the attention and compels the interest and gives it an unusual stamp of realism.

Possibly this is due to the fact that it is a true story, and certainly the plot does deviate from the usual formula. The central dramatic character is the bandit chief who is painted as a very bad man, who kills and steals without compunction. But he has his good side, which is awakened by the girl. You cannot help but like him and he gets much more of your sympathy than the none too vigorous hero. You are apt to feel disappointed at the fact that he does not finally win the girl and really sorry when he loses his life to protect her from the cold-blooded and brutal villain. But after all, things are much more apt to turn out this way in real life. Here is a story dealing with primitive emotions realistically and convincingly portrayed. Everything is really believable and in keeping with the stories of pioneer days and with human nature, and there is no stretching of coincidence.

Rockliffe Fellowes never gave quite so good a performance as his portrayal of Kells. He fits the role from every angle and overshadows the other characters, and Gibson Gowland as the heavy villain, savage and ruthless, gives a remarkably fine performance. Helene Chadwick fulfills the requirements of the female role, and Antonio Moreno, though somewhat at a disadvantage from a romantic standpoint, capably portrays the hero. Edward Gribbon supplies effective and natural comedy.

We do not recall having seen another picture directed by William K. Howard, but we want to say his handling of this story is exceptionally fine and we cannot now think of a single point to which exception could be taken or a surplus foot of film that should be eliminated. Against mountainous backgrounds that are in themselves a treat to the eye he has introduced strikingly effective shots, and with the fine co-operation of his players, has turned out a story of the West that is unusually dramatic, red-blooded, vigorous, with the right amount of comedy relief, crammed with punches.

"This Woman"

Warner Brothers Star Irene Rich in Pleasing But Improbable Story Adapted From Popular Novel

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Irene Rich, who has achieved an enviable measure of success in featured roles, reaches stardom in "This Woman," an adaptation of a popular novel by Howard Rockey, which has been transferred to the screen by Warner Brothers.

While implausible "This Woman" is a decidedly entertaining story. Everything happens in the best romantic fashion, there is good human interest, unexpected twists, abundant sympathy for the heroine, and an entirely satisfactory if somewhat unlooked for culmination of the romantic angle.

The story belongs to the artificial type, built to entertain. It is a sort of a modern fairy tale, a Cinderella story, with coincidence playing a large part, with things happening in a way that they have a habit of not generally happening in everyday life. A singer, down and out, saved from suicide is sent to jail though innocent because of the lies of a man. Chance brings her to the attention of a great manager who offers to teach her, kind wealthy people take her under their care, one falls in love with her, everyone helps her but a crook who seeks to force her to aid him. At the culmination of her romance, the man who sent her to jail turns up, her house of cards tumbles down, she confesses her past, but in the end finds true love.

Phil Rosen has capably directed this picture and received fine co-operation from the players. Miss Rich by her work, especially in the emotional scenes, justified stardom and portrays the emotional scenes with a strong note of sincerity and realism. Pushing her for honors, however, is the performance of Marc McDermott as the temperamental opera impresario. There are some unusually clever scenes between these two, especially when he insults her to find out if she can act. As stated in a subtitle, "She Can." The entire cast is well known and of high calibre. Louise Fazenda as a girl of the streets makes a lot out of her few scenes. Creighton Hale registers as a gentleman both when intoxicated and sober. Ricardo Cortez is capably cast but inclined to smile at unopportune moments. Clara Bow makes an attractive and piquant ingenue.

"This Woman" should provide a pleasant hour for the majority of patrons.

Facing poverty, Carol Drayton a singer, attempts suicide but is saved by Rose, a girl of the streets who buys her a meal in a questionable cafe. Gordon Duane, a wealthy man joins them, the place is raided, Duane lies about Carol. She is arrested and goes to jail under an assumed name. Released she wanders about the street penniless and Bobby Bleecker, intoxicated pays her to sing in front of his sweetheart, Aline's house. Stratini, a famous impresario, is charmed with her voice and offers to teach her, and she becomes a protege of the wealthy Sturdevants. The butler finds her jail release and steals a necklace and seeks to force her to aid him. Bobby comes to the rescue, learns the truth but keeps mum. Whitney Duane falls in love with Carol, but doubts her because of gossip. Carol meets Rose who is down and out and borrows money from Bobby to aid her. This makes Bobby's sweetheart, Aline, jealous. Gordon Duane returns from abroad. To clear matters, Carol tells her story implicating Duane. She prepares to leave, but Stratini who has always believed in her sticks by her, and Carol makes him admit that he loves her.

"I Am the Man"

Chadwick Pictures Corporation which is distributing on the independent market "Meddling Women" is also offering another picture, "I Am the Man," starring the famous stage and screen actor, Lionel Barrymore and directed by Ivan Abramson.

The theme concerns a political boss who by framing her father forces a woman to marry him, suspects her, kills his own brother when he finds him making love to her, and prepares to let an innocent woman suffer for the crime until he learns this woman his own daughter. Thereupon he commits suicide leaving a confession reading "I Am the Man."

The appeal of this picture is based almost entirely on the tenseness of the dramatic situations and the excellent work of Mr. Barrymore, for while it affords him fine opportunities, his is not a sympathetic character, his motives and methods are not such as appeal and there is no disappointment when he meets his fate and the woman in the case is reunited with the man she gave up to wed him.

Melodramatic angles have been introduced into the plot and the story is not always entirely plausible and some of the situations are a bit confusing, however, overshadowing all this is the really strong dramatic situations, which due to the ability of Mr. Barrymore are unusually effective and realistic.

It is a picture that holds your interest at all times and is filled with the conflict of emotions that makes for strong drama. Mr. Barrymore's portrayal is an excellent one and his acting fascinates. Though he dominates the picture you feel towards him as you would toward an especially fine portrayal of a heavy role, for his role is a heavy one and it is the wife, the other man and the young woman who get the audience sympathy.

The supporting cast is entirely capable, and Seena Owen has the most prominent role as the star's wife. Cast as a rollicking chorus girl who finds herself accused of murder, Miss LeBreton gives a fine performance both in the vivacious and in the more heavy emotional scenes. In justice to Miss Owen it must be said that Miss LeBreton has the better opportunities. Gaston Glass has not much to do as the disappointed lover who becomes the district attorney but he gives a good account of himself.

Even though the direction is not always smooth and one is apt to feel that the story could have been even more forcefully handled, "I Am the Man" is a picture that should appeal to all who like intense drama, well acted.

Story

James McQuade, the political boss of a big city falls in love with Julia Calvert who is engaged to Daniel Harrington. By framing her father so that he is facing prison, he forces Julia to marry him to save her father. James' brother Robert, falls in love with Julia and his attentions become obnoxious. Julia never becomes reconciled to her husband, and Robert finally instills into James' mind the thought that she still loves Harrington. Through a ruse, James comes on a party which includes Robert and Corinne a chorus girl, finds Robert making love to Julia and shoots him. Corinne is found with the revolver in her hand, and tried for the murder. During the trial James discovers Corinne is his own daughter and persuades the judge to postpone the trial for one day. That night he sends for Harrington, the district attorney, and Corinne, then takes poison and dies leaving a confession which reads: "I am the man." Julia finds happiness with Harrington and Corinne marries her sweetheart Billy.

"Another Scandal"

Producers Distributing Corporation Offers Sophisticated Cosmo Hamilton Story on Sex Theme

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Adapted from a story by the celebrated English author-playwright, Cosmo Hamilton, "Another Scandal," which is being released by Producers Distributing Corporation, is a picture which is strong in its sex appeal.

A bedroom scene opens the story with an explanation that the heroine has married an almost total stranger to avoid a scandal, and to bring her to a realization of her position the husband makes her believe he will force her to live up to her part of the marital contract. A year later shows them as happily married, with the wife who is expecting the birth of a baby prevailing on her husband to go away for a trip on his yacht. One of the party is an attractive grass widow who uses every means, including the generous display of her physical charms, to win him away from his wife. A false move prompted by jealousy helps along the vamp's game and leads up to a situation in which she seeks to cement her hold on the hero by framing a compromising scene with him which will be witnessed by her detectives.

It will be seen that the story is sophisticated and daring, with scenes which at times are sensational and skate along on exceedingly thin ice. The frame-up scene which supplies the climax shows this young woman doing a quick disrobing act and jumping into the hero's bed while she has cleverly sent him off into another room.

This picture runs well over 7,000 feet and could be speeded up by the cutting down of some of the details of the earlier reels; the latter part, however, moves along at a good pace. Due to apparently foolish moves on the part of the wife, she loses much of the sympathy usually accorded a heroine, and the hero is a rather colorless sort of chap, so that the interest lies largely in following the battle of wits between the two women. Mr. Hamilton has cleverly developed this angle and shows a keen insight into feminine psychology, and there is good suspense and an ingenious twist in the climax in which the wife succeeds in beating the vamp at her own game.

Not entirely convincing as a super-flapper in the opening scenes, Lois Wilson shows to good advantage as the loving wife and scores in the scenes where she is fighting to hold her husband. Holmes Herbert acts with sincerity the rather thankless role of the husband, while Flora LeBreton, a young English actress of undeniable physical charm and acting ability, is ideal for the role of the other woman.

"Another Scandal" is a picture for the sophisticated patron rather than for strictly family patronage or young people.

Story

Beatrix marries Pelham Franklin to avoid a scandal, and a year later finds them happy, and expecting an important event. Pel is so nervous that Bee persuades him to go on a cruise. May Beamish a pretty widow uses all her wiles to vamp him but fails. Bee is jealous and after the birth of the baby she decides to make Pel jealous by going out with a former suitor, Greenwood. Pel becomes enraged, decides he is too old for Bee and leaves. On the train he meets May and loans her his New York apartment. Bee determines to fight for Pel's love and it becomes a battle of wits between the two women. May finally frames a situation where she will have her hired detectives find her in a compromising situation with Pel, but Bee learns of this and cleverly turns the tables. She and Pel become reconciled while May admits failure.

"The Great Diamond Mystery"

Shirley Mason's Newest for William Fox Is Murder Mystery Story Based on Interesting Theory

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

The theory that a murderer will return to the scene of his crime is the foundation on which Shirley Mason's newest starring vehicle for William Fox, "The Great Diamond Mystery," is built. The plot, so far as the mystery angle is concerned and the placing of suspicion on other than the real culprit, follows the familiar line of stories of this type. It has been complicated, however, by making the heroine as an author who has written a book with the same title and theme as that of the picture, and the spectator is left in doubt as to whether the scenes which follow the reading of the script by the publisher are intended to picturize this novel or whether by a most unusual coincidence a similar situation arises in the heroine's life.

Other points in the story are not cleared up and some of the situations are not rounded out, but on the whole this picture is a good example of an interesting murder mystery story. The mystery angle is capably handled and the idea is an interesting one. It is not conscience, however, which brings the culprit back to the scene, but a desire to get the hidden jewels that caused the crime. The fact that three persons from logical motives appear on the scene effectively works up the suspicion.

Shirley Mason gives a likeable performance. Her portrayal of the little slip of a girl who single-handed fights the one-sided battle to prove her sweet heart's innocence appeals strongly to the sympathies. William Collier, Jr., as the hero has not much to do. John Cossar, Harry Von Meter, Philo McCullough and Hector Sarno capably portray villains of varying degrees. Jackie Saunders contributes comedy which in some of the scenes lessens the dramatic tension but is generally effective and should register with the majority of spectators.

From a box-office angle, this picture would appear to belong to the better class of program productions, with an appeal both to lovers of murder mysteries and Miss Mason's wide circle of fans.

Ruth Winton, a young authoress finally succeeds in getting Murdock a publisher to read her manuscript for a new book and he agrees to publish it, claimed it is for her sake as the committee has turned it down. Perry, her sweetheart takes her to his wealthy uncle who is so enraged he cuts him off. Mallison, the partner in a diamond enterprise with Graves, gives Perry a job and soon after a diamond is missing and Perry is accused. He goes to Graves and soon after, Graves is killed. Perry is arrested. Believing the murder will return to the scene of the crime, Ruth rents Grave's house. The old butler asks for his job and is hired. Mallison returns and resumes his courtship of Ruth. He keeps hunting around the mantels, finally knocking over a clock in which Graves has hidden diamonds. The butler rushes in, there is a shot and the butler falls. He confesses that he killed Graves for the diamonds. Perry who is about to be executed for the crime is pardoned by the governor in the nick of time and finds happiness with Ruth.

"Christine of the Hungry Heart"

Kathleen Norris Novel Gives Florence Vidor a Fine Role in This Ince-First National

Reviewed by Epes W. Sargent

Apparently the determining factor in the transfer of "Christine of the Hungry Heart" to the screen was its suitability to Florence Vidor. A studio-made story could not have fitted her talents more exactly, and she makes the most of her opportunities, playing with a depth of force that still is marked by restraint. The story gives her some fine opportunities, notably her parting with her little son, and she rises to every crisis without degenerating into ranting.

Clive Brook as the physician looks and acts his part well and Ian Keith is convincing as the poet. Warner Baxter gets the chance to prove his versatility in the two widely separated phases of his role and Walter Hiers floats through the story like an amiable Zeppelin hovering over a friendly city. He has not much to do, but he brightens his corner. Dorothy Brock does excellently as the child and carried conviction in her share of the star's big scenes.

The scenario has been constructed with care, and yet even with several long time jumps the story runs too long for its plot interest. The author writes too many words per gesture to be suitable for translation to the screen. The play does not drag. It is merely that it takes so long to get anywhere in spite of the adapter's fine technique. The mounting is well done, though at times a little too ornate, and the direction is good for the greater length of the story.

The play will please Miss Vidor's admirers immensely. It will meet the approval of the readers of the author, but many will find it a bit too slow to win their entire approval.

Story

Christine Madison marries Stuart Knight, He is a heavy drinker and prefers the company of his companions to that of his wife's more polite circle. She realizes a loss of love, and becomes interested in Dr. Monteagle, an orthopedic specialist. When she realizes his love and her reciprocation, she hurries from him. One her way home there is an automobile crash. Her intoxicated husband, joy riding with one of his young charmers, is at the wheel. Monteagle wins her back to health and marries her. Christien finds devotion to science no more tolerable than the worship of Bacchus. She elopes with Ivan Vianney, but even before they reach their objective, Rio de Janeiro, she realizes that the man is wrapped up in his work. Monteagle reclaims his little son by cable to the consulate and Christine leaves Ivan, realizing a little too late, that all men make marriage secondary to their love. Eventually she makes atonement through nursing her first husband through his last illness and Monteagle promises to try and assuage her heart-hunger if she will come back to him and the boy.

"The Warrens of Virginia"

William Fox Offers Romantic Drama of Civil War Period Based on a DeMille-Belasco Stage Play

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

William Fox has transferred to the screen "The Warrens of Virginia," William C. De Mille's romantic drama of the Civil War, which as a David Belasco production was a big success on the stage several seasons ago. The romantic angle of the story runs true to type for pictures depicting this period, with a lieutenant in the Union Army in love with the daughter of a Southern general. The production is built around a dramatic situation involving the love versus duty theme, in which the hero is prevailed upon to carry a false despatch while on a visit to his sweetheart, which results in the destruction of a wagon train loaded with supplies, bringing about the surrender of the Confederate forces.

Director Elmer Clifton has laid greater emphasis on the picturization of the war angle, subordinating the romantic elements, which do not register with particular strength. He has introduced a number of good shots of cavalry charging and other details of warfare, and the destruction of the wagon train is well handled; but despite the use of a large number of men, horses and wagons, these scenes seem tame compared with reproduction of scenes in the World War.

With the story built around just one big situation, the picture is inclined to drag somewhat and lack snap, too much footage being devoted in leading up to the climax. Also, the scene where the hero who is about to be hung by having his horse driven from under him and the horse refuses to budge though severely beaten, giving time for the rescue party summoned by the heroine to arrive, very considerably stretches plausibility.

Martha Mansfield is attractive as the heroine, while Wilfred Lytell is rather colorless as the hero. He does not succeed in rising above the unsympathetic situation in which he is placed in the despatch episode. J. Barney Sherry's characterization of General Lee is satisfactory and Harlan Knight is excellent as the spy, giving one of the most forceful portrayals in the picture.

While this production will probably prove of average entertainment value, due to the colorful nature of the story and its conventional romance, somehow it seems to lack the force and depth and stirring appeal to the emotions that would make it a really big production.

Adapted from W. C. MeMille's stage play.
Directed by Elmer Clifton.
Length, Six Reels.

Story

Burton and Agatha Warren were childhood sweethearts and grew up together. At the time of the Civil War Burton became a Lieutenant in the Union Army while all of Agatha's family were on the other side. After four years of fighting the situation arose where General Lee's army was dependent upon the arrival of a supply train. The Union general urging patriotism persuaded Burton to carry a false message when he went to call on Agatha, arranging with a spy so that he would be captured. The scheme worked, the train was captured, Lee surrendered and ended the war. Furious at his perfidy, and considering as a spy the Confederates led by the Hill Buzzard took Burton out to hang. Agatha though incensed at him, rode to get help which arrived in time to save him. Five years later, Burton returned, Agatha forgave him and they found happiness together.

"The Riddle Rider"

Universal Stars William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick in Intensely Exciting and Thrilling Serial

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

As its newest serial, Universal is offering "The Riddle Rider" with William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick as the stars, and with a capable cast including Helen Holmes who long ago established a record with film fans for her fearless work.

Action is the keynote of this chapter-play, and with a plot which involves dispute over oil lands which an unscrupulous band seeking to prevent their development in order to gain control while arrayed against them is a local newspaper editor who through the columns of his paper and by means of disguising as a mysterious character known as the Riddle Rider who appears always at the opportune moment to rescue the heroine, abundant opportunities are afforded to keep the story moving at a fast pace.

If the remaining episodes are as good as the first three, this serial should abundantly satisfy all who like serials filled with thrills, stunts, and excitement and prove a box-office winner. There is something doing every minute, and interspersed with the adventures, dare-devil happenings, fights etc., is a good proportion of comedy and a satisfactory romantic angle.

The end-of-the-chapter continued-in-our-next stunts are exceptionally exciting. The first shows the rescue of the heroine from a canyon through which a wall of water from a broken dam is rushing. Another shows the blowing up of a derrick with the girl nearby, in a third stunt shows the Riddle Rider rescuing her from a herd of stampeding cattle. Director William Craft has certaintly succeeded in injecting action and thrills at every possible point so that excitement is kept at a high pitch.

Eileen Sedgwick is not only attractive as the heroine but is an excellent rider and is right there when it comes to the stunts. William Desmond fully measures up to the requirements of the exactingly vigorous dual role of the editor and riddle rider. Claude Payton and William Gouldare well cast as the villains, with Helen Holmes as one of their chief assistants. Hughie Mack, with his tremendous avoirdupois, supplies the majority of the comedy.

"Marvels of Motion"

(Red Seal—Slow Motion—650 Ft.)

Further wonderful development of "slow motion" photography is strikingly exemplified in this reel produced by Max Fleisher in collaboration with the Novagraph Company. In addition to normal slow motion, we see suspended motion as for instance when a dancer in Michael Fokine's celebrated ballet leaps into the air and stays motionless in a certain position. In this section there is also reverse motion in some of the turns and pirouettes. Scenes of swimming and diving also introduces a sort of continued slow motion effect, by "holding" on the screen the different stages of a dive as the others successively appear. This effect, by means of a diagram is used in scenes of a celebrated golfer making a stroke, showing the downward curve is not the same as the upward one, a point of much discussion with golf players. This film is a distinct novelty and a highly interesting film that should please and entertain the average patron. In addition it will have a strong appeal to the scientifically inclined as a glimpse of the wonderful possibilities of slow motion photography. A striking feature of this subject is the smoothness with which the changes in the different kinds of motion are made.—C. S. S.

"A Deep-Sea Panic"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

Paul Parrott as a seaman and Kala Pasha as the captain of a pirate ship, have the leading roles in this Imperial Comedy distributed by William Fox. The action takes place entirely aboard ship and there is practically no plot, the two reels being devoted to a series of slap-stick stunts in which Paul gets much the worst of it. The comedy ends with an attack by a U. S. warship and the pirate boat being blown to pieces by the explosion of a projectile in the powder room. Much of the footage is devoted to scenes where both principals and a dog eat a plug of tobacco covered with gravy. They get seasick and visit the rail of the ship. This may offend some of the more sensitive of the fans. The entire action is rough and tumble and knockabout stuff of a familiar type. There is practically nothing new and while dyed-in-the-wool slap-stick fans will probably find it amusing, it is hardly up to the standard of the usual comedy released under this brand name.—C. S. S.

"High Gear"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Here's a Bobby Vernon comedy distributed by Educational, that is well-named. Auto-racing furnishes the basis and the action is as fast as a speed vehicle traveling "on high." There is nice balance in this picture, for it starts off with the hero driving a car so slowly that he gets a summons for blocking traffic and a tortoise outspeeds. But the finish, goes to the other extreme. Bobby accidentally finds himself in a racing car that gets out of control, is then shanghaied into a road race, finally finds himself in a "wild" aeroplane, and by means of a parachute gets his "dead" auto over the finish line and wins the prize and the girl. The entire two reels are full of pep and should get chuckles and laughs from any audience. There is an exceedingly amusing stunt where ether is used instead of gas in the racer and the fumes overcome Bobby's opponents and get him so woozy that he loops the loop and does stunts in the aeroplane. There are a lot of good thrills when the cars tumble over embankments, and when the aero does stunts. This is one of the best comedies recently released by Educational; in fact, it is a crackerjack.—C. S. S.

"Galloping Bungalows"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Mack Sennett gives his bathing beauties a chance to display some new surf costumes in "Galloping Bungalows," directed by Del Lord with a cast including Billy Bevan, Sid Smith, Natalie Kingston, Sunshine Hart, John J. Richardson and Andy Clyde. There is a lot of laugh provoking material in Sennett's latest. It starts off with a widow in search of a husband with a pretty mustache. All of the butchers and tradespeople in the town enter the competition and the widow picks a bandmaster. It is after the union that he discovers the wealthy member of her family is her daughter. The couple want a cheap home and buy a "magic" bungalow on a beach. In order to save it from being washed away at high tide they place it on a wagon. The horses run away and the house on wheels catches on fire when the real estate broker tries to abduct the wealthy daughter. A local fire department arrives in time to wet the ashes. The racing of the fire engine through the town streets, perilously swerving by passing vehicles is quite exciting as well as funny.—T. W.

"Stunts"

(Pathe—"Sportlight"—One Reel)

In "Stunts" one of the Grantland Rice "Sportlights" that writer portrays the dangers encountered by many stunt artists. He shows a tight rope walker, Bird Millman, balancing herself on a narrow span of rope between two buildings in New York City. This is particularly thrilling. Another shows the antics of two famous speed swimmers in a tank. Several other branches of sport are used to illustrate this theme which is excellent audience material.—T. W.

"Alice Gets in Dutch"

(Winkler—Comedy—One Reel)

This is one of the best of the series of "Alice" comedies which are being distributed on the independent market by M. J. Winkler. This charming little kiddie gets blamed for another pupil's prank, is made to wear a dunce cap and then goes to sleep. By means of the combination of photography and cartoon work of Walt Disney, Alice is shown as having a most wonderful dream in which with her pals, a donkey and a dog, she has a battle with the teacher, a devilish looking female with horns, who is assisted by three animated school books. She wins the battle by using cayenne pepper, causing the books to sneeze until they lose their leaves, but the teacher catches her and prods her with a sword. This reel is amusing and clever and is suitable for any class of theatre; the kiddies especially will enjoy it. The cartoon work and photography is ingeniously combined and some clever effects obtained; this angle has the advantage of being out of the ordinary and quite a novelty. —C. S. S.

"Animated Hair Cartoons"

(Red Seal—Cartoon—300 feet)

The Animated Hair Cartoons, drawn by Marcus, the celebrated cartoonist of the New York Times, which have been a feature of the program of some of the biggest houses including the Rivoli and Rialto, New York, are now being distributed through Red Seal Pictures Corporation. These cartoons are amusing and decidedly ingenious and are based on the idea of what a big difference the position or changes of hair make in a person's appearance. Subject A of the series shows the cartoonist manipulating the hair so that a London policeman changes into Lady Astor, an unidentified man into Taft and then into Joffre and other characters into Jack Holt and Snub Pollard. Subject B shows W. J. Bryan changed to Briand of France, Shakespeare to John Barrymore and a man to Pola Negri. These subjects are immensely entertaining and afford amusement to patrons who will want to guess the character that is being developed. These are suitable for any kind of a house.—C. S. S.

"The Age of Oil"

(Fox—Instructive—One Reel)

As one of his Educational Entertainments, William Fox is offering this subject which deals with the production of oil and its many uses. The importance of this commodity to modern industrial life is interestingly shown together with fact as to the source, refining and distribution of oil. An unusual point brought out is the fact that very few wells are gushers, and that frequently other things such as salt water springs are tapped when drilling. This subject is timely and should interest the majority.—C. S. S.

"Pathe Review No. 43"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

"History of Fashions" is quite an interesting study of the "outline" observed by dressmakers from the time of the "cave-woman" to the present-day flapper. "Flying Over Hawaii," an aerial tour over these islands in the mid-Pacific, and scenic points of the City of Cleveland, a Pathecolor, comprise the subjects shown in "Pathe Review No. 34."—T. W.

"Hot Stuff"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

The "Spat" Family's latest endeavor has mostly to do with fire and fire apparatus. In the small town in which they live a boarding house is burned to the ground before the local volunteers arrive. As a precaution in the event of a conflagration in their own home the "Spats" import a fire engine. They house it in a garage next to their home. One day they decide to have a fire drill. After much squabbling, which is quite amusing, they get the apparatus on to the street. Then they stage a wild ride all over the town, having many narrow escapes and capering about the speeding machine in a way which will thrill any audience. They suddenly become aware that a bonfire they started in their yard as a part of their drill has ignited a curtain in their home. A wild scramble follows and by the time they get the hose functioning the house has burned to the ground. To make matters worse one of the "Spats" turns a stream of gasoline from a garage pump upon the flames resulting in the Family taking a brief flight. The comedy as a whole is amusing but it strikes us that many audiences will find the engine incident has been overdone.—T. W.

"Vaudeville"

(Red Seal—Cartoon—One Reel)

This number of Max Fleisher's clever "Out-of-the-inkwell" cartoons which are being released by Red Seal Pictures Corporation shows the familiar little clown running a vaudeville theatre; he acts as ticket taker, jumps about playing each of the orchestral instruments in turn, runs the show, introduces the acts and finally comes to grief and has the audience walk out on him when he tries to do a "turn" himself. Mr. Fleischer, as usual appears in some of the scenes, and his wonderful imagination is evident throughout. The little clown performs some very amusing stunts which should delight the majority of spectators, and characteristic of this series, moves about with wonderful smoothness and realism for a cartoon character. This is well up to the standard of the series.—C. S. S.

"Film Facts"

(Red Seal—Magazine—750 feet)

Issue B of this magazine of the screen distributed by Red Seal Pictures Corp., comprises a number of interesting subjects that should have popular appeal and is suitable for any type of house. Geisha girls of Japan are shown dancing gracefully as compared with the unskilled dance of the Indian. There are shots of vast herds of cattle on our western plains, the value running into millions. There is a brief biography with views of the celebrated naturalist John Burroughs. The reel concludes with shots of unusual fish including the thin conger eel, the defenseless star-fish and a battle between a cuttle-fish and a spider crab.—C. S. S.

"The Cat and the Magnet"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

Cartoonist Paul Terry supplies his cat with a magnet with which that animal proceeds to magnetize mice and their little autos into a hollow tree trunk. There the cat resells the cars. The idea is not only original but is clever from the standpoint of laughs.—T. W.

"The Mosquito"

(Educational—Instructive—One Reel)

A little insect, known rather unfavorably to practically everyone, furnishes the subject for the newest Principal Pictures Corporation "Secrets of Life" series. This gives to the subject additional interest for the majority of patrons. There are remarkable views of the mosquito from the time the eggs are laid in stagnant water, through its career as a swimming wiggler, its pupal stage and final transformation into the stinging singing summer torment. A fact unknown to many, that the female of the species is more deadly than the male, and that in fact it is only the lady mosquito that stings humans, is brought out. The male, decked in gorgeous plumage is a conceited vegetarian. This is one of the best and most interesting of this remarkable series.—C. S. S.

"Robinson Crusoe"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

Our friend of childhood days, Robinson Crusoe, is the newest addition to Universal's Hysterical History series. His experiences on the desert island are amusingly burlesqued with some clever toucnes. Of course, the native Friday plays a prominent part, and in addition, Robinson meets a charming girl who had to walk home from a yatching party. After various experiences which have been travestied with good comedy effect, including the making of pancakes with gunpowder by Friday, Robinson rescues the girl, by getting the cannibals, who have learned baseball by eating an umpire, to play a game. A clever scene shows Friday putting them out of business by shooting a spear through their nose rings and tying them.—C. S. S.

"Some Tomboy"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

The newest Century Comedy distributed through Universal, stars Wanda Wiley in the role of a tomboy. She dons a baseball uniform and pulls a lot of amusing stuff in a game in which she pitches for the gang of urchins. Later she goes swimming, the hero gets her clothes and makes her promise to kiss him. She consents but steals his car and he has to walk home. She does a lot of other stunts and finally as a hairdresser succeeds in ruining his mother's hair by failing to turn off the current of the permanent wave machine. Everything turns out alright and she is forgiven. There is not much of a plot to this comedy, just a series of adventures, however, they should get laughs from the average spectator.—C. S. S.

"Peeps Into Puzzleland"

(Red Seal—Novelty—740 feet)

An entertaining novelty that will appeal especially to children is Issue B of the Red Seal Pictures Corporation's "Gems of the Screen." By means of trick photography a little girl is shown as playing with a jigsaw puzzle. She dozes, the pieces start moving about and finally form a picture which comes to life. The different subjects include a little kitten, a tray of fruit, a rabbit, a toy man and a lion. The other animals walk out the picture and scamper over the bed clothes then get back into the picture which rearranges itself to form a new one. The subject is ingeniously handled.—C. S. S.

Chadwick Rushes Plans on Third Barrymore Special

PREPARATIONS are going forward in the organization of the producing staff and the selection of players who will support Lionel Barrymore in his third special production for Chadwick Pictures Corporation this season, the titles to be announced within a few days, it was indicated at the Chadwick offices this week. This production will be the seventh in the famous unit, the Chadwick Nine, which this organization is releasing in the independent field this season.

Mr. Barrymore's two earlier pictures for Chadwick Pictures Corporation this season are "Meddling Women," which is enjoying big success everywhere, and "I Am the Man," which has been classed as Mr. Barrymore's best work on the screen. "I Am the Man" has already played many important first runs in the key cities and becomes generally available to exhibitors this month.

"The Street Singer," to be directed by John Gorman, is the next story to go into production—the sixth of the famous independent unit, the Chadwick Nine. It will be made in the East, very probably in New York City.

Officials of the Chadwick organization are now concentrating on the selection of a cast of leading players, announcement of whom will be forthcoming within the next several days. Preparations are being rushed forward so that active production may begin within several weeks.

"The Tom Boy" holds fifth place in the Chadwick Nine. It will be followed by "The Street Singer;" another Lionel Barrymore special, his third on the Chadwick program this season; "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" and "Romance of an Actress."

Next Van Bibber

"Van Bibber's Burglar," the fifth of the series of two-reel comedies adapted from the Van Bibber short stories of Richard Harding Davis, was started this week at the William Fox West Coast studios. George Marshall is directing this series, which has an important place on the Fox short subject schedule.

New Pathe Serial

Pathe announces the completed cast this week on the Malcolm Strauss race-track serial, starring Allene Ray and Johnnie Walker, entitled "Galloping Hoofs." The story is being filmed in the East under the direction of George B. Seitz from an adaptation made by Frank Leon Smith. The supporting cast: J. Barney Sherry, Armand Cortes, William Nally, Walter Lewis, George Nadelli, Albert Rocardi and Ernest Hilliard.

"Hot Water" Record

Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe received a wire from Pathe's Los Angeles Branch Manager, W. H. Jenner, redaing in part: "Mister Albert Kaufman, managing director of Grauman's Metropolitan Theatre, informs that "Hot Water,' opened Saturday, breaking all existing records for one day's business, but on the following day, even this record was broken, making the two biggest days gross in the history of the house."

Raymaker Directs Aubrey

Herman C. Raymaker, for many years a director of comedies, is now directing the Jimmy Aubrey comedies being made for Standard Cinema Corporation and released through Selznick.

EQUIPMENT-CONSTRUCTION-MAINTENANCE

All for One—One for All

THE accessory end of this business is a pretty tough game. The man selling projection machines, seats, screens, floor coverings or what not can give you more grief in a half hour than a film salesman can in a week. And that's going some.

The principal complaint is that it is so hard to educate the exhibitor. The small theater man doesn't realize that his old worn out seats are costing him money every day, you are told. "They can't see the dollar and cents value of good music," an organ chap says.

Jim Jones is going to try to give you one of the reasons why. And at first glance you are going to laugh.

The reason is that there aren't enough accessory advertisers.

"Ha! Ha!" you say, "He's selling something."

Maybe I am. But I am right. Here's the angle:

The manufacturer of a seat who is alone in advertising in the trade papers may figure that he is pretty lucky because the other chair man don't see the gospel of advertising. The projection machine manufacturer who is going it alone may think the same thing.

But they would all sell more chairs, more screens, more organs if ALL of them were advertising. Because EACH would benefit by the educative influence of the other's advertising.

And in the end, what difference does it make if the other fellow sells more goods, provided you sell still MORE?

One lone seat manufacturer in this field is selling the idea of better seating for theater patrons. One lone organ manufacturer is telling the seven thousand reads of The World each week about the cash value of up-to-date music.

They are lucky to have an exclusive audience from that buying power of ten thousand theaters. But they, and their competitors, would all be better off if all would climb on the band wagon and start shouting.

And then KEEP AT IT.

Many an accessory advertiser has stopped advertising just when his message had started to seep into the exhibitor mind.

But that is another story.

Jim Jones

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

The Editor's Trip

Thursday, September 12, I found myself in Cincinnati, en route to Colorado, with a few hours to wait for a train to bear me onward toward the setting sun. Treading streets, familiar in the long ago, my eye met the ornate sign on a large motion picture theatre. I satisfied the rather absurdly modest demand of the bob-haired siren in the box office, entered into its midst and found myself in a commodious and, so far as I was able to see in the semi-gloom, tastefully decorated auditorium. There was a large pipe organ and the theatre is entirely without glare spots. Up to the point of projection there seemed little if anything to merit adverse criticism. The attendants were tastefully uniformed and were very courteous. The seating was comfortable and the ventilation apparently good.

But the Projection!

The picture seemed about the right size for the auditorium, but was distorted out of all semblance to true proportions—so much so, in fact, that it appeared to be nearly, if not quite, square.

This, of course, means that every object therein was also distorted out of true proportion, hence the general effect was not nearly so pleasing as it would be were the picture not thus manhandled by wrong projection angle. The net result of this is that the theatre has not the box office pulling power it would have were the picture projected at a proper angle—an angle not exceeding that approved by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

This is of course no fault of the projectionist, but is the result of the combined error of theatre builders and architects who apparently think that so long as the sides of the picture be made parallel, all ill effects of distortion by a too great projection angle are remedied. This theatre has, as have many, many others, located its projection room in open defiance of the recommendation of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, all projector manufacturer engineering departments and all projection authorities, and for that defiance it will suffer continual loss at its box office so long as it operates.

The Point

The point is just this: Had the projection room been properly located the picture on its screen would have been very much more pleasing; also projection could have been very much more economically accomplished, with a saving of a very respectable sum in power bills each year. Such a location is always possible, provided the architect knows how to plan to get it, and is allowed to do so.

With a few shining exceptions, architects proceed backward in the planning of motion picture theatres, unless some exhibitor who has well balanced ideas as to the placing of the one thing the theatre will have to sell to its patrons—the picture—before its audiences at full 100 per cent. value, obliges them to do otherwise.

Bluebook School

Question No. 143—Explain what effect a sharp side angle view of the screen has on the apparent shape of objects thereon, and tell us why it has that effect.

Question No. 144—Show by sketch how you would advise your manager as to the exact effect of side view angle in the new theatre he is planning, and how you would inform him as to the exact percentage in which objects would be narrowed.

Question No. 145—What effect would distance of front row of seats from screen have on side viewing angle?

Question No. 146—Why is it that objects on the screen appear abnormally tall when viewed from a heavy side angle?

Question No. 147—Exactly what is a "keystone effect," and is there more than one kind?

The motion picture theatre is presumed to be constructed primarily for one thing, and one thing only, viz: to provide a place where a motion picture may be shown to or displayed before audiences. Naturally, since the picture is the one thing the theatre has to sell, it would seem just plain common sense to arrange for its display on the screen in the best possible way, but as a matter of fact in a surprising number of cases that seems to be about the last thing thought of. The average architect plans for symmetrical design and maximum seating capacity. He works wholly and solely to those ends, and literally sticks the heart of the whole business—the projection room—'way up and 'way back, where it will have at least two virtues, viz: it will be entirely out of the way and may be constructed without any sacrifice whatsoever in the matter of seating space. What will happen to projection by reason of this foolish procedure—oh, well, he should worry! If a lot of those seats he has squeezed in remain empty, except on special occasions or on Saturdays, that is no affair of his—or apparently of the exhibitor either.

Cincinnati Not Alone

Cincinnati is far, far from being alone in this mistaken policy. We find the same thing right here on Broadway, and elsewhere, except that the West Coast apparently has, at least to a considerable extent, realized the foolishness of such procedure. You will find a lot of theatres out there with the projection room where it should be, nor have they lost much of anything in seating or anything else in so doing. The architect has located his screen and projection room first, and in proper relation to each other. He has then planned the theatre in accordance with that relation.

But to get back to my story. In the spacious, well planned, but poorly located projection room I found the projector running the show all alone. This was because only one projectionist was on duty, and he was absent from the room on business which I will myself agree could not wait on projection or anything else. There really are two projectionists and perhaps the other man was at supper, I don't know. It was about supper time.

The room is large and has a high ceiling. In fact, aside from its projectionally impossible location there is small fault to find with it. There were four Simplex projectors, a spot and a dissolver. Three of the projectors were equipped with high intensity arcs, and were on regular projection duty. The fourth was equipped with incandescent, and was used to screen productions for inspection. There was an enclosed rewinder, and a film storage reservoir, with separate fireproof compartments for each reel.

The Joke

And now here was the joke of it all: The picture was by no means a large one, and I was astonished when told by the projectionist that they were using 125 amperes and high intensity. The screen had not the brilliancy it should have had with seventy-five amperes and ordinary arcs. My first thought was: there is something radically wrong with the projector optical systems—in fact I still believe the optical systems might be improved. Incidentally I saw no lens chart on the walls, which still more inclines me to that view.

But the joke of it is that the projection circuit wires are being used as a rheostat. They were so hot that when I touched them I removed my fingers real soon. Just what the Cincinnati inspectors are thinking of to allow such a dangerous condition to exist I don't know, but there it is—or then was, anyhow, and the projectionist told me the manager had been informed of it several times. Possibly he does not understand that there probably has already been quite enough electric power wasted in those overloaded wires to put in two or three new sets of wires, with constant possibility of serious results through overheating and fire.

The point is just this: Leaving the item of danger out of it, with wires of sufficient capacity, using the power now consumed, the screen would be very, very much brighter, or the same screen brilliancy could be had with far, far less current consumption, and ALL THAT POWER WASTED IN HEATING THE CIRCUIT WIRES IS REGISTERED ON THE METER AND MUST BE PAID FOR, make no mistake about that.

Another Theatre

I entered another, small theatre, which joyfully announced "All Seats 10 Cents." After one good slant at the screen I departed, with the idea that the price was possibly a bit high. I would suppose that with high grade projection this little theatre might fill all its seats at at least double the present price.

In another theatre, admission 20 cents, the

Bluebook School—Answers 113-117

Question No. 113—Is the light source inverted at the spot, and can you tell us, using drawing if you wish to, on what lens action you base your answer?

Daniel Constantino, Easton, Pa.; Chas. Armentrout, Mason City, Iowa; John Griffith, Ansonia, Conn.; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; P. E. Thomas, Creston, Iowa and Charles I. Orenburg, Chicago, were the only ones to make good on this one. In fact for some unknown reason several of those who have long been sending in correct replies are absent from this series. Don't know why, as most of them are back on the next.

Both the replies of Griffith and Thomas are excellent as to their correctness, but I think that of Hanover is somewhat easier to understand. I will therefore publish it, supplemented by a drawing belonging with Thomas' answer, for which I trust he will forgive me. Hanover says:

Yes, the light source is inverted at the spot. To analyze and understand the light ray action between light source and spot, let us remove the condenser and in its place substitute a metal plate with a pin hole in its center.

A ray emanating from the center of the light source and striking the pin hole will go straight through and form the axis of the cone of light formed on the image side of the plate. It will strike at exactly the center of the resultant image. The cone of light on the image side of the plate may be examined if smoke be blown into it.

Now use your reasoning powers. We know that light rays travel in straight lines when traveling through a medium (air in this case) of even density, hence all rays from the source which strike the pin hole will pass straight through to the image. Get a piece of paper, draw a vertical line, say 3/8 inch long, representing the light source. Opposite it, removed three inches, draw a vertical line representing the metal slide and in its center leave a slight gap representing the pin hole. Now on opposite side of this draw a vertical line representing your screen. Now draw a straight line from the top of the source, the bottom of the source and its center, through the hole, and you will see why the light source is inverted in the case of the pin hole.

The action of a simple lens is exactly the same. A ray from the center of the light source striking the center of the condenser will pass straight on through to the center of the image, which for the purpose we will call the spot, though the actual image is "strung along" for a considerable distance in the light beam. All rays emanating from the center of the source and striking the collector lens will be refracted and converged (except for the item spherical aberration) to the center of the image, except that they will be enlarged in proportion to the magnification of the image over the source. Centrals rays from each and every other point in the condenser acts precisely as they act through the pin hole, except that they are refracted at each glass surface, the final refraction being such as will send forward the ray to its appointed place, exactly the same as did the pin hole, spherical aberration and magnification being disregarded. All other rays from the same point of the source which reach the collector lens being refracted in such a way that they will reach the same point in the image as did the central ray.

To this answer I am appending the sketch by brother Thomas, to which I have taken the liberty of adding broken line A to represent the central ray friend Hanover has spoken of.

Question No. 114 and 115 combined—Give us the best explanation you are able to of the reasons for the ghost zone in the condenser beam, showing, by drawing, what its shape is, and why it is that when the condenser is advanced too far toward the film, a ghost appears in the center of the screen.

Constantino, Armentrout, Griffith and Thomas came through. I shall again mix matters by publishing Griffith's answer, with the drawing of Brother Thomas. Griffith says:

In a light beam projected from an uncorrected condenser, such as a plano convex or meniscus bi-convex combination, the light is not evenly distributed throughout its length, owing to the fact that the rays passing through the outer zones of the condenser, having greater incident angle, converge to a focus nearer the lens than do those passing through the more central zone. This causes the light to be distributed in circles, instead of being spread evenly over the different cross-sections of the beam. The light is only evenly distributed in two positions, viz: at the face of the converging lens and at the spot.

The second part of the question is somewhat ambiguous (good word, anyhow, John. —Ed.). If the condenser be advanced toward the aperture so that the film cuts through a part of the beam where the light is unevenly distributed, then we would get a ghost on the screen. If, on the other hand, the condenser is advanced toward the film, and the crater position is so adjusted that it will place the spot correctly on the cooling plate, then there probably will be no ghost. If, however, the projection lens did not have sufficient diameter to accommodate the greater diameter of the light beam caused by advancing the condenser, then instead of a dark ghost we would have high-lights in the center of the screen.

There, darn it, that answer is, I believe, correct, but I don't especially fancy it because I don't believe many of you will understand it clearly. I am printing the drawing sent with Thomas' answer. I think you will get a better explanation from pages 178 and 179 of the Bluebook. True, it says about the same thing Griffith says, but I believe you will get a better understanding of the whole matter from it than from John's reply. John says he "can't see figure 45, page 179, but all the same it comes from high authority on such matters and I believe it is correct.

Question No. 116—To what may we attribute the fact that the same print of a film may show great "depth" in the screen image in one theatre, and very much less in another theatre?

Constantino, Griffith, Hanover, Thomas, Armentrout and Wm. C. Bailey, Savannah, Ga., replied with at least a fair degree of correctness to this one, but Griffith gummed things up, darn 'im, by injecting a lot of new dope into it. I'm going to publish the replies of both Thomas and Griffith. Thomas says:

It depends upon the intensity of the light source, angle of projection, size of image, projection distance, surface of screen, quality and arrangement of condenser lenses, quality of projection lens and its free diameter. Also, last but NOT least, the auditorium lighting.

Assuming two theatres to have a light source of equal brilliancy, and that the optical train elements are the same in all respects, with identically the same size image at exactly the same projection distance, but the screen in one theatre is not suited to the requirements of that particular house, and the optical line-up of one was not correct, or the lenses are dirty. The other theatre has the type of screen surface adapted to its requirements and has gained additional screen illumination by trimming down the rotating shutter blades as much as is possible, or has stopped down the projection lens if the conditions permit of it. It has the lenses perfectly clean, and the auditorium lighting is better from the projection viewpoint. Oh, Nell's bells! I give up!

The situation might be summed up thusly: Either due to the projectionists' lack of knowledge of projection in all its phases, or to the indifference of the management in supplying proper equipment necessary to get the best results the difference exists.

There, I published that, not because it covers the point I had in mind (The fact that a projection lens of too small diameter to admit the light beam sets up uneven illumination, with resultant lack in "depth" of the picture), but because it shows many things which might really affect the matter.

Griffith opens up a new line of thought in his reply. He says:

Before attempting to answer Question 116 and 117 some explanation as to what we think about depth would perhaps be in order.

A flat image projected from a flat object cannot be said to have any actual depth, hence any apparent depth in the screen image must be in the nature of an optical illusion, the cause of which we may well inquire into.

Distance has a double effect upon objects with relation to their viewing. First, distance decreases the apparent size of objects, as we all well know. Second, distance decreases the apparent brightness of objects. The word "apparent" is used because, of course, the actual brightness remains at a fixed value.

When we make a reproduction of a scene, as in projection, and faithfully portray the apparent decrease in the size and brightness of objects therein, we get the illusion of distance or depth in the flat reproduction, because it was distance and depth in the original object photographed which caused objects in the background to appear smaller, and to have less brilliant illumination.

Both the area and brightness of objects are apparently decreased inversely as the square of the distance from the point from which they are viewed. What then would cause lack of apparent depth in a screen image?

Anything which operates to prevent a perfect reproduction of the scene as it was viewed by the optical eye of the motion picture camera will do it, and that includes poor definition, distortion, unevenness of illumination, etc.

DISTORTION CAUSES OBJECTS TO LOSE THEIR RELATIVE SIZE WITH RELATION TO EACH OTHER. Uneven illumination operates to cause objects to lack true relation to each other in the item of illumination, thus at least in a measure ruining the effect which produces the illusion of distance, or "depth."

Well, John, all that sounds mighty good, but will have to be shoved into the "think mill' and examined considerably, in order to determine to just what, if any, extent you may be in error. I would be glad to hear from you all as to your reaction to this argument. Personally I believe the blurring of objects in the distance has more to do with it than lack of relative illumination.

Question No. 117—Is evenness of illumination essential to "depth" in the screen image?

This question is covered by the answer to question No. 116. It most certainly is.

picture was brilliant, but a glaring, "chalky" white. The projectionist might well experiment in toning that high intensity light down. The picture was distorted almost square by wrong projection room location. The projector optical system was pretty awful, either in its component parts or in their lack of proper adjustment, since the screen had a very brilliant center, with comparatively dull edges.

I noticed signs advertising "Broken Blossoms," "Thief of Bagdad" and other big productions, mostly at fifty-cent admissions. Down near the depot I saw the poster-covered fronts of five houses, all having a straight ten-cent admission—a thing not, so far as I know, to be found in any city east of the Alleghany mountains.

After even this brief visit to Cincinnati I think I can understand why the projectionists of that city have never evidenced the slightest interest in a lecture on projection. They may say the conditions I saw were no fault of theirs, but that is, I think, not quite true. A profession of any sort is respected very largely in proportion to the respect shown for it by those who follow it, and up to this time I must say I have seen very little evidence that Cincinnati projectionists regard projection as anything more than merely the mere operation of a mechanism—threading, oiling and adjusting its parts. As I have often pointed out, almost anyone, with just a little practice, may do that acceptably, BUT to project motion pictures so that they will have the full possible value on the screen requires real ability, brains and knowledge.

A Real Treat

Arriving at St. Louis, I found waiting for me, through the courtesy of S. E. Cotter, vice-president and general manager of the Wabash Railway System, an order instructing engine men and conductors to permit me to ride on the locomotive of train No. 3 (one of their fast passenger trains) between St. Louis and Kansas City.

By way of explanation, it was on this piece of track I did my last railroading, in 1893, and it was here my father, a locomotive engineer, met the grim reaper in a collision in the spring of that year.

I found Engine 698 at the head end of Train 3, in charge of Engineer G. N. Nelson and Fireman A. D. Wells, both of whom extended every possible courtesy, though the third man on a passenger locomotive is, as I well know, nothing short of a nuisance. I rode with them for eighty-five miles, and then retired to the depths of the Pullman.

At Moberly engines were changed and I rode out as far as Brunswick, Missouri, with Engineer Marvin Rowland and Fireman A. Smith, both of them mighty fine fellows. Both Engineers Rowland and Nelson remembered father very well, and Rowland remembered me. We talked of old times for almost the entire distance. I cannot remember the time when I enjoyed anything so thoroughly as I did viewing the scenes of long ago, every mile of which was laden with memories. At three points Engineer Nelson pointed out the spot where friends of other days had "checked out" in wrecks of various kinds. Had I myself continued railroading, doubtless ere now they would be saying, "Remember Richardson? Here is where he 'got his' the night his engine turned over," or something of that sort. I quit railroading, and here I still am, so that's that. My compliments to General Manager Cotter, to Engineers Nelson and Rowland, and to Firemen Wells and Smith. I shall long remember their courtesy and kindness.

Kansas City

Forty miles east of Kansas City a freight wreck had the line blocked, and as a result I missed connections at Kansas City. Conditions were such that it seemed to lay over there 24 hours, which I did. In some cities I would have utilized the time for arranging a meeting of the men, and thus would have tried to accomplish some good. This, however, was Kansas City and Kansas City projectionists have repeatedly refused to be interested in lectures on projection, as I know by past experience, and, anyhow, I was pretty tired. I did, however, call up the office of the Local, just to say hello, but no officer was there at the time. I then visited two really magnificent theatres, one of which uses both vaudeville and motion pictures. This theatre was truly a temple of beauty, magnificent in its appointments and, I believe, ably managed.

Its vaudeville was excellent, but its picture "not so good," because of distortion due to the up-high, 'way-back projection room location. The projection angle is far, far beyond that approved by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It is too bad that this magnificent theatre is thus handicapped in its motion picture program, especially where there really was not need for it, had the architect worked intelligently in his planning.

Work Good

The work of the projectionists was very good, though I have a grave suspicion that the optical systems of the projectors might be changed to the considerable improvement of the screen image. One cannot judge with certainty in a matter of this kind, however, merely by viewing so hugely distorted a picture once. Certainly projectionists in such a theatre ought to be able to judge of the matter themselves, but certainly the screen image leaves considerable to be desired, even in so badly distorted a picture.

Another thing: the Kansas City men declare themselves to be, and insist that they are merely "Operators of Moving Picture Machines," hence I am justified in assuming them to have no large knowledge of the optical system of the projector. If they have, then they enter into the realm of higher things, and are at least in some degree projectionists.

I visited another of Kansas City's theatres, this time strictly a motion picture theatre. It truly is a magnificent palace of amusement, with dignified, severely beautiful facade, a richly furnished and decorated interior and a large pipe organ, in charge of a very competent organist. It has comfortable seats, a large orchestra and an elaborate ventilation system.

Motion pictures comprise its entire program, aside from a short number by the orchestra. In other words, the entire income from this very large investment is entirely dependent upon what is projected to its screen, and THE MANNER IN WHICH IT IS PROJECTED THERE.

Not So Good

As a paying patron of this theatre I am bound to say that at no time during that portion of the program I remained to see was the screen illumination free from discoloration, and at times it was very, very bad indeed. I talked with its Chief Projectionist, who blamed the trouble on the type of lamps used. Said they would not rotate the positive carbon uniformly. Said he had repeatedly asked for their replacement, but the management had failed to comply with the request.

I do not care to make further comment, except to ask YOU if you think that in a city where such conditions are tolerated in so fine a theatre, there is much importance attached to the high grade projection?

"Stop, Look, Listen!"

On one small theatre I saw this sign: "Stop! Look! Listen! Vaudeville and Musical Comedy IN ADDITION TO REGULAR MOTION PICTURE PROGRAM. Change Daily. 10c All Seats 10c." Certainly Kansas City show-shop owners believe in giving full value. They must believe in full measure, heaped up and overflowing, or it is the basket filled with runts, with a layer of fine fruit on top? I'm sure I don't know, but it must be one or the other.

In one place I saw a row of three theatres, their fronts almost hidden by posters. One had a 10 and 15 cent admission price. The rest were all straight ten cents for any seat.

Denver

After visiting my son Carl, in Ridgway, Colorado, inspecting and approving four grandchildren whom I had up until then not seen, and spending a week with them, I started on the long trek eastward.

Train accommodations delayed me some hours in Denver, so I just naturally gravitated to Denver's Little Great White Way, Curtis Street, where I paid a rather hurried visit to several theatres.

I found projection far from being up to the high mark I had expected. Everyone I talked with frankly agreed that decidely more "pep" was needed in Denver theatres. One of the largest strictly motion picture theatres in Curtis street is operating on a ten-cents-for-any-seat basis. Gosh! I nearly swallowed my Adam's Apple when I saw that! It is putting a very badly discolored picture on the screen, due, so the projectionist informed me, to the fact that the high intensity arcs could not be held steady with the motor generators in use.

If that is true, for the love of Mike throw out either the motor generators or the high intensity arcs. A far better result could be put on the screen with the ordinary arcs. In proof of his statement he said that when he took current from the city mains, through rheostats, the light was steady and brilliant, with no discoloration whatsoever.

To add to the sum total of it the management has an organ keyboard right smack in the center and just under the screen, WITH A BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT PLAYING ON THE MUSIC. I sat down to look at the picture for a few moments and was obliged to hold my hat in front of me to shield my eyes from that (deleted by censor) organ light.

As a general proposition the projection angle in the theatres visited was not bad, though in a few instances it was. Powers and Simplex projectors hold the fort in Denver.

Manager Williams

I met Manager Charles Williams of the Fox Plaza, who impressed me as an able manager. We talked for quite a bit. I am convinced that in him William Fox has a valuable asset.

In the course of my wanderings I met Brother J. Christman, who impressed me as a real projectionist—a man possessed of energy, ability and ideas. He showed me three or four improvements he had himself effected in his equipment. The theatre where he works unfortunately has a very heavy projection angle, but the auditorium lighting is good. There are no glare spots to annoy the eyes of the patron. The projectors are equipped with American low intensity lamps (reflector type lamp), which Projectionist Christman assures me are delivering the goods to his entire satisfaction. He is using 22 amperes and is getting excellent screen illumination.

Projectionists Roy Carlson and Mr. Davis (Unfortunately I did not jot down the first name), whom I also met, are, I think, energetic, progressive projectionists. They have a well-ventilated projection room of ample size, but it is so located that the projection angle is bad—far in excess of that approved by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Their work is therefore hampered by heavy distortion. They use three Power projectors, a dissolver and a Power spot lamp.

Remarkable Performance

Projectionist Carlson directed my attention to the fact that the projectors have run twelve hours a day for three years without repairs of any sort whatsoever, even the original adjustment of the intermittent movements not having been altered. He credited this truly remarkable performance in part to the lubricant used. It is "Keystone Grease, grade B." They use this grease on the gears, as well as in the intermittent movement oil well.

Some Hole

One thing I noticed in all Denver theatres visited, which would give heart failure to New York theatre inspectors and the "Powers That Be," viz: The front projection room wall has but one opening, but that one is something like 24 inches from top to bottom, and from seven to ten feet long. No, it is NOT covered with glass, or anything else. Gosh, but wouldn't the officials of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City, or the State Police of Massachusetts have the "willies" if they found such an "'orribly dangerous condition" in a projection room in their bailiwicks! But the Denver officials, with whom I had a long and most pleasant chat, don't find it dangerous, or even objectionable, AND the Denver projectionist does NOT have to squint through a sort of an enlarged knot hole with one eye in order to see the screen.

In my opinion the twelve-inch-square observation port represents one extreme, while the huge opening allowed in Denver represents the other. There is no real need for either of them. An opening sixteen inches wide by, say, twenty-four inches high is ample for all purposes, if correctly located with relation to the projection angle. The only real objection to the unnecessarily large opening is the fact that all noise in the projection room will be more or less audible to that portion of the audience seated near the projection room.

Speed Law

But the Denver authorities do exercise authority to curb real abuses, because the speed maniac runs afoul of an ordinance which prohibits the projection of any motion picture at a rate of speed in excess of, as I remember it, 85 feet per minute. That is, if you ask me, good law and just plain common sense.

I found a basin and running water in nearly all the projection rooms, but few, if any, rooms are equipped with toilet facilities. A law or rule was passed some while back making the installation of a toilet room compulsory, but some power succeeded in getting it made inoperative. Whoever it was ought, in plain justice, to be made to work for one year, six to eight hours a day, fastened in a hot room without access to toilet facilities.

In no room visited did I find any means for carrying the crater at its most efficient angle—fifty-five degrees to the optical axis. Such inefficient, wasteful practice is small credit to the projectionists using the ordinary arc.

Sioux Falls

Before starting West, the Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, Motion Picture Projectionists local union, IATSE & MPMO, No. 556, had arranged to have me visit their city, the local paying the very considerable expense incident of the side trip from Omaha.

I found Sioux Falls to be a thriving, prosperous community of about 35,000 souls. It is a charming city, with wide, clean streets which stretch across gently undulating hills. I had the pleasure of taking dinner at the home of G. W. Bennewitz, President, Local Union 556, and can personally testify to the fact that you who have not partaken of one of Mrs. Bennewitz's home brewed banquets are just plain out of luck.

Brother K. G. Blood, Projectionist Princess Theatre, bubbled me over the city in his really classy Studebaker Six. First off he rode me out a couple of miles to a point where we could view the whole city. It was a good view, and maybe the view was all he had in mind, BUT the South Dakota state penitentiary main entrance lies just across the road from that point. Well, mebby the view was all, but I've a suspicion that perhaps it was by way of a gentle warning to be careful what I say in print about him. Anyhow, the view is a good one and the state pen is 1,500 miles away now, so I'll jolly well say what I darned please.

Theatres Visited

While in Sioux Falls I visited all but one of its seven theatres, almost all of which are of the "storeroom" type, seating, for the most part, about 400. The pictures are small, though amply large for the auditoriums. For the most part they are clean-cut and brilliant. Most of the projection rooms were of surprisingly ample proportions, when one considers the type of theatre. All the projection rooms were painted either dead black or a very dark color, which is projectionally excellent. In each of them I found a very complete assortment of tools, invariably neatly racked on the wall. The rooms and equipment were clean and orderly. If they all keep them as clean as when Richardson was there, there will be no criticism on that point possible.

I met and talked with the managers of several theatres. They all reported business as rather quiet just then.

The Colonial Theatre, Milton Ray, Manager; W. F. Voght, Projectionist, has an excellent projection room, with dead black walls. Powers projectors are used. The room has good ventilation. The rewinder is geared down, though not nearly enough. The theatre is pretty and well lighted. Admission 10 and 30 cents.

The Olympia Theatre is a storeroom type house, and for that type of theatre is very good indeed. It seats 387. I met O. C. Adams, Owner and Manager, whom I found to be a very genial gentleman. Clayton Akin is Projectionist. He is Secretary of Local No. 556. The picture is 13 feet 4 inches wide and the projection distance 117 feet. The picture is brilliant. Simplex projectors are used. The light source is an ordinary arc, using 55 amperes. In the projection room—rubber at this, you of the sweat-box—I found a lot of flowers, most of them in bloom. I was assured they were NOT "imported" just for my benefit, but really belonged there.

The Liberty Theatre, C. Sawyer, Manager; P. A. Hagen, Projectionist, seats 365. It uses Mazda equipped Simplex projectors. I enjoyed a pleasant chat with Manager Sawyer and Projectionist Hagen.

At the Princess, J. O. Sholseth, Manager; K. G. Blood, Projectionist, I found everything in good shape, with an excellent picture on the screen.

Bennewitz at Strand

Bennewitz is projectionist at the Strand. I met his owner-manager, who is an able theatre man and who believes in employing a real projectionist, permitting him to do his work without undue interference, so long as he delivers the goods acceptably. May his tribe increase! The Strand is marking time, waiting to get a new lease. As soon as this is accomplished there will be extensive improvements, both in the theatre and in the projection equipment.

Bennewitz is a real progressive. One look around his equipment is quite sufficient to show that he has knowledge and ideas, and the ability to apply them in practice. I shall not stop to describe the various things he showed me, except one. We will expect from him a complete description of them all as soon as he gets settled in the new quarters which are to come following the lease.

The one thing I will describe is a pair of pliers he has for removing taper pins from sprockets. The sketch shows the idea. He secured a pair of pliers—rather smal lones—with jaws curved as per sketch. In the bottom of ONE of the curves he drilled a hole about ⅛ inch in diameter. The rest is simple. When you want to remove a taper pin —why waste energy explaining the obvious?

At eleven o'clock all the projectionists, and I guess all the managers, too, foregathered at the Strand to listen to Your Humble Servant discourse concerning various things having to do with projection. Harold Miller, and one other man, whose name I unfortunately did not put down, came all the way from Huron —140 miles they said it was—to attend the meeting. They and several others who came from other towns and cities were kind enough to express themselves as well pleased that they made the trip. Brother Miller is projectionist at the Lyric Theatre in Huron. There are three theatres in that city.

I shall retain pleasant memories of my visit to Sioux Falls and esteemed it a real privilege to meet brother Bennewitz and the other men personally.

Omaha

Omaha, the queen city of the plains, gave me a very genuine surprise, also at least one good, hearty laugh. I had a short time to wait between trains, and of course, employed it by once-overing as many of Omaha's motion picture palaces as I was able to in the time at my disposal.

The word "palaces" is used advisedly. First, I went to the Rialto, managed by August Herman, who was once upon a time a motion picture projectionist. The Rialto is a truly beautiful theatre both inside and out. Its facade, of pressed brick paneled with light yellow stone, faces on two streets, with the main entrance at the corner. It is only doing the Rialto plain justice to say that I have seldom seen a more pleasing theatre front. The foyer is done in very beautifully veined Alaska marble—as beautiful as anything I have ever seen in veined marble. The rest rooms, etc., are sumptuously furnished, and the furnishings combine utility and good taste. The interior of the theatre is, it seems to me, all that could be desired in beauty of decoration and symmetry.

After a chat with Manager Herman, I was asked if I would not like to see the projection room. Of course I said yes, but did not quite know what to make of it when he led the way into the basement. The projection room is opposite the center of the screen, hence there is no distortion of the picture. One must enter the basement and go from thence up into the projection room.

The picture was clear-cut, and except for some slight discoloration around the edges, which neither Projectionist Clyde Bluebaugh, Manager Herman nor myself was able to determine the cause of. The screen illumination was brilliant. In fact, but for that slight discoloration, I would have regarded the work of projection as beyond criticism. The high intensity is used, and I have a suspicion (a suspicion, mind you, only) that at least some of the trouble is due to dampness in the carbons. I suggested to Projectionist Bluebaugh that he try drying the carbons thoroughly. The Cinephor condenser is used, with 7½-inch collector lens. Great trouble is experienced with the collector lens breakage. I suggested that another lens be given a trial.

The Rialto is truly a temple of the photo play, a distinct credit to Omaha, and an asset to the motion picture industry. James Bear is the other projectionist. My compliments to Manager Herman and Projectionists Bear and Bluebaugh. I am glad to have seen so beautiful a theatre and such excellent screen results.

World Theatre

Across the street from the Rialto is the World Theatre, devoted to vaudeville and motion pictures. It was here I met with one of the most amusing experiences I have butted into for a long while. I was welcomed cordially by Arthur Frudenfeld, manager. After talking a bit, he, being engaged, suggested that I "make myself at home," which I proceeded to do by first looking over the 2,500-seat auditorium, noting the beauty of its decorations and the excellence of its seating arrangements, etc. Incidentally, the facade of the "World" is of cream-colored stone, both impressive and beautiful.

I mounted to the projection room, which is spacious and apparently well ventilated. American reflector type lamps are used and the screen illumination is both white and fairly brilliant. I did not view much of the projection, but what I did see put me in a frame of mind to compliment Projectionist Paden. The projection angle is very heavy, and the projectionist must work against that handicap.

Now Comes the Laugh

Reaching the projection room, after waiting a bit, I asked the projectionist for his name and initials. He was quite busy at the time and I did not care to distract his attention by introducing myself, and now comes the laugh. In fifteen years I have never before had even the most hard-boiled enemy, of which I have a goodly number, and am incidentally rather proud of them, too, try his best to convey a deliberate affront. When I asked for his name, he countered, in a very gruff tone of voice, with "Whatcha lookin' for?" whereupon I showed him my card. I do not really know whether he looked at it or not, but guess he must have. His single comment was: "Goodbye," which he repeated every time I spoke thereafter, until I retired from his august presence backward of course, bowing and humbly pulling my forelock.

I think I must have, some time in the past, stepped on brother Paden's toes rather heavily. It was a new experience, and quite sufficiently amusing to give me a good, hearty laugh—which is always worth a whole lot.

In Chicago I put in four days attending the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' Fall meeting, but did not enter a single theatre. The reason was that the reports on Chicago projection are so universally bad, that I feared if I did visit theatres I would just have to "roast," and that I don't like to do. Next stop New York City, and now I'm very much on the job again. The trip took almost a month and covered approximately 5,000 miles.

Simplex Changes

During my recent trip to Colorado, I was rather amazed at the various rumors floating around concerning certain changes that have recently been made in the personnel of the Precision Machine Company, manufacturers of the Simplex Projector.

I was "informed" by various ones that the Simplex was "going out of business," and the price of the Simplex was going to be $1,350, etc., etc., all of which is "information" which has no foundation in fact.

The real facts in the matter are as follows:

Mr. Harley L. Clarke of Chicago, Ill., has become president of the Precision Machine Co., and Ed. S. Porter, who has resigned as president, becomes chairman of the

An Apology

I feel that I owe many of those who have been answering the Bluebook School questions correctly with consistent regularity an apology. I shall not take any more trips when such a thing is on, as my absence has balled things up pretty badly. I find, for instance, that in the confusion I laid one big bundle of Bluebook School answers aside to give them attention, and the "laid aside" was done too gosh danged well. I just found them. Then, too, there were other somewhat similar happenings. No, never again! On examination I find that Fell, Sommermeyer, Constantino, Dobson and the rest of the "regulars" have really sent in right answers to pretty much all the questions up to 118, at which number I can now again take up the untangled threads and proceed. I hope you will forgive me, as it is the first time I have really taken off in years—and on even this trip I did do some work.

Board of Directors of the Precision Machine Company. This was occasioned by Mr. Porter requiring more time to take care of his other extensive interests in the motion picture field. Mr. W. C. Michel, assistant to President Harley L. Clarke, will be in active charge of the Precision Machine Company's factory. Mr. W. E. Green remains as sales manager of the organization.

Considerable sums of money have already been expended by the new management in improving the plant of the Precision Machine Company, which will remain located as heretofore at 317 East 34th street, New York City.

The rumor floating about that either the plant or the manufacture of the Simplex Projector will be removed to Chicago is just plain rumor—there is nothing to it.

Standard Maintained

I am assured that the high standard of the Simplex Projectors will be maintained, and that the past policy pursued by Mr. Porter in adding improvements from time to time will be continued.

When the management took over the business of the Precision Machine Company, it was decided that good business management demanded a moderate increase in the price of the projector itself with the hope that the company may show some return to its stockholders.

The prices range from $745 for the motor driven projector with the regular lamp house and lamp to $815 for the motor driven Type "S." So you see you cannot depend upon rumors which have placed the new price at all the way from $1,000 to almost $1,400. With regard to the price, it must of course be noted that where an exhibitor wants a lot of special equipment, the charge will be higher in proportion. In my judgment, the prices quoted are not too high—as a matter of fact, they are still lower than they ought to be. I have for a long time said that the present really splendid projectors put out by our leading projector manufacturers ought to sell for at least $1,000. The fact that none of the manufacturers have made any money proves this.

The foregoing, gentlemen, tells the actual facts pertaining to the recent change in the Precision Machine Company. They were obtained directly from the management.

This article was dictated in the presence of Mr. W. C. Michel and was approved by Mr. Clarke, in order that there be no possibility of error.

Mr. Harley L. Clarke has been particularly interested in educational films for schools, colleges, etc. Since its organization he has been an active head of the Society of Visual Education. Mr. Clarke is also owner and president of the Acme Motion Picture Projector Company as well as one or two other concerns manufacturing motion picture projection equipment.

Los Angeles Elks Club to Install $65,000 Robert-Morton Organ

THAT the modern theatre organ is fast becoming accepted as the greatest medium for the all around musical performance, and that California leads in the buying of expensive musical instruments, is again evidenced by the announcement that the B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 99 of Los Angeles have contracted with The Photo Player Company for a Robert-Morton Unit Organ to cost $65,000.

The new organ will represent the very last, final word in a modern pipe organ. In addition to being one of the largest, if not the largest complete unit organ, in the world, this Robert-Morton will include a separate complete "floating" string division, which will reproduce the string section of a large symphony orchestra. It is claimed that the voicing will be entirely superior to anything as yet attempted along this line.

The organ will be manufactured in its entirety at the California factories, the Robert-Morton branch of The Photo Player Company, and will be installed in the new Elks Temple at Park View and Sixth Streets, facing West Lake Park. Many motion picture stars, prominent exhibitors, directors, producers and others well known in the motion picture life of Southern California and the world are members of this famous Los Angeles Elks Lodge No. 99.

Western New York Exhibitors Building Many New and Splendid Picture Houses

MUCH theatre building is going on in Western New York towns this fall. By next spring most of the smaller towns in the Buffalo territory will be able to boast of first-class picture houses. Ground has been broken this week for the new theatre which George J. Biehler is building in Hamburg. This will cost about $125,000. The frontage will be 55 feet and the depth 160 feet. The ground floor will contain two modern stores, one on each side of the entrance to the theatre lobby, which will be built of art tile and marble.

Passing through heavy mahogany doors, inlaid with plate glass, one will reach the auditorium, which will seat 1,000 with space in reserve for 200 additional seats. There will be a spacious stage at the end of the auditorium where the latest type of silver screen will be placed, with beautiful draperies hiding it from view and protecting it until show time, when the draperies will be withdrawn by electricity from the projection room. The fire and panic precautions are approved by all state laws and it will be possible to empty the auditorium in three minutes.

A large basement under the front portion will contain the high-voltage electrical fittings and the heating and ventilating plants. This system will be thoroughly modern and will assure comfort to all, either in winter or summer. Directly off the auditorium rest rooms will be provided for men and women and furnished elaborately. The entrance to the theatre will have a beautiful marquise extending to the curb line to protect patrons from inclement weather. On the second floor front there will be seven offices and back of these will be the projection booth. There will be a basement under the stage for the accommodation of the musicians. A multiple player piano and organ will be installed. Bley & Lyman are the architects, C. J. Meyer the builder and John A. Gross the surveyor. Mr. Biehler is now operating the Palace Theatre in Hamburg.

Sam Trapasso and Company of Niagara Falls will build a new theatre at East Falls street and Portage road. The company now operates the Eugenia Theatre in the Cataract city. The plans, prepared by Albert Elia, architect and builder of the Amendola Theatre at Pine avenue and Fifteenth street, call for a house seating 1,400 and a 25-foot stage. There will be a mezzanine floor and a balcony.

The new Babcock Theatre in Bath will be opened Thanksgiving week by Associated Theatres, Inc., of East Rochester, who control a chain of houses in Western New York.

The new Rialto in Lockport, which is being constructed by the Schine Theatrical Corporation at Pine and Walnut streets, will be ready for the public in a few weeks.

Plans have been approved for the new State in Elmira. They were drawn by Leon H. Lempert & Son of Rochester. The State will seat 2,500.

The Olympic in Buffalo which is being operated by Universal, has been undergoing renovation and is being redecorated in front. The house is now under the management of E. O. Weinberg and is enjoying excellent business.

The Zicofe Cooperation of Buffalo, composed of Fred M. Zimmerman, Maurice Cohen and George Ferguson, has just opened the new Grand in Westfield. Clare Meecham, formerly at the Legion Theatre in Wayland, is manager.

Work has commenced on the big new Shea picture palace in Main street, Buffalo. This theatre will be the finest in this end of the state and will cost several million dollars. Its seating capacity will be close to the 5,000 mark and it will be the last word in equipment, decoration, accommodation for patrons, music, etc. The orchestra will have a personnel of at least 65.

Projection Inspection

SOME months ago MOTION PICTURE NEWS conducted a campaign for better prints, one of the recommendations being the appointment of projection inspectors who would visit theatres in the various territories and point out to exhibitors how improvements could be made in putting the picture on the screen.

Obviously, the success of this service would depend primarily in the attitude of exhibitors. If they adopted the suggestions, all would be well. And that is precisely what has happened in the great majority of cases.

Information coming to The News from an unquestioned source shows that exhibitors, in the main, make no objections to inspection or repairs. All that is required is a little diplomacy on the part of the projection inspector.

In several parts of the country, projection inspectors have been employed by the Film Boards of Trade, and are actively at work. One of these men declares that he "has inspected over 500 houses so far and they all seem to welcome my visits."

As regards the value of this service to print condition, it had been found that exhibitors, instead of complaining as heretofore about poor prints, are now, in many instances, commending the exchanges. No doubt the exchanges themselves have taken more care with prints. It is also just as true that, as projection machines are kept in better condition by inspection service, so the status of prints must improve

The universal need of such a service is thus demonstrated. We hope it will be extended in this country until it is in operation in every locality.

The industry cannot deliver its product to the public successfully unless mechanical needs in the theatre are taken care of properly.

Good projection and a clear picture on the screen are vital links in the studio-to-public chain.

Navigator

THE story of this great box-office sensation is being written in packed houses from Coast to Coast. You owe it to yourself to get in on the big money. Here's an opportunity you can't afford to pass up!

A Record "Buster"

Buster Keaton in "The Navigator," a Metro-Goldwyn picture, broke the Capitol Theatre's record for a single day's receipts Sunday, October 12th, by doing a business of $14,796.70. This surpasses any previous Sunday, New Years Day, Thanksgiving Day, Washington's Birthday, or any other ho liday in the history of this theatre.

And on Monday the receipts were $13,184.85.

The total for Sunday and Monday then is $27,981.55. Which is certainly a Record "Buster."

Keaton Film Big All Week—"America" Folds Up in Second Week at Imperial

San Francisco, Oct. 14.

With the exception of "The Navigator," starring Buster Keaton at the Warfield, business last week was nothing to brag about among the downtown houses. The fact that the San Francisco Opera had just closed an unusually successful season is regarded by most of the managers as the cause for the drop.

The Warfield opened with a bang, doing practically a turnaway business with the Keaton film, and the balance of the week piled up receipts that stand up with the biggest money getters this house has had.

WHAT IS "THE WHITE LIST" YOU'VE BEEN hearing about?

WELL, IN THE FIRST PLACE, IT IS UNIVERSAL'S newest list of pictures—twenty-one of them—and I honestly believe the biggest and best group ever produced by any company at any time.

SO, "THE WHITE LIST" IS TWENTY-ONE pictures made for white exhibitors who are eager to give their customers white treatment.

EXCELLENT STORIES, CHOSEN FROM HUNdreds upon hundreds of books, plays and original scripts. Excellent casts, selected not only with an eye upon their box office values but upon their fitness for each part in each story. Able, careful directing and the most painstaking editing have been given to every foot of every picture.

WHITE ALL THROUGH. NOT A BLACK SPOT on the list. Not a single dead one to be carried along by the live ones.

AND THEY'RE NOW OFFERED TO YOU ON the Universal's famous live-and-let-live basis—white treatment from one year's end to another.

The WHITE LIST

niversal Pictures Corporation

WHITE CONTRACTS—NOT TRICKY ONES.

White salesmanship—no penny-catching schemes or plans.

SOME OF THEM WERE VERY EXPENSIVE. Some were made at a very moderate cost. In no case was money wasted. In no instance was useless extravagance permitted. Whatever the story required was put into the picture. But in no case did we squander money for the mere sake of yelling to you about costs.

THE TITLES ARE PACKED WITH BOX OFFICE value but they are white! The advertising which we have prepared for "The White List" is the kind that will pull with the greatest possible power—but it is white!

"THE WHITE LIST" WHAT A GODSEND to the moving picture business! What a fine thing it is for exhibitors to know that there is such a list available! What a bully sensation it is for an exhibitor to be able to book a whole list of pictures, knowing in advance that there will be no headaches, no bad after-taste, no regrets, no apologies—nothing but clean white profit!

THAT'S THE MEANING OF "THE WHITE List." Look elsewhere for a blue list or a black list or a yellow list, but if you want a white list, come to Universal!

"I am a hard-boiled, hard-shelled critic, and I say with equal frankness that the tears coursed down my cheeks during several climatic moments in 'America.' Yes, and at other moments I discovered myself applauding."

" 'America' is a cinema of tears and cheers, of gulps in the throat, of wet eyes, of rousing Yankee cheers and of a pulse quickened by patriotic fervor."

"As a historical epic, it is the America of Americans. And I defy anyone to see it wtthout cheering and applauding."

"Test your patriotism - see 'America'. "

"Sundown"

First National Offers One of the "Big Ones" in an Unusually Artistic and Splendid Production

Reviewed by Beatrice Barrett

"Sundown" is a lavish depiction of one of the events which made history in America. It reminds one in many ways of "The Covered Wagon" and undoubtedly will remind the exhibitor of that money maker in his box office receipts.

One of the big productions of the year, it embodies that "something very different" which is constantly being sought by the theatreman. The story tells of those later pioneers the cattlemen, who were driven from their homes by the advance of civilization and were driven out of their country and into Mexico when their ranges were turned over to the homesteaders. It shows the biggest cattle drive ever held in this country.

"Sundown" is a gigantic picture in every way. The long shots showing miles and miles of plains with the thousands of cattle winding slowly over them is most impressive. The stampede of the cattle, that on rush of thundering hoofs which trampled everything before them and in one minute destroyed the house and barns and all the possessions of one poor family, will give the audience all the thrills they want. The prairie fire also is unusual, and the scenes of the cattle—thousands of them—driven by the fire into the river and swimming across is a sight such as one is seldom permitted to witness.

The photography is some of the most beautiful ever seen on the screen.

The Editor's Views

CONCENTRATION of distributing machines, long the pet theory of those among us who required a hobby to ride at occasional intervals, seems to be coming about by the process of natural economic evolution and the development of hard business sense.

Five years or so ago, had J. D. Williams undertaken to handle Rudolph Valentino, had he then succeeded in bringing Harold Lloyd into the joint discussion, these events would most certainly have meant a new distributing machine.

The Non Plus Ultra Distributing Corporation would probably be in existence now—waiting anxiously for delivery of the first negative—thirty branch offices would be open, two hundred salesmen feeding at the salary and expense trough.

But not in this day of grace. Lloyd and Valentino are going to market backed by separate selling and exploitation effort, but not by saddling on the industry the overhead of a new distributing machine.

This week brings announcement that Joseph Schenck is ready to negotiate with distributors for the productions of Pickford, Fairbanks and Talmadge.

And again no mention of a new distributing corporation.

No aching desire to announce a stupendous chain of exchanges, a brand new idea of efficient service, a hip, hip, and a hooray.

We live and learn. The ghosts of Associated Producers, Realart, Wid Gunning, Inc., American Releasing and a countless score of dim figures of the past are doing more to bring about concentrated distributing efficiency than all the blueprinted theories ever evolved.

WHICH brings us to a discussion of the American Express Company plans for concentrated physical handling of pictures.

The theory is tempting and intriguing. But if American Express wants an idea from us—and we must confess that we got it from W. E. Schallenberger—they have the means for a very effective trial in the independent exchanges of the country.

It is going to be difficult, if not impossible, to convince any man at the helm of a national distributing company that he should take the risk of scrapping his present machine. The independent exchanges offer a means of entering two or three cities for a start, demonstrating the advantages offered by the Express Company, meeting the problems that joint distribution for many companies will bring about, and entirely removing the proposition from the realm of the theoretical.

Incidentally, if the plan works, it will have rendered a real service to independent distribution. For of the millions that pour into independent exchanges, a frightful amount must be wasted in duplication of physical effort. A duplication even less excusable than that of the national exchanges handling in most cases more product than the locally owned offices.

There are those who will tell you that Detroit's experiment in joint shipping has demonstrated its practicability. And others who proceed to assert that Michigan is a peculiarly favored territory, and so on. But that is another story—for another day.

HOW would you like to be the exhibitor who received the following letter:

Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church
Uniontown, Pennsylvania
H. A. Relyea, Minister

Mr. C. M. McCloskey
East Main Street
Uniontown, Pa.
Dear Mr. McCloskey:

I am sure you will be interested in hearing from our experiment in advertising the Sunday evening services at Asbury Church on the screen at the State and Penn Theatres. I discover that it has greatly increased the attendance at these services and that it has brought out a large group of people who ordinarily were not in attendance at church. I wish to thank you very much for the courtesy which you extend us in this particular and I assure you that I shall be glad to reciprocate at any time and in such fashion as I may. Incidentally, we should be glad to have yourself drop into service some Sunday evening just to see if we meet the requirements of a good advertiser.

Very sincerely yours,
H. A. RELYEA.

Comment on a letter of that sort, and the theatre idea back of it, we know to be superfluous. We will be surprised if the live exhibitor readers of Moving Picture World don't quickly grasp and utilize so effective a means of community service.

Speaking Freely

A Mid West exhibitor is doing the talking. "Listen," he tells us, "Paramount is not going to have as easy a time with the Second Forty as they had with the first." "Why?" say we, always looking for the gossip. And then he crossed us. He didn't mention quality, or titles, or any of the expected things. He said: "For the simple reason that on the First Forty they got the jump on the field. While Metro and Goldwyn were thinking about mergers, while First National was thinking about a lot of things, Paramount stepped out with Forty. In a tremendous number of cases they grabbed forty dates. When the exhibitor got through with forty dates he didn't have room for much else. When it came time for his pictures under the First National franchise or some other contract he set 'em back—and set 'em back. But he cleaned up the Forty. Now when the Famous salesman hits him he has any number of pictures bought, and set back until he can't slide 'em any more—so how on earth is he going to find forty dates?"

All of which is interesting. But we are willing to wager that while any number of exhibitors are thinking this way, Sidney Kent is also thinking. And when the smoke clears away he will still be holding up the old gross.

We have personal reasons for our thoughts. Sidney Kent and I don't get along so well personally—for the simple reason that we don't get together personally—that is, long enough for Sidney Kent to realize the importance and real value of Moving Picture World.

Every time we start at it, Sidney has to catch a train for Los Angeles, a boat for Europe, or a taxi for a Federal Trades Commission hearing. The result being that Sidney Kent is still two years back of the facts and he always makes his initial announcement in Motion Picture News.—[advt.] (free.)

And do you think that any other advertising or sales manager in the business would have the EFFRONTERY to cross Sidney Kent and beat him with the first splash in some other paper? Not on your life! Step by step they follow him—paper by paper. And when it's all over—everybody says: "Isn't it funny how Kent always gets the jump on us?"

It's a cinch to get the jump if you have the other fellow trained to follow.

There's a difference. The state rights exchanges, which are closest to Mr. Exhibitor—the boy we are all selling—have a different slant. The independents, whose exchanges are INDIVIDUALLY owned, INDIVIDUALLY PAID FOR, INDIVIDUALLY operated, lean towards Moving Picture World. They are just a year ahead of A. B. C. audits in discovering the true facts. Because they are closer to the customer. And it is their own pocketbook that is affected. They have to think closer. Which means they give more time to trade paper thoughts. And if you are prepared to sneer at state righters ask Doc Schallenberger or I. Chadwick to show you the confidential figures just completed which disclose that the territorial exchanges of the country receive thirty million dollars from exhibitors every twelve months.

THE WEEK'S RUMOR

There is a rumor current to the effect that hearings in the Federal Trades Commission's complaint against the Famous Players-Lasky Company will be concluded some time before the next World War. One irresponsible on Film Row last week tried to assert that the case would be concluded before the end of 1925. But it was difficult to find any foundation for this rash statement, so the rumor is given as we got it.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

Shucks, we've got to stop talking shop. We decided to stop a few months ago when we got the thought, "Let's wait till about April, 1925, and there will be a grand awakening when the field learns the truth about this greatly changed trade paper situation."

This page is supposed to be devoted to personalities. But while we turn to personalties we have to stick to Doc Schallenberger. We asked Doc for the truth about the state rights market—for an analysis between the pessimists who said it was shot to pieces and the optimists who said it was never better.

Doc says: "Speaking from the books, I find conditions much better than they were this time last year. Collections are better, the figures on individual pictures are better. State righters have got more courage. They have learned that with good pictures, backed by advertising, they can step out and compete with the best of them. And beat most of them."

And then he went on: "But for permanent betterment and improvement of the state rights market there must be some unity of thought—fostered perhaps by our association—resulting in more concentration of strength and resources."

"Thirty million dollars," says Doc, "is coming into territorial exchanges every year—and most of it is going out to loan sharks, to pay for duplication of physical effort, and to be dissipated in a hundred ways rather than reach the independent producer or the firmly established independent distributor."

"And there," concludes the Doc, "is the spot for a Will Hays of the independents. He can name his salary as a percentage of that thirty million." Applications will be received by mail—and the line forms on the right.

J. D. Williams last evening dined sundry dignitaries as part of the task of introducing Hawley Turner, formerly of the Lesan Agency, to the trade. Mr. Turner is now a director of Ritz Pictures.

As we are writing this on Thursday morning and the dinner is Thursday evening, we will have to beg off on the details.

Speaking of J. D. reminds us that if you haven't seen him lately you are apt to pass him on the street without notice. J. D. has lost forty pounds if he has lost an ounce in recent months. Blames it all on dieting and golf. And not a word about business.

Mark Kellogg issues an emphatic denial that he is the M. Kellogg in the New York income tax reports who filed a return of some $89,000. The First National advertising manager says he filed his return in Detroit.

Ran into Jimmie Grainger this week. "Going to be in New York for a while?" we queried. "I HOPE SO!" says he. It would seem that Jimmie has been away from home lately.

Major Thompson, of F. B. O., is visiting in London. Talking it over with Graham & Company, bankers. "Bon voyage!"

Why all this talk about concentrated distribution when we have Colvin Brown? Colvin, as New York representative for Thomas H. Ince, has to deal with almost every distributing organization in the business. And does it all in a nice, quiet, easy, workmanlike manner that doesn't get him many individual headlines but does get the boss many neat grosses.

You know what that means if you have ever had a representative working three thousand miles away from your home office. Yessir—that's a story.

Ill health has forced Watt Parker to travel south for a rest. Probably back at his Warner Brothers desk in a few weeks.

Henry Ginsberg is writing a series of articles on the state rights market. We are trying to outbid Danny on the publication rights.

Your correspondent took the witness chair at the Federal Trades Commission hearings this week and under oath was forced to confess that Moving Picture World is the oldest paper in the field, has the largest guaranteed exhibitor circulation, the greatest influence with exhibitors, and so on. Pretty tough on the witness.—R. E. W.

Dear Mister Printer:—Please, when you decide to ball up our copy—do the ordinary thing and completely mis-spell the word. Make it "etaoin" or some other favorite typographical Greek. Last week you had us say in our most dignified twelve point editorial type: "Movie Picture World." Now there are limits to which even the writer will not go. One of them is cheapening our own publication with "Movie." So please, the next time, if your finger slips, slip with a bang! Make it: Etaoin Picture World.—R. E. W.

Stories of the Builders

Starting a Series of Close-Up Views of the Industry's Founders

By W. Stephen Bush

HERE is a showman, a real showman, too, and almost a stranger to publicity. Here is a man who has stood on the captain's bridge of the good ship "Motion Picture," neglected by the press agents. Here is a builder in very truth, a master of achievement, and yet his name sounds but faintly on the lip of fame.

That man, you say, if he does exist, is overdue for a close-up and surely deserves a place in an album of biography.

Then let me tell you of a marshal of the films risen from the ranks and now in a position of high command at First National.

Just about seventeen years ago, Harry O. Schwalbe, still on the sunny side of thirty, was a partner in a modest little enterprise, called "The Electric Theatre Supply Company." The name seems quite typical of seventeen years ago, when we were still groping for words in which to express to ourselves and the public this new and sensational invention of the picture in motion, so dependent on the mysterious current. He had as his only other partner an old friend and companion, James McCoffrey, still remembered to this day by thousands of motion picture men throughout the eastern part of Pennsylvania and the southern part of New Jersey as "Sunny Jim."

Both men were trained musicians. One was an expert on the clarinet, while the other was a virtuoso on the tuba. Both had travelled and seen the world; both had saved a little money, and both saw possibilities in this new "electric" amusement then visible but to very few people. Though of diametrically opposite temperaments, both were ultra conservative. Adjusting their ambitions to their modest capital, they opened the offices of the Electric Theatre Supply Company in a small basement at No. 44 N. 10th.

Here they sold projection machines of early patents, slides for illustrated songs, and such small rolls of motion picture film as were then available. The E. T. S. C., which, by the way, is still in existence and still making money, bought its film supply in the open market. A goodly portion of the film, running from three hundred or less to a thousand feet in length, was of foreign origin, with Pathe heading the list and Gaumont a respectable second.

HARRY O. SCHWALBE

From 44 North Tenth Street, Philadelphia, to 383 Madison Avenue, New York

The qualities which have made Harry Schwalbe such a great and important figure in the film world of today showed themselves distinctly in the earliest days of the E. T. S. C. An ability to organize, the faculty to make the best of every situation, and marked cleverness in strategy, no less than in tactics, characterized the management of the company. "Harry," as he was called by almost everybody who had any dealings with the E. T. S. C., was thoroughly understood and appreciated by "Jim." The latter was in his element behind the counter, handing over the "shows" to the crowds of exhibitors and exhibitors' messengers. He was witty, sympathetic, a born diplomat, and a ready dispenser of soothing syrup. His partner credited him with hypnotic powers.

In those days renters of film paid strictly according to the age of the reels rented. Newness counted for everything, quality was taken for granted. At the top stood the so-called "First Run" customer, the bloated aristocrat of 1907; then came the others down to the humble personage, paying for films that had attained the fabulous age of thirty days. The eager crowd that assembled on the public side of the counter had but one thought: to get a service a little better than the contract called for. The "Ten-Day Man" chuckled with delight if he got a "Seven-Day Film," and so on. It was Jim's duty to see that these aspirations were held within the proper limits.

There was a constant battle of wits, often productive of words not to be found in any dictionary. "Harry," busy with the books or plans of the future, would now and then look up from his work and smile in approval of "Jim's" generalship. Poor Jim, he had worked hard all his life and had amassed a comfortable fortune when death cheated him of the hoped-for rest and happiness. This, however, is anticipating, for "Jim" lived to see the first great revolution that shook the new industry from center to circumference.

While the film rental exchanges were gaining in strength and realizing their advantage had organized themselves as the Film Service Association, the producers were still quarreling among themselves over alleged patents, and as Thomas A. Edison remarked afterwards in an interview published in MOVING PICTURE WORLD—"There was nothing for us inventors, while we had to keep on feeding the lawyers." Almost overnight the producers stopped fighting, pooled their various patents, and created the Motion Picture Patents Company, announcing that hereafter no one would be allowed to produce, distribute or exhibit films without a license duly issued "under its aforesaid patents" by the M. P. P. C. As that organization controlled all of the available film supply in the country, the members of the Film Service Association became frightened, for to refuse a license was to put the exchange out of business.

In the meantime, the E. T. S. C. had bidden good-bye to the little basement and in 1909 moved into a building of its own, almost directly across the street. The company was now one of the best liked and managed film exchanges in the country. In those days the personal element still counted for a lot. "Harry and Jim" were personally known to all of their clientele and possessed its confidence in an unusual degree. From time to time the M. P. P. C. sent out orders from headquarters to raise film rentals, to investigate and report on complaints against "licensed" exhibitors, to pass on new applications for licenses, etc. It was no pleasant task to stand between the exhibitor and the irresponsible "bosses" of the industry, but "Harry and Jim" managed very well indeed. In pacifying irate exhibitors, I think they broke all records. How often did exhibitors come into the offices with fire in their eyes and a volcano in their breasts and after an interview with "Harry and Jim" leave the premises smiling at the world and humming popular airs of the day.

"Harry and Jim" had theatres of their own and they knew that the exhibitor's lot was not always a happy one. They not only charmed away the wrath against the Patents Company, but delighted in showing exhibitors how foolish it was for them to fight each other to death in a race for "First runs." Harry was an expert in providing sensible solutions for problems in competition. Deep down in his character there is a love of peace and order, an ambition to build not only for himself but for others as well.

With his hands full in a constant struggle to keep everybody satisfied he no doubt made an enemy now and then, but he never reciprocated. It is not in his nature. To quarrel, to cherish resentments, to dream of the joys of "getting even"—these things are utterly alien to his mental and moral make-up. Also he has always known how to bide his time. No one saw more clearly than he the injustice of the growing monopoly, but his judicial cast of mind allowed him to perceive its benefits as well as its disadvantages.

The exchanges having been reduced in number, the next step of the Patents Company was to establish an absolute control over distribution, taking it into its own hands and organizing the General Film Co. for that purpose. More exchanges were put out of business under one pretense or another. Those that were allowed to remain had to sell all their stock at a price fixed by the General Film Company. The payment was mostly in stock of the General Film Company, which soon became quite worthless.

And now occurred the greatest of all the revolutions in the industry and with it came a new and most expansive growth and undreamed-of opportunities. This new state was not caused by the legal dissolution of the M. P. P. Co. and its various guises as a combination in restraint of trade.

The great upheaval came with the change in the unit of the motion picture entertainment from the single to the multiple reel.

No one saw the possibilities of this new development more clearly than Schwalbe, who had accumulated an imposing array of multiple reels in an exchange of his own on Vine Street, in Philadelphia. The multiple reel was of foreign origin, the first to show the power of the film of greater length being the visualization of Dante's "Inferno," by a producing company of Milano, Italy. The country was swamped with multiple reels from abroad, the early ones like "Temptations of a Great City," a Danish production, and "Satan," an Italian work, being well remembered to this day. The flood came so fast that it had been impossible to prepare the proper channels for distribution. These were the halcyon days of the "state right" system and the "state right" man.

Considerable confusion had followed in the wake of the new era. The need of the hour was regulation. It happened that the man of the hour was Harry Schwalbe.

He was now no longer connected with the General Film Co., which was obviously doomed. Both as an executive of major ability and as a theatre owner he perceived the waste and overproduction and excessive film rentals. For the first time he acted wholly on his own initiative, wholly independent of any outside influences. The architect was laying the cornerstone of his own fame and fortune. He had been behind the scenes long enough to see the evils resulting from any serious disturbance of the balance of power within the industry. A profound student of fundamentals, he had formulated a creed of his own. Keep the different powers of the industry moving within their own separate spheres, all working for the good of the industry at large. Here you have the surest antidote to a dangerous excess of power and every monopolistic tendency. Both from his observation and experience of many years, Mr. Schwalbe had satisfied himself that producers, especially those that distribute their own product, were often tempted to put undue burdens on the exhibitor.

Coming and Going

Thomas Bedding, who was editor of Moving Picture World in the early days of this publication, sailed on the S.S. Leviathan for London on October 25. Motion picture work will cause him to remain abroad for an indefinite period.

Archer Whitford, owner and publisher of "Everyone's," an Australian film publication, is spending three weeks in New York City as a part of his pleasure trip around the world. He left his home in Sydney on January 9, 1924.

Al Feinman, Universal exploiteer, was in New York City from Washington, D. C., over the week-end. He left on October 27 for Baltimore.

Irving Cummings and Robert Fraser are in New York City.

S. N. Burns, Vitagraph branch manager at Albany, and C. W. Anthony, in charge of the Buffalo office, were in New York last week conferring with John B. Rock, general manager of that company.

E. M. Asher, vice-president of Corinne Griffith Productions, Inc., left for the Coast October 27. He will start production on "Declasse" immediately, to be followed by "The National Anthem." Miss Corinne Griffith, who will be starred in both of these pictures, left for Los Angeles October 26.

William E. Atkinson of Metro-Goldwyn was a passenger on S.S. Baltic when it docked last week on its arrival from Europe.

Among recent arrivals on the White Star liner Baltic, making port at Boston, are Israel Davis and his son, Captain Edward S. Davis, owners of the four largest theatres in London. They are in the States to view theatres and to complete arrangements for broadcasting music from the Shepherds Bush Theatre in London to the Capitol Theatre in New York.

Nat Liebeskind, salesman for Universal, sailed from New York October 18 for Havana, where he will take up his new duties as Cuban manager for Universal.

Anna Aiken Patterson, editor of the Weekly Film Review, Atlanta, is spending this week in New York City. She is stopping at the Astor.

Alice Joyce returned to New York this week from Los Angeles.

Joe Brandt has left New York to be gone for at least six weeks and is making the rounds of the key cities in the interest of his company.

Joseph Von Sternberg, selected by Mary Pickford to direct her next picture, arrived on October 28 from the Coast. He will spend an indefinite time in New York City.

F. Richard Jones of the Hal Roach studios is vacationing in New York.

Irving Cummings arrived in New York City this week from the Coast.

Edward M. Saunders, western general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn, and Paul Burger, division manager, returned to New York this week after a sales trip of five weeks through the west and Canada.

According to advices in New York, Louis B. Mayer and his wife and daughters have arrived in Rome.

Marcus Loew has arrived in Los Angeles on a visit to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studios at Culver City.

Erno Rapee left this week for Chicago to conduct the opening performance of "The Iron Horse" at Wood's Theatre, November 2.

Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation accompanied by William R. Frazer and John C. Ragland, representing Harold Lloyd, left this week for a survey of the European market. They will be abroard at least two months.

Emil Stern, general manager of Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago, is in New York City on a business trip.

Harry Rathner, personal representative of Irving Lesser, left New York this week for a tour of the country.

Richard Dix left New York this week for a two weeks business trip in San Francisco.

William Shapiro and Irving Wallenstein of Boston are in New York this week.

Sydney R. Kent, William R. Fraser and John C. Ragland (the latter representing Harold Lloyd) left for Europe on October 29. Business will keep them abroad for about two months.

Will Hays addressed the Rotary Club of Sullivan, Ind. on October 27.

Max Weiss, of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures, has arranged a sales trip to Boston where he will dispose of territory in that section for the Buffalo Bill, Jr., series of eight action pictures. While out of the city, Mr. Weiss will also close up adjacent eastern territory for Weiss pictures heretofore not sold in that section.

Loew in Hollywood

Silences Rumors About Mayer, Thalberg and Rapf

Marcus Loew, president of Loew's, Inc., and of Metro-Goldwyn, has arrived in Los Angeles on a visit to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studios at Culver City. The theatrical and motion picture magnate is accompanied by Mrs. Loew, his two sons, Arthur and David Loew, and their families.

The trip from Los Angeles to New York was made in Mr. Loew's private car, Superb, and was attached to fast mail trains to lessen the running time. A short stopover was made at St. Louis, where Loew's State Theatre recently opened.

On the day of his arrival, Mr. Loew was introduced by Major Rupert Hughes at an informal gathering on the lot to 500 members of the studio organization, and definitely silenced any rumors of impending changes in the organization and policies of the company.

"I want to set your minds at rest with regard to rumors concerning Mr. Mayer, Mr. Thalberg and Mr. Rapf," said the Metro-Goldwyn president. "They are untrue. I view the association of these three men with me with the greatest satisfaction. It is, as a matter of fact, the happiest association I have ever had in my life, and there will be no change involving any of them."

O'Toole Ignores Steffes' Challenge

When the attention of M. J. O'Toole, president of the M. P. T. O. A. was called to a published report that W. A. Steffes, head of the Allied States Organization, charges the national organization with endeavoring to "convert" members of its opponent's unit, he stated: "I have nothing to say."

"Greater Amusements" recently printed what was purported to be an interview with Steffes, in which they credited him with declaring:

"If O'Toole and his paper organization want a fight we will give it to them. The insidious O'Toole campaign is for the most part being carried on under cover, but we have documentary evidence of its existence and activity in the northwest. Unless it is terminated Allied, as a matter of self-protection, will be forced into a campaign of reprisal."

Nothing could be gleaned from O'Toole further than his non-commital comment. His attitude was that the matter had not come to his official attention.

Sails First Class

Max Shoolman, treasurer of Olympia Theatres of Boston, sailed on October 28 on the steamship Aquitania with the intention of making a first-hand investigation of Palestine and the possibilities of establishing a Jewish settlement on a large scale. Thirty-two years ago, on October 25, Mr. Shoolman arrived in America after a voyage in the steerage. He is making the return trip to his native land in a first-class cabin.

Despite his extensive business interests Mr. Shoolman has found time to devote to the movement toward reclaiming the Holy Land as the Jewish homeland, and he has been a leader in raising money for the Palestine foundation fund. During his trip Mr. Shoolman will visit Poland. He is accompanied by his nephew, Elliot B. Shoolman.

Special Child Matinee Programs Are Planned by the M. P. P. D. A.

THE Committee on Public Relations, which works in co-operation with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is about to take a very definite step towards supplying the increasing demand for children's matinee programs which has been coming from all parts of the country, the Hays organization announces.

After many months of study and the examination of thousands of long and short subjects, about 100 complete programs suitable for children have been selected and within a short time will be available for showing in all the key cities.

At the last meeting of the committee, a sample children's matinee program was screened and met the approval of the committee members who were present and who have an especial interest in the plan of having motion picture showings exclusively for the very young folks.

This program consisted of "Seven Swans" (a 5-reel Paramount subject); a 2-reel comedy, "The Balloonatic" (a First National-Buster Keaton subject), and a Fox 1-reeler, "A Dutch Treat."

That is a typical example of the sort of program which will be held shortly in Atlanta, Ga. It is proposed to have one feature subject, one comedy and a one-reel filler in each program.

All the companies making up the Hays organization have co-operated heartily with the Committee on Public Relations in getting together these programs. The feature subjects are not exactly new, it is true. Indeed, most of them have been withdrawn from general circulation. So that there need be no fear on the part of exhibitors as to unfair competition.

The operation of this plan has been worked out in detail. Special containers have been prepared which will hold a complete program—the feature, the comedy and the one-reel instructional subject. These reels will be frequently owned by three different companies but they will be kept together in the one container and will be handled physically in one exchange center in each key city.

The admission price for the children, it is stipulated in the contracts, must not be above 10 cents. Attractive rental prices have been arranged for these programs, so that the exhibitor may fully clear the expenses incurred by this good work and perhaps in a majority of cases he will make a reasonable profit as well as aid in winning thousands of good friends and future patrons for the industry.

Tribute to S. R. Kent Closes Paramount Sales Convention

AS a climax to the Paramount District and Sales Managers' Convention in New York at the Hotel Pennsylvania last week, Otto H. Kahn, the banker, presented to Sidney R. Kent a beautifully engrossed and framed copy of the resolution adopted by the board of directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation designating Kent to fill the position of general manager of the Famous Players organization.

Kahn was introduced by Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players, and spoke about the opportunities for great achievements in the department of distribution, mentioning as an example what the department had done to sell the "Famous Forty." Kahn stressed the value of loyalty in an organization, and the new attitude on the part of big business men to reward loyalty and ability. He said that Zukor and the other officials had been studying a plan whereby employees may obtain shares in the company.

Following Kent's speech of acceptance, Herman Wobber, Paramount's district manager on the West Coast, on behalf of the men in the field, voiced their appreciation of the honor that had been conferred upon Kent and the entire distribution department.

Last Thursday the entire convention went to Adolph Zukor's Farm, Mountainview, Rockland County, N. Y., where they were entertained over the week-end. Those present included:

S. R. Kent, G. W. Weeks, H. G. Ballance, J. D. Clark, M. A. Shauer, G. M. Spidell, G. D. J. Frawley, C. Saunders, C. E. McCarthy, A. M. Botsford, M. H. Lewis, A. Zukor, E. J. Zukor, E. E. Shauer, B. New Century Sales Head

Abe Stern, vice-president of Century Comedies, announced this week that H. M. Herbel, former Universal sales executive, has been appointed sales manager for his company. Herbel has already left New York, where he will have his headquarters, for a tour of the Universal exchanges, through which Century product is distributed.

Independents Seek Big Time Leader

The first open meeting of the season was held by the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association on October 30 and brought forth the declaration by President I. Chadwick that Independents need a leader of the calibre of Will Hays. The name of Senator James J. Walker was tentatively suggested. It is understood that plans toward selecting a leader will be pushed at the next meeting.

A detailed account of this week's meeting will appear in the next issue of Moving Picture World.

Five Michigan Cities Are Among Theatre Sites, Sam Warner Says

SAM WARNER of Warner Bros., who was in Detroit last week in connection with theatre building extensions, announced while here that at least five cities in Michigan were to be invaded by Warner Bros., either in the erection of new theatres or in leasing houses in which the product of the firm could be shown.

The Michigan plan, according to Warner, will be in the way of an experiment, as it is believed that the operation of a string of houses in smaller cities will link up well with the operation of the bigger city houses, in that vaudeville acts and presentations may be purchased cheaper. At any rate the plan is to be given a trial. The Michigan towns were not announced by Warner.

During the Warner visit it was also rumored that sites were being looked over looking toward the erection of a theatre in the downtown section of Detroit. No definite plans were announced, however.

Should the Warners decide to build in Detroit, the city would increase its present seating capacity in first runs by almost 100 per cent. The recent John H. Kunsky-Balaban and Katz affiliation in Detroit will result in the erection of two new houses, as George W. Trendle, the Kunsky general manager, states that the deal will not interfere with the plans for either theatre.

The Balaban & Katz site is still said to be indefinite, four locations being under advisement. Kunsky will break ground in a few weeks for his new State Theatre at Elizabeth and Woodward avenues. These two investments will run into about $5,000,000.

How Come?

For the first time in years, if not in its history, the Warner Bros. organization in New York City operated a few days last week without a single Warner on the job. "H. M." and Jack are on the Coast, their accustomed habitat, but Abe and Sam Warner, who usually stick close to New York, were out of town on business.

Famous Players Makes Dahn Arthur's Canadian Assistant

PROMOTIONS and appointments of an important nature have been made in the organization in Eastern Canada of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, which operates 70 theatres in the Dominion. Harry Dahn of Montreal, for two years manager of the Capitol Theatre, one of the largest houses in the chain, has been made assistant to John Arthur of Toronto, general supervisor of music and presentations for the whole circuit, and, in addition, Mr. Dahn will manage the Hippodrome and Regent theatres, Toronto. For some time past these two theatres have been under the direction of Clarence Robson, general supervisor of the theatre department of Famous Players, and Jack Arthur. Mr. Robson now will devote his exclusive attention to the general direction of theatres in Eastern Canada, with H. M. Thomas of Winnipeg continuing as western division general manager for the big circuit.

Before proceeding to Montreal, Mr. Dahn had been the manager of Famous Players theatres at Winnipeg and Regina, Sask., having the large new Capitol Theatre in the latter city.

Announcement is made that Ralph W. Thayer, formerly with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, New York, has been appointed manager of the Capitol at Montreal in succession to Mr. Dahn, taking charge of the theatre on October 27. Before moving to Montreal, Mr. Thayer was the traveling representative of the theatre department of Famous Players, New York, and was previously with H. M. Thomas when the latter was general manager of the A. H. Blank enterprises at Des Moines, Ia. Mr. Thayer also has been the manager of theatres at Detroit and Baltimore, and for some time was with the producing organization of D. W. Griffith.

Formal announcements regarding the changes in the Canadian personnel of Famous Players were made at a special luncheon which was held in the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, on October 24, when Mr. Thayer was introduced by Jack Arthur to the gathering of theatre men and newspaper critics. Mr. Arthur has been busy in recent years with the presentation of "The Sea Hawk" at the Toronto Regent, the engagement covering a period of seven weeks, and with the arrangements for "Monsieur Beaucaire," which has followed "The Sea Hawk" at that house for an indefinite run.

Henry Ginsberg announces that the "Flying Fists" series of two-reel features starring Benny Leonard will be released in Canada through the Canadian Educational Exchange, Ltd., in Toronto.

On behalf of Banner Productions, Inc., George H. Davis announces the following territories closed this week:

California, Arizona and Nevada to the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., with offices in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The series includes "The Truth About Women," "The Man Without a Heart," "Empty Hearts" and "Those Who Judge."

John H. Taylor Film Corporation has sold the series of twelve Jimmy Aubrey comedies for Mexico, Germany and Central America. They have also disposed of William Steiner's new series of Pete Morrison's westerns for Germany.

J. G. Bachmann, head of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions, announced the signing of an important contract for the exhibition of the Preferred Picture, "The Breath of Scandal," in New York City at the Keith, Moss and Proctor houses.

First National Sales Heads Confer and Adopt New Plan

THE sales conference on First National's new group of releases for the first half of 1925, called together by E. A. Eschmann, manager of distribution for the company, was attended by every district manager, and by the staff of salesmen who have been aiding A. W. Smith, Jr., in the handling of the First National special production for the current year.

The men from the field in attendance at the conference were Harry H. Buxbaum, manager of the Eastern district; R. C. Seery, manager of the Mid-West district; H. A. Bandy, manager of the Central Western district; W. E. Callaway, manager of the Southern district; Joseph S. Skirboll, manager of the Western district; Harry T. Nolan, manager of the Mountain district; Louis Bache, manager of the Canadian district; C. W. Bunn, Stanley W. Hand and A. Hickox, salesmen on the specials.

At the conference, Eschmann and his associates instructed the district managers in the sales policy which has been decided upon in the handling of the group of First National Pictures to be released between February 1, 1925 and August 31st following. The conference started Monday morning, October 27, and continued until Wednesday evening, when the managers left for their respective territories to call meetings of the branch managers to pass on the sales instructions imparted to them in New York.

Within a few days after the close of this conference, A. W. Smith, Jr., in charge of special picture sales, William J. Morgan, in charge of open market sales, and Stanley W. Hatch, in charge of franchise sales, will leave the home office to go out on the firing line and aid in lining up the field force.

Boston Aids Charity

The Salvation Army is making an appeal for $150,000 for the support of its social and charitable institutions in Greater Boston. The motion picture concerns there are taking an active part in the appeal which will be made from November 5 to November 15. E. J. Farrell, Sec. N. E. Film Board of Trade, 204 Stuart Street, is in charge of this group.

"U" Sales Sessions

New Directorate Presides Over 3 Conventions Held This Week

The Universal sales force is staging three big sales conventions this week. These meetings are to make plans for Universal's campaign on next year's product.

The sales conferences are being held by territorial groups, presided over by members of the new Sales Directorate. Thus, the meeting in New York City, which opened October 29, comprises the Eastern Division, of which Jules Levy is the supervisor. It includes the Atlantic seaboard from Virginia (inclusive) to New England, as well as Canada, and the Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo and New Haven exchanges.

The meeting in Chicago is for the branch office managers of the Western Division, supervised by Ned Marin. It includes the West Coast exchanges, the Middle West north of the Kansas and Missouri line and the Lake territories of Chicago and Milwaukee.

Ned Depinet, supervisor of the Southern Division, will hold a conference in Indianapolis next week. The territories represented at that conference will include Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Charleston, W. Va., St. Louis and Kansas City. Later he will hold two other meetings, one in Dallas to include the southwestern section of his division and the third in Atlanta, to include the southeastern section.

War "Ace" Now Actor

Nungesser to Play in Associated Exhibitors Production

Associated Exhibitors announces this week that the "movies" have captured a French Ace. The "captive" is none other than Captain Nungesser, the famous "Ace of Aces" of the French Army who has been officially accredited with bringing down 105 German aeroplanes in action. In addition to his repeated citations for bravery, which won him the Croix de Guerre with 29 palms and two stars, he was made an officer of the Legion of Honor by the French government. Captain Nungesser will shortly be starred in a series of pictures to be produced by the Arcadia Pictures Company of Philadelphia and to be distributed by Associated Exhibitors.

Red Cross Slides

Screen bulletins will appear before 20,000,000 people during Red Cross Roll Call, November 11-27. Though big screen campaigns with several thousand theatres showing bulletins have been carried out by the government for "Mail Early," "Health" and "Thrift" campaigns, this is the first time that the full power of approximately 17,000 screens has been mobilized for a public service.

Every theatre in the country will receive a set of five screen bulletins prepared on Radio-Mats giving brief facts and talks of the accomplishments and aims of the American Red Cross. These have been mailed out so that every one of the 17,000 theatres will receive the bulletins on the same day.

PRINTERS FIGHT CENSORSHIP

The New York State Allied Printing Trades Council issues a statement in which it makes known that it favors the repeal of the censorship law of New York State. Organizer Edwards declares that the council will cooperate in every respect with exhibitors in this fight.

A. M. P. A. Hears Good Points of Broadcasting Film Reviews

THE power of radio reviewing of motion pictures to do good rather than harm to the film industry as a whole was discussed at the last regular meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., held October 23 at the Cafe Boulevard, New York.

The principal speaker was Sam Comly, motion picture editor of The Morning Telegraph, who endeavored to dispel the expressed fears of the publicity men and explained his purpose and system of broadcasting reviews of current films and chatty news of the cinema industry as supplementary to the matter published in his newspaper.

At a meeting several weeks ago of the A. M. P. A. a committee was appointed to investigate reports of alleged abuses in the radio reviewing field, into which certain important New York newspapers had entered.

Comly read letters from certain exhibitors commending his newspaper for its radio reviews. He cited one letter which "bore a complaint from a certain theatre in Kansas City that the review of its picture was omitted in the radio."

The speaker admitted that "destructive talks on motion pictures" had been made by contemporary reviewers of rival newspapers over the radio, but emphatically denied that he or any of the out-of-town correspondents of The Morning Telegraph ever had done so. "My idea of radio reviewing is distinctly different from those of reviewers who are obviously unfriendly to motion pictures," he said. Reading excerpts from a letter written by Will Hays, Comly quoted the film chief as saying that "broadcasting of honest reviews should be a fine thing for the motion picture industry."

Comly declared that his newspaper had completed arrangements under which its motion picture notes and reviews are being broadcast by correspondents from radio stations in twenty of the key cities of the country. He estimated that they reached approximately 4,000,000 people.

"To have this radio reviewing in the hands of those out of sympathy with the motion picture would be incalculable harm to it," said Arthur James, who followed Comly with a short talk. "But to have it in the hands of those who are warm friends and supporters of the films should be inconceivably good for our industry. If you, Mr. Comly, can reach even 100,000 people, instead of 4,000,000, you are entitled to all the support we can give and our grateful thanks."

The speaker was subjected to a running fire of questions from the assembled publicity men, and though not all were wholly in accord with Comly as to the merits of the subject, the general tenor of the meeting was one of friendliness toward the speaker and his apparent good faith in the matter of radio reviewing.

Other A. M. P. A. guests who were introduced and spoke at this meeting were Randolph Bartlett, just in from California; Fred Stanley, director of publicity for the First National eastern producing units installed last week at the Biograph Studio; Jack Jungmayer, Los Angeles correspondent for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, and Willard Howe, the new editor of the Exhibitors Trade Review.

Charles Barrell, A. M. P. A. vice-president, presided.

National Lutheran Convention Urged to Support Good Films

IF moving pictures are clean and educational, it is the duty of Omaha Lutheran pastors to write letters of commendation to managers of the houses where the pictures are playing. If they are immoral and unclean, it is likewise their duty to write letters of condemnation."

Such in substance reads a report on motion pictures which an Omaha group of Lutheran pastors will submit to the national body of the United Lutheran Church in Chicago this week. The committee on "Public Morals" will submit the report.

Six Omaha pastors and eleven from other parts of Nebraska are to attend the session. The Rev. George Dorn, associate pastor of Kountze Memorial Church, Omaha, one of those who will attend, said: "The modern motion picture has become a tremendous factor for weal or woe in our modern social complex."

"As the saloon was once called the poor man's club, so may be movies now be called the universal club of America," the report continues. "We believe the majority of the people of America like clean, wholesome, educational movies, but we also think the public is a little too slothful to express its opinion and desires. Hence, immoral men of ability are able to foist immoral pictures on the youth of the country."

Among the pastors from Omaha and Nebraska who are attending the conference at Chicago are the Rev. George Dorn, the Rev. O. D. Baltzley, the Rev. K. De Freese, all of Omaha; the Rev. W. F. Rangeler, Fremont; the Rev. C. G. Aus, Fremont; the Rev. R. W. Livers, Hooper. About 1,200 pastors are expected to attend this meeting of the highest governing body of the country's English Lutheran churches.

Schenck Relinquishes Loew Interests

According to news dispatches from Hollywood, Joseph M. Schenck officially announced there this week that he has relinquished his interests in Loew's, Inc., and that he is uniting Norma Talmadge with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. One distributing channel will handle the releases of these three stars, he is also credited to have made known. As far as his Loew interests go, it is ascertained that Schenck disposed of them in the open market.

With the Schenck announcement comes the report also from Hollywood that United Artists will hold a big meeting on or about November 10.

Commission Resumes Paramount Inquiry in New York City

AFTER a lapse of a year, during which time testimony was taken in various cities in the country, the Federal Trade Commission on October 27 resumed in New York City its inquiry into Famous Players-Lasky corporation affairs. From present indications the New York session will last for several weeks.

The only witness called during the first day was John C. Ragland, Harold Lloyd's eastern representative. The relationship between Famous and Realart was the only matter then touched upon. Ragland said that he had opened 20 Realart exchanges. He said that Realart branch managers and salesmen were not ordered to conceal the relationship but on the contrary were instructed to use it as a selling point.

During the second day, October 28, only formal testimony, with no unusual bearing upon the case, was recorded. The witnesses were Abraham Fabian, for the Fabian interests in New Jersey and Robert E. Welsh, editor of Moving Picture World, and Lester W. Adler of Selznick.

By his testimony it was disclosed that Fabian's firm is liable to First National for three and five-eighths per cent. of negative costs; also that in 1918-1920 the witness' Patterson Theatre played many pictures other than Famous product.

The character of chart releases and indexes to reviews in 40 bound volumes of his publication was described by Welsh.

Adler, who was one time a branch manager for Realart, substantiated Ragland's testimony of the previous day.

Joseph Dannenberg, editor of the Film Daily, a trade paper publication, was the only witness called at the continuance of the hearing on October 29. He named what in his opinion were the leading stars and directors between the years of 1916 and 1923, inclusive.

M. P. T. O. A. OFFICIALS ASKED TO ATTEND ENGLISH SESSION

Invitations have been received by M. J. O'Toole, Sydney Cohen and R. F. Woodhull, officials of the M. P. T. O. A. to attend the annual convention of the C. E. A., English exhibitor organization, at London on November 26-27-28. It is learned that Cohen and Woodhull have expressed their inability to attend while O'Toole is as yet uncertain.

All Recovering

Louisville, Ky., October 29.—It is reported from New Castle, Ky., that the thirty odd persons injured in a stampede from the second floor of the New Castle Theatre are all recovering, and other than the one death at the time of the fire, it is now believed that all of the injured will get well. For a time it was questionable as to whether or not one woman and one girl would recover from injuries suffered when crushed. Fire loss to the theatre was reported at around $600, the blaze having been confined to the projection room, which was of fireproof construction.

Valentino Returning

Rudolph Valentino will return from Europe on the Leviathan about November 10, according to a cable just received by J. D. Williams, President of Ritz-Carlton Pictures. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Valentino. The Valentinos have been in Europe for three months making research studies for his first Ritz picture. Much of the time was spent in Spain, for the story is laid in that country in the period just before the Inquisition.

Safety Film Urged

According to a proposal before the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals, the Canadian Government is to be petitioned to pass legislation making slow-burning or safety film compulsory in all moving picture projection in the Dominion. The matter was discussed at the annual meeting of the association at Toronto on October 24 in an address by Hickman Price, representing the Motion Picture Distributors and Producers of America, whose paper was entitled, "Legislation Regulating and Controlling Motion Picture Films." Mr. Price pointed out that the "safety" film would burn more slowly than newsprint.

Uniform Contract Hitch

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, Greater New York exhibitor organization, at its session this week took under consideration a phase of the uniform contract, largely drawn up by itself and the Hays unit. It was the contention of some of the T. O. C. C. members, according to reports, that some distributor members of the local F. I. L. M. Club had undertaken to augment the original draft with certain clauses. The arbitration board was recently unable to determine what decision should be made in a case of this kind. Nathan Burkan, as an outside arbitrator, which is the customary procedure in the case of such deadlocks, decided against the exhibitors in this particular issue. The T. O. C. C. indicated that it will appoint a committee to take the matter up with the M. P. P. D. A. to arrive at something more conclusive regarding the forms of these contracts.

LILLIAN GISH IS EXCLUSIVE METRO-GOLDWYN STAR

Lillian Gish, through a contract signed last week with Charles H. Duell, Jr., becomes an exclusive Metro-Goldwyn star, according to the announcement just made by Nicholas M. Schenck, a vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn. The deal also marks the first independent production of Charles H. Duell, Jr., long identified with Inspiration Pictures.

PARAMOUNT PEP CLUB DANCE

The Paramount Pep Club, composed of employes of the home office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, gave an informal Hallowe'en dinner and dance at the Hotel Astor Wednesday evening, October 29. Approximately 600 employes and friends attended. Announcement was also made that the prize winning name for the Pep Club's new monthly publication was "Pep-o-grams."

"Out to Beat Record," Says Paramount, Announcing the Second Famous Forty

"WE are out to beat our record!" This is the declaration of Paramount officials in discussing the Second Famous Forty, announced today.

Never before, it is held, has box-office history been written and then revised for new records as much as it was for the First Famous Forty. Nevertheless, executives of the company declare the Second Famous Forty will surpass the first forty in box-office strength. "And this claim," Paramount says, "is not unmindful of what has been done by such productions as 'Manhandled,' 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' 'Wanderer of the Wasteland,' 'The Covered Wagon' and other pictures which piled dollars and cents, figures on what have heretofore been regarded by exhibitors as maximum business. Paramount has a record. The Second Famous Forty are dedicated to the purpose of beating that record."

"Because of the confidence that has been created by the promises which Paramount made for the First Famous Forty—and made good—exhibitors are looking forward to this new group convinced that new records will be established.

"This confidence is justified by the tremendous investment Paramount has made to secure the biggest stage hits of the present season—new plays with modern ideas that have already established their values at the box-office; the best stories of fiction purchased from magazines with enormous circulation, and novels which have been classified in the best seller division. With Paramount's great stars and directors, and the producing organization which has been perfected by ten years of continuous production, these elements combine to guarantee that the Second Famous Forty will have even greater box-office strength than their predecessors."

"MADAME SANS GENE"

That world-famous stage classic, "Madame Sans Gene," will be Gloria Swanson's initial starring vehicle in the Second Famous Forty. Originally written by Victorien Sardou and Emile Moreau, it has been adapted by Forrest Halsey, and is at the present moment being picturized in France under the personal supervision of Leonce Perret, the internationally know director.

"THE TOP OF THE WORLD"

Anna Q. Nilsson, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton and Sheldon Lewis—this is the featured quartet of notable players who will appear in Ethel M. Dell's greatest fiction success, "The Top of the World." George Melford, because of his proved ability to do this type of story, has been chosen to direct. Against a picturesque and colorful South African background, the picture unfolds the tale of a romance-starved English beauty who marries a rather cold-blooded man.

"THE DEVIL'S CARGO"

A big, smashing melodramatic story written around the gold-rush days of California—that's "The Devil's Cargo," which has been adapted from Charles Whittaker's original screenplay, "The River Boat." In this picture, which will be directed by Victor Fleming, Wallace Beery has the greatest role of his career. The other featured members of the cast are Claire Adams, Pauline Starke and William Collier, Jr.

"THE SWAN"

Paramount's sensational new star discovery, Frances Howard, is featured along with Adolphe Menjou and Ricardo Cortez in Dimitri Buchowetski's production of Franz Molnar's notable stage success, "The Swan." Here is surely the perfect comedy of the year. The action is scintillating and lively, and there is pathos as well as comedy.

"LORD CHUMLEY"

Here is the second big success produced by the brilliant directors, Paul Iribe and Frank Urson, who were responsible for "Changing Husbands." It is a light, fast-and-furious comedy, adapted by Bertram Millhauser from the famous play by David Belasco and Henry C. DeMille. It marks the return to the screen of Theodore Roberts after a long absence. Besides Mr. Roberts, the cast includes such featured favorites as Raymond Griffith, who plays the title role; Viola Dana, Cyril Chadwick and Anna May Wong.

"THE THUNDERING HERD"

This is the latest of the Zane Grey-Paramount pictures. An all-star cast, including Jack Holt, Lois Wilson and Noah Beery, will be seen in this Western thriller, which William Howard will produce. The powerful climax, showing the wild-riding heroine, saved from pursuing Indians by a stampeding herd of buffalo, is one of the most stirring scenes ever flashed on the screen.

"SACKCLOTH AND SCARLET"

One of screendom's outstanding artists, Alice Terry, will be featured in a picturization of George Gibbs' latest best-seller, "Sackcloth and Scarlet." The scenes are laid near Lake Loise, Canada; in a little village in Brittany; in New York and in Washington.

"SALOME OF THE TENEMENTS"

Sidney Olcott, brilliant producer of "The Humming Bird" and "Monsieur Beaucaire," is producing the screen version of the popular new novel by Anzia Yerierska, author of "Hungry Hearts." It is an epic drama of New York's lower east side, revolving around a beautiful girl of the slums who by her fascinating personality and grit scales the heights of society. Jetta Goudal, the sensational new French beauty who gave such an excellent account of herself in "Open All Night," will play the leading female role.

"THE AIR MAIL"

A tale of roaring action, feats of daring, humor and heart interest—that's "The Air Mail," an original story from Byron Morgan, the author of the Wallace Reid auto successes, of "Code of the Sea" and other Paramount hits. Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will head a big star cast. Irvin Willat, who has to his credit such box-office attractions as "Wanderer of the Wasteland" and North of 36," will direct.

"CONTRABAND"

Alan Crosland is making a special production of "Contraband," which was first published as a serial in the Red Book magazine and was later brought out in book form. Clarence Budington Kelland wrote the story and Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and a superb supporting cast will appear in the screen version.

"THE GOOSE HANGS HIGH"

Chalk up another hit for James "Covered Wagon" Cruze! He's going to add another feather in his directorial cap with "The Goose Hangs High," the Lewis Beach stage play which had such a long and successful run at the Bijou Theatre. Walter Woods, who collaborated with Cruze on his previous screenplays, will adapt. Constance Bennett will be one player.

"NONE BUT THE BRAVE"

Richard Dix has another ideal starring vehicle in "None But the Brave," based on a Cosmopolitan Magazine short story by John Monk Saunders. It is a story full of color and flashing action. A specially selected cast will support this brilliant new star. Paul Sloane will direct.

"A MODERN BABYLON"

This production marks the return to the screen of one of screendom's greatest artists—Leatrice Joy. The story was adapted from Anthony Pride's gripping novel, "Marqueray's Duel." It is a modern, timely story of broad appeal, full of suspense, with a strong and fine love interest and a happy climax. Paul Bern has been chosen to produce it.

"NEW LIVES FOR OLD"

An emotional romantic drama revolving around a notorious woman of Paris—that's "New Lives for Old," written by Emile Augier. Betty Compson, right now upon the crest of a great box-office wave of popularity, is the star of this production which Clarence Badger will direct.

"THE CODE OF THE WEST"

Picturized against marvelous natural backgrounds and abounding in breath-taking thrills, here is another Zane Grey knockout, in which the jazz life of the East is contrasted with the wholesome simplicity of the open spaces. William K. Howard, who produced "The Border Legion," will direct. Constance Bennett, Owen Moore, Noah Beery are some of the favorites who will appear in the cast.

"THE COAST OF FOLLY"

Gloria Swanson in an Allan Dwan production. Adapted by Forrest Halsey from Coningsby Dawson's famous novel," The Coast of Folly" is the story of a society girl whose high spirits lead her innocently into a position where her reputation is at stake.

"THAT FRENCH GIRL"

Betty Bronson, "The Peter Pan Girl," will be featured in the title role of this picture which Herbert Brenon will produce. The story is based on Anne Douglas Sedgwick's searching novel of English and French life.

"YOUNG WIVES"

A William DeMille production of the French comedy of marriage which ran a whole season on the New York stage under the title of "Banco," by Alfred Savoir, author of "Kiki" and "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Rod La Rocque and Claire Adams head the exclusive cast of popular players.

"A KISS IN THE DARK"

One of the most humanly entertaining love-comedies ever devised is this story by Frederick Lonsdale, the author of "The Fast Set." As a stage play under the title, "Aren't We All," it scored a tremendous success. Under the direction of Dimitri Buchowetski, and with Ricardo Cortez and Adolphe Menjou as the featured members of a brilliant cast, a Paramount picture of definite box-office appeal is bound to result.

"BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK"

The great stage novelty success by those versatile playwrights, George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, who wrote "To the Ladies" and "Merton of the Movies," will be adapted by Walter Woods and produced for Paramount by the one and only James Cruze. No effort, no expense will be spared in producing this picture on an elaborate scale in keeping with the excellence of the story.

"ADVENTURE"

Jack London's great dramatic novel, "Adventure," will reach the screen via the directorial guidance of Victor Fleming. In this vigorous story a brave girl, wrecked on a lonely South Sea isle, fights through stirring adventure to love and happiness. Pauline Starke and a notable cast will portray the various roles.

Early Planning on Christmas Tickets Will Assure Good Work and Big Sales

IT is none too early to start on your books of Christmas tickets. Most of the old-timers have already figured upon their special printing, and some have their books or cards already in hand.

Each year sees a growth in the idea, and more houses make a drive on these gift books, but every theatre should work the scheme and get a part of the money that otherwise might be diverted to the giving of other gifts.

The idea is very simple, and the small extra cost is more than offset by the additional business created, since the man with a ticket book will spend his tickets more freely than he would his money. This has been demonstrated over and over; indeed, some theatres sell ticket books the year around and find it profitable.

The original form was a book of coupons, each good for an admission, special nights excepted, but the course of years have brought a number of styles, chief among which are punch card and the value coupon book. The latter is for houses where the price varies frequently with the attraction and it is necessary to meet this situation with tickets of varying prices. The coupons are printed up in straight five cent denomination or part fives and part ten, about one-third of the amount being for the lesser sum.

The punch card is good for a stated number of admissions, according to the price. Some of these carry the stipulation that they are good only at regular performances. Others use the line, "These admissions are good only for regular price performances. In the event of an advanced admission for a special feature the difference may be paid in cash."

Experience seems to prove that the best form of ticket is one good for a stated number of admissions, with the provision written into the ticket that it is not good for specially priced shows. This need not be made unduly prominent, and can be carried in a six point face, if desired.

The punch card is better than the coupon book from many points of view, but in some sections the coupon book is favored because it bulks larger. People want to feel they are getting something for their money, and some managers use a heavy wood stock in preference to the tougher but thinner linen paper, but the stock must be capable of taking the ink well, for a gift book of smeary tickets is no attraction to the prospective buyer.

The clever manager realizes that the best show gets the best sales, and dresses up his books. One manager who used the punch ticket provided a handsome Christmas card in colors with spaces for the name of donor and recipient. This was sent with the admission card, and made a much better impression than would the card alone. Others who use the coupon books leave a space for this data on the ornamental cover.

Whatever your scheme, if you have large industries or can sell off to merchants, arrange to make a special imprint in lots or fifty or more. For this purpose have some of the covers left unbound. Most of them are merely wire stapled, and can be bound by the ushers after the cards have been printed with the "Compliments of" and the business card of the firm.

Most of the sales will be made to individuals, but if there are large employers of labor it is possible to sell off the books for a gift from the firm to all its employees. Some merchants can also be sold on the idea of making gifts of the books to their more valued customers.

Make the price attractive in large lots. You can afford to, for any of the books will bring you new business. With a little effort even in a small town you can make a number of bulk sales. In larger places you will be pleasantly surprised at the business you can get with a well planned, but not too obtrusive, campaign.

Make up the books to sell for $2, $3, $5 and $10. If you feel that you can make the largest sales by offering a price discount, take the price from the nominal cost. Do not add to the face of the tickets. It is better to sell a $5 for $4.50 than to offer $5.50 for $5. This will especially appeal to the women on the familiar principle of the $1.98 style of merchandising. She will appreciate the price cut more than the added value.

Get right on the job and you'll not only make your own Christmas the merrier, but you will bring joy to a lot of others.

This department is continued on pages 143-4-5-6-7-8-9.

Want a Good Man?

It is not the province of this department to conduct an employment bureau, but we feel we shall be doing someone a favor in placing a manager now at liberty through a combination of circumstances in no way reflecting upon his ability or integrity. He is a better hustler for others than for himself.

He is a natural born space-grabber, and he always leaves himself in a position to come back for more from the same editor, if the editor does not seek him out first. He is an expert on making big stunts out of small happenings and creating the happenings when the supply runs short. He does not spend large sums for his work, but has the peculiar knack of getting much for little or nothing; of making the stunts pay for themselves or very nearly so.

He will do his best work in a place of around fifty thousand. He needs a town where he can make his presence felt. The editor will be glad to give fuller particulars.

Two New St. Louis Theatres, the Kingsland and Michigan

Fruend Brothers' beautiful new Kingsland Theatre, Gravois avenue at Kingshighway, St. Louis, Mo., opened on October 22 with Gloria Swanson in "Her Love Story." The theatre is among the finest outlying houses in this section and is fire-proof. The seating capacity is 1,200.

Fred Wehrenberg has announced that his new Michigan Theatre, 7220 Michigan avenue, will open on Thanksgiving Day with "Barbara Frietchie." He purchased the Michigan from Fred Hoelzer, along with the Ivory, Lidel, Marguerite and Manion's Park Summer Theatre a few weeks ago, and is rushing it to completion so that it will be ready for the grand opening on Turkey Day. The house accommodates 1,200 and will cost upwards of $125,000.

Burglars made an unsuccessful attempt to break open the safe of the Elks Theatre at Olney, Ill., several days ago and almost wrecked the strong box and office with three charges of nitro. Phil A. Heyde, manager of the theatre, said that had the burglars been thoughtful enough to have telephoned him he would have saved them a lot of trouble as there was nothing in the safe at the time.

William A. Doerge is managing the Opera House at Festus, Mo.

"Doc" Tetley's smiling face was seen at the Fox exchange on October 25. "Doc" looks after the film entertainment for the people of Flat River and Farmington.

H. Welch has sold the Amuse-U Theatre at Dupo, Ill., to Passek & Lock. The new owners plan to operate the house on Saturdays, Sundays and Wednesdays. The theatre seats 450 and does a very nice business.

Horace Green, well know eastern film man, has purchased an interest in the Pert Theatre, Gillespie, Ill., and will manage the theatre. At one time he was manager of the Triangle office in Philadelphia. He has had considerable experience in all branches of the business, including exhibition.

Tom McKenn, manager for F. B. O., is rapidly recovering from the injuries received in a recent automobile accident near Duquoin, Ill., and hopes to hobble over to his office during the coming week.

S. E. Pertle of Jerseyville, Ill., and A. H. Whitney of the Liberty Theatre, Mexico, Mo., were among the out-of-town exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the past week. Other visitors included Guy Alverson, Logan, Ill., and J. Dalrymple, Oblong, Ill.

Lures 'Em in with Chicken Dinners

A cafe in the lobby, or foyer, of a picture theatre is somewhat of a new one to most exhibitors. C. H. Lyman of Spencer, Neb., conceived the idea. His theatre had too large a lobby. It was a building formerly used for other purposes, and he just sort of inherited that lobby. What to do with it was the problem.

Lyman did not worry about it long. He converted it into a first-class cafe and now feeds most of the people of Spencer who have to eat downtown, and many from the surrounding territory who happen to be in town.

But he did not stop there. Sunday is a dull day and people wonder what to do. Also, lots of women do not like to spend all day in their kitchens. So what did Lyman do but start serving special chicken dinners on Sunday. It pulled strong, and after the dinner was over the people stepped in to see the show, especially since all the high colored billboards featuring the picture stared them in the face while they ate chicken.

Detroit

Bert Williams, manager of the La Salle Garden, Tuxedo and Palace theatres, Detroit, and a moving spirit in the erection of the elaborate new Grand Riviera Theatre in the northwest section of the city, announces that ground will be broken on the latter house within a few days as the last leases have been taken up and everything is in readiness for actual construction work. The house will be ready about September 1, 1925.

Another new theatre that will be ready for opening soon in Highland Park, Detroit's suburb, is the Grand Theatre owned and managed by Samuel Brown. It is a beautiful auditorium seating about 2,000 and will open about November 10.

Thomas D. Moule, manager of the Adams, Capitol and Madison theatres for John H. Kunsky, was severely injured when a horse he was riding slipped and threw him. He is ambling about on a crutch.

The Liberty Theatre, in which John H. Kunsky gained his start as a picture exhibitor back in 1912, has been closed after a more or less hectic career and doubtless has shown its last picture. There is a deal on to erect a hotel on the property and thus Detroit will lose its most historic movie landmark.

Detroit film theatres seem to be averaging a holdup a week. On top of the recent Ferry Field and Grand Victory robberies is that of the Central Theatre, which was entered for the second time within a month. Safe crackers blew the safe and got away with $200.

Larger Capacity Is Planned for Farbers' Buffalo House

Alterations have been made in the plans for the new theatre at 53 Jackson street, Batavia, N. Y., which is being built by Jacob and Samuel Farber. The new plans call for enlarging the seating capacity to 1,650, 1,200 downstairs and 450 up. There will also be a large dome built in the ceiling to give the effect of greater height. A large organ will also be installed. The brick sidewalls are up and workmen are now erecting the elaborately decorated front. The house will be ready for the public New Year's Day.

M. Shea and Vincent McFaul of the Shea Amusement Company were in New York City last week-end with plans for the mammoth new Shea house in Main street. The house will include a number of innovations in presentation.

Dr. Peter C. Cornell of the Majestic, Al Beckerich of Loew's State, Fred M. Shafer of the Lafayette Square and Henry Carr of Shea's Theatre compose the entertainment committee for the big show which will be staged in the Majestic Theatre on the evening of November 9 for the benefit of the Allied Fraternal Orders' Christmas Toy Fund.

A large new electric sign as well as electric attraction panels for use on the marquee are about to be installed at the Olympic Theatre, the Universal-operated house on Lafayette Square, Buffalo. The front has been redecorated so that with the installation of the new signs the house will take on a decidedly improved appearance.

L. R. Lipowicz, owner of the Family Theatre, Lackawanna, N. Y., is in the race for Senator from the 49th New York State District and at this writing things look rather rosy for his election. He will be a good friend of the exhibitor in Albany.

Most of Buffalo's picture houses are ready to furnish election returns to patrons on Tuesday evening, November 4. Several have made arrangements to get service direct from the newspaper offices, many are going to get the figures via Western Union, but the majority have installed radio sets in the houses into which the returns will flow from station WGR atop the new Hotel Statler.

"The Thief of Bagdad" opened in Niagara Falls at the International Theatre on Sunday, October 26, following the publication of the story in fiction form in the Niagara Falls Gazette. Herman Lorence of the Bellevue Theatre, Niagara Falls, used a double page spread in the enlarged edition of the Niagara American this week, which attracted much attention and in which Herman, in addition to boosting his current attractions, also drew attention to the coming attractions and the comfort features of his house. Charlie Hayman's Strand was represented by a full page ad.

Eugene A. Pfeil, manager of the Circle Theatre, one of the most popular of Buffalo's community houses, is installing a new orchestral organ which will be ready about November 15. The Verbeck Company of Buffalo will install the instrument in the Circle and will also put organs into the new Star, Angola, N. Y.; the Grand in Westfield and the Star in Tonawanda. G. Strasser of the Emblem, Jefferson at East Ferry, is now advertising the installation of a big organ.

"Empty Hearts" will open at William Goldman's Kings and Rivoli theatres day and date on November 8. William Goldman, owner of the theatres, plans an extensive advertising compaign.

Articles of incorporation have been issued to the Easton Amusement Company, capital stock $3,000. The corporation is authorized to conduct, maintain and establish places of amusement. The incorporation papers show Skouras, Maurice Stahl, M. A. Ross, all of the following incorporators: George P. St. Louis. It is said that the new corporation has a deal on looking to the purchase of the Aubert Theatre, Easton avenue at Aubert avenue.

Reinbolt and Paulding are now operating houses in Cabool, Mountain View and Winona, Mo., which they took over recently.

The Opera House at Sturgeon, Mo., has been closed.

Livingston Lanning, new resident manager of Marcus Loew's State Theatre, Eighth street and Washington avenue, is a striking example of the success of persistency, diligence and hard work. Lanning entered the picture business several years ago as a sort of general utility man under William Goldman, then managing director of the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard at Lucas avenue. Within six months he was made an assistant manager and then house manager, holding the latter position for three and a half years. Although but 29 years of age, Lanning has aided in the management of such theatres as the Metropolitan, the Grauman Theatre, Los Angeles, and the Mill Theatre, Dallas, Texas. He was also assistant to William Goldman at the Kings Theatre in St. Louis, being house manager.

An epidemic of scarlet fever in Barry, Ill., has caused the temporary closing of the Star Theatre there.

The Opera House, Edinburg, Ill., has been purchased by Edward M. Duffey.

Grateful Dog Presents Elias of Utica, N. Y., with Puppies

Jacob Elias, owner of the Cornhill Theatre in Utica, is confronted with a more or less weighty problem these days. To be absolutely truthful, there are six problems. It all came about one day last week when a homeless dog wandered into the theatre and Mr. Elias, big hearted as usual, decided to let it remain. But he failed to reckon with the future. A day or so later, one of the attaches of the house called Mr. Elias' attention to the dog that had wandered in but a short time before. Instead of one dog, there were six, mother and five little puppies. Mr. Elias rubbed his eyes, smiled a bit, but remained steadfast to his original decision that the dog should have a home. Of course it will never do for the Cornhill to house a half dozen dogs, but then that's the problem which is worrying Mr. Elias.

"You know, a cry is as good as a laugh to a woman," remarked Oscar Perrin, manager of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany one night last week. The remark came about when a woman passed him and as she wiped the tears from her eyes, was heard to say: "Wasn't that a fine picture? How I enjoyed it!"

Charles Sesonske, who is doing a good business with the Grand in Johnstown these days, rather has the bulge on the Schine boys of Gloversville when it comes to reaping the advantages of newspaper advertising. The two places are only a short distance apart, and Mr. Sesonske plays about the same pictures as the Schine brothers do in their Gloversville house a few days later, letting the Schine brothers advertise the pictures as they play them. Practically the same advertising does for both places, as the Gloversville papers are read generally in Johnstown.

Harry Lux, who runs the Alhambra in Utica, has what is generally termed a "man's house." Somehow or another there always seems to be more men present than women, probably due to the fact that Mr. Lux generally plays western pictures. Anyhow, he is doing well this fall. Last week he indulged in a hunting trip but with just what luck no one seems to know.

Harry Papayanakos made a special trip to Albany's Film Row during the past week for the purpose of booking "The Sea Hawk," "Sundown," "Secrets" and "Abraham Lincoln" for the Papayanakos chain of houses in Canton, Gouverneur and Potsdam. The Potsdam house, which will be known as the Rialto, and which opens this month, will use "Secrets" for its premiere.

No developments have occurred in Schenectady toward the sale of the State Theatre. Differences appear to have been patched up and it is now understood that the Barcli, lately taken over by W. W. Farley, will remain closed and that the State, Strand and Albany will continue to be operated by Farash Theatres, Inc., of which Mr. Farley is one of the officers.

Charles Moyer was down from Herkimer last week, booking pictures for November and December. Mr. Moyer is a thoroughgoing business man and looks the part He is always welcome along Film Row as he knows what he wants and his word is as good as his bond.

Samuel Suckno, whose Albany Theatre is doing fairly well these days as a first-run house, was a pretty sick man last week, with two physicians in attendance. During the week an X-ray picture was taken.

Lew Fisher, operating the Playhouse in Ticonderoga, the Empire in Port Henry and a theatre in Fort Edward, has just taken over the Cady Theatre in Chatham and will operate it with Mr. LaPointe, who was formerly associated with Mr. Kaplan in the operation of the theatre. It is Mr. Fisher's intention to erect a new house in Chatham next spring that will seat about 750. According to Mr. Fisher, two of his towns are what he terms "one whistle places" and suffering hard times. Although he manages to keep his theatre in Port Henry running six nights a week, at 25 cents admission, he stated last week that he might be forced to shut down as soon as winter prevents his drawing from adjoining territory. The place has been hard hit and not a wheel has turned since last May in the principal industry. Fort Edward is still suffering from a sixteen months' partial shut down in mills there. In spite of it all, Mr. Fisher continues to smile.

The contract case of the American Seating Company against Edward W. Colligan of Carthage was tried in Watertown last week and resulted in a non-suit.

After spending three or four hours along Film Row, booking for the Happy Hour Theatre in Lake Placid as well as the Lake Placid Club, Mrs. Walton, who hails from the well known resort, journeyed over to Schenectady one day last week and then, womanlike, "just visited."

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan of Schuylerville, well known exhibitors, have the distinction of being the first to buy film from the newly opened exchange which will be maintained in Albany by the Producers' Distributing Corporation. The exchange will be managed by Frank S. Hopkins, well known to exhibitors throughout a good part of New York State, and formerly with Universal and Vitagraph.

ANNE CORNWALL

Who will play opposite Douglas MacLean in his "Sky High," for Associated Exhibitors

Chris Lind, who claims to be distantly related to Jennie Lind, is the new manager at Odd Fellows Hall at Green Island, where pictures will be shown this winter. Mr. Lind stated the other day that he came from "down the river." Anyhow, he announced his intentions of getting out dodgers to distribute among the farmers on the outskirts of Green Island. Later on he will probably discover that the farmers are mainly Polacks.

Lubliner, Trinz and Stern Start New Chicago Company

Harry M. Lubliner, Joseph Trinz and Emil Stern of the Lubliner & Trinz circuit have organized the Tower Building Corporation with a capital of $200,000 to erect the new Tower Theatre on East 63rd street between Harper and Blackstone avenue. Work will start December 1 on the new 3,500-seat theatre that will show both pictures and vaudeville and will be one of the largest houses on the South Side. It is estimated that the final cost of the building and equipment will exceed $2,000,000. This will be the first house the circuit will have on the South Side, the other nineteen houses being on the west and north side of the city and the three houses under construction in the northwest and western parts of the city. This will give Lubliner & Trinz twenty-three houses in Chicago.

The Chicago Theatres Corporation, which was organized recently with a capital of $200,000, is the holding company for the Julian Theatre on Belmont avenue, the Shakespeare Theatre at 43rd and Ellis avenue, the Western Theatre on the West Side and the Buckingham Theatre on North Clark street. James E. Coston is president, Edwin Silverman vice-president and Louis F. Jacobson secretary-treasurer. Herbert Hoffman has been made manager of the Shakespeare Theatre and a new organ and other improvements will be made in that house. Lester Silverman will manage the Julian and new seats and other improvements will be made in that house.

Henry Stickelmayer has been appointed general manager of the Theatre Operating Company, Peoria, Ill., following the resignation of Charles Nathans. He will have full charge of all the houses.

A. C. Saunders is building a new theatre at Harvard, Ill. He operates the Palace Theatre.

Glen Swayze, assistant manager of the Auditorium Theatre, has returned from an extended stay on the West Coast.

Aaron J. Jones, Jr., son of Aaron Jones, head of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, has been made assistant manager of the Rialto Theatre, which is now showing feature pictures and news reels with the regular vaudeville program.

Paul H. Hogan, A. M. Reid and J. B. Erb have organized the Capital Projector and Film Company with offices at 155 North Clark street.

John Koletis of Rock Island and Oscar Komdat of East Moline have purchased the Family Theatre at Monmouth from Mrs. M. Osborn.

Theatre owners at Stronghurst, Ill., have to compete with a fund that has been raised by the merchants for free picture shows, which will be pulled off on the first and third Monday evenings of the month.

Leo G. Hana, H. A. Pieckles and H. Madimean have organized the firm of Bryant, Weil and Minturn to buy, sell and lease picture theatres in this city.

Joseph M. Kaiser, Walter J. Stuart and Albert M. Lee have organized the Chain of Lakes Corporation to operate theatres and amusements in this territory.

The Lincoln Belmont Theatre of the Lubliner & Trinz chain will be started soon at Belmont and Lincoln avenues. A permit for the construction of the house provides for a 3,000-seat house with the main entrance on Belmont avenue. The interior of the theatre will be of Spanish style with decorations in gold, marble and walnut.

Managing Director Joseph Hopp of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners reports the following new members for the week ending last Saturday: The Plumb Theatre, Streator, Ill., Ed. L. Scheibel; Clinton Theatre, Clinton, C. C. Corrington; Avon Theatre, Decatur, Gust. Constan; Lyric Theatre, Monticello, Mrs. E. E. Gibson; Orpheum Theatre, Georgetown, F. A. McGee; Majestic Theatre, Kankakee, C. B. Sawyer; Colonial Theatre, Danville, Wm. H. Heasman; Cort Theatre, Danville, I. C. Davidson; Empress Theatre, Danville, Earl S. Villars.

Spencer and Miller, owners of the Highland Park Theatre at Highland Park, Ill., have added the Lincoln Theatre at Sterling, Ill., to their circuit and will fix the house up with new draperies and new box office and redecorate. They expect to open early in November and operate on an exclusive picture policy.

E. P. Moran and Morris Hanna, who own the Strand Theatre at Holland, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Hanna will continue the management of the house. Moran will go into other lines of business.

Sam Horton will build a picture theatre at Albion, Ill., and expects to spend $25,000 for the building and equipment.

The boys are giving Reuben Schoenstadt of the Schoenstadt circuit the glad hand these days as a baby boy has arrived. Both mother and child are doing well, according to the latest reports.

Albany

Harry Hellman of the Royal Theatre in Albany journeyed down to Atlantic City with Mrs. Hellman for the purpose of feeling a little more fit. After reaching the well known resort, Mr. Hellman did what nine out of every ten do—he indulged in lobster. Perhaps it was the lobster, or perhaps the fish, but, anyhow, Mr. Hellman became ill and returned to Albany to regain his health.

Joe Raymond, manager of the State Theatre in Utica, one of the Goldstein houses, has booked "Messalina" to show from November 9 on. Utica has a heavy Italian population.

Exhibitors in the Albany territory supplied by exchanges in this city may be called upon to pay for all film three days in advance of shipping dates. The matter is under consideration by the exchanges, the managers of which are members of the Albany Film Board of Trade. The situation was carefully gone over at last week's meeting. It is claimed that in the past credit has been extended to certain exhibitors who have deliberately abused the same. The board is seriously considering doing away with all shipments on open accounts.

Radio will be used at three picture theatres in Albany and Troy on the night of November 4 in furnishing election returns to the audiences. At the Mark Strand Theatre, which was one of the first houses to attempt a radio entertainment, the returns will be received in the radio room in the rear of the theatre, with Herman Vineburg, resident manager, reading the returns. At the Troy Theatre, Uly Hill, general manager of the three houses, will do the same as the returns are received over the radio set in one of the rooms adjoining the stage. The Lincoln Theatre in Troy will not be equipped with a receiving set, but the returns will be telephoned from the Troy Theatre and read by Tony Veiller, manager.

R. V. Erk, former owner of the Big Ben Theatre in Ilion, was in Albany during the past week before appearing before the arbitration board.

Samuel Suckno and Abe Stone, Albany exhibitors, are not on speaking terms these days. The two aired their differences before the Film Board of Trade last week, the arbitration board standing three and three, with the result that a seventh person, not connected with the business, will be called in. The trouble came about through a contract in connection with the two houses acquired by Mr. Stone from Mr. Suckno.

Massachusetts Daylight Law to Be Voted on November 4

An appeal has been sent to Massachusetts exhibitors to help in making possible the defeat of the daylight saving law on Election Day when the voters will determine whether this law shall be repealed. A letter, signed by R. G. Larsen, president of the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, is as follows:

"Exhibitors of Massachusetts well know the financial loss which results from the daylight saving law. On Election Day the voters will determine whether this law shall be repealed. Now is the opportunity to help yourselves. If sufficient funds can be raised, suitable films will be made showing the public good and sufficient reasons why the present condition is harmful to our citizens. This is the only sure and logical way to get to the people, and, undoubtedly, will be the last chance of having this obnoxious law repealed.

"Your help is needed. Contribute what you can afford. It is suggested that large theatres contribute from $20 upwards and the small theatres from $10 upwards. Send your check to R. W. Drown, treasurer of the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, 67 Willow street, Lynn, Mass.

"The Film Exchanges will attend to the distribution to the theatres throughout the state of the films furnished by this association. With proper co-operation and effort, it is hoped that the repeal of the law, which is detrimental to many people and interests, will result. As the time is short, an immediate reply is requested."

Exhibitors of Massachusetts are asked to support the candidacy of Senator David I. Walsh, Democrat, for re-election to the United States Senate from Massachusetts, the appeal being based on the way in which the senator has aided the motion picture industry.

George W. Giles, owner of the St. James Theatre in Boston, has bought property, which includes a theatre, in Gardner.

Fire caused some damage on the sixth floor of the new theatre-hotel building now under construction at Hollis and Tremont streets, Boston. The blaze started in some lumber used for construction frames and was burning briskly when discovered.

Connecticut

Leo Feist, Inc., music publishers, has brought suit in equity in the United States federal court in Bridgeport against the Brooklyn Amusement Company. The Feist Company seeks an injunction to restrain the company from giving furthr performances for profit of two Feist songs.

Maine

William E. Decrouteau, manager of the Rex Theatre in Norway, Me., recently returned after spending several days in New York and Boston.

The Poland Corner Town Hall at Poland Corner, only film theatre in the town, was destroyed by fire on October 13.

Canada

Several unusual happenings have taken place in the family circle of the late Harry Brouse at Ottawa, Ontario, during recent weeks. Early in September, Mr. Brouse, who owned the Imperial and Franklin theatres, Ottawa, passed away with startling suddenness. Then his son, Bert, who had taken the management of the Imperial Theatre, was required to undergo a surgical operation from which he has recovered. A few nights ago an attempt was made to rob the house of Mrs. Harry Brouse at 370 Cooper Street and the episode resulted in the arrest of Charles Graham, a former policeman, who has been charged with attempting to enter.

The presentation of the Fox production, "Dante's Inferno" at the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, seemed to be too much for the projection equipment at the theatre because a fire broke out in the projection room during a performance when the house was crowded, causing damage to the extent of $1,000. Some smoke entered the auditorium of the theatre and about 75 people left the building, but the performance was continued after a short delay under the direction of Manager Don Stapleton.

Ald. P. J. Nolan, owner of the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, appeared in the juvenile court in answer to the charge of contributing to the delinquency of three boys when they were employed by his son, Ambrose, who has been acting as manager of the theatre, to carry signs advertising the Rex during school hours. A plea of guilty was entered and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed.

One of the most unusual developments in the theatre sphere of Canada has been the sale of the Delight Theatre, Estevan, Sask., to a syndicate of local medical men who are converting the place of amusement into a hospital. The Delight was built in 1911 and was one of the first in Western Canada to be built for moving pictures.

R. J. Lydiatt, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., for quite a few years, has removed to Chicago, Ill., to become general manager of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association. Mr. Lydiatt has been succeeded in the management of the Orpheum by W. A. Barnes, assistant manager, while the new assistant is A. K. MacMartin, who has been an exhibitor at Kamloops and Nanaimo, B. C., as well as having once been with the Capitol at Vancouver.

Dayton, Ohio, Showman Asks Relief from Labor Trouble

Robert J. Hirsch, who owns the Sigma Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, has invoked the aid of the court in order to continue the operation of his house. Hirsch has always heretofore employed only one projectionist but was always particular to see that he was a union man and received the union scale. However, a few weeks ago Hirsch alleges that members of Local No. 248 of the International Association of Theatre Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators sought to compel him to employ only such of their organization as they might indicate and to pay an increased scale which they would fix. Hirsch refused and began operating his own machine, whereupon he charges that officers and members of the union began picketing his house and conspiring in numerous ways to injure his business. Meanwhile, he remains in charge of the projection room.

The James Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, which has for some time been running vaudeville and pictures, has swung into the exclusive movie column, while Keith's Theatre, Columbus, has added first-run First National pictures to their hitherto straight vaudeville bills. The First National franchise has heretofore been held by the Colonial Theatre, which is now being razed to make way for a new commercial building in which the new Keith house will be located.

Fred Walters, who was manager of the Opera House, Lorain, Ohio, when that structure was damaged by a tornado a few months ago, has been appointed manager of the new Falls Theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, which was recently opened by M. B. Horwitz of Cleveland.

F. H. Baker, who was recently made manager of the McKinley Theatre, Akron, Ohio, is having the house redecorated and has announced a decided reduction in admission prices, although he will show feature pictures. Baker was formerly connected with the Grand and Mozart theatres at Massillon, Ohio, and the Allen at Akron.

The lid continues to be clamped down tight on Sunday in Ashtabula, Ohio. In fact, it has now been given an extra twist, since a news vendor has been arrested for having sold a single paper on Sunday. However, petitions bearing more than 3,000 signatures have been presented to the City Council requesting the reopening of picture theatres. A petition with 2,500 names submitted by the Ashtabula Ministerial Association recently is what resulted in the Blue Law enforcement originally. No action has been taken by the Council at this writing.

L. B. Wilson, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Covington, Ky., has produced a film under the title of "Winning Race," the production being made in connection with a "Miss Liberty" contest, conducted by the Kentucky Post. The young lady who was the successful contestant is star of the picture.

Max Meyer of Blackie, Ky., who has been operating the Rodney Theatre, has asquired the Apollo Theatre at Whitesboro, Ky. The house will be given a new name.

A. M. Ogden has been made manager of the Opera House, Greenville, Ohio, which post formerly was held by Paul Banker.

The residence of John Broomhall, manager of the Jefferson Theatre, Hamilton, was ransacked by thieves and a considerable amount of jewelry and precious heirlooms taken. The burglary occurred while the family were at the theatre.

Ike Friedman and M. H. Bryer, Akron, Ohio, have taken out articles of incorporation for the Waldorf Theatres Company, with a capital of $5,000. The company will operate the Waldorf and Ideal theatres at Akron.

The Louis M. Potter Company, Columbus, is preparing to erect a new theatre which will be leased by the James interests upon completion. The plans call for a 950-seat house, at an approximate cost of $175,000. The house is to be ready in May, 1925.

The Keith interests have taken over the Colonial Theatre, Dayton, and opened it as a picture house. This gives Keith's control of four out of six first-run houses in Dayton. The other two are Loew's Dayton and the Columbia, the latter being the only individually owned house in the group.

To Spend $75,000 Improving Pittsburgh's Strand Theatre

The Morgantown Amusement Company, recently organized among leading theatrical interests of Morgantown, W. Va., Pittsburgh and Uniontown, has made formal application to the city for a building permit to improve the Strand Theatre on High street, which was closed after November 1 for alterations. The application estimates the cost at $40,000, which is exclusive of approximately $35,000 the company expects to spend for new scenery, electrical effects and other equipment. The combination policy of attractions will no doubt keep in force when the house is reopened, as the owners have retained their franchise with Paramount and First National, as well as with Keith and Shubert.

C. M. McCloskey, of the Penn State Amusement Company, Uniontown, made one of his infrequent trips to Pittsburgh on October 20. Ostensibly he came here to attend the meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania to arrange for National Motion Picture Day, but he also made the round of the film exchanges on Forbes street, where he was warmly greeted by all of his old friends. "Mac" is one of the best loved theatre owners in the business, and stands for the highest type of showman.

The Capitol Theatre, Washington, Pa., which recently passed into the hands of Alfred Gottesman of Shenandoah, Pa., and New York City, was closed after the final show on October 25 for the purpose of making numerous improvements, and when it is reopened early in November it will be known as the State Theatre. The improvements will aggregate an expenditure of $20,000 and include entirely new decorations throughout, with new lighting effects. A modern electric sign will be erected at a cost of $6,000.

Jerome Dawson of the Victoria Theatre, Gallitzin, has practically recovered from a severe illness and consequent operation, and is again able to take up his old duties about the theatre.

George A. Huff, a newcomer to the theatre business, is erecting a picture theatre at Lock Haven and reports that he will be ready to talk to film salesmen about the middle of December.

M. A. Sybert, owner of the Strand, Park and Midway theatres, Moundsville, W. Va., is spending the winter in Florida. During his absence, his brother, O. J. Sybert, will be in charge of his three houses.

James Steele opened his new Bellevue Theatre in Bellevue to the public on October 20 and the spacious new house was jammed to the doors all evening. "Monsieur Beaucaire" was the attraction. The new Bellevue seats 1,400 and represents the last word in theatre construction. James Steele has conducted the Bellevue, a smaller house two blocks away from the new theatre, for several years, and with the opening of the big house, the older one was re-named the Pastime.

Mrs. Gertrude Gellatly, daughter of James B. Clark, head of the Rowland and Clark Theatres, presented her husband with a daughter on October 19. The newcomer is the second child, the first also being a girl, now 2 years old. Congratulations.

Mrs. Anna Mungello has taken over the Auditorium Theatre at Burgettstown, which she purchased from F. C. Norris. This is the fourth house in the chain now operated by Mrs. Mungello, she also controlling picture theatres at Atlasburg, Langloth and Slovan.

No less than 20,000 people in Braddock are wondering how the big balloon, carrying the advertising for "The Sea Hawk," kept changing its color from red to blue to green, etc., as it hung over the Capitol Theatre a week ago. Manager Joe Mercer had a powerful spot light on the roof of the Capitol and by means of colored slides kept the big balloon in a variety of colored lights and the people in the streets "looking up" in a continued state of admiration.

Charlie Feinler, popular Wheeling exhibitor, was in town a week ago. Charlie has just recovered from a severe illness and the boys are all glad to see him back on the job again.

A. J. Simon, years ago manager of Rowland and Clark's Strand Theatre in the Oakland district, Pittsburgh, is back in the local territory again, this time as manager of Pete Antonoplos' Frederick Theatre in East Pittsburg.

James B. Clark, head of the Rowland and Clark Theatres and member of the Board of Directors of the First National exchange, has returned to the city from Atlantic City where he attended the annual convention of the First National.

H. B. Kester of the East Liberty Cameraphone, accompanied by Mrs. Kester, has just returned to the city after a week's trip to Richmond, Va. "Kes" made the trip to look over Jake Wells' new Palace Theatre there.

Scene from Pathe's "Eve of the Revolution"

John Guthrie of the New Majestic Theatre, Grove City, Theodore Mikalowsky of Masontown and Walter Silverberg of Greenville were recent exhibitor visitors to Film Row.

Spokane Dramatic Critic's "Knocks" Hurting Business

Spokane exhibitors have lately been confronted by an unusual problem. At present the great volume of business is being done by the second run houses at popular prices. This is considered due largely to the fact that the dramatic critic of the two leading Spokane newspapers, both controlled by the same interests, has taken particular delight in panning practically every first-run feature to appear upon the horizon for some time past. The papers are the Spokane Chronicle and the Spokesman-Review. Theatre managers in a body waited upon the newspaper management recently to complain of these criticisms, which are destroying the public confidence in the standard of pictures being shown. Even pictures which have enjoyed nothing but excellent write-ups throughout the nation have received scathing criticisms from the pen of this woman critic. Not only are the films roasted during their showings but even after they have left town. Up to a short time ago, those houses with the largest advertising contracts did not suffer to the same extent, but recently the ban has gone on even those which help to make the maintenance of the newspaper possible. The exhibitor committee was assured by the management of the papers that these unfair attacks would cease, but no improvement in conditions has as yet been felt and criticisms continue with unabated venom.

J. A. McGill of Port Orchard, Wash., who enjoys the reputation of having built up a house that he purchased when it was under the cloud of poor management by a score of previous owners, was honored last week by being elected County Club Leader for Kitsap County. This represents every boys' and girls' club in the entire county, including the Sewing, Orchard, Garden, Canning, Pig and several others. It is particularly with the young folks that Mr. McGill has won his way. He has co-operated with them upon every occasion, financially as well as in other ways.

Manager Al Finkelstein has made at least one block on Second avenue look like "Fleet Week," with gorgeous pirate flags fastened from light posts and festooned on wires between. It is all over "The Sea Hawk" at the Strand Theatre, which after a live advance publicity campaign is doing a capacity business.

Ray Grombacher of Spokane failed to exercise the option he held on the American Theatre, a legitimate house, which for some time past has been operated by the bank. It is rumored that Junior Orpheum vaudeville will be run there starting December 1, but other theatre managers apparently do not place much credence in the report.

Jack Allender of Neil & Allender, Spokane, is off on a two weeks' hunting trip. Neil is in full charge during his absence.

Frank Hewett of the American, Hillman City, was in Seattle recently. Mr. Hewett is a pioneer in the picture game. He built his present house four years ago and enjoys a steady family patronage which is merited by the class of shows he puts on.

B. B. Vivian of Mount Vernon and Anacortes is publishing a snappy little paper twice a month, filled with live news, chatty discussions and an outline of forthcoming attractions. He calls it Theatre News.

Reports have it that Seattle is to blossom forth with a regional trade paper sponsored by Clyde Walker, who is reported to have considerable experience along these lines. He will call it the Northwest Film Journal and publication will be weekly.

The M. P. T. O. of Washington held a luncheon at the Calhoun Hotel on October 20. Congressman John F. Miller spoke and several excellent musical numbers were given. Over fifty were present.

One of the features of Seattle's "White Way" at night will be the Capitol Theatre's electric sign. It will be one of the largest and most brilliant in the downtown district and will contain 3,000 electric globes. Work on the Capitol is being rushed, three shifts are on the job and John Danz expects to have the house open by November 8.

San Francisco's Warfield Being Used as Test House

The Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, is becoming a test house for West Coast Theatres, Inc., and more world premieres are being held here than in any other house in the circuit. Indeed, it is doubtful if any theatre in the entire country can boast of more first showings of important pictures than this house. The latest premiere is that of Sol Lesser's new picture, "The Mine With the Iron Door," which opened to wonderful business on October 18.

George A. Oppenheimer and Alex E. Levin, who recently purchased the Coliseum Theatre, San Francisco, have taken possession. More than $500,000 was involved in the deal, which included all of the stock of the Park-Presido Theatres Company, Inc., formerly owned by Louis Hyman, Henry Meyers and Samuel Meyers, and a lease held by that corporation. The theatre was erected in 1918 by Samuel H. Levin, brother of one of the present owners. Alex E. Levin will have supervision of the Coliseum and the Alexandria at Eighteenth avenue and Geary street, and W. Harold Wilson will handle the publicity work.

Dr. Sue Tong Kee, who controls a chain of theatres in China, and who is also a producer in that country, was a recent visitor at San Francisco and made extensive purchases of equipment. He will visit New York before returning to the Orient.

A renewal of the lease on the La Bonita Theatre in the Richmond District, San Francisco, has been secured by Messrs. Jansen and Rockwell and extensive improvements are being made in the house.

The recently organized Pacific States Theatres, Inc., has closed for a theatre in course of construction at San Leandro, Cal., which will seat 1,400, and will have a house at Burlingame, Cal., which will seat about 1,500. The Franklin Theatre at Oakland has been taken over and is being remodeled throughout. It will seat 1,000.

W. J. Baker of the Lompoc Theatre, Lompoc, Cal., paid one of his infrequent visits to San Francisco late in October. He secures his film service from Los Angeles but comes to San Francisco for his theatre supplies. Conditions in Lompoc are described as being quite satisfactory, the town having made a substantial growth in recent years.

A. M. Bowles, general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., Northern California Division, has been bitten by the golf bug and is busily engaged in learning all about brassies, mashies, bunkers and the mysterious nineteeth hole. He will, no doubt, meet with the same measure of success he has attained in the theatre field and will soon be making the courses around the eighty mark.

A. L. Gore of West Coast Theatres, Inc., Los Angeles, was a recent visitor at San Francisco to confer with General Manager A. M. Bowles of the Northern California division concerning proposed extensions in this field.

C. L. Laws, manager of the California Theatre, Watsonville, Cal., has returned from a trip to New York, where he claimed as his bride Miss Katherine Radcliff, formerly of Watsonville. The members of the staff of West Coast Theatres, Inc., made the couple a gift of a box of electrical appliances. During the absence of Mr. Laws the Watsonville house was conducted under the management of H. E. Losh, assistant manager of the California Theatre at Richmond.

H. L. Beach of the Beach & Krahn Amusement Company, Berkeley, Cal., has returned from a trip to leading eastern cities.

Lewis & Byrd, who recently secured the lease on the Universal Theatre, Hanford, Cal., have closed and dismantled the house, formerly operated by a Japanese exhibitor.

A new picture house will soon be opened at Merced, Cal., by J. A. Harvey, who formerly operated in the Sacramento Valley field.

Ward Casady, recently made assistant to Manager Clem Pope of the T. & D. Theatre, Oakland, Cal., is meeting with great success in his new position.

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

These dependable tips come from exhibitors who tell the truth about pictures to help you book your program intelligently. "It is my utmost desire to serve my fellow man," is their motto.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

Send tips to help others. This is your department, run for you and maintained by your good-will.

Associated Exhibitors

BILL OF DIVORCEMENT. (5,819 feet). Star, Constance Binney. An English picture. Pretty well done and fairly satisfying. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SPITFIRE. (7 reels). Star, Betty Blythe. A fair picture. Nothing to get excited over. Will do for any small house. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

THREE MILES OUT. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Here is a story with plenty of action, and if they like action, why, here it is. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

F. B. O.

UNKNOWN PURPLE. (6,950 feet). Star cast. A very good picture; not a special but as good as many so-called specials. Play it. You should please the majority. Print new. Tone, none. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

WESTBOUND LIMITED. Star, Ralph Lewis. A picture which should get the business anywhere. I boosted it as much as I was able to and did a fine business with it. I obtained a wonderful trailer, free of charge, from the exchange and it helped to do the trick. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

WOMAN WHO SINNED. (6,500 feet). Star cast. One of the best pictures for a long time and was bought in five minutes at a reasonable price. Went better than some of the high-powered specials they are weeks in selling us at a wad of money. Buy it, play it; you will be glad. Tone extra good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

First National

SEA HAWK. (12 reels). Star, Milton Sills. A fine period picture that pleased all who saw it, but it only drew one-half houses after first matinee. My people prefer more recent period plots. I was disguested with attendance. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Farmers, town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

SEA HAWK. (12,045 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Certainly a fine, wonderful picture. Liked by all, but more especially by the men. Milton Sills did the very best work of his career. Didn't think he had this kind of material in him. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Extra fine audience appeal. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A very fine picture, well liked. The only criticism we find is that it was two reels too long. If it had ended just as the story was at the end of sixth reel, all fine and dandy. No use of it going ahead for two more reels and making the hero out to be a chaser. It was a pure bonehead. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

SKIN DEEP. (6,500 feet). Star, Milton Sills. This slipped up on me; went over big and had many compliments on it. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers, fishermen, town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

SKIN DEEP. (6,500 feet). Star, Milton Sills. This is old but a very good picture and drew fairly well for a week-day picture. Print was unusual for First National but not near as bad as the Paramounts I have been getting. Tone okay. Suitable for Sunday, depends on your patrons. A little rough. Good audience appeal. Draw from mostly out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

SLANDER THE WOMAN. (6,400 feet). Star, Dorothy Phillips. This is a good picture if you can get your people to see the point. Most persons I spoke to said, "It's good but it's padded entirely too much," or words to that effect. Poor house, in theatre of 700 seats. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

SMILIN' THROUGH. (8 reels). Star, Norma Talmadge. A picture a little old but a good picture that will please most people. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Country and town class, town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

SUNSHINE TRAIL. (4,500 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. Fair feature that pleased a good many. Nothing extraordinary about this one but it will go over well with the majority. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fifty-fifty. Mixed class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star cast. Everyone who saw it enjoyed it, but it didn't seem to have much drawing power behind it. The story is absolutely modern and up to date, but some way it seems to lack the big punch to put it over. If your town is a prohibition town, lay off of it. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, none. Farming and small town class, town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star, Warner Baxter. A real picture of crooks and bootleggers. Action, plenty of it. Suspense? Oh, boy! But not the right kind of title. The title keeps some people away. Tone not so good. Sunday, no. Good attendance. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

WHITE MOTH. (6,550 feet). Star, Barbara LaMarr. Picture resembled "Zaza." Too many like it. Cast and acting very good. Pleased audience. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. People that almost hated the movies came to this one and some of the women who came without husbands went home after the first show and brought them in for the second show. "A Print from First National." Tone good. Suitable for any day Audience appeal, couldn't be beat. Draw from mostly out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. Good entertainment. Pleased the majority. Good comments. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. A splendid picture from every angle. If you played "Dangerous Age" you know what to expect from "Why Men Leave Home." Lewis Stone grows more popular here every day and will be a real drawing card in the next picture we have him in. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Farming and small town class, town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

WOMAN ON THE JURY. (7,431 feet). Star cast. One of the best pictures ever shown in this theatre and we have played the best. More like these and the industry can't help but grow. Pleased one hundred per cent. Print also pleased one hundred per cent. Tone fine. Sunday, sure. Audience appeal, wonderful. Draw from mostly out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

Fox

AGAINST ALL ODDS. Star, Buck Jones. Not up to Buck's standard; action somewhat slow and too many night scenes for a small amperage arc. The fans do not care for Buck any more due to the fact that Fox has put him in so many lemons. Put him back into the old wild and wooly westerns and his old following will rally round the flag once more. Buck, as a western, rough ridin' cowboy, has no peer. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

ARIZONA EXPRESS. (6,516 feet). Star cast. A melodramatic knockout. Pleased immensely in this house where thrills are popular. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. High audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

BIG DAN. (5,834 feet). Star, Charles Jones. We liked this one. The kids in the picture help put it over. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

CIRCUS COWBOY. (6,400 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Not much action to this one but will please Jones followers. Print good. Tone okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

EYES OF THE FOREST. (5 reels). Star, Tom Mix. This was very good entertainment for Saturday crowd. Some good stunts. Pleased the most of them. Nice roads, fine weather, good crowd. Tone good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Business and farming class, town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

SIX CYLINDER LOVE. (7 reels). Star, Ernest Truex. Due to title and fact that star was unknown this picture failed to draw them. However, the production is a good one and it is chock full of good, clean comedy that brought forth some good laughs. Star's work excellent; in fact, the whole cast did splendid work. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Several weeks ago our good friend E. N. Prescott, of Union, Maine, said he'd send in the dope on his showing of "The Covered Wagon"—as he expressed it, "a Two Horse picture in One Horse towns."

The tip is here. It's more than just a report—it's a human-interest document, and so I'm giving it a good lot of room on another page.

Don't hesitate to shoot in your reports on the big ones, fellows. The man who sends tips is helping a host of exhibitors.

TELL THE WORLD THROUGH THIS DEPENDABLE TIP DEPARTMENT.

VAN.

SOFT BOILED. (7,054 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Fairly good entertainment but a little too long. My audience take to Mix like a duck to water. Plenty of comedy to hold interest. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 600. Admission 10-25. J. B. Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

STEPPING FAST. (4,608 feet). Star, Tom Mix. This would have been a good Mix picture except for rotten print. It came to us in about three reels. Patrons disgusted. Tone, possible. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. Neighborhood class, city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

THIS FREEDOM. (7,000 feet). Star cast. True to the book and ably done, but our audience do not like English-made pictures. It is not worth much unless your patrons know the book. Did not draw for us, though it is far from a poor picture. Fair audience appeal. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Metro-Goldwyn

ARAB. (6,710 feet). Star, Ramon Novarro. Good at the box office but not so satisfactory from entertainment standpoint. Patrons expected more from the combination of players and producers. Fair audience appeal. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

BROADWAY ROSE. (7,277 feet). Star, Mae Murray. A splendid picture to fair business. This is one of Mae Murray's best. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,290. Admission 10-15, 10-20, 15-25. Hubert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CIRCE, THE ENCHANTRESS. (6,882 feet). Star, Mae Murray. Just a Circe as of old, on a little island in Greece, cast her magic spell on all who came her way, Cecile of Long Island fascinated all men; and, like Circe, turned them into beasts. A heady, sparkling story of a wayward beauty, Circe, the enchantress. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

ENEMIES OF WOMEN. (10,941 feet). Star, Lionel Barrymore. Magnificent screen version of splendid novel. Has everything an audience could desire. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andrews Theatre, San Andrews, California.

ETERNAL STRUGGLE. (7,374 feet). Star cast. A fine northern mounted police story. This one extremely good and drew very live business. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

FOOL'S AWAKENING. (5,763 feet). Star cast. All seemed to enjoy it. Very good indeed. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star cast. Very fine picture. Horse race, fire and prizefights good. Pleased about ninety per cent. Will draw better class. An elaborate production. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star cast. A very fine attraction that everybody who reads newspapers and magazines should be interested in for the cast alone. Nobody was left out but William Randolph Hearst and the Prince of Wales. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

GREEN GODDESS. (9,100 feet). Star cast. Did not do a big business in this one, but it surely pleased all those who saw it. Personally I thought it excellent. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

HALF A DOLLAR BILL. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Few pictures are made any better. That is, my people liked it. Matinee put over night show. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

HEARTS AFLAME. (8,110 feet). Star cast. Fairly good picture. No unfavorable comments. In fact no comments at all. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,290. Admission 10-15, 10-20, 15-25. Hubert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

HELD TO ANSWER. (5,601 feet). Star, House Peters. Fair picture. Business off. Weak audience appeal. All classes, city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (668 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

HELD TO ANSWER. (5,601 feet). Star, House Peters. We were agreeably surprised by this, in that it pleased fine, though it did a terrible flop at the box office. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. High audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK. (10,000 feet). Star, Marion Davies. We class this as one of the best pictures we ever ran, from every angle. This means the box office, too. Didn't make what we should as we paid too much rental. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr.

Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

LONG LIVE THE KING. (9,364 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A fine picture that will please the grown-ups as well as the kids. Good audience appeal. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

WHITE SISTER. (10,400 feet). Star, Lillian Gish. A very fine and interesting picture. William Noble, Folly Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

WHITE SISTER. (10,400 feet). Star, Lillian Gish. The most beautiful and appealing photoplay ever shown on our screen. A finished piece of work both from acting and direction point of view. Beautiful story. Highly pleased all. Big business. Tone wonderful. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 25-40. Children ten cents. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

WOMEN WHO GIVE. (7,500 feet). Star cast. One of the best sea pictures ever screened. Better than "Down to the Sea in Ships," and we paid twice as much. Admission 10-30. J. Russell, Russell Theatre (462 seats), Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

WOMEN WHO GIVE. (7,500 feet). Star cast. A mighty fine picture; but an awfully poor title. Sounds like a sentence unfinished. It will please, but try and get them in. They didn't come to see it in my town. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

YOLANDA. Star, Marion Davies. Your lips at last. Here is a beautiful, likeable romance with all the glittering splendor that a million dollars can put into a motion picture. Live again the days of chivalry. Just like a fairy tale come true. In this romantic masterpiece Miss Davies achieved new heights in her subtle characterization of the charming Princess Mary of Burgundy, who whimsically impersonates the character of Yolanda, a burgher maid, in order to test the sincerity of the love of her impetuous admirer. William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Paramount

EMPTY HANDS. Star, Jack Holt. A very good attraction. Tone not so good. Sunday, questionable. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star cast. A photoplay that will please a large percentage of the public. I'm rather particular myself and a good story was spoiled by the "Coward" becoming lion-hearted and a William Tell overnight. However, it is an interesting picture of antibellum days on the Mississippi, with its southern mansions and sidewheel steamboats and life on the level. The cast is a good one, with Ernest Torrence in another one of his fine character studies. Get this one by all means. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

GUILTY ONE. (5,635 feet). Star cast. A good program picture. Full of suspense. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

24 At Once

When Al. C. Werner, of Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania, "lays off" reporting for a week or so, he doesn't forget to be generous the next time he shoots in his dependable tips.

This week he sends twenty-four in one envelope. That's being good to "Our Gang."

HOW ABOUT YOU?

HER GILDED CAGE. (6,249 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Swanson fails to register continuously with rugged type audience. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. Farmers, fishermen, town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT. (5,785 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Very good western that was well liked here. All of the Zane Grey stories that we have played have been good, but this one is not as good as "Call of the Canyon." Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30.. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

ICEBOUND. (6,471 feet). Star, Richard Dix. The title kills this one, but nevertheless it is a very good little program offering. This New England story gives both Dix and Lois Wilson ample opportunities to display their abilities. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

LILY OF THE DUST. (6,811 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Pola does good acting in this, but a poor story. Too gruesome and a poor ending which sent people away dissatisfied. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Bad audience appeal. All classes. Admission 10-13. F. E. Wheeler, Strand Theatre (280 seats), Scotland, South Dakota.

LILY OF THE DUST. (6,811 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Nothing extra. Played to poor business two days. Audiences did not care for picture. Tone fair. High and middle class, city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Drew fine. Went over big. This is by far one of her best. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. All classes. Admission 10-13. F. E. Wheeler, Strand Theatre (280 seats), Scotland, South Dakota.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A very pleasing picture that people wanted to see and enjoyed it after they came. More of a comedy than anything Gloria has done of recent years and she took very well in this lighter vein. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. General class, town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is a pretty good picture. However, my people did not think it was half as good as "The Humming Bird" or nearly as good as "Society Scandal." A good many people praised it. But a larger number kicked and found fault with it. This is the first time I have had any kicks on a Swanson picture and couldn't account for it. Some complained that the picture was not as good as the story. I paid as much as for "The Perfect Flapper." It took in one-half as much. Tone okay. Audience appeal good. All classes, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. (6,337 feet). Star, William Farnum. Don't let anyone sell you the idea that this is above program pictures. It did a poor business and failed to please those who saw it. Too much emotional acting, of which we are all tired. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Poor attendance. High and middle class, city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre, Helena, Montana.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A pretty fair costume picture but not the kind for "Rudie." Some liked it; others said it was rotten. Costumes gorgeous, photography fine. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Drew fair. The settings and costumes are fine but the people here do not like costume plays. Do not think this will take good in small towns. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal just fair. All classes. Admission 10-13. F. E. Wheeler, Strand Theatre (280 seats), Scotland, South Dakota.

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. (9,932 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A super-special with elaborate sets. Elegant costumes, but a period picture which somehow never pulls good here. Acting of Valentino excellent, but this type of story does not fit his personality. People wanted to see him in something dashing and full of fire. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal: would please better here had star been cast in story that suits his type. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

MONTMARTRE. (7 reels). Star, Pola Negri. It is a story of the Latin quarter of Paris. Sixty years ago. That alone killed it here. My people said, "Just another of those cheap foreign costume pictures," and stayed away. Pola wasn't very pretty. Poor audience appeal. All classes, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

NEXT CORNER. (7,081 feet). Star, Conway Tearle. This just didn't interest them. People walked out on it and some remarked that they couldn't see why such pictures were made. Tone good. Poor attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

OPEN ALL NIGHT. (5,671 feet). Star, Viola Dana. A novel picture; not big but different and at regular admission price. Should please. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Farmers, town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,264 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Not as good as some of his earlier productions, but nevertheless is a very good picture. The print was the usual Paramount, rotten; spent six hours remaking loose patches. What's the matter with Paramount? Tone all right. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal: Meighan always draws. Draw mostly from out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,264 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A very good sea story that pleased the majority of our audience, but is not to be classed as a big special but will please most all of the Meighan fans. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners town of 600. Admission 10-25. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,264 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Good picture that failed to draw. Many people came up looked at the title and walked away. Paramount paper is the bunk for small towns. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. This pleased our patrons as well as anything this star has done. It is well done, though greatly resembling "The Humming Bird" in story. Ought to please most audiences. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Better than some of her former productions. Tone, good. Audience appeal, good. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

Prescott's Promised Report On "Covered Wagon"

"Howdy, Van and 'Our Gang'.

"Here comes the Old Scout fresh from the 'Covered Wagon' outfit after one week's visit in my three towns.

"Inasmuch as my towns are 'Small Towns' (having a population, respectively, of 2,200, 1,300 and 1,200), it may be of interest to many of you to know what a picture of this calibre with a good advertising campaign can do, in face of the fact that money conditions are not the best.

"I started my advertising three weeks in advance of showing, using slide and posters; used fifty ones, three threes, sixes, fifty window cards, two thousand heralds and individual mailing list of nearly fifteen hundred. Two weeks before showing, used newspaper with small write-ups in the news. The newspaper co-operated by grouping around the advertising the items of local interest in towns from which the particular houses drew—items of all towns within a radius of thirty miles.)

"One week in advance of showing used stock cut ad., two cols. by six inches, still keeping up the local items in news columns.

"All right for the advertising.

"Monday—October THIRTEENTH!—(here's where the music starts, for the thirteenth is considered as unlucky and this was the marrow in my bone of contention—Two p. m. arrived and NO 'Covered Wagon.'

"A call to the exchange informed me that my print was played in a town forty miles distant, and that the man who was routing same from one place to the other should arrive at any minute.

"But minutes went by!—until I informed my patrons that we would have the show in for the evening performance.

"Five p. m. arrived—and no 'Wagon' in sight. Again I frantically got in touch with the exchange with no mild request that they get busy.

"Seven o'clock arrived. I got a call from the exchange to the effect that they can't locate their man in any of the territory he should be in. Gentle Julia! Did this make my spine straighten? I could not find words in quantity or size that could express my thoughts.

"Getting in touch with my house man, he told me that automobiles were packed in the street, about blocking trolley car service, with an estimated six hundred people lined up in front of my theatre, anxious to spend their half dollar. Some of them came a distance of forty miles!

"These people had to be told there would be no 'Covered Wagon' that evening.

"I did not hear a wheel squeak on the whole darned caravan until Tuesday. Noon, the following day—the telephone jingled and to my surprise it was the Man With The Show!. I can't repeat here my conversation—it would never pass the Censors!!! IT SEEMS THIS MAN WAS ATTENDING A VERY LARGE PARTY AND OF COURSE COULD NOT ATTEND TO BOTH THINGS AT ONCE—and as my show was 'of minor importance' it got jilted.

"This happened in my largest town, which I had banked on for my draw, and so was cut short one day with no less than seven hundred admissions gone over to the loss column—The price of a Party, eh?

"However, it BROKE ALL RECORDS FOR ATTENDANCE AND RECEIPTS for one week over any other production, drawing people a distance of sixty miles.

"My advertising sang a tune of $75.00, which many would hesitate to spend on a small, one-horse circuit, but it brought home the bacon in generous quantities.

"FROM MY EXPERIENCE, I DO NOT BELIEVE THERE IS ANY TOWN TOO SMALL FOR SUCH PRODUCTIONS AS THIS IF YOU GO AFTER IT HARD.

"But—don't stint your advertising!

"The public will never know if you don't tell them!

"By all means—for your sake and the sake of your patrons—

"Play 'The Covered Wagon'."—Sincerely, E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

eaten up but for the most part people here say "no" to the so-called Paris underworld drama. Average house, moral tone could be better if the heroine had not been in love with a thief and leaves the house of her husband to meet him. Some towns won't mind this. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre, (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

SILENT PARTNER. (5,866 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. Fair entertainment at a fair price. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small town class town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (259 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

SINGER JIM McKEE. (7 reels). Star, William S. Hart. This is slow. The value of this picture would be increased fifty per cent. in my estimation by cutting out about two thousand feet. Also the ending isn't, according to what most of my audience want. After seeing this picture I don't need to ask why Paramount and Hart didn't get along. Paramount has too many brains higher up to release another like this. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, star's following. General class town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Piere, South Dakota.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. (7 reels). Star, Richard Dix. Very interesting; extremely so to male patrons, in that part where Bebe goes bathing on the desert Island presumably with no one near her swimming pool. The picture as a whole, is well produced acted and with a decided twist to the ordinary plot of today. Should please at any theatre. I would not advise any exhibitor to invite the ladies and society, or the ministers to attend, but a whisper to the male patrons should have them all trying to get in. It will be long remembered here by those in attendance as being the nearest thing to "The Garden of Eden" yet produced. (They sinned, and imagined they were in Heaven). Sunday, no. Farmers town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. One of Pola's best. In fact, much better than some of her newer ones. Step on it, boys. It will stand up under any boosting you can give it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. This picture did not draw much business for us and would be much better if it was not so long. This is a well produced and interesting picture for a high class audience but will not please the average audience. Farmers and miners town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

STEPHEN STEPS OUT. (5,152 feet). Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Fair little program. Different. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, sixty-five per cent. Small town class town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

STRANGER. (6,660 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Good enough with a thrill here and there, but too much film to tell the story. People don't want to sit three hours to see a show and they don't want to see a feature without the "trimmins." Tone, good. Poor attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

STRANGER. 6,660 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A good picture and one that kept the audience guessing all the time. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes. Admission 10-13. F. E. Wheeler, Strand Theatre (280 seats), Scotland, South Dakota.

TO THE LADIES. (6,268 feet). Star, Theodore Roberts. Just what the title would indicate. It's a fair picture, any my patrons seemed to like it, but it did not draw. Tone, good. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. Good feature. Worth seeing. Not as good a drawing card as other DeMille features. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

UNGUARDED WOMEN. (6,051 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Good program picture. Pleased very much. Should suit anywhere. It will stand boosting. Farmers town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. The scenery is beautiful, the coloring wonderful and the story extra good. The title, star, author, and advertising accessories are all business getters. It pleased everyone. It appears to be slightly out of focus, but strangely enough this seems to help rather than hurt the looks of this picture. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats), Graham, Texas.

WILD BILL HICKOK. (6,892 feet). Star, William S. Hart. This one went over very good for us but for a western picture it has more than the usual amount of "sob stuff," but it should please where they like western stories. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

ZAZA. (7,076 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A good picture from most any angle, fine acting. Great photography. Work of star credit to the role of cast. Should go in most any town especially where they do not care for the heavy type. Tone, good. Good attendance. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit Theatre (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

Pathe

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Well boys, this one holds our house record for number of admissions. Lloyd is an excellent drawing card here. We had trouble getting our print in. We were to play it on a Friday and Saturday, but the print did not get here in time for Friday showing. Due to a mistake on the part of the shipper in the exchange in directing our print for shipment it did not arrive until Saturday. We turned hundreds away on Friday night and you can imagine how we felt. I can't understand why the exchanges don't pay more attention to shipping directions given them by exhibitors. We held it over until Monday and drew good houses on Monday. I must say though that we received a good print on this Lloyd for a change. Practically all the other big Lloyd's we played we received poor prints. Tone, okay. Family picture. Audience appeal, ninety-nine per cent. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). A very fine western that will draw a good crowd in any community if correctly advertised. It is a horse picture with a good story. The scenery is fine and the human interest which the horse creates makes it a picture that you can depend on to do good business the second day. I ran it but one day and regret it. I should have had it on a two day showing. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. This is some thriller. Tried to keep the audience quiet, but they just wouldn't when Harold pulled one of his thousand dare-devil stunts. I advise any exhibitor to play this one. Tone, okay. Agricultural class town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

VIRGINIAN. (8,010 feet). Star, Kenneth Harlan. Here is one that will bring them in and please ninety per cent. Nothing but good comments from patrons. Agricultural class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE. (7,179 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. This is a great picture. Patrons said it was just as good, if not better than "Birth of a Nation." Got wonderful mouth to mouth advertising. James Macris, Happy Hour Theatre, Springville, New York.

FREE AIR. Star cast. Just a fair picture. Some action and pretty scenery. It gets by and that is about all. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town and farming class town of 600. Admission 10-20-10-30. H. W. Batcheler, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN. Star cast. Very pleasing picture, of the comedy-drama type. Pleased eighty per cent. I ran it as a substitute. Sent me this one in place of the one I bought. J. G. Flanders, Majestic Theatre, Kerens, Texas.

TIGER THOMSON. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Good. Box office value C. S. Pryor, Grand Central Theatre, Austin, Texas.

WISE VIRGIN. Star, Patsy R. Miller. A corking good story. High class. Our only objection being we have had too many pictures with Patsy Ruth Miller starred. Customers remark about it. A keen picture, however. Tone, very good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, excellent. City of 250,000. Admission 25-40, children ten cents. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

Selznick

DAUGHTERS OF TODAY. (7 reels). Star cast. A jazz picture which pleased. Drew ordinary. Tone, fair. Sunday, questionable. Good audience appeal. High and middle class city of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

WHITE SHADOWS. Star, Betty Compson. I substituted this for "Daughters of Today." Poor show. Slow and very bad direction. Action jumpy. Only good part is the scenic shots. Tone, doubtful. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. Family class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

United Artists

HILL BILLY. (5,734 feet). Star, Jack Pickford. I don't see how exhibitors can "pan" this picture. May not appeal to "society" audience but pleased rugged type ninety per cent. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers, fishermen town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

Friend Robinson "Drops In" At Last

"Dear Van: Never dropped in with a personal letter to you before, but I must, to tell you how much I enjoy 'Tips' Department, and give you many thanks for the help they have given me.

"I help all I can, although I am a small exhibitor in a small town, but I give them a good show, THANKS TO TIPS!

"See in a letter from Brother Prescott, he is playing the 'Covered Wagon.' He says if he comes out alive he will Tell the World what he can do in a one horse town.

"I know how well he will do. He will do the best business in his history. I did!" (And Prescott's letter this week proves Robinson a good prophet—Van.)

"I played it two nights to 450 paid admissions and it has played all the larger towns all around me. I figured I had a radius of six miles to draw from, but I won't complain—oh, no!

"Am waiting to hear how Prescott comes out.

"You've surely got a great, dependable department, Van. More power to you and all your supporters."—Clarence E. Robinson, Town Hall, Carmel, Maine.

HUNCKBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. We consider this the greatest box office attraction available. This is return engagement and both engagements have broken box office records in dollars. Tone, excellent. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 25-40, children ten cents. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Repeat engagement to very good business. Fine audience appeal. All classes city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (668 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11,000 feet). Star cast. A remarkable picture from the standpoint of production and where you have a high class patronage it should go over one hundred per cent. Go after this as you would once in a year and it will back you up with twelve reels of the greatest entertainment ever put on the screen. It will stand fifty cents in any town. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

K, THE UNKNOWN. (8,146 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. Took hold fine. Big opening and held up all week. Virginia Valli and Percy Marmont made fine team in this Mary Roberts Rinehart story. Tone, okay. Sunday, Family audience appeal. Family class city of 100,000. Admission 25-35-50. Jack Roth, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri.

RED WARNING. (4,750 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A good western picture that will please all okay. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Country and town class town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

RIDERS UP. (4,904 feet). Star cast. A dandy comedy race picture that will please. I call it a good picture. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good. Country and town class town of 500. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (300 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

RIDGEWAY OF MONTANA. (4,942 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. About on a par with his others. If your audience likes westerns give them these Hoxies, as they are as good as the average line of such stories. Tone, okay. Sunday, pretty rough. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,000 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. All of Gibson's fans should enjoy this picture. Although not straight western, it possesses a lot of kick. Tone, good. Questionable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. High and middle class of 12,000. Admission 10-30. C. B. Hartwig, Antlers Theatre (500 seats), Helena, Montana.

SIGNAL TOWER. (6,714 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. A very good entertainment. Plenty of fast action and suitable for audiences that like melodramas. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 2,000. Admission seventeen cents. J. H. Fetty, Red Wing Theatre (300 seats), Laurel, Maryland.

SIGNAL TOWER. (6,714 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. Pretty good melodrama. Nothing new to story but well handled. Great railroad scenes in a picturesque country. Two fine wrecks. Tone, fair. Sunday probably. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Vitagraph

LOVE BANDIT. (6 reels). Star cast. I guess it's all right. Nothing to rave over but will do for a Saturday night in a small town. Not suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, twenty-five per cent. Country class town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

MIDNIGHT ALARM. (6,000 feet). Star, Alice Calhoun. This is another good audience picture. People enjoyed it very much. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

ONE LAW FOR THE WOMEN. (6,000 feet). Star cast. A western drama of the better sort which makes an excellent program offering. Tone, fair. Sunday, weak. Audience appeal, seventy per cent. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

PIONEER TRAILS. (6,920 feet). Star cast. This is a very good picture. But oh boy! what a price I was fool enough to pay. Broke even. If you can buy this as a feature and at right price it is a good bet. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

VIRTUOUS LIARS. (5,650 feet). Star cast. A fair love story with not much action but lots of mush. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeals. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

Warner Bros.

PRINTER'S DEVIL. (7 reels). Star, Wesley Barry. Not much of a picture. Very little appeal, only to children. Did not draw well. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and country class town of 1,290. Admission 10-15, 10-20, 10-25. Hubert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

TIGER ROSE. (8,000 feet). Star, Lenore Ulric. This is a very good picture, but we had to pay so much for it that we didn't make much. Wonder if everyone pays so much for Film Classics. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, pretty good. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

TIGER ROSE. (8,000 feet). Star, Lenore Ulric. A wonderful story of the Canadian northwest which pleased my audience as much as any picture which I have shown in a long while. Heard many good comments on it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Large audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

Comedies

BACK STAGE. (Pathe). "Our Gang." Not so good as some of the previous numbers, but still above average comedy. "Our Gang's" are all good. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

BALLOONATIC (First National). Star, Buster Keaton. An old one but a riot for fun. In fact, we played it with "Cornered" and people commented more on "The Balloonatic" than "Cornered." Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

BIG SHOW. (Pathe). Stars, "Our Gang." Not as good as some of their others; but at that better than a lot of so called comedies. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

BRIGHT LIGHTS. (Educational). Star, Bobby Vernon. This comedy has an interesting theme or plot and pleases patrons exceptionally well. Find Educational comedies exceedingly high class and delighted. Tone, fair. Sunday, questionable. Splendid audience appeal. College class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-30. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

H. H. Speaks Up

"Best regards, Van—and Gang! "Am sure 'The Gang' is with us when we say that we certainly do appreciate your 'drive' for better prints, although we have no complaint against the New Orleans exchanges; they are doing their best and are sending out good prints." —H. H. Hedberg, A-Muse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

BUSTER. (Educational). Star, Lee Moran Absolutely in a class all to itself. One of the best comedies ever played in this house. You should have heard the laughter. Boys, you owe it to the made patronage of your house to play this one. The ladies enjoyed it, too, and the kids went wild. Everybody was talking baseball at time we played this one as world's series had just closed. Now they want to know when we will show another with Lee Moran. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred percent. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

DAY OF REST. (Universal). A very amusing comedy that kept the people chuckling and laughing from beginning to end. Men, ladies and children liked it. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (425 seats), Graham, Texas.

EDUCATIONAL SINGLE REEL COMEDIES. All very good but the prints are somewhat poor. Neighborhood class city of 15,000. Admission 10-15. V. A. Ponsant, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Waterville, Maine.

ETIQUETTE. (Fox-Sunshine). This was a fine take off on a book agent. Brought lots of laughs. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

FLICKERING YOUTH. (Pathe). Star, Harry Langdon. Good comedy and that's all you want. Print good. Sunday, yes. All classes in big city Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

GOING EAST. (Educational). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. This Hamilton pleased exceptionally well here. Much better than majority of its predecessors. That is it has action and is rather funny. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

HIGH POWER. (Educational). Star, Lige Conley. A sure enough high powered comedy as it had them laughing from start to finish. The glue episode came mighty near making them raise the roof off the old shack. Comedies like this and "The Busher" make 'em talk for days afterward. Add this one to your Saturday night program, boys and send 'em out with "busted" sides. Tone, slapstick. Sunday, don't know. Audience appeal, one hundred percent. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

HOT SPARKS. (Educational). Star, Cliff Bowes. This was a dandy one reeler. The only thing the matter with it for us was that it was badly cut up and was very short. We want better prints. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

IT'S A BEAR. (Pathe). "Our Gang." Can't beat it. It's one hundred per cent. comedy. Old and young went wild. An extra good one. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

LET'S BUILD. (Pathe). Spat Family. This comedy seemed to please. Pathe have some good comedies and I think as a rule are above average. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats) Montpelier, Idaho.

LOOK OUT BELOW. (Educational). Another extra good two-reel comedy with lots of action. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

LOVEY DOVEY. (Pathe). These Dippy Do Dads are sure fine. Everyone enjoys the comedy. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

PATHE SINGLE REEL COMEDIES. (Pathe). Everyone of them very good. Better than most of the single reels on the market. The Dippy Do Dads, though, are rotten for me. Good only for kids. Neighborhood class city of 15,000. Admission 10-15. V. A. Ponsant, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Waterville, Maine.

SOUTH OF THE NORTH POLE. (Pathe). Spat Family. These are all good and this one ran true to form. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

STEEPLECHASER. (Educational). Great. Has lots of action and everything. Kept the audience in good spirits. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE. (Educational), Star, Bobby Vernon. Not as good as most of Bobby's comedies. Can only be classed as fair. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Weak audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

WHERE AM I? (Pathe). Star, Snub Pollard. Just fair. Pollard comedies don't seem to have the pep they should have. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

Serials

FAST EXPRESS. (Universal). Star, William Duncan. It seems to be holding up. Personally I do not care for serials, but this one seems to please majority. I don't call it a knockout. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

LEATHERSTOCKING. (Pathe). Star, Edna Murphy. On the third episode and to date it classifies as an average serial. Charles Le Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

LEATHERSTOCKING. (Pathe). Sure did pull them in for us. Wish it could have been fifteen episodes instead of ten. Agricultural class town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

Short Subjects

AESOP'S FABLES. (Pathe). Better than the average comedy. Terry is certainly clever. Neighborhood class city of 15,000.

FAST STEPPERS. (Universal). Star, Billy Sullivan. This series started off pretty good. I don't think it will be as good as the "Leather Pushers." It's something out of the ordinary, anyway. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

PATHE REVIEWS. (Pathe). Very good for a filler. Natural color in these beautiful films should please any type of patronage. Prints always good. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

Miscellaneous

KING'S CREEK LAW. (William Steiner). Star, Leo Maloney. A western of a different sort, but hardly up to the standard. Has plenty of comedy and will please. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. Neighborhood class city of 80,000. Admission 10-15. M. F. Meade, Olive Theatre (450 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

LEAVE IT TO JERRY. (State Right). Star cast. A dandy little program picture that held interest all the way. Not much of a title, but get them in and it will please. Tone, food. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

LUCK AND SURE FIRE FLINT. (C. C. Burr). Star, Johnny Hines. Both of these Hines features are far above the average. Light in plot but plenty of action and humor. Johnny Hines sure rings the bell. Frank Atkins, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Marysville, California.

PERFECT ALIBI. (Progress). Star, Leo Maloney. A good Independent western picture. Leo is a good western star and we all like him here. The Progress Pictures Co. no doubt uses great care in buying pictures, and are a fine bunch to deal with. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William S. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

PERFECT ALIBI. (State Right). Star, Leo Maloney. An extra good western. The dog Bullet sure knocks them cold. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, yes. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

PIONEERS GOLD. (Sanford). Star, Pete Morrison. Nothing to it, stay away. It seems this star cannot make good. Good rider and makes a good appearance but he will not go over for me. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

PUTTING IT OVER. (Goldstone). Star, Dick Talmadge. He sure went over all right. In fact all of this star's pictures have made money for me. Should be given a chance in the big pictures, as an example, Doug Fairbanks "His Majesty the American." Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

PUTTING IT OVER. (Truart). Star, Richard Talmadge. Splendid small town picture. Full of stunts. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Splendid audience appeal. All classes town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

RIDERS OF MYSTERY. (Independent). Star, Bill Cody. Star unknown but pleased a Sautrday capacity attendance. Lots of comedy and action. Star is a comer. Print new. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

SMILIN' ON. (Sanford). Star, Pete Morrison. A good little western picture that pleased the few who saw it. More like this one and Pete would have a good following, as he does his stuff to perfection. His riding wonderful in this one and the photography was fine. Good Saturday night picture, as there is a good fist fight here. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, good. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

TWO FISTED TENDERFOOT. (Independent). Star, Franklyn Farnum. Just a fair western picture. Star has lost out here. Story's too weak for him. Should please western fans. Print new. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

VENUS OF THE SOUTH SEAS. (Bradford). Star, Annette Kellerman. Underwater scenes helped to put this over. Story not much. Will stand one day showing. Print new. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

VENUS OF THE SOUTH SEAS. (State Right). Star, A. Kellerman. This would be a good picture if there was only a story to back it up. There is no story and naturally no plot to sustain the interest while Miss Kellerman does five reels of diving and swimming. Better book a news reel of the Olympic Games and be able to give your patrons something interesting. Tone, not good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, none. Farming and small town types town of 3,500. Admission 10-35. W. B. Renfroe, Dream Theatre (600 seats), Sedro Woolley, Washington.

YOU ARE IN DANGER. (Lee-Bradford). Star cast. Very good though not much action until last reel. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Neighborhood class city of 15,000. Admission 10-15. V. A. Ponsant, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Waterville, Maine.

HOW BALABAN AND KATZ HANDLED A SECOND RUN

This ballyhoo was worked on the popular-priced run of The Covered Wagon at the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago. A half-breed Indian family was used. Marshal Field's store made a drive on toy covered wagons in the store and newspapers.

Long Distance

One of the best long distance stunts of late was worked by J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas.

He addressed 2,000 postcards on the Alaskan, signed by Tom Meighan. These were sent to Capt. A. E. Latham, of the Coliseum Theatre, Anchorage, Alaska, for mailing.

About the time they were due back, Harrison sent out another thousand cards, to different names, through the local post office. Now the women who got cards from Alaska and those who saw the Waco postmark are trying to figure just where Tom Meighan is. They all agree he is presently to be seen at the Hippodorome.

Here's an intelligent idea.

George J. Schade, of Sandusky, has recently put out a dozen handsome photo frames which are affixed to the walls of shops and other downtown locations. They cost him several hundred dollars. He tried them out on When a Man's a Man and believes from the result that they will soon return their cost.

They are handsome affairs of polished hardwood, with glass doors and are used for the display of stills on coming attractions. They command many times the attention of the most striking posters and carry greater conviction. Of course, Schade does not dispense with posters just on this account. They supplement his colored displays.

Betty Powdered

One of the best sellers on The Enemy Sex at the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas, was a mechanical display designed by J. P. Harrison. This showed a mirror on which was pasted a picture of Betty Compson. An arm working on a pivot and holding a real powder puff, charged with powder, touched the Compson nose even more often than the average stenographer takes the shine off her beak. The powder had to be renewed now and then, but it was worth that trouble to hear the exclamations as the powder sprayed.

How One Library Works on Features

Sometimes librarians get the idea that a librarian is a person hired to keep books, but most of them figure that librarians are there to loan books, and the livest librarians believe that it pays to advertise.

There is a live wire in Jacksonville and this card is one of a pair, each about the size of a one-sheet, hung in the lobby of the Public Library.

THE LIBRARY CARDS

The librarian told Charles Morrison, of the Imperial, that the showing of a filmed novel not only increases the demand for that particular book, but for all the works of that author, which explains why Locke's large output is advertised. He beats the Famous Forty by seven numbers.

Morrison went to some pains to explain that this was not a circus story, though he used a clown ballyhoo. The clown was something of an acrobat and Morrison had the back and front signs lettered two ways so you could read them whether the bally was on his hands or his feet.

He got the best opening day he ever had, and the picture held up well, going better than average business.

Changed a Letter

When H. C. Farley, of the Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., copied the police tag idea he changed one letter and made it read: "Polite notice." The rest of it told that Jackie Coogan would be at the Empire on a certain date.

It was a good idea, but we think that few automobilists are particularly interested in Robinson Crusoe, Jr. It should have been held for a more adult attraction.

READING THE SELLING THE PICTURE TO THE PUBLIC DOWN IN GUATEMALA

J. C. Searcy is assisted by William Carter Searcy and Betty Searcy in selecting stunts from this department to use in putting over the Capitol Theatre, Guatemala City. The front is not as elaborate as some of the Capitol Theatres here in the States, but it seats 1,700 in the orchestra and the "galeria" takes care of 600, using First National, United Artists, Metro and Pathe releases, supplied through Robert Wilcox & Co.

Jazzed Navigator in Nashville Run

Naturally the Navy Recruiters were the logical hook-up to The Navigator, and a pass to see the Keaton comedy was promised all who enlisted during the run at Loew's Vendome Theatre. In return the recruiters permitted one sheets of Buster in sailor uniform to be posted on all their A boards, overpasted with the offer. They also covered a special recruiting booth.

More than that, when the Marines played a local football eleven, heralds for The Navigator were inserted in all the programs, and fifteen cutouts of the one sheet were carried by the players in the parade which preceded the game, a band of one hundred pieces getting attention for the turnout.

A Keaton hat was offered with each purchase of three cakes of Life Buoy soap, and all grocery and drug stores displayed the hats. Hats were also given the patrons of two clothing stores and samples of Life Saver mints were passed out by a girl in a sailor suit.

It helped to put over about the funniest picture Keaton has ever made.

Told Her Secrets

The entire population was let in on Norma Talmadge's secrets when her Secrets came to the Palace Theatre, San Antonio, Texas. The house made a huge diary of sheets of bristol board, on each of which an entry had been made with a crayon marking pencil to get large letters. Mounted on rings, similar to a loose leaf, the pages could be turned until the book was read through or curiosity satisfied. It was one instance where it was not considered impolite to read over another's shoulder. It had to be done.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

TWO hours and thirteen minutes was the length of time required for the show which had "Feet of Clay" as the photoplay attraction. The picture itself ran one hour and thirty-eight minutes, and the Mark Strand Topical Review took up the usual eight minutes, thus leaving twenty-seven minutes for the four musical presentations.

Chief of the stage incidents was One Arabian Night, a colorful thing in pantomime, song and dance, which while harmonizing perfectly with the type of film story was neverthless of enough contrast to make it a distinct and separate presentation. This number required ten minutes and was balanced into three parts, opening with "Ah Moon of My Delight" sung by the tenor; then a dance and pantomime to Oriental Ballet Music, and then closing to the Kashmiri Song by tenor and male quartette. The set had a transparent back drop showing minarets, mosques, etc., and this was masked in by an Oriental arch standing five feet in front of the drop. Thus all the lighting was from behind the arch excepting for the dances done on the full stage in front of the set. A platform was between the arch and the drop and from this six steps led to the stage. Props on the platform were Oriental couch, throne chair, pillows, drapes and carpets. At opening a Sultan-type tenor was seated in the big chair, with male quartette in period costumes grouped at back. Girl in harem dress seated on floor at sultan's feet. After the first song by the tenor came the dance by eight Oriental maidens, and then a solo dance by premiere danseuse, who supplants the other girl in the sultan's favor. "Pale Hands I Love" finished the number. Baby spots of magenta, blue and pink, concealed behind the mask, lighted the platform and back drop. For the dances straw and amber floods from the booth and dome were used. Orchestra covered by pale white dimmed down.

The overture was "Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody," for which the silver draw curtains were closed over the small production stage and lighted by the following: two arch spots of light blue and two of amber on the pleats. Dome floods on orchestra, one amber and the other lemon. Blue borders on large stage; entrance spots of color blend on ceiling drapes and sides. Seven minutes for this Lisza overture.

The Ritz Male Quartette, in "soup and fish," came out on the apron of the large stage, in front of the orchestra, and sang "Follow the Swallow," then "Do You, Don't You." There was an amber flood on the singers from the booth. The silver draw curtains remained on the small stage as in the overture. The floods from the dome were dark violet on the orchestra. Five minutes.

Water Lilies was a novelty effect number with members of the ballet. There was a water sheet stretching along the front of the production stage upon which a special surf film was projected, in which were water lilies. Back of this was a ground row across the stage upon which was painted water lilies, greens, etc. A large white moon was in the sky, throwing a reflection across the water by means of a machine at the side. The girls were between the top of the water sheet and the ground row, showing only from head down to their waist. Music used included a tenor solo, "Now Sleeps the Crimson Petal." Five minutes for this.

Adaptable

Howard Price Kingsmore started something when he used the color-this-picture stunt for Wanderer of the Wasteland at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta.

It has done splendid service on this title, but Gavin Hawn, a Paramounteer, did not see why The Wanderer should have the monopoly of the good idea. He tied it to The Covered Wagon at Loew's Valentine Theatre, Toledo, and it worked just as strong for that title.

The offer of three covered wagons, of dwindling sizes, for prizes landed it into the columns of the News Bee with no space bill attached.

A Universal Release

THREE ITEMS FROM A NON-ALCOHOLIC CAMPAIGN ON WINE FROM MILWAUKEE

A. J. Meninger distributed free "wine" in the lobby of Ascher's Merrill Theatre, using specially printed paper cups, but admitting that the picture possessed more kick than the wine. He also used a fountain of wine-colored water under a bower of grapes. You can use your own judgment about the lobby banner, but remember the camera distorts the drawing.

Hooked His Hour to Riding School

Getting away from the usual line of hook-up work, Loew's Palace Theatre, Washington, D. C., sold a riding academy on the idea of a parade for His Hour, and provided one of the girl riders with a military costume to give color to the parade.

A dozen riders took part in the turnout and they attracted no little attention on the streets.

Most riding academies cater to the well-to-do, and getting the youngsters to ride in a street parade seems to be some stunt, though Metro offers no suggestion as to how this was done. It would be interesting to know just what arguments were employed.

In any event, an unusually good business was achieved, to which result this stunt contributed not a little.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

SOMETHING DIFFERENT IN THE LINE OF A HOOK-UP

Loew's Palace Theatre, Washington, D. C., tied the pupils of a local riding academy to the idea of ballyhooing His Hour, and one of the girls was provided with a military costume in keeping with the atmosphere of the story.

Curbed the Cub

When A. B. McCoy booked The Female into the Majestic Theatre, Louisville, Ky., he arranged a display of guns in the window of a sporting goods store with a card saying that the weapons were similar to those carried by the hunting party in the picture.

It looked all right, but to get it jazzed a bit, a bear cub was borrowed from a local zoo. He went into the window on Friday morning, and Saturday night it took two hours to rope him and take him out.

The exit was due to the interference of the local S. P. C. A., which thought the bear's morals were being hurt by his—or her—ballyhoo career, or perhaps it was regarded as a cruelty to let so many people stare at him—or her.

Anyhow, the bear went out of the window, but the work had been done and the interference only served to take the story into the newspapers.

Got the Books

Her Love Story, Gloria Swanson's latest, is taken from a short story, Her Majesty, and not from a novel-length, which hurts the book tie-ups unless you copy Russell B. Moon's stunt, which is putting the picture over in Chicago.

He has nearly a thousand booksellers advertising that Her Love Story is taken from Her Majesty, which appears in Temperamental People, a collection of short stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Moon's cards are printed, and carry stills from the play, but a hand-lettered card will work just as well in a small town. Dealers like the idea since the book is still in the two-dollar class.

Tasteful Lobby Was a Beaucaire Appeal

Trying for a lobby that would suggest the character of his feature, Ralph Noble, of the Palace Theatre, McAlester, Okla., closed in his lobby with compo board and painted it to match the general style of the house decoration. A light stencil design, the lettering and eight stills were the only ornamentation.

The one sheets which are shown in the photograph obstructing the entrance were moved away during showing times.

Mr. Noble had a circus and a County Fair to fight and still got the business. He did not attempt to horn in on the circus parade. Beaucaire was not the type of play to lend itself to that style of stunting, but he did put out a pair of boys with sandwich boards to announce the return of Valentino to the screen, and held them to where the crowds were thickest.

With the name to draw the fans and the sightly front to impress those to whom Valentino is merely a name vaguely known, he drew from all classes.

A Paramount Release

A GRACEFUL FALSE FRONT TO MATCH BEAUCAIRE

A simple stencil design and a few stills gave the Palace Theatre, McAlester, Okla., a display that harmonized with the style of the Valentino offering. The structure was designed by Ralph Noble. The one sheets do not belong where they show.

An F. F. V.

Richmond, Va., beat New York to Feet of Clay, and Harry Bernstein, of the Colonial Theatre, made the most of his first World's Premiere. He was helped by the fact that Vera Reynolds comes from Richmond, and he got flaming headlines to tell of the "Triumph of Another Southern Beauty." While he was about it, Bud Gray, Paramounteer, got him to elaborate on Miss Reynolds' connections to help the picture all through the South.

Congratulatory telegrams from Lasky, De Mille and Miss Reynolds played an important part in the campaign. To save trouble the Paramounteer wired them to Los Angeles and had them repeated.

They very nearly broke the house record, but it is still too close to summer.

YOU CAN'T DISGUISE A FORD WITH A SIX SHEET

But Jack Edwards, Universal exploiteer, turned a Ford into a nifty perambulator for The Hunchback when it played the Temple Theatre, Hammond, Ind. The same structure can be used repeatedly.

Bill Robson Finds Weatherproof Paper

William Robson, who has been Paramounteer in Pittsburgh all these years, has made a discovery.

Now and then Bill gets out a special sheet for some of his customers and now and then a rain storm will come along and leave nothing but four tacks where the paper should be.

That doesn't make a hit with the man who is paying the bill and he is a bit apt to blame it all on William.

In self defense Bill has dug out a paper that will withstand most washdowns and the average small cyclone. Most sign writers stock it and know it as "Fibre banner stock."

Now you know as much as Bill does, in this respect, at least. With a hard winter predicted by goose bones, corn husks and squirrel hoards, it is a good thing to know.

It is a little more expensive than the usual paper stock, but it is much cheaper than getting out two sets of paper and buying another pound of tacks.

Bill tried it for some special paper on The Sideshow of Life and liked it so well that he broadcast the idea.

Tod Browning Has His Own Close-up

Harry (Tod) Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, has changed his program-form to carry a larger amount of text, and has called it the Olympia Close-Up, though "Close-Pp" is the title used by all of the Paramount theatres for their house organs, and the Olympia is a First National house.

But the Browning first issue is a pretty thing with a smart sketch on the front page done with just enough red to give contrast to the black. Few managers would use the second color with such restraint, and yet it is this economy of red that makes this Close-Up look like something important.

The first issue is largely given to The Sea Hawk, with line sketches of the characters. Typographically it is as nice a piece of work as the most exacting could demand. It is not one of those issues of which you hopefully write that it will take shape in time. It was born with teeth and whiskers.

To induce reading, ten names are printed each week and on identification the owners of those names will be presented with passes. He is also printing a numbered coupon, five of which, consecutively numbered, are good for an admission. The number is changed weekly, and you must have from one to five or two to six or so on.

Both are good stunts to ensure reading, so Tod should be doubly assured a proper circulation.

There is a hint of something coming off in an advertisement for 500 automobiles for advertising purposes. We presume this will come out later, for he is always on the jump.

Split Contest

Charles Morrison, of the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, hooked a newspaper to a dual composition contest on America to launch that production.

One subject was Why I Like America Best, and was open to foreign-born children, while native-born wrote on Why I Am Glad I Am an American. The prizes were $15 for each division. The Mayor and the Superintendent of Public Instruction were two of the judges, the third being the business manager of the co-operating newspaper.

It helped to make an unusual business.

Eight by Eighteen

Among other stunts worked for The Sea Hawk at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis. was a lobby painting eight by eighteen feet, showing a flock of old-time ships plowing a very dusty ocean. Perhaps it's the smoke of a sea fight, for the photograph is not very clear, but it looks more like dust. Anyhow, it made a fine flash.

Faked an Ad

Playing on the fact that in the new Potash and Perlmutter production, In Hollywood, the famous partners desert the cloak and suit business for picture making, the Marion Theatre, Marion, Ohio, took a new line.

A local store was closing down and taking pages to tell of its bargains. The theatre took a quarter page for a "Good-bye forever sale" at "Savings of one-half, one-fourth and even less." They were ashamed to tell how low the blouses had been cut and declared that their nightgowns never would be worn out. The entire space was in a similar vein, ending with the explanation that they were selling out to get In Hollywood with Vera Gordon and the rest of the cast. It sold the new comedy with the laugh that the play added to.

A Paramount Release

A LOBBY THAT WAS WORTH ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS

At least this was largely responsible for an increase of that sum over the average, for Manager Carroll did very little else to advertise The Alaskan. Some sections did not care much for this Megian picture, but Tampa more than liked it.

House Manager Is Own Sky Exploiter

Jack T. Turner, of the Galax Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., was an airman during the war, and served with credit, so it was comparatively easy for him to borrow a plane and fly it on an exploitation trip over the city in the interest of Sinners in Heaven.

As he was going to drop parachutes with single trip and one season pass he told the newspapers about it, and then had to tell the story to explain why he had to use a plane to harmonize with the story, so he got some fine advance stories.

Being a thoughtful sort of exploiteer, he picked a day and hour when most of the people in the town made famous by Octavus Roy Cohen were out on the street to watch a parade. It gave him a maximum amount of publicity for a minimum of expense.

Lem Stewart suggests to other Southern Enterprises managers that they can push parachutes off the tops of tall buildings if they lack planes, and get some, if not all, of the effect.

Mr. Turner further used his pull to get the loan of parts of a plane recently crashed, which was made the center of a tropical island lobby, the floor being sanded, with plenty of potted palms.

With two roadshow pictures for opposition, Mr. Turner completely obliterated all previous business records with a very small newspaper campaign. It looks as though Sinners would run Feet of Clay to a dead heat in Southern territory. Both are gathering them in.

ANOTHER SHOT OF THAT WASHINGTON PERAMBULATOR

We showed this some time ago posted for a First National. Now comes a better one with Beaucaire trimmings. This is the only specially built street car perambulator we know of. It is lighted from above at night. Show it to your street car company.

Had Woman Driver

With an Elks' Carnival for opposition, E. G. Peebles, of the Dauphin (Manitoba), Theatre, crashed the parade with a covered wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen.

Sure, it has been done before. What made this different was that Peebles had a woman in a calico dress to gee-haw the team. That made more money than Peebles had a right to expect with a carnival opposition.

Two Old Timers

Two time-tried stunts made business for The Signal Tower in Toledo, though they involved a generous use of free passes. They were suggested by Andrew Sharick, of the Universal exploitation staff.

One was the free tickets to careful drivers, but in this instance the Blade told of the stunt on the front page, but printed the license numbers of the auto drivers in the classified ads.

The other idea was to give free admission on taxicab receipts, in return for which the cab company took a 150 by two display advertisement for the attraction. That's nearly two elevens.

All you had to do was to drive in a taxicab to the Temple Theatre and hand in your meter receipts at the box office. Toledo receipts give the number of passengers, and this was a check on the demand at the box office.

Paper Hankies to Catch Lloyd Tears

It is pleasant to record the fact that A. A. Fielding is now located at the home office of F. G. Spencer, Ltd., in St. John, N. B. His fine record as house manager has won merited promotion.

In his new position he can effect considerable saving through laying off a stunt to several houses, as is evidenced by one recent idea. He used the old handkerchief stunt to promote Harold Lloyd in "Girl Shy," but instead of using cheap cotton handkerchiefs, he employed paper napkins.

These cost him $1.40 per thousand and the printing for three houses cut the press job to $1.50 per thousand, which made the napkins stand him $2.90 complete.

The squares were printed:

"A handkerchief
"To catch the tears,
"Since you'll laugh
"Until you cry,
"When seeing Lloyd
"In Girl Shy."

This may or may not be poetry, but handed to the patrons the week before the run, it got their curiosity aroused, and most of them took them home. They were handed out neatly folded, with the printing inside.

A large quantity were printed up and the surplus given to restaurants when the run opened. They used these in place of their own, and were glad to get them.

HOW THE BEAUCAIRE TWENTY-FOUR WORKS AS A CUTOUT

Clayton Tunstill, of the Rialto Theatre, Chickasha, Okla., got a fine lobby display and used the lettering for his banner, making a double use of the poster. Spotlights were trained on the cutout in the evening to heighten the effect.

Ten Tonsorialists

It took only part of a day to sell off a page hook-up to the ten barbers and beauty shops of Terre Haute, Ind.

Maurice Fox, of the American, went around with Paramounteer Irvin Waterstreet. They showed the capillary clippers, the pictures of the Swanson Bob and they all signed on the dotted lines. It happened to be Manhandled, but it will work on other Swanson plays.

Sells Metro Trio In One Big Space

The U. S. Theatre, Paterson, N. J., takes a four tens to open the season with the announcement of three big Metro productions. The greater space is given Jackie Coogan in Little Robinson Crusoe because this opens the season, on Labor Day, with a special morning matinee for children only, but The Arab and The White Sister are also included in the announcement as a sample of what is to be expected. These are dismissed with a line apiece where even in an advance it would be well worth while to give a better description. "Love and romance with a dynamic punch" is rather weak selling of a colorful play. Comment should have been made on the authentic locale and some mention of Ingram would have helped, for he is one of those directors whose work is followed. Probably this is all looked after in various press stories, but the place to put one's best foot foremost is in the display advertisement. This is the opener for the season and all three should have been played up strongly; particularly since they will make good for the commendation.

THREE OF A KIND

Manhandled Sale

Bill Danziger got into Manitowac, Minn., just in time to persuade a local store to change its copy and advertise a Manhandled instead of a bargain sale. Manhandled was coming to the Mikadow Theatre.

Then Bill got the junk dealers to organize a parade of cars "Manhandled, but still good," and each car was bannered for Kadow's Theatre.

And he very generously loaned the local barber a stock cut of Gloria that he might advertise the Swanson bob, and the Mikadow.

Makes White Space A Chief Attractor

The best thing about this three eights from the Rialto Theatre, Macon, Ga., is the space where there is no printing. This is not a slam at the copy. It's good copy, but the best possible copy would be useless without display, and the white ensures the reading of the comparatively small amount of copy. We think that the use of small types should have been given a larger letter, and has been carried a little too far. The stars have gone in a larger letter, preferably boldface. There would still be plenty of white to catch the eye, for the upper part of the space could not be greatly improved, and the contrast between the straight roman of the premise and the boldface lines of the conclusion is decidedly good. If you read it all through from the start, the boldface gives a punch. If you read the boldface first—as many will—then the interest aroused will cause the opening paragraph to be read. No cut, no matter how good, would give a better result than this strong play-up for an attention-getting title, but this title reverse would be valueless without the surrounding white space. Set into a display with a lot of bit black type and it would lose about eighty per cent of its value.

Triple Play

J. A. Callahan, New England Paramounteer, has been appealing to the lunch wagons to print a stock cut of The Covered Wagon on their paper napkins on the general appeal that covered wagons should help each other.

In Norwich, Conn., Callahan worked it a little differently. There was a fair in progress and the napkins were distributed to visitors as they left the fairground. They were printed with the advice to eat at the Hayes Lunch Wagons and then see the Covered Wagon at the Strand.

The lunchman paid for the printing but Callahan passed them out. The Strand paid for the napkins, which made it a triple play—Strand to Hayes to Callahan.

A CLEVER COMBINATION

Princess Theatre, Toledo, on The Alaskan. We think the Princess got a little too enthusiastic in its copy. The Alaskan is scarcely "the picture you will be talking about the rest of the season," and to sell upon such strong recommendation will hurt sales for stronger pictures. With that line out, the copy would be good, for it simply tells what the play is about and adds an appreciation of the unusually good cast. The cut stands out the best point in the advertisement.

His Fourth

A. E. Jarboe, of the Royal Theatre, Cameron, Mo., reports the successful conclusion of his fourth annual style show. He gives only one a year, but that is put on in big town style, the local store supplying everything but the films and including twelve models. With a change of the feature Mr. Jarboe can pack them solid for two nights. Now the Style Store, the cooperating firm, is working with an extra force of salespeople on a two weeks' rush.

If you overlook the style show as a regular feature you are not only keeping money out of your pocket, but you are cheating the local merchants.

Cut and Title Are Big Selling Points

Loew's State Theatre, Buffalo, sells Babbit mostly on the supplied cut. No effort is made to supplement the lettering, it being considered that the title, the author and the cut of Willard Louis would be about all that was needed. We think it was. Babbit was made known to readers through the book or the newspaper comments. The man who has not heard of the story could not be sold in any reasonable space, and those who have will buy on the appeal made here, so the State merely supplied the signature, the date and the prices and wisely let well enough bright lights, but Nat has been getting rested up with the Temple Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. He is far from being asleep, but one house doesn't take all his time and he can go to bed at midnght and not feel that he is turning in right after supper. Anyhow Nat is doing good work for the Temple, and his advertising is right up to the mark. Note this four tens on Behold the Woman. It is individual work at a minimum cost, since the drawing is all clipped from the press sheet and merely combined by his house artist, who utilized bits from three of the press book ads to get this effect. In this vicinity you will find the three column advertisement from the press book from which the central figure was taken, the tail of the A and the white lettering being worked in locally. Pasted onto this press book clipping are the two bits which are laid on either side, below the curve. These were not chopped from the mats but were taken direct from the press book and pasted onto a new card on which the rest of the hand lettering was done, making a cut about 7½ by 7 inches, the lower portion of the space being set in type. We do not care particularly for the hand lettering, especially since it would have been so easy to notch the cut, but so little is used that it comes through better than a heavier mass. The ad comes through with the half tone very nicely. This is about a 60 screen in the original. With a reduction of about one third the screen goes up to about an 80 or 90, yet it comes through in good shape, chiefly because the press work is good. It might be well to note that the halftone is reproduced in line and not in halftone. This is where some fail to get results with pasted halftones. Because it is in halftone they think they must reproduce in halftone. As a matter of fact a line reproduction of a halftone is still a halftone, since the screen work has been done. Some of the cuts used in this department are reduced down to a 400 screen, yet they come through very decently in most instances. Nat followed this with Capt. Blood and made much capital of the fact that the Temple was showing it at the same time the New Yorkers were being soaked up to $1.65 for the same play. He ran a variety of small advances, including a telegram from the manager of the New York house telling that he was packing them in at the higher prices. He had a "Public Notice" and a reproduction of Dr. Crane's comment on the play. He also used a follow the day after the opening with "Did you wait in line?" and a reminder that they had been urged to come early and avoid delay. Both campaigns were unusually good.

Builds Nice Space Around Stock Cut

nature, the date and the comedy, and the space has been left clear to put the message over. Perhaps it would have been well to have added the other small features, such as the news reel, but a trifle too little is better than a few lines too many, and enough is told to suggest a good program. There is nothing novel in this display, but it is soundly done and points the argument that the clean advertisement is always better than one overdressed.

Splinters

There was a charity fair at Chetek, Minn. Jim West, Paramounteer, was in town. He persuaded the local manager to take a booth at the fair from which to sell splinters from "the original covered wagon used in the Paramount production."

There were some who doubted, but the money went to charity, and a neat sum was turned in. Meanwhile everyone knew that the Wagon was coming.

Producers' Schedule Has Three November Features

DURING November Producers Distributing Corporation will release film adaptations of two Broadway stage successes, "Reckless Romance," the Al Christie feature adapted from "What's Your Wife Doing," and "The Chorus Lady," the James Forbes play, in addition to the Elmer Harris production, "The Girl on the Stairs."

The first release of the month will be "Reckless Romance," a six-reel Al Christie feature with T. Roy Barnes, Harry Myers, Sylvia Breamer, Wanda Hawley, Tully Marshall, Mitchell Lewis, Lincoln Plumer, Jack Duffy and Morgan Wallace. This was produced under the direction of Scott Sidney and Al Christie's personal supervision.

The Elmer Harris production starring Patsy Ruth Miller will be released on November 16. This is an adaptation of Winston Bouve's Ainslee Magazine story, produced under the direction of William Worthington and the personal supervision of Elmer Harris. It is a mystery drama in which Miss Miller is supported by Niles Welch, Arline Pretty, Shannon Day, Frances Raymond, Freeman Wood, Bertram Brasby and Michael Dark.

"The Chorus Lady" is a pictorial elaboration of the play by James Forbes produced by Regal Pictures, Inc., at the Thos. H. Ince Studio under the direction of Ralph Ince, with Margaret Livingston starring in the role made famous on the speaking stage by Rose Stahl. This will be released on November 23.

Chicago Stages a Spurt in Eschmann Month Race

THE fifth week of the Eschmann Month sales contest has come and gone with the entire field force still working at top speed and keeping up the stiff pace which was set during the first week of the drive. The most notable single thing about the fifth week was the remarkable spurt made by the Chicago branch. In the one week it jumped from twenty-eighth place to tenth place.

The Portland branch is still in the lead, quite a bit in the lead, but another spurt such as Chicago made on the part of one of several of the other leading branches may at any moment threaten Portland's hopes of capturing first prize money. On the other hand, since Portland took the lead at once and has consistently maintained it, Portland itself may take such a spurt on its own account and put itself beyond danger of being overtaken.

Cleveland has passed Charlotte and is now in second place, with Charlotte third. So far the race is to the trans-Rocky Mountain states, the western district still leading all of the districts and Portland all of the branches.

C. C. J. Culmer, in charge of First National's accessories department, reports that during the first four weeks of Eschmann Month the accessory sales exceeded the four previous highest individual weeks by 12.21 per cent. At no time in the first four weeks of the contest did the accessory sales drop to the previous high record. This is additional proof of the spirit of teamwork and enthusiasm that has permeated the entire field force during this drive and their desire to make it a tribute in no uncertain terms to the achievements of the head of the Distribution Department during the past year.

Woods Starts Picture

With the signing of Wanda Hawley for the leading role opposite Pat O'Malley in "On the Shelf," production work on this Producers Distributing Corporation release was started at the Peninsula Studios in San Mateo this week under the supervision of Frank Woods. Director Paul Powell has also engaged Wallace Beery, Ethel Wales and Betty Jane Snowden for important parts. Frank J. Geraghty is acting as first assistant director and Joseph A. Walker is in charge of the camera work.

New Valli Vehicle

Edward Sloman has started production at Universal City on "Up the Ladder," Virginia Valli's new starring vehicle. It is a spectacular story hinging on the efforts of a young inventor to perfect a telephone that will transmit photographs and images. Forrest Stanley will play the role of the inventor. Others in the cast are George Fawcett, Holmes Herbert and Arthur Livingston.

Canadian Handles Premier

Premier Productions are now being distributed in Canada through the six offices of Canadian Educational Films, Ltd., Toronto, by an arrangement which has just been made between Harry Kaufman of Toronto, who holds the Canadian franchise for the Premier releases, and O. S. Hanson, Canadian general manager for Educational. Kaufman is a veteran of the film exchange field in Canada.

The pictures included in the distributing agreement are: "The World's a Stage," "Temporary Marriage," "The Fire Patrol," "Passionate Friends," "I Am the Man," "Marriage Morals," "East Side, West Side," "The Spider and the Rose," "Bright Lights of Broadway," "The Greatest Menace," "Don't Marry for Money" and others.

Eight Short Subjects

Fox Flm Corporation announces eight short subjects for release during November. "Paul Jones, Jr.," the fourth of the Van Bibber series, will be released November 9. Two Sunshine comedies are included on the schedule, "The Nickel Plated West," published November 2, and "Up on the Farm," to be released November 16. The Imperial comedies will be "Nip O'Scotch," November 9, and "Roaring Lions at Home," November 23.

"Stolen Sweeties," a Monkey comedy, was released November 2. The two Fox Educational entertainments for the month will be "The Finger Lakes," released November 9, and "Salt of the Earth," released November 23.

New Soft Focus Pictures

Rudolph Valentino's first independent production will be photographed with a new camera device designed to obtain unique artistic effects. The device has just been patented by Harry Fishbeck, who will photograph Valentino for Ritz-Carlton Pictures. Mr. Fishbeck is now at the United Studios, Hollywood, where he perfected his invention.

The object of the new camera attachment is to get a soft effect in the picture without having it out of focus. This is accomplished by the use of a rotating screen in front of the lens. It may also be used on still camera and projection machines.

Spanish Bull Fighting

Fox Educational Picture Shows Thrilling Scenes in Arena

Exclusive and thrilling scenes of the Spanish national sport are shown in the Fox Educational Entertainment, "The Bull Fight," which was released October 26 by Fox Film Corporation. This unusual reel was made in Spain, chiefly at the Plaza in Madrid, where the most famous combats have been held.

Russell Muth, who filmed the eruption of Vesuvius for Fox News and now is chief of the Fox cameramen in Europe, was sent to Spain to make this picture. The reel includes shots of the foremost Spanish matadors in action in the arenas in Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and Bilbao, cities famous for their bull-fighting. The last scene in this reel shows an enraged bull dashing full speed at a matador and leaping over a seven-foot wall.

These Educational Entertainments are receiving the same attention from the production department as the longer Fox features. The sub-titles were specially painted by Luis Usabal, a noted Spanish painter, who studied in Madrid, Valencia, Paris, Rome and Berlin. This artist won two first class gold medals, one at Madrid in 1910 and the second at Valencia in 1911.

Peters Plays "Raffles"

Famous Underworld Story Put in Production by Universal

House Peters, who recently completed work in the big Universal Jewel, "The Tornado," is starting work at Universal City in the title role of the H. W. Hornung story, "Raffles." King Baggot is the director.

In all the realm of detective and romantic drama there is no more famous or well known name than "Raffles." Kyrle Bellew played it for a year on the stage. This famous role will be revived by Universal.

"Raffles" was developed into a play from the "Amateur Cracksman" stories by E. W. Hornung with the assistance of Eugene Presbrey, and immediately attained great vogue with the popular Kyrle Bellew as "Raffles." The cast also included E. M. Holland, Capt. Bedford, Stanton Elliot as Bunny and Clara Blandick as Gwendolyn. It played for the entire season of 1903-1904.

"This Woman" Opens Warners' Arrangement with Piccadilly

WITH lines waiting for admission almost continuously during the regular matinee and evening hours on both Saturday and Sunday, October 18 and 19, the Piccadilly, newest of the big Broadway picture palaces, got away to a splendid start with the recently announced arrangement whereby the house has been made the New York home of Warner Brothers' Classics of the Screen. The attraction—the first Warner Brothers picture to play the house—was "This Woman," from the popular novel by Howard Rockey, featuring Irene Rich, Louise Fazenda, Marc McDermott, Ricardo Cortez and Clara Bow, under the direction of Phil Rosen. Indications at the middle of the week were that the Piccadilly would do quite its full share of the business being done along Broadway during the engagement definitely scheduled to end with the performances on Friday, October 24.

Almost without exception the New York press took kindly to the attraction, most of the papers commenting upon the soundness of the Piccadilly management's judgment in arranging to show the Warner Brothers product. The New York American said in this connection: "In choosing an alliance with Warner Brothers, Lee Ochs is a good enough showman to take into consideration that most of the productions produced by this firm are based on well-known books. Therefore, whenever a Warner picture is presented at the Piccadilly it arrives with an advance welcome ready. Of "This Woman" as an individual photoplay the American said: "As a book it met with a unanimous response from all lovers of popular fiction. As a picture it is true enough to the written word to receive the same flattering welcome."

Universal Now Releasing Second Hoxie Production

UNIVERSAL announces the release this week of a strong western feature starring Jack Hoxie, hero of a long series of western successes. The new Hoxie picture is "Daring Chances," a five-reeler directed by Clifford Smith, noted as a director of fast-moving action drama.

The story of "Daring Chances" was written especially for Jack Hoxie by Isadore Bernstein, expert on western pictures at Universal City. Charles A. Logue, newspaper man and scenario writer, wrote the scenario.

As leading woman Hoxie has Alta Allen. Others in the cast are Claude Payton, Doreen Turner, Jack Pratt, Genevieve Danninger, William McCall and Catherine Wallace.

The story is a western adventure romance having to do with a western rancher's attempt to make a home for his little niece and his activities as a rodeo champion. The picture abounds in daring stunts in horsemanship and race-riding. Hoxie uses his famous horse, "Scout," now a familiar figure to screen lovers.

"Daring Chances" is the second Hoxie feature released by Universal during the current season. The first, "Fighting Fury," is proving to be a big money-getter in houses where western pictures form the main article of screen diet and also cleaning up in first run theatres that have added good western pictures to their menus.

One other Hoxie picture, "The Western Wallop," is scheduled for release during the first half of the 1924-1925 season. It will reach the screen early in December. Universal is making several Hoxie features of a new and distinct type for 1925.

Breaking Records

Elinor Glyn's "His Hour" a Success Throughout Country

Elinor Glyn's "His Hour," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture produced by King Vidor under the personal supervision of the author, having scored at the Capitol Theatre, New York, is repeating this success throughout the country. Record breaking business has been reported by the Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles; the State Theatre, St. Louis; Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C.; the Capitol Theatre, Detroit; and the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Glyn is backing her picture with personal appearances wherever possible, and with speeches over the radio.

Complete "Wife of Centaur"

King Vidor has completed "The Wife of the Centaur," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production adapted by Douglas Z. Doty from the novel by Cyril Hume, and will spend the next fortnight cutting and titling the film. John Gilbert, Eleanor Boardman and Aileen Pringle have the principal roles in this production. William Haines, Kate Price, Kate Lester, William Orlamond, Carrie Clark Ward, Aileen Manning, Frank Norcross, Caroline Erwin, James McElbern and Betty Francisco are in the cast.

Could You Use $100?

That's Vitagraph's Offer for Its Best Answer Contest

"What is 'Greater Than Marriage?" Vitigraph wants to know and is offering $100 for the best answer. Every exhibitor or any member of a picture theatre staff in the United States and Canada is eligible to compete.

The project is unique exploitation. It is intended to boost Victor Hugo's Halperin's production, "Greater Than Marriage," which is to be an early Vitagraph release. The picture is an adaptation of Louis Joseph Vance's best-seller, "Joan Thursday."

The first suggestion of this teaser campaign was carried on a single page of each of the leading trade papers, and was confined to "What Is Greater Than Marriage?" There weren't even single quotes about the last three words to give an inkling of what was coming.

Now the plan is being explained, not only through the trade publications but in individual announcements sent to all exhibitors in the United States and Canada. Each exhibitor is invited to write his answer in ten words and mail it to Vitagraph, Brooklyn, N. Y. In case of a tie, each of the tying contestants will receive the full amount of the reward.

Vitagraph has let it be known that the prize-winning answer probably will be used as the picture-selling slogan for the production. The contest opened October 15 and will close November 15. The judges are Victor Hugo Halperin, the producer and director; Graham Baker, editor, and W. Wallace Ham, publicity and advertising director of Vitagraph.

Ronald Colman Borrowed

Ronald Colman, who has become a screen sensation during the last year through his work in Marion Crawford's "The White Sister," Gilbert Emery's "Tarnish" and George Eliot's "Romola,' has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn to play opposite Blanche Sweet in "The Sporting Venus," the Marshall Neilan production of the romance by Gerald Beaumont.

Colman has been under contract to Samuel Goldwyn and has been borrowed for this part in exchange for Colman's services, George Fitzmaurice, who is preparing to film "A Thief in Paradise," has secured Aileen Pringle from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"The Price of a Party" Is Released by Associated Exhibitors

The Associated Exhibitors announce this week the release of the first Howard Estabrook production on their program entitled "The Price of a Party."

The production is based on the Cosmopolitan Magazine story by William McHarg and adapted for the screen by Charles Forrest Roebuck. Charles Giblyn directed the production.

Hope Hampton as the star heads a list of prominent players including Harrison Ford, Mary Astor, Arthur Edmund Carew and Dagmar Godowsky. Members of the supporting cast consist of Fred Hadley, Florence Richardson, Edna Richmond, Donald Lashey, Daniel Pennell, Moy Bennett, Edward Lawrence, Claire Luce, Ward Fox and Esther Muir.

"Midnight Express" Arrives

C. B. C. announce that "The Midnight Express," the third of the series of eight Columbia Pictures which features Elaine Hammerstein, supported by William Haines, has been received in New York and will go into the cutting and editing routine in time for early release.

Madge Kennedy to Co-Star in Firm's First Production, "The Ultimate Good"

Madge Kennedy, vivacious star of the stage and screen, who has just completed one of the most successful engagements of Broadway record in "Poppy," has been signed by St. Regis Pictures Corporation, as co-star in its initial production "The Ultimate Good," from J. C. Brownell's Everybody's Magazine story, which is to be released and distributed by Associated Exhibitors.

Conway Tearle, as was previously announced by St. Regis will have the starring male role.

In the support the following well-known feature players have been engaged, Lucille Lee Stewart, who has been a star in her own right, and Charles Mack, who has distinguished himself in many important films.

Speed Up Production

Activity Booms at the Century Comedy Studios

With the arrival on the west coast of Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corporation, production activities at the Hollywood studios of that company have been speeded up and there are now four units at work.

Jess Robbins has started production on the first of the new Wanda Wiley series of two-reel comedies, with Ben White, brother of Jack White, assisting. This series, which is being made from stories by Georges Fouret, well known French humorist, will be given a series title this week. The first has been temporarily titled "Up in the Air."

Edward I. Luddy has started work on "Broadway Beauties," a two-reeler featuring the famous Century Follies Girls and Hilliard Karr. Also in the cast are Joe Moore, Edna Hannam and Cameo, the famous dog star.

Charles Lamont, recently returned to the Century lot after a short absence, is making a picture, as yet untitled, in which Buddy Messinger is starred. Harry McCoy will be featured.

The fourth unit which has just started work, Mr. Stern announces as a surprise and will not be ready to divulge the nature of it until some time next week.

Bookings on "Captain Blood" Near Record, Says Vitagraph

THE rush of bookings of Rafael Sabatini's "Captain Blood," Vitagraph's recently released super-special, comes near setting a record, according to information given out this week at the Vitagraph offices in Brooklyn. An official statement contains the information that within three weeks of the distribution of prints to the company's exchanges, virtually every first run theatre in the United States and Canada has contracted for the attraction.

The list of cities and towns which arranged early bookings covers far more than the recognized key centers, and the contracts call for bookings not only at the best known independent houses but throughout practically every circuit of important theatres. It is a noticeable fact also that a large number booked "Captain Blood" for longer runs than are customary in their respective houses, and while figures are not made public in the current statement, it is hinted that the ruling prices are eminently satisfactory to Vitagraph.

All Broadway has placed its mark of approval on the Sabatini picture, and all Broadway is seeking to participate in the profits. It is only a few weeks since the close of the world premier run at the Astor Theatre, New York, a run originally scheduled for two weeks but extended to four, and then terminated because the house was not available. Meanwhile, other enterprising exhibitors in the metropolis clamored for the attraction, with the result that, starting last Sunday, "Captain Blood" will show at the Rivoli, the Rialto and the Brooklyn Mark Strand in order, for three consecutive weeks, with bookings also for the entire Loew circuits in Greater New York.

"Captain Blood" showed to packed houses at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum, Chicago, for four weeks, then was contracted for the Lubliner & Trinz, Ascher Bros., and Schoenstadt circuits. The Randolph Theatre also, in addition to the Orpheum, obtained the attraction for a run in the Loop district, and Balaban & Katz procured it for their Mid-West Theatre circuit.

In Boston, "Captain Blood" was booked early for Gordon's Olympic and Scollay Square. It was contracted for the Stanley-Mastbaum circuit in Philadelphia. In St. Louis, Skouras Bros. bagged it for their houses. The Rowland & Clark circuit signed it for Pittsburgh; Jensen & Von Herberg for their theatres in Seattle and Portland; the Imperial for a San Francisco first run; Loew's Palace for Washington, and the Metropolitan, for Baltimore.

Warner Brothers Making Shots in New York of The Tombs

Four new Warner Bros. productions of the 1924-25 product have been started in the company's studios on the West Coast. They are "The Bridge of Sighs," by Charles K. Harris; "The Man Without a Conscience," from a celebrated Hungarian novel; "How Baxter Butted In," by Owen Davis and "The Broadway Butterfly," by Pearl Keating.

Some of the scenes for "The Bridge of Sighs" are being photographed in New York City in order that the exact locations, famous in real life as well as in Mr. Harris' quick story as told in popular song form, may be presented to photoplay audiences. "The Bridge of Sighs" of the title is the celebrated bridge which connects the Tombs prison with the Criminal Courts building in New York City. Shots of the Tombs, the Bridge of Sighs and other locations are being made under the direction of S. L. Warner, of the Warner Bros. home office division, with a camera crew sent on from the Pacific Coast.

"Sundown" Given High Praise by Reviewers in Washington

FIRST NATIONAL'S big Special for the current season, "Sundown," an epic of the retreat of the cattle barons of the Southwest, had its first big showing last week at Crandall's Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C. The reviews were most laudatory and indicate that in "Sundown" First National has a Special worthy to rank alongside "The Sea Hawk," "Secrets" and "Abraham Lincoln."

Excerpts from reviews follow:

Washington Post: "Earl Hudson's epic of the trials of American cattle raisers surpasses anything in the line of Western pictures that has been shown here for some time. The opening yesterday was to full capacity houses in the afternoon and evening. The picture is one of the best put together in years"

Washington Times: "'Sundown' is worth going to see. 'Sundown' is good. It is well acted by Hobart Bosworth, Roy Stewart and Bessie Love, with two admirable character parts done by Arthur Hoyt and our old friend of the Keystone days, Charlie Murray."

Evening Star: "A tremendous stampede of what must have been thousands of cattle, which actually wreck an entire house; a sensational prairie fire; long, long trails of cattle, winding off into the distance, so far as the eye can reach; the story of a great love developed in the face of dire hardships—these elements all fuse into a whole which breathes of the grandeur of heroics. The love element is clean and strong."

F. P. L. Signs Hatton

Raymond Hatton has been placed under long term contract to appear exclusively in Paramount Pictures, according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in charge of production. Hatton's first appearance under the new contract will be in "Contraband." Hatton is not a stranger at the Lasky studio. He was one of the first players to appear in pictures made at the studio when it was first launched by Jesse L. Lasky and Cecil B. DeMille.

Henry B. Walthall Signed

Renaud Hoffman, who will make a series of four productions for release by Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season has announced the signing of Henry B. Walthall for the first picture work on which will be started within the next ten days.

Hoffman will present Walthall in "On the Threshold," a Saturday Evening Post story by Wilbur Hall that embraces all the fine and sensitively human elements that Hoffman delights in visualizing.

New Buffalo Film

With Lester F. Scott and William T. Lackey handling the production end and Richard Thorpe as the director, the fifth of the thrilling Buffalo Bill, Jr., series of eight pictures is now under way. Work is expected to be fully completed in ten days, with the Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation having the territorial distribution of the series.

Inquiries for the series have been received by Weiss Brothers from all parts of the world, with the United Kingdom rights disposed of recently to the British Export and Import Corp., Ltd.

"Speed" Purchased

Banner Productions Secures Story for Eearly Production

In line with the reported plans of George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, directing heads of Banner Productions, Inc., to produce for the State Right field, a series of elaborate attractions, comes the announcement this week by Mr. Davis of the purchase of "Speed," a rural melodrama of the most modern type, by Grace Sartwell Mason, which begins publication in the current (Oct. 18) issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

According to Mr. Davis' announcement, "Speed" will at once be put into continuity form for production and will then be put into work on the Coast under the supervision of Ben Verschleiser, following the completion of "The Three Keys," which that producer is now making from the novel of Frederic Ormond for Banner.

Edward Le Saint, now directing "The Three Keys," may be put under contract to produce Miss Mason's story for the screen, though this is not yet determined. In any event it is certain that this feature will be made on a scale of costs and elaborate technical detail, hitherto not approached by any attraction distributed under the Banner brand.

Edmund Lowe at Work

Edmund Lowe has started work at the William Fox West Coast Studios on his third starring picture, titled "Ports of Call." Denison Clift is directing this production from the story by Garrett B. Ford and the scenario by Edfrid Bingham. Hazel Keener plays the feminine lead opposite Lowe. The other principals include William Davidson, William Conklin, Bobby Mack, Lilyan Tashman, Alice Ward and Mary Frances McLean.

Signed for New Picture

Pat O'Malley has been engaged by the Peninsula Studios at San Mateo, Calif., to play the principal male role in "On the Shelf" the Frank Woods Production that will be the first 1925 release by Producers Distributing Corporation.

Century Schedule

Announces Four for November Release

Century Comedies announce four two-reelers for release through Universal exchanges for November. There will be one Wanda Wiley, one Buddy Messinger, one Century Follies Girls and one Century Kids. Al Alt will also be featured with the Century Follies Girls.

The Wanda Wiley release is "Sweet Dreams," scheduled for the fifth. Edward I. Luddy directed.

"Don't Fall" is the Buddy Messinger comedy scheduled for release on the nineteenth. In it Buddy is supported by "Bubbles," the five-year-old colored comedian, and "Spec" O'Donnell. Arvid Gilstrom directed. The release for the twelfth is "Speed Boys," featuring the famous Century Kids, under the direction of Al Herman, veteran comedy director and responsible for many Century successes.

The twenty-sixth will see the release of another of those popular Century comedies featuring Al Alt and the well known Century Follies Girls. It is called "Dancing Daisies," and in addition to being extremely funny, boasts a bevy of beauties unequaled in any two-reel production.

Cutting "The Lost Chord"

W. E. Shallenberger and Whitman Bennett are devoting much time to the careful cutting of the new Arrow sentiment drama, "The Lost Chord," just completed at the Bennett Studios. This production was adapted from Sir Arthur Sullivan's famous song by Wilfred Noy, who directed the picture. The cast includes Alice Lake, David Powell, Dagmar Godowsky, Henry Sedley and Faire Binney. Dr. Shallenberger is making a special point of a musical setting for this release, which will be in harmony with its beauty and sentiment.

New Radio Tie-Up

As an additional circulation-getting media for the production of "Stella Dallas," from the novel by Olive Higgins Prouty, which has been published as a serial in the American Magazine, circulated as a best seller novel and syndicated in over seventy newspapers throughout the land, Samuel Goldwyn will complete nation-wide arrangements with the strongest broadcasting stations from coast to coast to have the novel broadcasted in weekly instalment form by special readers supplied by Houghton Mifflin, the publisher. Negotiations have already been completed with a station in New York; others will be arranged en route in Chicago and completed in Los Angeles and San Francisco. These readings will take place two months prior to the release of the film.

"Silent Watcher" Is Another Bulls-Eye, Reviewers Declare

"THE SILENT WATCHER," from Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "The Altar on the Hill," Frank Lloyd's first production since the sensationally successful "Sea Hawk" had its first New York showing at the Strand Theatre this week. Again has Lloyd hit the bullseye of success and produced a screen masterpiece. The reviewers on the New York newspapers gave the production as fine a set of notices as they did to "The Sea Hawk," acknowledging that the new picture is, in its totally different way, just as notable an achievement as was its predecessor from the Lloyd studios.

Mordaunt Hall wrote of it in the New York Times: "Is told with simplicity and restraint, dramatic emphasis and suspense having been handled most adroitly. A singularly natural story."

Harriette Underhill in the New York Herald Tribune: "'The Silent Watcher' is a fine picture and Glenn Hunter is superb in it."

Dorothy Herzog in the New York Mirror: "In its simplicity, its realism, and its excellence of acting and directing, 'The Silent Watcher' ranks with the most interesting productions of the season. . . . Glenn Hunter gives a superb performance. . . . Don't miss seeing 'The Silent Watcher.'"

The New York Morning Telegraph said: "Mr. Lloyd has hit another bullseye. 'The Silent Watcher' is a silent drama at its high peak."

Quinn Martin in the New York World: "Is acted with great precision."

George Gerhard in the New York Evening World: "A splendid picture. Frank Lloyd has turned out a product which will not in the least impair the laurels he won with 'The Sea Hawk.'"

New Canutt Release

"Yak" Canutt, that bunch of American bone, sinew and brains that won the world's cowboy championship, has finished "Romance and Rustlers," the Arrow-Great Western in which he shows the screen public some of the ability and nerve that gave him the sobriquet of "King of the Cowboys." He is acquiring a way with the ladies and soon he will be a regular heart-mixer.

Take Great Westerns

Vitagraph Officials Say That "Beloved Brute" Is Big Feature

GRATIFICATION and the confident prediction that they have another big success were expressed by Vitagraph executives when they viewed the first prints on "The Beloved Brute" to be received from Hollywood. The picture was shown at the company's Brooklyn studios and aroused great enthusiasm.

"The Beloved Brute" is an adaptation of Kenneth Perkins' widely-read novel of the same name, issued by Macaulay, 1923, with Marguerite de la Motte and Victor McLaglen in the leading roles. Others in the cast are William Russell, Mary Alden, Stuart Holmes, Frank Brownlee, Wilfrid North, Ernie Adams, D. D. McLean, William Moran, George Ingleton and Jess Herring. J. Stuart Blackton directed the production.

"The Beloved Brute" is described as a stirring picture, set in a western locale—Arizona—but covering too broad a field of human appeal to limit it to classification under a single category. Threading its way through the story is an alluring romance, but thrills, suspense and comedy play their full part in making it a moving spectacle.

The high-lights are two blood-curdling combats in which Victor McLaglen demonstrates his prowess as a virile actor. In one of these he gives a startlingly effective exhibition in "cleaning out" a frontier cafe in order to save a girl. In the other he and William Russell stage what is declared to be the most realistic fight ever seen on the screen.

McLaglen and Russell play the roles of brothers, though they have been separated for many years and the fact of their relationship is not established to each other until much of the plot has been unrolled. Love for the same girl and the claim of each to supremacy as a wrestler form the basis for a bitter rivalry.

Vitagraph is now distributing a special advance sheet in colors, and liberally illustrated, calling attention to the outstanding features of "The Beloved Brute."

New First National Stunt

A record of the suggested eliminations and changes in its pictures made by various censorship bodies throughout the country is being assembled by First National Pictures and the resulting information sent to its studio executives, its directors, and to the Will Hays organization. This step is one that First National believes will be of great help to its directors in making new productions, giving them an idea of what features have been found objectionable in various states and cities.

The individual director is free to act upon this information, or to reject it, but there is little doubt but that the line on the attitude of censors which is collated in the reports will be carefully studied by the directors and that scenes or episodes that they know in advance would be censored will be avoided. This will tend to cut down the expense of making pictures, as it is cheaper not to make a scene that will have to be cut from the film than it is to make it and then cut and patch the film, as this process sometimes necessitates the retaking of a part of a picture.

Credit for the idea of gathering together complete reports on individual productions, from every censorship body that has passed on the picture, is due to Gerald W. Unger, assistant to Harry C. Schwalbe, Secretary-Treasurer of First National.

Writing for Valentino

Joseph Jackson, former president of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers (The Wampas) has been engaged as personal publicity representative for Rudolph Valentino, according to announcement by C. L. Yearsley of Ritz-Carlton Pictures. Jackson will remain in New York until Valentino arrives from Europe and will then accompany the star to Hollywood where the first Ritz-Valentino.

A Political Travesty

Sam Van Ronkel, producer of "The Gumps," the two-reel comedies adapted by Earle C. Kenton from Sidney Smith's cartoons, and released by Universal, announces a special comedy for release Election Week.

It is "Andy's Stump Speech" and is said to be particularly suitable for showing during the week of November 2. The role of Andy Gump in "The Gumps" is taken by Joe Murphy, long a noted vaudeville player. He is such an exact likeness of the Smith cartoon character, that various newspapers running the cartoons have used Murphy's photograph with news stories concerning the cartoons.

Buys "National Anthem"

E. M. Asher, vice-president of Corinne Griffith Productions, Inc., who is in New York looking for stories for Miss Corinne Griffith, announced that he has purchased "The National Anthem," by J. Hartley Manners. Ever since its production as a play in 1922 this story has been in great demand, but Mr. Manners has refused many offers for the picture rights, his intention having been to produce it as a picture with Laurette Taylor, who starred in the play. This picture will be produced in New York and distributed by First National Pictures, Inc.

"Lord Chumley" Completed

"Lord Chumley" was completed today. This is the Paramount version of the famous play by Henry C. DeMille and David Belasco which Paul Iribe and Frank Urson have produced for Paramount.

Viola Dana, Raymond Griffith, Theodore Roberts, Cyril Chadwick and Anna May Wong are featured in the cast.

The adaptation is by Betram Milhouser.

"Hot Water" Breaks Strand Record

According to a statement issued this week by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand Theatre, Harold Lloyd's latest picture, "Hot Water," broke all existing records of this house for the opening date of a production.

As early as twelve noon on Sunday, October 26, the line started to form, and from then on it was a constant stream of people demanding admittance. "From the start," states Mr. Plunkett, "it looked like we were going to do a record business, but I had no idea that the stream of patronage would be unending. Crowds stormed the theatre as late as ten o'clock."

In addition to breaking all records for an opening day at this theatre the new Lloyd picture broke the record of "Girl Shy" by several hundred dollars.

"The Breath of Scandal" Has Successful Premiere in San Francisco

The Preferred Picture, "The Breath of Scandal," was accorded gratifying praise at its western premiere in San Francisco last week. This B. P. Schulberg production which Gasnier directed drew capacity crowds throughout its entire engagement at the California Theatre, according to word just received from the house management.

Local critics heartily endorsed the entertainment value of Edwin Balmer's novel that features Betty Blythe, Lou Tellegen, Patsy Ruth Miller and an all-star supporting cast.

Buford Gordon Bennett of the San Francisco Examiner said: "An emotional and dramatic picture, highly entertaining. 'The Breath of Scandal' has been well done, with the alluring features of Miss Miller's splendid acting and a charming romance threaded with thrills and adventure."

The reviewer for the San Francisco Call-Post wrote: "'The Breath of Scandal' deals boldly with well known moral problems. The picture has many dramatic moments, well executed by a competent cast."

The critic on the San Francisco Chronicle commented: "The picture si well made and in its all-star cast Patsy Ruth Miller shines for a very good performance of the girl."

Working on Schulberg Special

"Capital Punishment," the special production which B. P. Schulberg has added to his program for the current year, is ready to be started immediately. The script was completed a few days ago by John Goodrich. Mr. Schulberg announced this week that the picture will be made on the F. B. O. lot where he has recently completed two Preferred Pictures, "The Breath of Scandal" and "White Man."

Several elaborate interiors necessary for the filming of "Capital Punishment" are now being built.

Strong List of Comedy Films on Pathe Schedule for Nov. 9

PATHE'S program for the week of November 9 shows a strong array of comedy offerings. Leading the list is the latest Harry Langdon-Mack Sennett comedy entitled "All Night Long." This comedian is fast forging ahead in the comedy field. The locale of the story is a French village in the battle area, and most of the situations are derived from military angles. The production was made by Harry Edwards under the personal supervision of F. Richard Jones. The cast carries a list of unusually well known names in the comedy field consisting of Harry Langdon, Natalie Kingston, Fannie Kelly and Vernon Dent.

Another important release on the Pathe program for the week is the second of the "True Detective Stories," entitled "The Girl and The Gangster." The "True Detective Stories" were produced by the Sholes Hazard Corporation and directed by William Preston Burt from a series of narratives written by Major Ross D. Whytock, the well-known journalist and war correspondent. The stories were prepared for the screen by George Arthur Gray. Prominent in the cast are—Nellie Burt, Ed Roseman, and Leslie Austin. The series consists of four two-reelers and are released every second week.

Hal Roach has two comedies on the releasing schedule for the week. The first is a two reeler, A Hal Roach Star Comedy featuring James Finlayson entitled "Hot Heels." The direction was handled by George Jaske and carries a cast consisting of George Rowe, Dick Gilbert, Leo Willis and Ena Gregory.

The second Hal Roach comedy is a one reeler, featuring Charley Chase in "Accidental Accidents," Leo McCarey directed this picture which carries such well known screen names in its cast as Ena Gregory, Martin Wolfkeil, Earl Mohan, Billy Engle and Joe Forte.

Chapter five of the Patheserial "Ten Scars Make A Man" is also released on this program under the title of "Through the Hills".

In addition to the regular releases for the week Pathe also announces the release of the five-reel feature version of the Richard E. Enright story "Into the Net," produced by Malcolm Strauss and featuring Edna Murphy and Jack Mulhall.

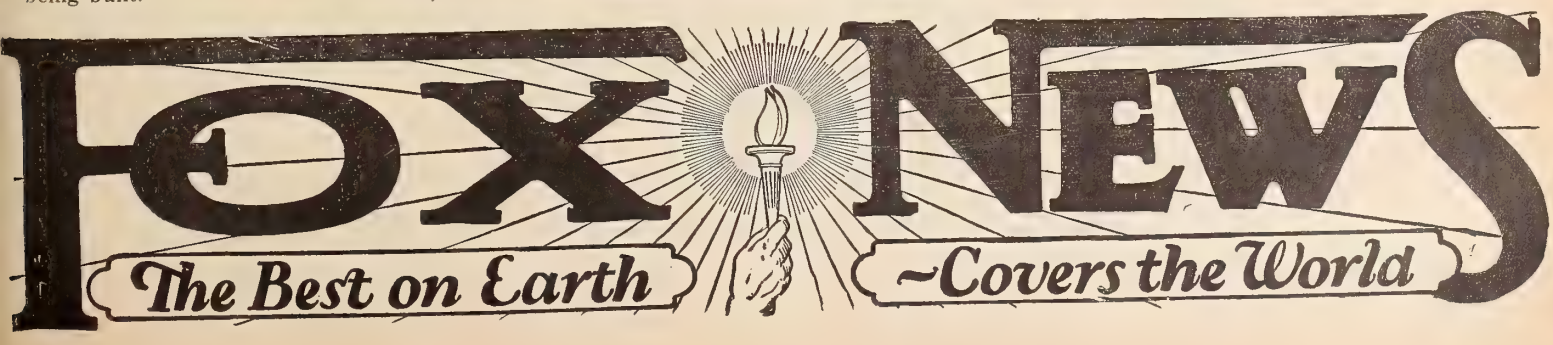
Based on Widely Read Story

The wide circulation which George Agnew Chamberlain's novel, "White Man," reached will be of direct benefit to exhibitors booking the Preferred Picture which B. P. Schulberg has just made.

For the greater part of a year "White Man" was published serially in the Woman's Home Companion, which reaches a reading public exceeding four million persons. As a book marketed under the Bobbs-Merrill trademark it led the best sellers for many successive months. At the time of publication both the magazine story and the book received unusually wide advertising.

Hankin Signs for "Flying Fists"

S. J. Hankin, St. Louis, will distribute Benny Leonard's series of two reel features, "Flying Fists," in Missouri and eastern Illinois, according to an announcement from Henry Ginsberg.



Charles Hutchison in "After Dark," a Wm. Steiner Production.

Critics Praise "Hot Water"

Detroit Newspapermen Commend Highly Harold Lloyd's Latest Production

Detroit newspaper critics as a whole have united in their praise of Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe comedy, "Hot Water," which opened last week at the Adams Theatre to one of the largest grosses that house has ever experienced.

Harold Heffernan on the News said: "Harold Lloyd as a terror-stricken young husband who fears he has killed his mother-in-law and is pursued about by his wholly unsuspecting relatives, policemen and ghosts offers a ridiculously amusing figure that should drive the Adams Theatre audience into near hysteria this week. It is undoubtedly one of the most cleverly conceived bits of humor ever plotted by the Lloyd forces. 'Hot Water' holds well up to the standard of other Lloyd pictures."

The Detroit Free Press had this to say: "Harold Lloyd has seized upon the well known mother-in-law joke as the theme of his latest comedy, 'Hot Water,' which kept large crowds fairly rolling in laughter at the Adams Theatre all day Sunday. Any time this week you are blue, take a tip from the screen editor, and go to the Adams."

Novello Productions Arriving

Cranfield & Clarke announce that they have just received from their home office a print of "A Man Without Desire," starring Ivor Novello. In addition, they announce having received six single reels of Cannibals in New Guinea. There are six episodes of 750 feet each.

Aided by Big Exploitation, "Speed Spook" Brings Record Patronage

During the past two weeks New York City was given something to talk about when "The Speed Spook" exploitation campaign was launched for Johnny Hines' latest feature, "The Speed Spook," which played to capacity at Moss' Cameo Theatre at 42nd street and Broadway.

The first shot in the campaign was fired when a "driverless" automobile appeared in the Times Square and Fifth Avenue sections two weeks before the showing. This car, constructed in such a manner as to make it appear as if there were nobody at the wheel, attracted the attention of thousands of pedestrians who could not fathom how this weird automobile worked its way through the maze of the heaviest Broadway traffic. This was made possible by reconstructing an automobile so that the entire mechanism was lowered almost to the base of the chassis. When the hood was brought over a small aperture was left so that the driver, entirely concealed, could nevertheless see everything ahead of him.

A week before the Cameo showing the billing of the picture was painted all over the "speed spook," with the result that from the first day's showing of "The Speed Spook" at the Cameo to the very end of the engagement business held up remarkably. Three times each day the "speed spook" car pulled up in front of the theatre and in each instance attracted hundreds of bystanders who had curiosity enough to pay their way into the theatre to find out what is was all about.

Leonard Series Done

Sam Hellman Now Titling Them—Distribution Soon

The final touches to the series of six two-reel features starring Benny Leonard under the title "Flying Fists" were completed this week at the Tec-Art studio under the direction of Lawrence Windom. Henry Ginsberg and Jacob Wilk, the producers, have turned over the prints to Sam Hellman, the popular Saturday Evening Post author, for titling and they will be ready for distribution in a short time.

The cast for the three final bouts includes, in addition to the lightweight champion, Alyce Mills, Jean Diamond, Harry Lee, Dick Lee, Marty Faust, Dora Mills Adams, Tammany Young, Phil Bloom and Jack Perry. Phil Bloom is the well-known lightweight who fought several stirring bouts with Leonard several years ago. Jack Perry is a Pittsburgh welterweight who gave an excellent exhibition during the filming of the picture.

Novelty Comedies

Believing that novelty is by far the most important element in comedies as an attraction to the general public, Universal is preparing to produce a series devoted to a subject never before touched upon in the fun-film field. A phase of life in New York which is pictured in cartoons by the dozens and in literary fields is the basis of the stories.

The idea originated with Mrs. M. F. Todd of the production department at Universal City, mother of Lola Todd, the actress. Scott Darling, scenarist of "The Leather Pushers" and the Jack Dempsey "Fight and Win" series, and Zion Myers, supervisor of comedy production, are writing the stories.

The Extent of Vitagraph's Feat

WITH the publishing of income tax payments, statistics seem to be all the rage nowadays. Which is a prelude to the announcement that Vitagraph comes forth with comparative figures conveying a clear impression of how many people are reading Rafael Sabatini's "Captain Blood" thanks to the free service extended by Vitagraph to 497 newspapers. These comparisons are interesting.

The number of readers is put at 20,000,000. This number would form a community equal in population to the combined population of the twenty-two largest cities in the United States. If you don't believe it, get out your atlas and the adding machine.

If all the newspaper columns devoted to the serialization were connected, end to end, and made to stand upright, there would be a tower 103 times as high as the Great Pyramid of Egypt, 97 times as high as the Cologne Cathedral, 71 times as high as the Metropolitan Tower, 63 times as high as the Woolworth Building, 49 times as high as the Eiffel Tower and 2 1/2 times as high as Mount McKinley, the loftiest peak in this country.

So it's easy to understand that Vitagraph has put over a real, worth while publicity stunt to aid its feature, "Captain Blood."

Novel Features in First St. Regis

The first St. Regis Production, for release by Associated Exhibitors, being made under the working title, "The Ultimate Good," and starring Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy, with Lucille Lee Stewart, Charles Mack and Bigelow Cooper in the supporting cast, has many novel features which are going to make it one of the greatest exploitation pictures of the year.

In one entire episode of the picture, which is being made under the direction of E. H. Griffith, the entire chorus of the Greenwich Village Follies appears in the type of action which they have been nationally identified with.

Rayart Official Sees Big Future for Independents

LAST week completed the first three months in business for the newly organized Rayart Pictures Corporation, and when a representative of the Moving Picture World called on W. Ray Johnston, the president, he found him buried in a mass of correspondence and in the midst of a half dozen advertising campaigns in various stages of completion.

"Looks like a big time organization here," he ventured to suggest. "Yes, Rayart in my opinion is traveling very fast," said Mr. Johnston.

When asked for some enlightenment as to the present activities of the independent market, Mr. Johnston said:

"I have personally been a great believer in the independent market and even as far back as the old Thanhouser Mutual days I was distributing some pictures on the independent market. You may remember 'Beating Back' with Al Jennings, and 'Dope' with Herman Lieb. That was my first entry into the Independent market and I have favored it ever since as the cleanest, sanest and most logical distribution method, and in my opinion, it will not be many years until this market will be preferred by the majority of producers. Usually a definite sales quota is set upon each picture and there is not the usual deduction for prints, replacements, advertising, etc., charged up to the producer that is customary under the national releasing plan. In fact, after the picture has been released for thirty days on the Independent market, the producer starts getting in returns, where under the other national plans it is at least three or four months before the releasing company has been reimbursed out of the producer's share for various outlays for the producers' accounts."

Asked as to prevailing conditions in this field at the present time, Mr. Johnston stated:

"If the sales of Rayart product can be taken as a criterion, the market is in about the finest shape it has ever been. We have been in business only ninety days and only actively selling product for the past thirty days and we have reached 33 per cent. of the entire quota set for the coming year, so the market must be in good shape."

When questioned as to an idea of the production activities of Rayart, Mr. Johnston bubbled over with enthusiasm.

"We have five companies 'shooting' Rayart Product on the Coast," he said, and continued, "First there is the Dell Henderson Productions Company working on 'Battling Brewster,' at the Berwilla Studios. This is a fast action speed serial with Franklyn Farnum and Helen Holmes.

"At the Harry J. Brown Studios, two companies are as busy as can be. First, the Reed Howes company under the direction of Albert Rogell and also a unit under the supervision of Mr. Brown is at work on a series of melodramas, the first of which will be 'Easy Money' with Mary Carr, Gladys Walton, Mildred Harris, Cullen Landis, Joseph Swickard and others. They will next start work on Henry Titus' novel, 'The Beloved Pawn.'

"Over at the Bob Horner Studios you will find the George Larkin company at work on the third of a series of Metropolitan Melodramas under the direction of Joseph Franz.

"I almost forgot our comedy company which is hard at work at the Cosmosart Studios on a series of twelve two-reel comedies starring Gloria Joy and the Butterfly Girls. This brand is known as the 'Butterfly Comedies.'

"In addition to our producing units working exclusively for Rayart, we have, of course, secured quite a number of special productions, such as 'For Another Woman,' the Kenneth Harlan special, a Travers Vale Production, 'The Street of Tears' and a 101 Ranch Production on 'Trail Dust.'"

"Inferno" Still Rages

Fox Feature Production Scoring Throughout the Country

The interest created on Broadway by the William Fox screen version of "Dante's Inferno" is being repeated in the leading cities of America. The picture is playing its fifth week at the Central Theatre in New York, with no indication of a let-down in public interest. At the same time, capacity crowds are viewing the production in Washington, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Springfield, Mass., and Chicago. In the latter city it opened at the Monroe on October 25.

"Three Faces East" Goes to Producers Distributing

THE first of the big stage plays to be produced for release by Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season will be Anthony Paul Kelly's "Three Faces East." This is rated as one of the biggest of the Sam H. Harris stage plays produced during the past several years. It enjoyed a long run in the Cohan & Harris theatres in both New York and Chicago and later on tour it was presented in practically every important city in the United States. It was also produced in London where it duplicated its success in America.

Violet Heming and Emmet Corrigan registered decided triumphs in the American presentations of the play and it is the intention to fill these roles on the screen with players of equal dramatic attainments.

The story is an intense picturization of the sinister intrigue carried on during the great World War and Anthony Kelly, the author, will personally adapt it to the screen. Mr. Kelly is a veteran screen writer who had a long list of motion picture successes to his credit before turning his attention to the writing of dramas for the stage.

The picturization will be made by A. H. Sebastian of the Edward Belasco Productions, producers of "Welcome Stranger," who are planning to make the offering an elaborate all-star special feature.

Another big stage play has been secured in the purchase of "The Awful Truth," the Charles Frohman production in which Ina Claire made a hit last season. The film rights for this stage success were purchased by William J. Connery of the Peninsula Studios and it is quite likely that Agnes Ayres will be starred in the role made famous by Miss Claire.

Stromberg Signs Forman

Tom Forman's fine directorial handling of Harry Carey in "Roaring Rails" and "The Flaming Forties," the two recent Hunt Stromberg productions, has resulted in Stromberg signing a long term contract with Forman for the direction of Harry Carey, Priscilla Dean and other Stromberg productions, to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

More Theatres Featuring Short Subjects on Bills

THAT the short subject is being recognized as a real business getter in the finest houses throughout the country is impressively evidenced by the increasingly large number of theatres which are giving these short attractions prominent display in both their street lights and newspaper advertising. Many representative first run theatres all through the country have adopted as a definite advertising program the inclusion of the two-reel comedy, with the name of the star, title of the picture and mention of the brand name in their marquee lights, and are devoting a fair part of their newspaper space to mention of the short attractions on their bill.

Many of the stars in two-reel comedies have established themselves as valuable advertising assets. The names of Lloyd Hamilton, Larry Semon, Lige Conley, Walter Hiers and Bobby Vernon, featured in series released by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., are becoming more common in advertising and theatre exploitation.

Among the latest to adopt this practice is the Fenway Theatre, Boston, which recently gave over the entire front lights of its marquee to two short subjects from the Educational program. "Pigskins," a Mermaid Comedy with Lige Conley, occupied one-half of the front lights, and the other side was given over to an announcement of one of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge series. Conley has become recognized as a real attraction and stands high in the ranks of screen comedians.

B. F. Keith's Majestic, Louisville, Ky., is also giving adequate display to the two-reel comedies. Last week the Hamilton Comedy, "Lonesome," with Lloyd Hamilton, shared the honors with the feature attraction in the marquee lights and in all of the newspaper advertising on the week's program.

Christie's reputation as a maker of popular comedies was realized on by Loew's Aldine Theatre, Pittsburgh, last week when "Savage Love," a Christie Comedy with Jimmy Adams, shared the lights and newspaper advertising.

Loew's State, Los Angeles, makes a regular practice of exploiting the comedy as one of their added attractions, and dozens of other big theatres throughout the country are weekly including these comedies and novelties in their newspaper advertising.

Fox News Camera "Shoots" British High Seas Fleet

THE strength of the British Navy, despite the "scrapping" authorized under the Washington Conference treaty, is revealed for the first time by Fox News in one of the most remarkable pictures ever filmed. The cameraman "shot" from a swooping hydroplane, which circled and dipped above the Atlantic over a surface covering many square miles.

The result is a brilliant piece of photography showing the massive British fleet of 22 dreadnaughts, 53 light cruisers, 6 aircraft carriers, 211 destroyers and 74 submarines, a total of 366 warships.

The daring flier and cameraman dipped almost into the masts of the battlers and hovered over the odd shaped aircraft carriers, with their cabins and funnels on one side. The picture carries the onlooker over ranks of grim destroyers, high above them at one moment, so low in the next that the members of the crew smile up into the watcher's face.

Another "shot" reveals the long line of dreadnaughts, cutting the water like sharks and all barking in unison with their long nosed guns. Then a great herd of light cruisers, shepherded by the grim super-dogs o' war, flashes into view in splendid clearness.

The spectator is brought to realize why it requires 8,000 trained officers and 92,000 men to operate the British armada. It also becomes apparent that the coffers of John Bull were easily drained of $5,000,000,000 for new construction, maintenance, repairs and armament in ten years, by this vast fleet of fighting vessels.

Rome and Paris Pictures

Jose Returns to See Latest Pearl White Film at Home

Two pictures were completed by Edward Jose during his last stay in Europe and one of them was made in Rome with a complete cast of Italian actors. The American director says that he could write a book on his interesting experiences in Italian studios, surrounded only by Italian camera men, electricians, carpenters, property men and other studio help, while handling a full cast of Italian artists and trying to force them to make pictures in the American manner. "The Life Hereafter," which has not yet reached the United States, was the result of his labors.

In Paris his work was easier but just as interesting, as he had Pearl White for his star and American actors aided by some leading French artists. "Perils of Paris" was her new vehicle and, knowing so well her capabilities along the lines of fast-moving melodrama of that style, he enjoyed several months of intensely interesting work.

Opens Extended Run

"Janice Meredith," Cosmopolitan's spectacular special starring Marion Davies, and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn, opened an extended run at the California Theatre in Los Angeles on October 25.

Marion Davies is one of the most popular favorites of the Coast city, and on the strength of the big opening an engagement of exceptional success is looked for. This is the first big key center showing of "Janice Meredith" outside of New York, where the production is in the midst of a long successful run at the Cosmopolitan Theatre at advanced prices.

"Hot Water" Breaks Record

Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe feature comedy, "Hot Water," has the distinction of being the first picture that has ever played the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles for two weeks with a gross business that eclipses anything in the past at that playhouse.

A. Victor Smith Lauds Work of John B. Rock for Vitagraph

THE completion by John B. Rock, a few days ago, of eight months of service as general manager of Vitagraph was made the occasion for a statement by A. Victor Smith, reviewing the notable achievements of the organization during that time. The statement in part:

"In order thoroughly to familiarize himself with actual conditions in every part of the country, Mr. Rock began his work with Vitagraph by paying an official visit to each of the branch offices. This brought him into personal touch, not only with the branch managers, but with the salesmen in every territory, a contact that has proved of mutual advantage.

"Then, with President Albert E. Smith, he brought the entire field organization together in conference at Chicago—a veritable 'experience meeting' with optimism as the keynote. Salesmen were invited to express their ideas freely, with the result that the spirit of cooperation inspired by Mr. Rock on his visits to the branches was strengthened.

"From the beginning, Mr. Rock's entire official course has been in keeping with Vitagraph's long-established policy. It is only true to say that, thanks to Mr. Rock's foresight, enterprise and energy, the last few months have witnessed an arousing of enthusiasm for Vitagraph product on the part of the public, a strengthening of the confidence of exhibitors, and a deepening of the loyalty of all the field workers to the principles of the organization."

"Barbara Frietchie" Wins Southern Writer's Praise

THAT the Thomas H. Ince production, "Barbara Frietchie," is acceptable to the South in its dealing with a phase of the Civil War is indicated by an editorial written by Anna Aiken Patterson in the Weekly Film Review of Atlanta, Ga. This editorial, written by a Southerner in a Southern publication, is a splendid tribute to the delicate and faithful handling of the subject by the Thomas H. Ince studio. Speaking editorially, Mrs. Patterson says in part:

"Before I saw the screen version of 'Barbara Frietchie' I had all the misgivings that usually descend upon a dyed-in-the-wool Southerner about to look upon a picturization of a story that harks back to those dark days of the war between the states. It is not that we retain the ancient bitterness of that period, nor that we would fight the war all over again, but that we insist upon a fair, accurate and sympathetic treatment of the significant events leading up to the war and of the war itself.

"But I might have spared myself the anxiety. 'Barbara Frietchie,' as brought to the screen under the directorial guidance of Lambert Hillyer, with the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is thoroughly Southern in its sympathies; it recognizes and respects the traditions that Southerners have held dear; it is without bias, without bitterness, without prejudice. It is historically accurate, even to the smallest detail, and the fine discrimination exercised at every turn marks genius of a high order.

"The story itself is a thing of exquisite beauty—the love story that has not a parallel in our literature. It is based directly on the famous play by Clyde Fitch in which Julia Marlowe won fame. The titles are superb—many having been taken verbatim from the Clyde Fitch play. And there is a bit of a prologue that is timely and effective—and a bit of an epilogue, though not so named—that brings a glow of conscious pride in the reunited nation that proved itself in the recent World War."

"Poor Mama" Is Third

The Peninsula Studios, San Mateo, have selected "Poor Mama," a stage farce by Elmer Harris, to serve as the third Elmer Harris Production to be filmed for release through the Producers Distributing Corporation. "Poor Mama" was written by Harris some years ago and proved a most successful starring vehicle for Trixie Friganza.

Selected as Title

J. K. McDonald has selected "Wife No. 2" as the permanent title of his new production for First National release, which has hitherto been referred to by its tentative title, "Frivolous Sal." It is from a story by Mr. McDonald and is being directed by Victor Schertzinger. Photography is nearing completion. The cast includes Mae Busch, Eugene O'Brien, Ben Alexander, Mitchell Lewis, Mildred Harris and Tom Santschi.

"Classmates" in November

Richard Barthelmess' new Inspiration picture for First National, "Classmates," scheduled for release on November 23, has been completed and the film shown to First National officials, who are highly optimistic as to its box office attractiveness. Mr. Barthelmess has a fine supporting cast in Reginald Sheffield, Madge Evans, Beach Cooke, James Bradbury, Jr., Major Henry B. Lewis, Adjutant at West Point, Charlotte Walker, Herbert Corthell, Claude Brooks, Antrim Short and Richard Harlan. Josephine Lovett prepared the scenario from William C. DeMille and Margaret Turnbull's stage success. John S. Robertson directed.

Goldwyn Buys Novel

Before leaving New York for Hollywood, Samuel Goldwyn announced the purchase of the film rights to the novel, "World Without End," written by May Edginton, as the next Goldwyn-Fitzmaurice production for First National release, to follow "A Thief in Paradise." The novel, published by Henry Holt & Company, will not be marketed before March of next year, when First National plans to release the picture as a special simultaneously with the publication of the book.

Consistent 25% Is Better Than Inconsistent 100%—Briskin

By TOM WALLER

THE day of 100 and 150 per cent profit on a production is over. Today a producer making 25 per cent above expenses on a single job should be happy. The film business of today is not for the plunger. It is for the man who comes to stay. There is no room or reason for pessimists or pessimistic viewpoints in the industry of today. Why?

Samuel J. Briskin, treasurer of Banner Productions, Inc., just back from a seven weeks' swing which provided him with a close-up of practically every important exchange sector in the United States, asks the questions and supplies the answers. He bases both upon the perspectives acquired by his recent trip and upon experience resultant in long contact with the inside things of filmdom.

Briskin's opinions and observations are confined to the independent field in which his company occupies a prominent part. He maintains that the independent producer should be more satisfied with a regular 25 per cent net on each production than an occasional 100 or 150 per cent profit. The straight and even percentage on worthy product means more in the long run. But, he declares, it also means considerably more. Nothing could be better indicative that the independent field has struck rock bottom and is functioning in a healthy and normal basis than the consistent 25 per cent revenue.

Also illustrative of his contention that the independents are NOT coming into their own but HAVE come into their own is Briskin's reference to the famous "fly-by-nighters." In his opinion they are fast becoming ancient history for the independents. They are forced to absent themselves because their "gold brick" propositions now have to buck against the wall of an industry passing out of the adolescent period and fast reaching that stage of maturity enjoyed by longer established industries.

The change in the independent field, as observed by Banner's treasurer, has been most apparent, in evolution for the better, during the past two years. In that period and especially during the past year there has been a radical lessening in the number of petitions in bankruptcy filed by independent producers. In fact, Briskin maintains, such resort to the courts is now reaching the grade where failures in the film industry are no greater in number than in any other legitimate business.

As further substantiation of his emphasis of the legitimacy of the independent activities is his reference to genuine confidence and friendliness exhibited by bankers towards the big majority of established independent producers. The days of the huge bonus for borrowed money are also over, in the opinion of Briskin. But money can be secured from banks with greater ease and smaller dividend because with the passing of such large gratuities comes a more normal figure indicating a general trend for normalcy.

Briskin believes that the majority of independent producers, including those with the pessimistic viewpoints, are today making money.

SAMUEL J. BRISKIN

The pessimists are those, he volunteers, who cannot understand the reason for the drop from the inconsistent 100 or 150 per cent to the consistent minimum of 25 per cent profit. Others, to be found in every industry, are those who expect the business to come to them without much personal effort. And among the remainder in this "bad outlook" and "poor prospect" category are those "who go around looking for thorns to sit on" and those whose viewpoint is: "I am not in the business for philanthropy or for my health."

As to the verbiage of the pessimist, Briskin has this to say: "First of all it causes endless trouble. It emanates from an obstructionist who cannot read the signs of the times and thus from whom emanates a lot of factless talk. Independent pessimists may learn so easily the joys of Independent optimists. The sooner they do the better, for both themselves and the entire independent field."

First Episode Done

The first episode of "Battling Brewster," the Rayart serial featuring Franklyn Farnum and Helen Holmes, has been completed at the California studios of Rayart and shipped to New York. It is entitled "Crashing to Eternity," the episode title being taken from the ending of the episode, which is said to be a thriller and which shows the hero and heroine crashing to earth in an aeroplane.

Announcement also is made from the New York offices of Rayart of the complete cast, which, in addition to Mr. Farnum and Miss Holmes, takes in George Wendell, Robert Walker, Roland Rand, Lafe McKey, Leon Holmes, Barbed Wire Ryan and Jerome Lacassee. The production is being produced by Dell Henderson Productions at the Berwilla Studios in Los Angeles, and the story is by Robert Dillon.

Gerson Completes Cast

The cast of the second of the series of Gerson Pictures, starring Richard Holt and made under the direction of Duke Worne, has been completed. The picture will be released under the tile, "Too Much Youth," and in addition to Richard Holt, who has the lead, the supporting players are Sylvia Breamer, who has just recently completed a number of starring vehicles of her own for First National; Charles K. French, Harris Gordon, Walter Perry, Joseph Creighton Belmont and Eric Mayne.

More Stability Visible in Laboratory Field, Says San

COMMENTING on a review of the motion picture industry recently published by the National Bank of Commerce, the one of the country's great financial institutions, which emphasized the steadily growing stability of the industry particularly from a banking standpoint, Louis James San, president of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., of New York and Los Angeles stated that the same progress away from the haphazard methods and organizations of the early days has also taken place in the developing and printing branch of the industry, which today has become a highly specialized business in itself.

"I am a decided optimist about the industry," says San. "The period of mushroom speculative growth has practically passed and standardization along the broad principles that underlie other great American industries like steel, tobacco or automobiles in the tendency of the present.

"The proof of business stability is the attitude of the banker, the most conservative element in business, who began by nibbling gingerly and suspiciously and has ended by placing motion pictures on his daily menu as a part of his steady diet.

"The field of motion picture developing and printing has kept step in the march toward industrial stability. The formation of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., in April of this year was a milestone in laboratory progress. The consolidation of these leading laboratories—the Craftsmen Laboratory, the Erbograph Company and the Republican Laboratory in the East, and the Standard Laboratory, the finest on the West Coast—has provided hitherto unequalled facilities for the production of uniformly high quality negatives and prints.

"The exact methods of machine accuracy have been substituted for the hit or miss procedure of the pioneer film developers. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in research work to perfect methods and create automatic machinery and superlative laboratory conditions that insure a perfection to the output that producers, distributors and exhibitors are universally depending upon.

"Service in the industry is the aim of the Consolidated, which is constantly improving its plants and processes in every department. Technical superiority is not the only advantage resulting from consolidation. Quality and service have been coupled with financial strength. The Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., is eminently organized to meet all legitimate demands for money and credit which the producer is rightly entitled to seek."

Harry Danto Signs

An important territorial deal has been consummated by Weiss Brothers, Artclass Pictures Corporation whereby contracts for "After Six Days" have been signed for New York and Northern New Jersey with Harry Danto of the Theatre Picture Exchange, Inc. of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

"Three Women" Tops List of N. Y. Sun's Selections

THE New York Sun's customary review of the month in motion pictures around New York, printed on October 25, had some particularly nice things to say about the Warner Brothers' Ernst Lubitsch production, "Three Women."

"Out of the morass of motion pictures which generally cluttered up the movie bazaars of Manhattan during the past four weeks," a portion of the general review ran, "the writer can name only six that are worth your while. These are hereby listed in their order of merit and should they come to your neighborhood theatre at some time or other you might spend your time profitably in seeing them."

In view of the fact that there are at least six or seven big theatres along Broadway playing pictures constantly—and choosing only the "best"—making a possible twenty-four to twenty-eight pictures a month, the foregoing statement is significant.

And heading the list of six, "in their order of merit," is "Three Women," of which the Sun says:

"This photoplay, you will remember, played for one week at the Strand. It was directed by Ernst Lubitsch—and beautifully directed, too. In the opinion of the writer it is the noted German director's best modern photoplay. The story revolved around the figure of a professional seducteur, who firmly and cruelly wrecked the lives, liberty and pursuit of happiness of three women."

Further along in his general review of the month's pictures in New York the same writer lists the performances of individual players in the various pictures in the order in which they pleased him most, and at the top of this list appears Pauline Frederick in "Three Women," May McAvoy in "Three Women" and Lew Cody in "Three Women."

"The Fast Worker" Released

This week marks the release of "The Fast Worker," Universal's long heralded Jewel production starring Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante. It has been characterized as a hilarious comedy-drama filled with suspense and action. "The Fast Worker" is an adaptation of the celebrated novel, "The Husbands of Edith."

Jans Feature Nearing Completion

The first of the series of six new Jans pictures, "Playthings of Desire," will soon be ready for cutting and editing. Director Burton King has made rapid progress with the production during the past two weeks that he has completed the shooting of a large majority of the scenes and will soon spend his time in the projection room rather than at the studio or on location.

Associated Exhibitors Policy Involves Avoidance of Similarity in Productions

THIRTY-TWO wholly dissimilar pictures, contrasting in theme, unlike in appeal, affording variety in direction, development and casts, diversified in all respects save quality—that's the program announced by Associated Exhibitors for the coming season.

Avoidance of similarity, it is contended, is much more easy for accomplishment for an organization deriving its product from a number of reliable sources than in the case of the large manufacturing establishment which utilizes, over and over again throughout the season, the same staffs of writers, directors and leading players.

By J. S. WOODY

General Sales Manager, Associated Exhibitors

production work which is constantly maintained by the distributor and the rivalry which is engendered by putting a comparatively large group of producers and directors into close competition is depended upon to insure realization of uniformly high standards of value.

Although careful provision is made for diversification to meet the requirements of buyers who desire to purchase a number of productions, the policy will be strictly that of

ARTHUR S. KANE

President of Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

J. S. WOODY

Gen. Sales Manager of Associated Exhibitors

Associated Exhibitors, except in one or two instances, will not have more than two pictures from the same star or producer, and in these cases special precautions have been taken to avoid duplications in theme, direction and casting.

The emphasis which is laid upon quality in contracts with producers, the supervision over individual sales. Each picture will be expected to stand or fall alone and the exhibitor will be free to exercise his judgment regarding the suitability of any production for his theatre. The idea is to sell in the manner in which the customer desires to buy, letting each picture work out its own salvation on a basis of box office value. This, it is contended, is only possible if the distributor is not financially interested in production.

The company's announcement calls attention to its unique position, maintained in the face of a general tendency on the part of distributors to engage in production even more extensively than in the past and to expand their expensive studio, stock company and exchange operations.

The organization will again devote itself exclusively to selling. It will have no studies. It will not maintain or be financially interested in stock companies. It will own no exchanges. It will have no employes except those who are engaged in sales work. And its field men, managers as well as salesmen, will continue on the commission basis which was so successfully put into effect last spring. Thus, according to the announcement, producers will be dependent upon quality for their returns, and salesmen and managers will be dependent upon ability for their income.

More producers will release through Associated Exhibitors this season than ever before in its history. While a market is opened to any reputable individual or organization, properly financed, exactly to the extent to which he is able to turn out first-class pictures, discouragement of large production is consistently practiced. Insistence is placed upon utilizing ample time to obtain the right sort of stories and delaying the starting of production until the right directors and players can be obtained. As this is all preliminary work, it does not increase the cost of production, although usually it discourages the anxious folks who are more interested in getting a picture onto the market than in properly insuring their effort against failure.

Century Comedy Release

Century Film Corporation's current comedy release through Universal exchanges is "Speed Boys," featuring Buddy Messinger and an all star cast including "Bubbles," famous 5-year-old colored comedian, "Spec" O'Donnell and Arthur Trimble. Al Herman directed.

Associated's Program to February 22 Promises a Wealth of Great Pictures

THE list of stars and productions scheduled for the coming year by the Associated Exhibitors places this company in the front ranks of the leading independent producers and distributors of the industry.

Thirteen separate and distinct producing units are at work or engaged with preliminaries preparatory to launching Associated product for the coming season. These companies comprise the Douglas MacLean Productions, Howard Estabrook Productions, Arcadia Productions, Arthur Beck Productions, Becton Pictures, Inc., and Lewis Moomaw. This group is classed as the first division and will produce between them ten productions.

Of the ten, Douglas MacLean will make four and Howard Estabrook two. The first Estabrook picture has been released under the title of "The Price of a Party" and features Hope Hampton and Mary Astor, supported by Harrison Ford and Dagmar Godowsky. The second Estabrook production is being "shot" in New York under the direction of Charles Giblyn and features Herbert Rawlinson, Clara Bow and Earle Williams. This picture is to be released under the title of "The Adventurous Sex."

The first of the Douglas MacLean series has been released under the title of "Never Say Die," with the second production, "Sky High," now in course of construction.

The other four productions of the first division are "The Great Air Mail Robbery," an Arcadia production, featuring Captain Charles Nungesser, the World War ace. This picture is being made from an original screen story written by Jack Lait. Arthur F. Beck's special production, "Barriers Burned Away," is the eighth picture of the first division. This is an adaptation from E. P. Roe's famous book of the same title that has been sold to millions of readers throughout the country. This production was directed by W. S. Van Dyke and carries a cast consisting of Frank Mayo, Mabel Ballin, Harry Morey, Wanda Hawley, Thomas Santschi, Arline Pretty, Wally Van and Eric Mayne. "The Ultimate Good," (working title) with Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy, comes next and is a Becton Pictures, Inc., production. The last picture of the first division is "The Greatest Thing," a Lewis Moomaw feature now in production with Owen Moore, Madge Bellamy and Zasu Pitts.

The second division consists of five units, headed by S. E. V. Taylor, Jess Smith Productions and St. Regis Productions. S. E. V. Taylor's first picture, a new unpublished novel by Ernest Pascal, will feature Conway Tearle and a big feminine name. It will be directed by Taylor. The title of the Jess Smith picture will be "Children of the Whirlwind," a novel published by LeRoy Scott. "Hearts and Fists," a published novel by Clarence Budding Kelland and a Weaver Productions picture, will be made around Tacoma, Washington, the original location.

The third division will consist of two units, Charles O. Sessil and Douglas MacLean productions.

The newly revised list of release dates on Associated Exhibitors product has been published this week. It includes two Harold Lloyd pictures and also a Charles Ray production to follow the present Ray release, "Dynamite Smith."

It is planned by the Associated to distribute at least twenty-eight productions over the 1924-25 season. They will be sold individually and independently. They will all be the product of independent producers who have established creditable records for making box-office successes. Only two of the pictures will be star releases; all others, an official announcement explains, will have special casts, chosen with the approval of Associated Exhibitors.

There will be no costume pictures and none involving religious, political or partisan angles. The dramas will be almost exclusively of the romantic type, and in addition there will be comedies, three or four westerns and at least one north wood's story.

Productions already definitely scheduled for release on the Associated Exhibitors' program include many star names in their casts. The Murray Garson picture, "Is Love Everything?" which will be made available November 30, has a cast comprising Alma Rubens, Frank Mayo, Walter McGrail, Lilyan Tashman, H. B. Warner and Marie Schaefer. The director is William Christy Cabanne. "The Price of a Party," Howard Estabrook's first production for Associated for the season, was released October 12 and is playing to representative first-runs throughout the country. It was directed by Charles Giblyn, the principal players being Hope Hampton, Harrison Ford, Mary Astor, Edmund Carewe and Dagmar Godowsky.

The first Charles Ray picture also has been released. This production, "Dynamite Smith," carries one of the best all-star casts of the year, comprising Wallace Beery, Jacqueline Logan and Bessie Love. Another current release is "The Battling Orioles," a Hal Roach production featuring Glenn Tryon and Blanche Mehaffey.

Probably one of the biggest productions scheduled for release is the Arthur Beck production based on the story of the great Chicago fire. This spectacular picture was adapted from "Barriers Burned Away," a novel that had over 3,000,000 circulation.

FOUR OUTSTANDING PERSONALITIES IN PARAMOUNT PRODUCTION ACTIVITIES

"The City of Silent Men" resembles that picture so much as the story of "Man and the Law," based on Tristram Tupper's Ladies Home Journal serial, "King-Pin." It is the kind of a story that is crammed full of that particular human quality that people have come to associate with Meighan pictures.

"THE CHARMER"

Pola Negri and Sidney Olcott! These are the two outstanding personalities who will be associated in the elaborate production of "The Charmer," based on Henry Baerlein's absorbing novel, "Mariposa." The screen's foremost emotional actress, directed by one of the greatest producers in the business, in a story that is the literary sensation of England. The versatile Pola has a role radically different from any she has heretofore portrayed.

"I'LL TELL THE WORLD"

Richard Dix, the fast-climbing luminary in the screen world, will have in this story a picture that has all the audience appeal of "Manhandled." Comedy, drama, mystery and punch are the ingredients intermingled in this plot, which is from the play by Frederick Ballard. Paul Sloane will wield the megaphone.

"THE WRATH OF THE GODS"

Irvin Willat has been picked to direct "The Wrath of the Gods," a fast-moving, thrill-crowded super-melodrama. The story, from the Saturday Evening Post serial, "Evered," by Ben Ames Williams, teems with action, hand-to-hand fights, hair-breadth escapes, skilfully balanced with romance. Ernest Torrence will be featured at the head of a strong cast.

"THE NIGHT CLUB"

Frank Urson and Paul Iribe—the winning team that produced "Changing Husbands"—have a story worthy of their expert knowledge in "The Night Club," based on William DeMille's play, "After Five." Laughs, romance, love-theme, luxurious sets and a special DeMille cast including Vera Reynolds, Raymond Griffith and Wallace Beery—that's the Iribe-Urson formula.

"THE CROWDED HOUR"

The story is based on the celebrated stage play by Edgar Selwyn and Channing Pollock. Bebe Daniels will star in the role that Jane Cowl made famous on the stage. Here is a different sort of triangular love-drama, involving a selfish, man-wrecking woman whose character is remoulded in the fires of a great adventure. Frank Tuttle, who made "Dangerous Money," will direct.

"ADAM'S DAUGHTER"

Betty Compson in a mystery story, directed by Raoul Walsh, who produced "The Thief of Bagdad." In "Adam's Daughter," which was adapted from Honore Willsie Morrow's best-seller, "The Devonshers," the author has built up, against a vivid background of the Wyoming Rockies, a baffling mystery whose solving involves a trial unique in its far-reaching causes and effects.

"LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS"

This is a Zane Grey adventure drama with its share of the brand of thrills and exciting action that characterized all of the former Zane Grey pictures. As usual it will be filmed in the actual locations mentioned in the book, thus giving it an atmosphere of realism impossible to obtain in any other way. William K. Howard will direct.

"GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE"

A happy marriage comedy by Ernest Vajda, translated by Guy Bolton, it is now playing to S. R. O. business at the Empire Theatre. Bright, breezy and original, this reigning New York stage success has been adapted to the screen and will be produced by Paul Bern. That charming and versatile actress, Leatrice Joy, is the featured member of the excellent cast which includes Grethe Nissen.

"MARRY ME"

As a rapid-fire comedy-drama, to be produced by James Cruze, "Marry Me" is a worthy successor to the mirth-provoking "Merton." It was adapted from the popular stage play, "The Nest Egg," by Anne Caldwell, author of "Tip Top," "Stepping Stones" and other Broadway hits. It deals with the small-town romance of a pretty country girl, a part to be portrayed by Lois Wilson. It is a happy circumstance that brings together again the heroine and director of "The Covered Wagon."

"THE SPANIARD"

Imagine a composite of "Blood and Sand" and "The Sheik," with the best features of both pictures welded into one ripping romantic Spanish romance. That is "The Spaniard," a Herbert Brenon production with Ricardo Cortez in the name part. The story is an adaptation of "Spanish Love," by Juanita Savage, a popular British novel, soon to be introduced to the American public.

"PATHS TO PARADISE"

The story is an original one from that versatile screen writer, Howard Hawks. The sort of plot that audiences get excited about and laugh and cry over to their hearts' content. Victor Fleming will produce and Pauline Starke and Raymond Griffith will have the featured leads.

"ANY WOMAN"

An original screen story, specially written by Arthur Somers Roche, one of America's most popular writers of fiction. This is the second of the two pictures that feature Alice Terry. The popularity of this favorite is sufficient to insure the success of any production.

"THE GATE OPENS"

Will Irwin, famous author of a score of hits, has provided an ideal starring vehicle for Bebe Daniels in his recent Saturday Evening Post story, "The Gate Opens." Just the proper mixture of jazz, human interest, tears and laughter to get the crowds and the cash. Frank Tuttle will do the directorial honors.

"THE EARLY BIRD"

In this picture Richard Dix has a subject, a supporting cast and a production in accordance with his importance as a star. The same red-blooded romance that made "Manhattan," his initial starring vehicle, such a box-office attraction, is an integral part of "The Early Bird," which is to be directed by Paul Sloane.

"MEN AND WOMEN"

William DeMille's production of "Men and Women" is destined to be something more than a great picture—it will be acclaimed a powerful document of human love, frailty and courage. The story was written by Henry B. DeMille, father of William and Cecil. It was one of David Belasco's great stage successes and its picturization marks the consummation of a life-long ambition on the part of William DeMille. Rod La Rocque and Grethe Nissen will have important parts.

"NEW YORK LIFE"

Another of the super-attractions of the second Famous Forty is Allan Dwan's elaborate production, "New York Life." With a cast of big names to be especially selected by Jesse L. Lasky and a story as big as the title stands for, a realistic and ultra-modern photoplay of dynamic power and audience appeal may be expected.

"DRESSMAKER FROM PARIS"

A comedy romance by Alfred Sevoir, who wrote "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "Kiki" and other romantic plays, in which Betty Compson will play the title role and Raoul Walsh will direct. The story deals with a celebrated French-American motion picture star who hits upon an ingenious method for revenging herself upon a Parisian banker who had loved her and then deserted her sixteen years ago when she had been the obscure daughter of a small town tobacconist.

"OLD HOME WEEK"

Thomas Meighan and George Ade—the winning combination that gave us "Back Home and Broke" and "Our Leading Citizen"—are reunited in "Old Home Week," which George Ade wrote especially for the male star and which Eddie Sutherland will produce. Mr. Ade will personally write the titles, thereby preserving the flavor of the original plot.

Begin "Salome of Tenements"

Filming of Anzia Yezierska's colorful novel of the Ghetto, "Salome of The Tenements," which created a stir in literary circles a few months ago, has been started at the Paramount Astoria studio. It will be a Sidney Olcott Production. Miss Jetta Goudal has the title role, Godfrey Tearle, an English actor, makes his American screen debut in this picture.

In his quiet but usually effective way he started in to find and apply a remedy. At the start he had the support of loyal and earnest friends who thought as he did and who had interests identical with his own. In a few weeks the producer-distributors made an important discovery in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. They found that someone had organized a new system of booking which acted as a complete check upon the then prevalent overvaluation of pictures and as a protection to the theatre owner, providing the latter with a sufficient supply of pictures at living prices.

At first there was a great outcry, but as the scheme was studied in all its details it was found to be altogether feasible and constructive. Eventually all of the producers and distributors gave it their full support. I know that big exhibitors from other sections of the country came to Philadelphia offering sizable sums for introducing the system in their own localities. All these offers were declined, but the fact that they were made showed the need of such a system. I also know that various people offered high rewards to break the system up, but while there was some striving to earn the reward, no one ever claimed it.

When I recently, after a long absence from this country, called on Mr. Schwalbe and saw the great offices, most elegantly equipped and occupying such a considerable part of the huge building numbered 383 Madison Avenue, I reminded him of 44 North 10th and ventured the remark that the marvelous change typified the progress, both of the man and of the industry.

He declined to enthuse. "The only difference I can see," he finally said with his habitually quiet smile, "is this: In the Electric Theatre Supply Co. I was my own boss. Here I have about two thousand exhibitors bossing me."

Harry Schwalbe is at the zenith of his power. He has realized to no small extent his ideals of exhibitor cooperation. Peaceful and constructive, there never was a more formidable fighter; if the occasion for a battle arose, the coolest general amid the din and smoke of conflict.

Those wonderful offices in 383 Madison Avenue are a visible monument to the leadership and loyal team work. New York is full of monuments to honest, intelligent cooperation like the imposing edifices built by savings banks and insurance companies. The huge hive in the monumental structure in Madison Avenue is the result of exhibitor cooperation wisely directed.

There is nothing dazzling or meteoric about Harry Schwalbe. He is no mere shooting star in the motion picture sky. Rather would I liken him to the "constant northern star"—"of whose true fixed and resting quality there is no fellow in the firmament."

Great Advance Campaign on "Romance of Actress"

A GREAT advance exploitation and publicity campaign is being waged over the whole United States on "The Romance of an Actress," Langdon McCormack's great play, scheduled as one of the pictures in the Chadwick Nine unit for the independent market this season. It is being conducted by the Cloverleaf League, consisting of a group of leading newspapers and magazines, the St. Paul Daily News, the Omaha Daily News, the Cloverleaf Weekly and the Cloverleaf American, as a national contest, the winners of which will receive either contracts to appear in the picture or money awards.

A group of officials of the Cloverleaf organization, headed by L. M. Knopp, have been placed in charge of the contest. They are waging an intensive campaign by means of advertisements in leading newspapers and magazines, special literature which is sent broadcast in millions of copies, radio publicity and various other stunts calculated to bring the contest to the attention of the greatest number of people and to bring about the greatest results. Among some of the newspapers in which advertisements of this contest have appeared are the St. Louis Globe, the St. Paul Daily News, the Omaha Daily News and Capper's Weekly. In the lists of magazines are Motion Picture Play, Argosy All-Story, Woman's Weekly, American Weekly, People's Popular Magazine, Sovereign Visitor, Household Magazine, Blue Book Magazine and Cloverleaf American.

In all of the advertising copy Chadwick Pictures Corporation is prominently mentioned, with the seal of the company, and mention is made of all the pictures produced by the Chadwick organization this season for the independent market.

Winner of the first prize will be given a guaranteed part in "The Romance of an Actress," with all expenses of the trip to the West Coast and return paid for herself and a chaperon. This includes hotel expenses also. The four other winners will be given a free trip to the West Coast and return with chaperon, including all hotel expenses, with a chance for a tryout before the camera, and in case they are screenable, will be given parts in the production. The winners are picked according to the results shown by balloting, based on subscriptions for Cloverleaf League papers. In case of a tie, equal awards will be made those tying. The contest closes December 1.

Word received at the Chadwick offices from Mr. Knopp, in charge of the contest, indicates that approximately 13,000 people from all parts of the country are already actively participating in the contest, with the number increasing daily. Twenty-five thousand participants is the goal set by the Cloverleaf organization, each participant being an active booster of the Chadwick pictures, and in particular "The Romance of an Actress."

1st National Names Films to Be "Shot" in New York

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES will inaugurate production in the East with two of its important pictures for the first half of 1925, "The Interpreter's House," from Struthers Burt's novel, which is still enjoying a wide sale, and Beale Davis' new novel, "One Way Street," which is another fiction success of the fall.

Earl J. Hudson, who came on from Hollywood to take charge of First National's eastern productions, is working day and night with H. H. Bruenner, his new assistant in production, and other members of the production staff who accompanied him from the West, getting ready to start photography. The directors who will make the first picture in New York, Lambert Hillyer and Francis Dillon, are already on the ground and deep in preliminary preparations with Mr. Hudson. Hillyer will direct "The Interpreter's House" and Dillon "One Way Street."

The leading roles in "The Interpreter's House" will be acted by Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon, who will leave Hollywood for New York within a week or so, as soon as their respective roles in "As Man Desires" and "A Thief in Paradise" are done.

Ben Lyon, now playing the son with Colleen Moore in Edna Ferber's "So Big," and Anna Q. Nilsson, who recently completed the lead in Sam E. Rork's "Inez from Hollywood," will have the leads in "One Way Street." They will arrive in New York with Milton Sills and Miss Kenyon.

Metro Buys "Garcia"

"A Message to Garcia," written by Elbert Hubbard from a true story of unparalleled heroism in the Spanish-American war in Cuba, has been bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Production plans have not been announced but it is intended to make the film one of the most spectacular productions the screen has seen.

Completing "The Tom Boy"

Word was received at the offices of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation this week from Leon Rice, president of the Mission Film Corporation in Hollywood, that David Kirkland is rapidly completing "The Tom Boy," scheduled as the fifth picture in the Chadwick Nine unit for the independent market this season. In the cast are Dorothy Devore, Herbert Rawlinson, Helen Lynch, Lee Moran, Harry Gribbon, Lottie Williams and James Barrows.

Universal's White List Has Twenty-one Big Productions

AS the culmination of a striking teaser campaign, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has just announced that "The White List," advertised in various trade and other publications during the past month or so, is the name given to Universal's spring product, twenty-one high class pictures to be released during the first half of 1925. The White List consists of a series of special pictures made by Universal's leading stars and directors and adapted from popular and standard stories or plays.

On January 18 Universal will release "Smouldering Fires," a Clarence Brown Production featuring Pauline Frederick and Laura La Plante. This story was written by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin. The cast includes Tully Marshall, Malcolm MacGregor, Wanda Hawley, Helen Lynch, George Cooper, Billy Gould and Bert Roach.

January 25 is the release date for the first Universal Gibson production of the season, "The Hurricane Kid," starring Hoot Gibson. This is from the western story by Will Lambert and was directed by Edward Sedgwick.

February 1 will see "Oh, Doctor," Harry Leon Wilson's Saturday Evening Post story, in film form with Reginald Denny in the starring role. It is a Harry Pollard production. The cast includes Mary, Astor, who is featured; Otis Harlan, William V. Mong, Tom Ricketts, Lucille Ward, Mike Donlin, Clarence Geldert, Blanche Payson, Martha Mattox, Helen Lynch and George Kuwa.

February 15 will see the release of "Secrets of the Night," the Universal Jewel version of the Broadway stage success, "The Nightcap." This play was written by Max Marcin and Guy Bolton. Herbert Blache is the director. The picture features James Kirkwood and Madge Bellamy and contains ZaSu Pitts, Rosemary Theby, Arthur Stewart Hull, Tom Ricketts, Tom S. Guise, Edward Cecil, Frederick R. Cole and Tom Wilson.

March 1 is the date for "The Mad Whirl," the Universal Jewel adaptation of Richard Washburn Child's story, "Here's How." This was speeded in production so that the star, May McAvoy, could leave for Rome where she is to do "Ben Hur." William Seiter directed. Other players were Jack Mulhall, George Fawcett, Myrtle Stedman, Alec B. Francis, Ward Crane, Marie Astaire and Joe Singleton.

On March 15 comes a new Virginia Valli picture, "The Price of Pleasure." Norman Kerry also is featured. It is adapted from stories by Marion Orth and Elisabeth Saxany Holding. Edward Sloman directed.

On March 22 will come another Universal Gibson production, "The Lone Outlaw," directed by Edward Sedgwick. The cast includes Marian Nixon, G. Raymond Nye, Josie Sedgwick, Charles K. French and Frank Campeau.

March 29 will see the release of House Peters in "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman." King Baggot is directing. It is taken from E. W. Hornung's story.

April 12 is the date set for "Eyes of Fools," Universal's Jewel production of the Clarence Budington Kelland novel, "Miracle," now running in the Ladies' Home Journal. Edward Laemmle is directing. Percy Marmont and Alma Rubens are taking the leading roles. Others are Jean Hersholt, ZaSu Pitts, Andre de Beranger, Cesare Gravina, Hughie Mack, Rose Rosonova and William H. Turner.

April 26 is the date for "California Straight Ahead," a new Reginald Denny comedy drama. It is another Byron Morgan story and will be a Harry Pollard production.

May 3 will see "Fifth Avenue Models," a Jewel featuring Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry. This feature was adapted from Muriel Hine's best seller, "The Best in Life" and was directed by Svend Gade.

The next May release, May 10, will be "Up the Ladder," a Virginia Valli vehicle, adapted from the stage play of the same name by Owen Davis. Edward Sloman is directing Miss Valli, Forrest Stanley, Margaret Livingston, Holmes Herbert, George Fawcett and Priscilla Moran.

On May 24 Universal will offer another House Peters Jewel, "The Love Cargo," to be adapted from A. M. Sinclair Wilt's novel, "Head Winds."

On May 31 comes another Hoot Gibson picture, "Let 'Er Buck," a romance of the Pendleton Round-up. It was made by Edward Sedgwick at the actual round-up this year. In the cast are Marian Nixon, Josie Sedgwick and G. Raymond Nye.

On June 7 the release will be "Dangerous Innocence," featuring Laura La Plante and Engene O'Brien. William Seiter is the director. It is adapted from "Ann's an Idiot," by Pamela Wynne. This novel already is in its ninth edition.

On June 14 will come "Ridin' Thunder," a Jack Hoxie picture directed by Clifford Smith, with Katherine Grant and Francis Ford playing important roles.

A special film co-starring Herbert Rawlinson and Madge Bellamy is "The Fightin' Cop," directed by Edward Laemmle from the Red Book Magazine story, "The Flower of Napoli," written by Gerald Beaumont. In the cast are Cesare Gravina, Martha Mattox, Dorothy Brock, Jackie Morgan, Harry Mann and Nick de Ruiz. It will be released June 21.

Next comes a William Desmond picture, "The Meddler," directed by Arthur Rosson and released June 28. This western feature presents Dolores Rousay, Jack Daugherty, Claire Anderson, Albert J. Smith and Kate Lester.

Another Hoot Gibson picture, "Taming the West," also directed by Sedgwick, will be released July 5. It is from the story by B. M. Bowers.

Another Jack Hoxie picture will come on July 19. It will be "Don Dare-Devil," a dramatic western directed by Clifford Smith from a story by William Gittens. Cathleen Calhoun, William Steele, Cesare Gravina and Duke Lec are in the cast.

The final picture on The White List will be "Red Clay," a William Desmond picture directed by Ernst Laemmle. In the cast will be Marcelaine Day, Billy Sullivan, Lola Todd and Albert J. Smith. The release date will be July 26.

Universal production forces also are in the midst of the filming of "The Phantom of the Opera," starring Lon Chaney. Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry also are leads. It is adapted from Gaston Leroux's novel.

Script Being Prepared

Garrett Elsden Fort, prominent author and scenario writer and sponsor of many successful photoplays, is in New York at work on the script of "The Street Singer," the sixth picture in the Chadwick Nine unit for independents this season, shortly to go into production in the East here. A cast of prominent players is being gathered by I. E. Chadwick, president.

Back From Tour

Saunders and Burger Optimistic Over Conditions in West

Edward M. Saunders, western general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn, and Paul Burger, division manager, have returned to New York after a sales trip of five weeks through the West and Canada. Mr. Saunders returned by way of Toronto, Mr. Burger via Winnipeg and Chicago.

With the termination of Metro-Goldwyn Weeks, celebrated throughout the country, the sales executives state that the observance was the most successful in the history of the organization. While complete reports will not be available from all sections of the country for several weeks, Mr. Saunders stated that throughout the western territory results were unprecedented.

"Metro-Goldwyn sold practically 100 per cent., not only in the key centers, but in almost every situation and town of any consequence, including a great number of the smaller towns, from Denver and Salt Lake to Los Angeles and Vancouver," said Mr. Saunders.

Open the New Stage

Warner Brothers Start James Flood Working On It

Actual camera work on "The Man Without a Conscience," which the Warner Brothers are making from an internationally celebrated Hungarian novel by Max Kretzer, with James Flood directing, has been begun at the company's West Coast studios. It is of interest to note that this picture is the first to be filmed on the recently built stage on the Warner lot, which the Warners hail as the biggest and finest stage yet devised for motion picture work. The electrical equipment particularly is the last word.

Willard Louis has the stellar and title role in the picture. Other players are Irene Rich, June Marlowe, William Orlemond, Helen Dunbar, Robert Agnew and John Patrick.

Buster Brown Comedies

Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, sends word from Hollywood, where he is supervising production activities, that his comedy organization is about to produce a series of comedies based on the famous comic strip by R. F. Outcault, Buster Brown. Arthur Trimble, who has played in many Century comedies, will most likely be given the title role in this series.

Wins Popularity Contest

In a contest to determine the most popular screen star in South America, held recently by Imparcial, a fan magazine published in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Tom Mix, the William Fox star, won first place by a wide margin. Mix polled 2,024 votes and Buck Jones, the other Fox cowboy star, was second with 790 admirers. William S. Hart, their nearest competitor, got 462 votes.

Bradley Barker in Jans Picture

Bradley Barker has been added to the cast of "Playthings of Desire," which Burton King is directing for H. F. Jans. Director King has been shooting his interiors at the Whitman Bennett Studio at Yonkers and last week had as his guests Mrs. Jans, Miss Jans and a party of friends who were introduced to the mysteries of movie making.

Wright Film Popularity Is Proved by Test Runs

FIRST runs now taking place throughout the country on Harold Bell Wright's "The Mine With the Iron Door" prove the popularity of this Principal Pictures Master Attraction, according to Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal.

In practically every run the receipts for "When a Man's a Man," the first Wright picture to be produced by Principal, have been exceeded. The showing at the T. & D. Theatre, Oakland, Cal., proved a great success. Crowds filled the Warfield Theatre at San Francisco, and the business at the Capital, Des Moines, proved the biggest the house has done, according to Harry Weinberg, general manager for A. H. Blank. Records were established at the Garden, Davenport, Iowa.

Tucson, Ariz., the home town of Mr. Wright, saw all records smashed.

Sol Lesser and his brother, Irving, are highly pleased over the results of these test runs. Sol Lesser said they bore out his predictions that "The Mine With the Iron Door" is one of the great pictures of the season. During the last few days Lon Marcus of the Victory, Salt Lake City, saw "The Mine With the Iron Door" at a private screening and went to Irving Lesser's office and booked it for the Victory. Hank Hearn, assistant general manager of Southern States Film Company, visited New York, saw the picture and arranged with Famous Players to show it at their big house, the Howard, Atlanta. Hearn said it was one of the most powerful productions of the year.

William Shapiro and Irving Wallenstein of Franklin Films, Boston, after seeing "The Mine With the Iron Door" came to New York and arranged with Mr. Lesser for additional prints. They have it booked day and date for the Modern and Beacon, Boston.

Varied Fox Releases For the Week of November 9

TWO Special Productions, the latest Van Bibber comedy, an Imperial Comedy, a William Farnum reissue and a Fox Educational Entertainment are scheduled for release by Fox Film Corporation the week of November 9.

"Thorns of Passion," adapted from Robert W. Service's novel, "The Roughneck," and "Daughters of the Night," a melodramatic story of a telephone girl's life, are the two latest special productions to go to exhibitors. Publishers' reports show that "The Roughneck" was among the ten best sellers of last month.

George O'Brien plays the lead in the first of these new specials. Billie Dove has the feminine lead. John Conway directed. The screen adaptation is the work of Charles Kenyon. The other principals include Harry T. Morey, Cleo Madison, Charles A. Sellon, Ann Cornwall, Harvey Clark, Maryon Aye, Edna Eichnor and Buddy Smith.

"Daughters of the Night" is a real life melodrama dealing with the happenings in the life of a telephone girl. Elmer Clifton directed. Orville Caldwell and Alyce Mills have the leading roles and the other principals include Phelps Decker, Alice Chapin, Warner Richmond, Bobbie Perkins, Clarice Vance, Claude Cooper, Charles Slattery, Willard Robertson and Henry Sands. The story and scenario both were written by Willard Robertson.

"Paul Jones, Jr., the fourth of the Van Bibber series adapted from the famous Van Bibber short stories by Richard Harding Davis, will be released November 9. George Marshall is directing the entire series and the scenario is the work of R. P. Kerr. Earle Foxe plays the title role and Florence Gilbert is cast in the feminine lead. Frank Beal and Edward Hearn are the other principals credited in this production.

"Nip O'Scotch," an Imperial Comedy; "The Scuttlers," a William Farnum reissue, and "The Finger Lakes," a Fox Educational Entertainment, are also released November 9.

"The Navigator" Breaks Records Wherever Shown

"The Navigator," Buster Keaton's newest comedy, is breaking records throughout the country since its release by Metro-Goldwyn two weeks ago. At the Capitol Theatre, New York, "The Navigator" was held over a second week.

In Washington the production packed in large audiences throughout the week at Loew's Palace.

At Loew's State in Los Angeles "The Navigator" likewise surpassed in receipts every other motion picture in the coast city, and in San Francisco at Loew's Warfield, Keaton's comedy did a turnaway business.

An English Contract

So successful has Harry Rowson, managing director of Ideal Films, Ltd., London, been with the first two independent Douglas MacLean productions, "Going Up" and "The Yankee Consul," that an important contract has been closed with him for the two remaining pictures of the first series, calling for a special bonus. "Never Say Die" and the fourth picture, being made under the working title of "Sky High," have been obtained by Ideal Films for United Kingdom, and in consummating this transaction $50,000 was paid to the MacLean Productions.

Crowned Heads There

Audience of 6,000 Sees "The Sea Hawk" Open in London

"The Sea Hawk" continues its triumphal progress around the world. It has just opened in London and in Portland, Ore., with great success in both cities. Royalty attended the premiere in London. Frank Lloyd, producer and director of "The Sea Hawk" for the First National, has received the following cablegram from Ralph Pugh, manager of the London office of First National Pictures, Ltd.:

"Presentation 'Sea Hawk' at Royal Albert Hall unprecedented triumph. Society and exhibitor audience of 6,000 from all parts of United Kingdom, including Princess Beatrice and Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden. Magnificent picture and wonderful presentation, the talk of London. The press says the picture received a Galli-Curci reception. Sabatini says 'Words cannot express my delight. Hearty congratulations.'"

"The Sea Hawk" opened at the Strand Theatre, Portland, in a rain that lasted all day and all night. But in spite of the rain there was always a line waiting to get in the box office to buy tickets. J. J. Von Herberg, one of the Jensen & Von Herberg circuit, was in the First National home office last week and he predicted that "The Sea Hawk" would have a minimum run of three weeks in Portland, and probably exceed that number.

"The Sea Hawk" broke all records in Lexington, Ky.

In Production

Rowland Lee Directing "In Love With Love" for Fox

Three new players this week were added to the cast of the William Fox screen version of "In Love With Love," which Rowland V. Lee is directing at the William Fox West Coast studios. William Walling, Allan Sears and Mabel Forrest are the latest additions to this cast.

This story is an adaptation from Vincent Lawrence's stage success of the same name, made by Robert W. Lee, a brother of the director. Marguerite de la Motte has the leading feminine role. Allan Forrest plays the male lead and Harold Goodwin is the juvenile. William Austin and Mary Warren are two other players previously cast for character parts.

Universal Buys "Plastic Age"

Believing that the problem of youth, the youth of America in colleges and schools, are more interesting than any other problems of life, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has just signed a contract in New York which gives Universal the rights to "The Plastic Age," one of the most widely discussed psychological novels of today.

Finished by Warners

The Warner Brothers production of Owen Davis' widely known melodramatic success, "The Lighthouse by the Sea," has been completed at the West Coast studios of the company in Hollywood and shown for preview in Los Angeles. It is another Classic of the Screen which will introduce Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog, as its star. William (Buster) Collier, Jr., and Louise Fazenda are the featured "humans."

"Chu-Chin-Chow" a Metro Release

"Chu-Chin-Chow," hailed as one of the most gorgeous spectacles yet seen in pictures, will be released in the United States by Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, it was announced this week by Nicholas M. Schenck, a vice-president of the company. The production, a screen version of the Oscar Asche and Frederic Norton stage success that ran five years in London and three years in New York, was produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox. Betty Blythe is a featured player in the role of Zahrat, the desert dancer.

"Chu-Chin-Chow" was entirely filmed abroad, and to carry out the Oriental atmosphere of the story, a shipload of dromedaries was imported from Persia, with Arabian horses, elephants, lions, yaks, and water buffaloes brought from other parts of the world. Ten thousand people are in the cast, which has Herbert Langley appearing opposite Betty Blythe in the role of Abou Hassan. Eva Moore, Randle Ayrton, Jameson Thomas, Judd Green, Jeff Barlow, Olaf Hytten, Dora Levis and the dancer Dacia are others who appear in prominent roles.

Mix in "Teeth"

Called a Dog Story, Love Story and Western Story

In "Teeth," a William Fox special production released November 2, Tom Mix shares starring honors with Tony, his horse, and Duke, his dog. This is a new type of action story for Mix and the outdoor scenes in which Tony and Duke appear will delight all lovers of animals.

This photoplay is an adaptation of the novel, "Sonny," by Clinton H. Stagg and Virginia Hudson Brightman, which had a wide sale and was described by the publishers as a dog story, a love story and a western story. J. G. Blystone directed and Donald Lee wrote the scenario. Lucy Fox has the feminine lead opposite Mix, and the other principals are George Bancroft, Lucien Littlefield and Edward Piel.

Begins on "East of Suez"

"East of Suez," Pola Negri's current starring picture went into production today with one of the strongest casts yet assembled for a Paramount Picture.

Edmund Lowe, Rockcliffe Fellows, Noah Beery and Sojin head the cast of supporting players. Raoul Walsh, who directed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" is directing "East of Suez."

Completing "North of 36"

Paramount's "North of 36" is on the last lap toward completion. Irvin Willat and the unit have returned to the Paramount studio from Miller Brothers' 101 ranch in Oklahoma to make the final interior shots. Featured in the cast of "North of 36" are Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson, "The Covered Wagon Girl" and Noah Beery.

Mix Plays Turpin

Fox Star Cast as Famous English Highwayman

Tom Mix is cast in the role of the most famous English highwayman in history in his latest picture, "Dick Turpin," which is now in production at the William Fox West Coast Studios. J. G. Blystone is directing this picture, which will be one of the biggest special productions in which Mix will be featured this season.

Charles Darnton and Don Lee have woven an interesting story about this romantic character and his famous horse "Black Bess." Tony has an important part in the picture as the bandit's horse. Charles Kenyon prepared the scenario.

Kathleen Myers is given her first important screen role in this picture, in which she plays the feminine lead. The other principals are Philo McCullough, James Marcus, Lucille Hutton, Alan Hale and Bull Montana. This is one of the best supporting casts that ever worked with the western star.

Completed on Coast

"Troubles of a Bride" Is New Fox Comedy-Drama

"Troubles of a Bride," one of the William Fox special productions for this season, has been finished at the Fox West Coast Studios. This comedy-drama was filmed from the original story and scenario by Thomas Buckingham, who also made "The Cyclone Rider" this year.

Robert Agnew, who has the lead in "Gold Heels," plays the lead in "Troubles of a Bride." Mildred June is cast in the leading feminine part. The other principals are Alan Hale, Bruce Covington, Dolores Rousse, Charles Conklin, Lou Harvey and Bud Jamieson.

Colleen Moore in "Sally"

First National Pictures has selected Colleen Moore to act the role of Sally in the Ziegfeld musical comedy hit, "Sally," which served Marilyn Miller as a vehicle for several seasons. "Sally" was one of the most successful musical comedies of the decade. Leon Errol, who appeared with Miss Miller in "Sally" and later was starred in it, has been engaged by First National to act in the film version the same role that he played on the stage.

"Miss Bluebeard" Begun

Production of "Miss Bluebeard," an adaptation of Avery Hopwood's brisk farce, got under way at the Long Island Studio of Famous Players-Lasky this week with Bebe Daniels in the title role and Frank Tuttle directing. In the supporting cast are Robert Frazer, Raymond Griffith, Florence Billings, Martha Madison, Ivan Simpson, Diana Kane and Lawrence D'Orsay.

Exploiting in New York

Jack R. Keegan, until recently handling the Warner product exploitation through New England, is now in New York where he will take charge of publicity and exploitation for Warner pictures playing the Piccadilly Theatre.

In addition to handling this theatre Keegan will work on all exploitation on the Warner pictures for the Apollo Exchange.

NEWEST REVIEWS and COMMENTS

EDITED BY CHARLES S. SEWELL

"Manhattan"

Dix as Star and Burnside as Director Make Debut in Amusing and Entertaining Paramount Film

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Pictures offering combinations of new stars and directors seem to be the vogue with Paramount. First there was Bebe Daniels in "Dangerous Money," directed by Frank Tuttle, and now comes Richard Dix in "Manhattan," directed by R. H. Burnside.

Because of the impression he has made in a number of featured roles, stardom was the logical development for Dix. He lives up to expectations, takes his new honor gracefully and if he continues to be supplied with material and direction as good as in this one, there is no reason why he should not become a favorite, for he possesses personality, a fine physique for hero roles and ability.

More than ordinary interest attaches to the work of Mr. Burnside for he comes to the screen with a long and enviable record as a stage director which includes the production of the gorgeous spectacles which were a feature of the New York Hippodrome. In his new field he lives up to the expectations of his most enthusiastic boosters, and it is new in more senses than one, for "Manhattan" offers none of the chances for dazzling spectacular stuff, but is a story of the contrasts of New York life.

The plot runs more to romance than to reality, with a wealthy chap in search of adventure who is mistaken for a burglar, chums with a crook, falls in love with his sister and makes her his wife after thrashing the gang leader. Even if things don't often happen this way, such themes properly handled make pleasant entertainment, and Mr. Burnside has directed this story like a screen veteran. He has kept in mind the light and breezy angle and shown a fine sense of humor. Effective comedy crops out all through the picture, even in the earlier scenes between the hero and "heavy" the hero has his fun at the villain's expense, and the scenes where the hero, thinking he scents adventure, finds the masked bandits are masqueraders and the gang fight is a struggle to buy silk sox, is crackerjack comedy.

But this is not the entire appeal of the picture, there is the pleasing rich man and poor girl romance, with its share of pathos because of the girl's weak-willed brother and her fear of the villain, plenty of snap and action, a corking ring fight between Dix and a "Gunboat" Smith with plenty of knockdowns and even here there is excellent comedy in the expression of the trainer as he sees his man alternately win and lose.

There is a fight at the climax that runs true to melodramatic form, even including the fall of the pair when the balcony railing breaks, but it is just about as exciting and realistic a struggle all through as the screen has seen. No brutality, but just a good he-man fight between George Seigman and Richard Dix. The way they throw each other about, should have landed both in a doctor's hands.

Jacqueline Logan is attractive and appealing as the heroine and Gregory Kelly, another who makes his screen debut after a successful stage career, is excellent as the weak-willed and helpless tool of the gang leader.

Improbable, but entertaining and amusing, we believe will be the general verdict on "Manhattan."

Story

Peter Minuit, wealthy and bored with life, is visited by a burglar who believes him one of his own kind. Peter, posing as Gentleman George, makes a deal with the chap, Spike, who hides him in his home where Peter meets and falls in love with his sister Mary. McGinnis, the head of the gang, wants to marry Mary and she agrees to save her brother and Peter. Peter takes her to his home and reveals his identity. McGinnis threatens to "get" him. Mary goes back to McGinnis. Peter follows and there is a fierce fight. McGinnis is shot by one of his henchmen who has a grudge. The gang is arrested and Peter takes his future wife back home.

"Husbands and Lovers"

Cold Husband, Affectionate Wife, Convincing Flatterer Provide Human Interest Theme for First National

Reviewed by Tom Waller

A matter-of-fact husband and a pretty wife sincere, craving affection and wholly domesticated, and the suave friend of the husband whose chief knowledge is of women's weaknesses, occupy the center of the stage of First National's "Husbands and Lovers."

Lewis S. Stone, Florence Vidor and Lew Cody, respectively, play those parts. Their acting is excellent, as is the directing of John M. Stahl. These two phases deserve the greatest credit for making "Husbands and Lovers" good entertainment, especially for high class audiences.

It takes the picture a long time to get underway. Director Stahl, who has deftly handled a subject which could be exceedingly boresome with so many details of ordinary home life, for the most part, takes pains to stress upon his audiences the type of story. In this he succeeds and although interesting it seems that the slow action could have been a little less obvious had the lead not dwelt to such an extent upon the appeal of the alarm clock, the awakening, bathing and dressing of the married couple. In fact the bedroom scene and the parlor in their home occupy the greater part of the footage. Some of the dressing activities and the care with which the wife "lays out" her husband's clothes, and how later, when she follows her husband's advice and "dolls up" herself, provide some good mirth and situations which will especially appeal to married couples.

The plot begins to crystallize towards the middle of the footage, when the husband's debonaire friend and the wife become interested in one another. Then is appreciated Stahl's reason for dwelling in such detail upon the opening footage, showing the opposite traits of the husband and his friend and the wife's weakness for flattery.

Quite a unique and suspenseful moment is introduced by the husband learning abruptly of the secret friendship when he unknowingly substitutes for his friend in a tryst with his own wife.

the husband making it possible for his wife to secure a divorce. The climax, and real keynote of suspense terminates the picture in a satisfactory, thrilling and appealing manner. It comes just when the divorcee is about to marry the friend and when the husband suddenly appreciates his former wife's yearning for verbal flattery. Like a regular caveman he carries her, in her bridal array, to his car and thence to the minister's to be wedded a second time.

Story

James Livingstone, reaching the stage where he regards his wife as a valet, is rudely awakened when she takes his advice and "dolls up." Ray Phillips, friend of Livingstone, also takes notice of the change. As the result the two become infatuated. Livingstone learns of conditions when his circumstances cause him to substitute for Phillips in a tryst with Mrs. Livingstone. He consents to her obtaining a divorce. She is about to marry Ray when Livingstone, realizing he is still in love and that he has to be emphatic in its expression, turns "caveman" and elopes with his former wife.

"The Snob"

Metro-Goldwyn Production Directed by Monta Bell Should Highly Please All Types of Patrons

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

When Monta Bell came before the public eye as having made "Broadway After Dark," he was revealed as a director of unusual ability and promise. This reviewer did not see his second picture "How to Educate a Wife," but with his third one, "The Snob" for Metro-Goldwyn, his work is fully up to expectations.

Although fortunate in having a story with an unhackneyed theme and a decidedly out-of-the ordinary central character, a man you learn to despise as the worst type of a snob, it is Mr. Bell's direction that is the shining light of this picture. In less capable hands there would still be sufficient plot interest to hold the attention, but under his guidance it is delightful entertainment.

Not so subtle as some of the scenes in his first picture, it is just as cleverly handled and with as much originality. Here is direction that will delight the highest class patron, for the staging of his scenes is not obvious and it is a pleasure to watch his construction. At the same time, never is his work in this picture over anybody's head, everyone can appreciate and enjoy it. And he has the happy faculty of a fine sense of humor that bubbles out with telling effect at unexpected times. Added to this, there is revealed the ability for excellent characterization. He uses no long drawn-out situations to paint his characters, but with a few deft touches he gives you a complete delineation of each person.

Mr. Bell also dares and achieves the difficult task of practically stopping his story to inject characterization and comedy for a considerable period without diminishing the interest, in fact he increases it. His comedy is real, never forced, and is sure-fire. An example of this faculty is the scene where the several members of the snob's family are introduced, the quaint little mother and big brother, of the Mennonite sect, the fat brother, his frigid wife and above all his little niece, who at the most inopportune moment is always ready to recite for visitors. This little girl is a wonder, not the precocious or beautiful type of screen child, just a plain and very real little girl.

We could continue much longer about Mr. Bell's direction, pointing out his excellent handling of scene after scene, but the cast is also deserving of praise. John Gilbert gives a thoroughly convincing portrait in the title role revealing another angle of his ability. Norma Shearer, as the girl of wealth who, following her father's disgrace, disappears, poses as a nobody and becomes the wife of the snob who considers her far beneath him, is ideal. She acts with great sincerity and charm and develops unusual sympathy. Conrad Nagel is excellent as the man who has always loved her and has to keep silent. Phyllis Haver never did better than as the breezy, superficial, showy girl whose money attracts the snob. Margaret Seddon is fine as the mother, in fact the entire cast is excellent.

There is a novel ending, and aside from the stretching of coincidence in one particular, the entire story is not only plausible but true to life, and the pathos, comedy and human interest are finely intermingled.

"The Snob" is a picture that should immensely please all classes of patrons and prove a winner for you.

Story

Just as Nancy Claxton finished at a convent school, her wealthy father is killed in a roadhouse brawl. Stung by the disgrace, she disappears and her sweetheart, Herrick, is unable to find her. Three years pass. Nancy, teaching school in the quaint Mennonite colony in Pennsylvania, falls in love with an ambitious teacher, Eugene. They become engaged; Eugene gets a job as professor at an academy in a nearby town, becomes popular and conceited, succeeds in winning favor of Dorothy, whose father owns the school, and is made head-master. Nancy becomes ill and sends for Eugene. He marries her, believing she will die, but she gets well. He writes Dorothy a letter belittling Nancy. Herrick, who is teaching in the same school, visits Eugene and is amazed to find Nancy. Eugene continues to look down on Nancy and play up to Dorothy, and just before Nancy is to have a baby he writes a loving letter to Dorothy. Nancy gets hold of this. Her baby dies. She then sees Eugene in his true light, shows him the newspaper story that she is heir to millions. He begs forgiveness but she taunts him as being a snob, saying she will divorce him and marry Herrick.

"Darwin Was Right"

Fox Offers Unique and Amusing Comedy with His Three Remarkable Chimpanzees in Leading Roles

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

William Fox is offering a production that is certainly unique and unlike anything that has previously reached the screen in "Darwin Was Right." It is a picture that strikes out along new lines. Many theatre patrons during the past year have been highly amused at the cleverness of the three chimpanzees, Max, Moritz and Pep, that have appeared in Fox two-reelers. Now we have these same wonderful animals occupying the centre of the screen in a feature.

The production is a hilarious comedy built around the endeavor of a scientist to find an elixir of youth. Just as he succeeds, he and his two companions are kidnapped and three babies are dragged into the laboratory by a dog chasing a cat. The scientist's family is amazed. Then the place of the babies is taken by the three chimpanzees. Naturally the family is horrified. The scientist's party escapes from the asylum and is chased by the guards; then occurs a succession of mix-ups in which the asylum guards, the chimpanzees, a villain, the hero, a negro cook and the scientist and his companions figure.

It will be seen that this plot introduces typical farce comedy situations which have been further enlivened by a fight in which the villain and hero figure and the monkeys do their share. In fact, the monkeys certainly do their share all through the picture, and they are not only amusing but wonderfully clever. The manner in which they imitate and even to a certain extent resemble the human beings is really remarkable. Their portrayal of their "roles" is excellent, and in fact overshadows the work of the cast, although everyone measures up to requirements.

Due possibly to the limitations of the situations in which even the most wonderful chimpanzees can be used, the story seems rather slight for five reels and some of the situations are prolonged until they lose some of their snappiness. So different is this picture from the average run that it is hard to gauge its audience reaction. Certainly, however, the subject is amusing, there are a number of good laughs, the work of the animals is remarkably clever and there is the additional angle of decided novelty to appeal to audiences.

Professor Henry Baldwin, experimenting to obtain an elixir of youth, is just about to sample it with his secretary, Egbert, and his negro butler, Alexander, when they are spirited away and put in an insane asylum by Lawson, who seeks to control the professor's estate. A dog chasing a cat rushes in through the open window and overturns his little wagon, spilling three babies on the floor. Baldwin's daughter Alice and sister Priscilla see them and believe the professor has taken an overdose. Alice phones to her sweetheart Robert, who rushes over. By this time the children in charge of the babies have recovered them, but three chimpanzees escaping from a circus have taken their places. Believing an overdose has changed the professor and his companions back to monkeys, they are installed in the family. The trio escape from the asylum and return home; three keepers come after them. Then follows a series of comedy mixups between the men, monkeys and guards, ending in everything being finally straightened out.

"The Only Woman"

Norma Talmadge's Newest for First National, Directed by Olcott, Should Please the Majority

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

That conventional material in expert hands can be made into a thoroughly enjoyable production is shown in "The Only Woman," Norma Talmadge's newest picture for First National. The interest does not lie in any novelty so far as the theme is concerned, for there is nothing new in either of the main angles, the sacrifice of a daughter on the marriage market to save her father from prison or the fact that the man's father desires this marriage as he believes it is the only way to reform his son, or that love eventually comes to this couple as the result of a situation in which the man shows his real mettle.

With C. Gardner Sullivan to build the story, Sidney Olcott to direct it and Norma Talmadge to interpret the role of the heroine, you can pretty safely bank on a picture that will be good audience material. That is just the case with this production. Familiar situations are so capably developed and handled that they hold the interest throughout and provide good entertainment.

In the latter part the action gets quite melodramatic, with a storm at sea, a collision between two ships, with the loss of all but hero, heroine and villain, and a fight when the villain seeks to get the upper hand. This fight is not unduly stressed and short work is made of the villain as he tumbles into the sea.

The storm at sea is one of the finest and most convincing we have ever witnessed. The effect of the ship tossing in an angry sea, the water rushing over the decks and the collision are handled with unusual force and realism and provide a fitting climax. Another piece of clever handling is the ending, where with a minimum of footage and a brief subtitle the heroine explains she does not want a divorce—no high-sounding phases, just natural stuff.

Norma, talented artist that she is, even in the melodramatic situations which seem strange for her, gives a fine performance, aiding greatly in holding and putting over scenes which would otherwise be obvious and commonplace and eliminating the necessity for subtitles many times where her acting tells the story. Eugene O'Brien in the opposite role gives a good performance, though not so convincing as Miss Talmadge. He is under the handicap of having to appear intoxicated much of the time, and we have seen better portrayals of this type. The others in the cast give good accounts of themselves.

Sidney Olcott has capably directed this picture and gotten the most out of the material at his command and handled the storm scene remarkably well. There is no attempt at the lavish or spectacular, though there is a variety in the scenes showing the different places, London, France, Tripoli, where the boat stops, and these are atmospherically good.

While "The Only Woman" will not add to the reputation of either Miss Talmadge or Mr. Olcott, and seems somewhat below the high standard we have learned to expect from them and in this respect will disappoint some of their followers, nevertheless it is a picture that should afford pleasing and satisfactory entertainment and probably register with a greater majority of theatregoers than some of the star's bigger productions.

"Flattery"

Excellent Acting and Smashing Climax Feature Chadwick Production

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"Flattery" boasts an excellent cast and a fairly interesting story that reaches a smashing climax. As directed by Tom Forman and distributed by Chadwick Film Corporation, it is six reels of well constructed entertainment and probably will please many patrons, though H. H. Van Loan's plot lacks forcefulness. That climax, however, unquestionably will send people away in a state of thrills.

The story has to do with the effects of rotten politics upon a city and principally upon a young couple in love with each other. The city hall has been so cheaply constructed that a dynamite blast causes it to fall into ruins. That is the big thrill in the picture, and a real thrill it is. These scenes have been well directed, showing various parts of the edifice toppling into dust while the hero, heroine and villain, within the building, seek to escape.

John Bowers gives a good impersonation of the young architect who succumbs to flattery and is, therefore, easily led by others. Marguerite de la Motte is charming and convincing as the girl who shows him the error of his ways, and Alan Hale is wholly satisfactory as one of the politicians. Lewis Morrison does particularly well as the mayor.

There is a wealth of detail in the first two reels and so the picture does not get off to a fast start. But there is a crescendo action throughout, building up to the thrilling climax, and when that comes any audience will get a decided kick out of it. This feature ought to satisfy the average audience

Reginald Mallory has been susceptible to flattery since youth. Politicians make him city engineer so that they may have a "goat," and he is wheedled into signing a contract without reading it. All lose faith in Mallory except Betty Biddle, his sweetheart, daughter of the president of a construction company. Mallory apparently plays the game and turns crooked, but in the end it is discovered that he has been obtaining evidence against the crooks.

New Gump Comedies

Universal Series Is Clever and Welcome Addition to Screen

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

If the whole series of Universal's new Gump comedies may be judged by the three two-reel subjects shown reviewers this week, then exhibitors may depend upon it that here is a welcome addition to their programs. Cleverly directed and acted, with ludicrous situations and snappy gags, these short subjects evoke an almost continuous roar of laughter. Joe Murphy is ideal as the famous Andy Gump, bearing a truly remarkable resemblance to the cartoon character and entering perfectly into the spirit of the fun. Fay Tincher also is great as Min, Andy's intensely practical and limber-tongued better half.

Two of the subjects are particularly interesting because of their timeliness. These are "Andy's Hat's in the Ring" and "Andy's Stump Speech." In the former Andy is notified of his nomination for president of the Association of Ford Owners Who Have Not Yet Paid For Their Cars. Thrill stuff is introduced near the end of this, with the players clambering about the cornices of skyscrapers. The latter has a corking scene where hornets get inside Andy's trousers and he wins an eccentric dance contest. There is great home-town stuff from where a goat eats Andy's clothes while he is in swimming to the time when the stump upon which he is making his speech is blown skywards.

The third subject shown reviewers is "What's the Use?" This deals with vacation troubles, including a sad encounter with a skunk.

"Hot Heels"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Hal Roach Star Comedy was directed by George Jeske and features James Finlayson. Also in the cast are George Rowe, Dick Gilbert, Leo Willis and Ena Gregory. It deals largely with the pursuit of Finlayson and Rowe by two policemen. They dash in and out of the various rooms of an office building, the hunted ones disguising themselves as dentists and other professional men by the simple method of adopting beards. Some of this verges on the spectacular where Finlayson and Rowe run along scaffolding to the imminent peril of their necks. While there is nothing particularly new or novel about this short subject, it has been well directed and acted and possesses average entertainment value.—S. S.

"Monkey Business"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

This cartoon of Paul Terry's is one big original laugh. Terry's imagination certainly runs away with his pen to the highest of advantage for this cartoon. In it the mice are acrobats and the elephants, monkeys, cows and others contort themselves so as to make up the equipment for a first-class gymnasium.—T. W.

"What a Night"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Mermaid Comedy directed by Norman Taurog under the supervision of Jack White and distributed through Educational has a very slight plot on which is hung a lot of action and gags. Lige Conley appears as a chap who after a rather jubilant night of celebration with anti-Volstead stuff returns home, this occurs about the middle of the first reel and the remainder of the footage is devoted to showing his attempts to get to his home, he is thrown out, kicked out, mistaken for a burglar, etc., and finally gets in when the tarred roof breaks. The gags are good, some are new and all are well handled and they should get a lot of laughs. In the early part there is an amusing sequence where the boys hitch the horse to the cab backwards and then give him a ride in the cab. One of the best scenes is where Lige gets stuck on the tar roof and springs up and down until he breaks it. A traffic cop and the negro butler figure in the fun. While not as ingenious as some of White's productions, the comedy stuff is all sure-fire and should go over well with the majority.—C. S. S.

"All Night Long"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Give the average comedian a good vehicle and he'll usually turn out a good comedy; give Harry Langdon only the thread of an idea to work on and he makes it into two reels of side-splitting fun. This Mack Sennett comedian certainly is coming along fast. That's more and more apparent with each new product of his, and "All Night Long" is the latest evidence of it. Here is a subject built of conventional comedy stuff but rendered superbly hilarious by Langdon's highly skilled acting. He is as funny as the proverbial crutch—and then some. Most of the action is in the form of flash-backs to war days, starting with Private Harry peeling a mountain of spuds and then showing him vieing with a sergeant for the hand of a mademoiselle. Langdon is about the most awkward soldier who ever saluted a second looie. There is a bit of delicious satire in showing how he rises from an enlisted man to a shavetail. The battle scenes are especially well staged. Book this comedy and hear your audience laugh its head off.—S. S.

'The Eve of the Revolution'

(Pathe—Chronicle—Three Reels)

One of the most interesting and important periods in American history is dealt with in this latest issue of the "Chronicles of America" series, and those patriots who freed this country from the domination of Great Britain are seen planning the various stages of the preliminary campaign for freedom. Among them are John Hancock and Samuel Adams, names familiar to young and old. This subject covers a great deal of ground, dealing briefly with the episodes of the Stamp Act, the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party, the first steps toward the formation of the First Continental Congress and the march of British troops on Concord and Lexington after Paul Revere's famous ride. These latter scenes of fighting between the "Lobster Backs" and Americans are stressed and exceptionally well handled. The acting is exceedingly good and the whole subject treated with fine understanding and restraint, yet with undoubted force.—S. S.

"Whirligigs"

(Educational—Novelty—One Reel)

The slogan of this series of Hodge Podges "Some Sense and Some Nonsense" is well lived up to in this reel. The "sense" part is especially interesting and out of the ordinary The title comes from scenes showing the application of the whirling principle in manufacturing and also in amusement devices and with whirling Chinese mice. Other subjects include lace making in France, diving beneath the ice, a thrill section showing the piloting of a log raft through the rushing waters of an Alpine river, and a decidedly unique sequence showing fishing for a peculiar kind of fly in Mexico, which is scooped up in large lots from the water, the eggs are eaten by the natives and the flies by fish and birds. There is also some amusing cartoon "nonsense."—C. S. S.

"Radio Riot"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Fox Imperial Comedy, as its name implies is built around radio, a sequence has also been introduced showing cannibals who come to a small town and built a fire in a room of the hotel and proceed to prepare to cook the negro porter. The clerk comes to his assistance, but after a lot of rough-and-tumble stuff and slapstick, the porter subdues the savage and appropriates his club and grass costume. All of this commotion is heard over the radio and causes consternation in a family including the sheriff who is listening in. To cap the climax the radio catches on fire and the house burns up. The comedy is of the obvious, familiar type, no originality has been shown in building up the situations and the gags have been used many times before. As a whole, while it will probably afford amusement to dyed-in-the-wool slapstick fans, it is not up to the standard of the series.—C. S. S.

'The Girl and the Gangster'

(Pathe—Drama—Two Reels)

This is the second of the "True Detective Stories" series produced by the Sholes Hazard Corporation for Pathe and directed by William Preston Burt from narratives by Major Ross D. Whytock, war correspondent. It details the frame-up of a policeman by gangsters and how, with the aid of a girl and a dictaphone, the chief crook unwittingly incriminates himself and fellow criminals. Nellie Burt, Ed Roseman and Leslie Austin have the principal parts and present strong characterizations. The subject has human interest and succeeds in developing satisfactory suspense. It should satisfy the average audience.—S. S.

Pathe Review No. 45

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

This magazine reel contains three interesting subjects, excellent contrasting views of ancient and modern fashions, scenes of seal hunters in the Arctic and a picturesque assortment of views of Buffalo. Naturally the delineation of styles will appeal most to women. This is well done, showing how present-day fashions are the outgrowth of "old stuff." On the other hand, men will prefer the hunting of seals, which also is hugely interesting. So it can be seen that the reel offers well balanced entertainment. —S. S.

"Accidental Accidents"

(Pathe—Comedy—One Reel)

In this Hal Roach comedy Charley Chase appears as an umbrella maker sadly in need of work. His attempts to obtain the wherewithal for sustenance, always fraught with disaster, constitute the action. There is a good burlesque of an accident when a girl in an auto runs over Chase. The victim is left underneath a rear wheel of the car to enable a reporter to get photos, and the usual crowd gathers and tries to figure in the picture. Supporting Chase are Ena Gregory, Martin Wolfkeil, Earl Mohan, Billy Engle and Joe Forte.—S. S.

"Border Justice"

characterized with the vigorous action and melodramatic villainy of the usual Western, belongs in the class of stories in which the plot hinges around the romance of a border ranger, whose rival is engaged in smuggling contraband.

A brother against brother and love versus duty angle has been injected when the ranger is sent out to arrest his blacksheep brother for murder, and the story is further complicated by the fact that the girl's father is under moral obligation to the villain as he has advanced money for her education.

The manner in which this plot is worked out affords opportunities for action of the usual western type, with hard riding and considerable fighting. A somewhat gruesome angle is introduced when the brother accused of murder falls and is not killed but rendered insane with only one idea that of vengeance on the ranger, and is kept in a dark place by the villain. This situation together with the fact that during the fight at the climax there is the ever-present peril of the explosion of a huge charge of dynamite on a cliff above the hut, adds an unusually melodramatic character to the story. Breezy Reeves Eason has satisfactorily directed this picture, playing up the villainy, heroism and melodrama and it should prove of average entertainment value with patrons to whom this type of productions appeal. There are the usual improbabilities but this is offset by the action and punch scenes, the explosion which destroys the cabin providing a good thrill.

Bill Cody satisfactorily handles the role of the hero and the supporting cast which is composed largely of unfamiliar players, is satisfactory.

Phillip Gerard, a regular black sheep, in forcing his attentions on an Indian girl fights her father, who is accidentally killed. Phillip is blamed and in trying to escape is arrested by his brother Joseph, a ranger. In the fight Phillip falls over a cliff and is left for dead. Joseph falls in love with Mary Maitland, daughter of his captain. Bland, the brains of a band of border smugglers, also desires Mary and has a hold on her father as he has advanced money for her education. Joseph gets evidence against Bland, Maitland refuses to arrest him; Joseph gives up his job, goes after Bland, who has taken Mary to his shack and shows her Phillip, a hopeless maniac as the result of his fall. Joseph fights Bland, who sets off a charge of dynamite, blowing the shack to bits. Joseph and Mary are saved, but the others are killed. Joseph gets back his job and wins Mary.

Thunder, Another Remarkable Police Dog, Makes Debut in Feature That Should Please Majority

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Strongheart and Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonderful canine stars, have a rival in Thunder, a German police dog decorated for valor at Verdun, which is being starred in "Black Lightning," a Lumas Film Corporation feature distributed in New York, Buffalo and Chicago territories by Renown Pictures, Inc.

Thunder is a fine specimen of a highly intelligent and lovable dog, the kind you would like to own, his work registers well and although he does not have quite the same opportunities as his competitors who have been longer in the game, what he does is excellent, there is decided punch in some of the stunts and he seems to be possessed of possibilities that show the makings of a real rival to the other dog stars. Naturally the story has been built to show this clever animal to advantage and there are real thrills when he leaps at the villain and knocks a pistol out of his hand and where he comes to the rescue of the heroine.

Due to the presence of Thunder, the fine work of Clara Bow and the strong human interest quality in the story, this picture should afford good entertainment for the majority of fans. It is melodramatic in nature and coincidence has been stretched to the breaking point in having the hero by chance gain possession of the very dog who saved his life in France and also in wandering to the house of the sister of his buddy "over there" at the time when she needs protection. This, however, gives opportunities for good dramatic material and pathos that will bring a lump to the throat.

As already stated, Clara Bow does remarkable work and in a serious role that is as different from her flapper types as possible, as a plain little country orphan, she shows unusual versatility and scores heavily. She seems possessed of unusual sincerity and the ability to make you feel that her emotions are very real. Harold Austin, as the hero, does not appear to be quite the type. James Mason makes just about as despicable a villain as can be imagined, and Eddie Phillips gives an uncannily good portrayal of a half-wit. There seems to be a little more brutality in the villainy than is necessary, and the direction is not always smooth or entirely consistent, but there is sufficient good material here to make this an attractive offering for the program houses.

Story

With the murder of Frank Larned, his sister Martha and her little brother were left unprotected and the object of unwelcome attentions from Jim Howard and his half-witted brother. Roy Chambers, gassed in France, is ordered by the doctor to go to the mountains. Chance brings him with a police dog he has picked up to the Larned home. He finds that Martha is the sister of his buddy in France, who saved his life, Thunder being the dog that came to his rescue. Learning the situation, he decides to stay awhile. Joe gets hurt and Roy rides for a doctor. Ez, the half-witted chap, shoots him. Martha sends Thunder to find him. Jim comes and tries to get into the Larned home. Ez kills him and then attacks Martha. Thunder comes to her rescue. Martha and Roy then journey to the preacher together.

"Tainted Money" Soon

C. B. C. announce that their new Perfection Picture featuring Eva Novak and William Fairbanks and supported by Bruce Gordon, Edwards Davis and Carl Stockdale will soon be completed. During the filming Henry MacRae had to accomplish the blowing up of a whole mountain side. It is said in an announcement from Harry Cohn that this picture will be one of the most successful of this thrill action series.

Signs Nazimova

Mme. Alla Nazimova, Russian screen and stage star, has been signed under the banner of Vitagraph, according to an announcement by that company. Her first role will be that of Jean in "The Redeeming Sin."

In New Quarters

Due to increased business and the need for larger floor space the St. Louis branch of Pathe is moving from its present quarters to new offices at 3320 Olive Street.

Added to "Fool and His Money"

A wire from Harry Cohn announces that C. B. C. have added Edwards Davis and Baby Billie Jean Phillis to the cast of "A Fool and His Money," the fourth of the Columbia series. The rest of the cast are William Haines, Madge Bellamy, Stuart Holmes, Alma Bennett, Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Eugenie Besserer and Carrie Clarke Ward.

This picture will be the film version of George Barr McCutcheon's imaginative romance of the same name.

The Chicken and the Ax

THE Wise Birds tell us that there is more than one way to kill a chicken. But I don't think that even the wisenheimers will question the statement that about the most efficient method of dispensing with a chicken's life is for the bird itself to place its neck on a direct line with a descending ax.

Results are certain, sure, and efficient.

The story can be carried into motion picture exhibition. There are more ways than a dozen to kill a motion picture theatre, more ways than can be counted to make a town ripe for live competition to come along and take all the gravy.

But there is no argument about the fact that a direct and definite means is for the exhibitor himself to allow his house to run down PHYSICALLY to the point where the average patron has to take it for granted that the theatre man is contemplating business suicide.

If a slovenly lobby, worn-out seats, out-of-date methods of providing music, and limping projection give an exhibitor's own opinion of his business future—then he can't blame the patron for accepting the same view.

And if competition enters the town—with everything spick and span, bright and new, Mr. and Mrs. Public are apt to compare houses at face value and decide that Mr. Oldtimer won't mind much if patronage does slip away from him. If the chicken places his neck on the block you are pretty certain to decide that he is contemplating departure from this worm-chasing existence.

The way Jim Jones sees it for the theatre that has to depend on the building and holding of a theatre-going HABIT in a community—this matter of a theatre's PHYSICAL appearance and projection efficiency ranks just as importantly as the matter of the pictures presented. If we had THE attractive theatre of a town, the place to which people LIKED to go, the theatre they left without any bad taste, we'd give a good strong run to any less up-to-date opposition, no matter how much he paid for pictures, and how many times he seemed to have the better attraction.

He would be advertising and exploiting all the time to PULL them in—we would be creating and fostering a HABIT. And when Ma finishes with the supper dishes and decides to go see a picture—the old HABIT is going to make her choice many more times than the individual attraction. Yes, sir!

Who wouldn't prefer to be a live rooster—rather than a dead chicken?

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

Most Excellent

John Maurer, Projectionist, Massillon, Ohio, hands us the following most excellent discussion and graph. When I say "most excellent," I do not mean that I endorse everything brother Maurer says as being correct. In fact that remark does not necessarily mean that his conclusions are either right or wrong. It is always possible that a letter in which the conclusions are ALL wrong may be very valuable, in that it sets forth metters in a way well calculated to cause readers to think and to consider and discuss the thing dealt with, either in print or otherwise, and that is the real benefit of all such matters.

All Letters Valuable

Please do not misunderstand me. I am NOT intimating that Maurer's conclusions are wrong. In fact my impression is, after reading his argument, that he is right, or mighty nearly so. I am only trying to impress upon you the value of anything which produces intelligent discussion. In the profession there are hundreds, of not thousands of men who might help themselves and everyone else vastly did they enter into the discussions carried on in this department, instead of sitting back and failing or refusing to help. The profession owes a debt it can never repay to men like Maurer, and those many others who have, during the past fourteen years, given active aid to this department, and thus to the profession of motion picture projection. Friend Maurer says:

Discussion Invited

In September 20 issue you invite discussion, as to whether or not it is advisable to use a rotating shutter master blade wide enough to completely cover the lens (He says "light beam," which is correct, but I have changed that to "lens" for convenience' sake, assuming the lens to be stopped down—as it should be—to the exact diameter of the light beam. —Ed.) when the intermittent starts to move, and to not uncover it completely until the intermittent has come to rest.

In the course of extended experiments I have been making during the past few months I have tried master blades of almost all widths, without having been able to detect any injury to the projected image when the master blade has only covered from two-thirds to three-fourths of the lens when the intermittent starts to move, and opens the lens from one-fourth to one-third before it stops. In other words, I have found no evil effect to be discernable to the eye until travel ghost appears.

Let us for a moment consider the condition with the rotating shutter I have myself adopted for permanent use. Since my intermittent requires seventy-two degrees in which to complete its movement, if sufficient were added to the master blade width to cover the lens completely during the entire movement, the blade would have to be 104 degrees wide. Instead of this I use a master blade only 83 degrees wide, having determined by trial that this is the exact width required to prevent visible travel ghost. This gives me a formula for master blade width, as follows:

Number of degrees required for intermittent movement, plus one-third the diameter of the light beam as expressed in degrees. This blade leaves my lens two-thirds covered when the intermittent starts to move and has opened it by the same amount when it comes to rest. If that statement is not clear, I am sure if you will study it a bit you will understand me and be convinced that it is correct.

What This Means

This again means that during 21 degrees of every revolution of the shutter we have on the screen the faint misplaced images, referred to in Griffith's letter. Since the open spaces of this shutter total 147 degrees, simple division shows that this represents one-seventh of the time the light is on the screen. The actual effect is less than this indicates, however, because at starting the widest part of the beam has been cut, while at stopping it remains to be opened, therefore really only a small percentage of the beam gets through while there is intermittent movement. I would myself estimate the misplaced images to represent about one-tenth of the total screen illumination, which might be sufficient to make them visible if the projection were in a totally dark auditorium, but I do not believe it has nearly as injurious an effect as, for instance, has the light striking the screen from the general auditorium illumination in the average theatre.

Disadvantages

Conversely the disadvantages of using a shutter with a 104 degree master blade would be very great indeed. In order to sufficiently reduce flicker tendency the two interrupter blades of a 3-winger would have to be at least eighty degrees wide, which would only provide 96 degrees of open space. If the interrupter blades were made more narrow, then the flicker would be so serious as to be very much worse than the slight fogging of the definition of the picture by the misplaced images.

Bluebook School

Question No. 147—Explain why bottom of picture is wider than top when there is a downward angle to projection.

Question No. 148—Tell us just how you would calculate the exact amount of distortion (keystone effect) any given angle and distance of projection would produce. Assuming a projection distance of 120 feet and a vertical distance of 24 feet between lens and center of screen, just what would the effect be?

Question No. 149—Why is the projection angle not a safe guide to the amount of distortion produced, and what is the safest guide?

Question No. 150—What effect has added projection distance on distortion, lens height above screen center remaining the same?

Question No. 151—In just what proportion does increase in projection angle increase height of picture, and therefore distortion?

Some while ago I sent you the results of my investigations as to how far apart the interrupter blades of a 3-winger should be placed. Since then I have tried numerous shutters in order to check up on past experiments. The results have only tended to prove that the data I sent was as nearly right as ono can hope to get outside a laboratory.

I attach hereto a graph showing how the flicker tendency of a shutter changes as the space between the interrupter blades is changed. (By "space between the interrupter blades" I take it that brother Maurer means between the interrupter blades and the master blade.—Ed.) The tests were made with a rather bright screen illumination, and the speeds indicated are those at which a very slight trace of travel ghost appears when there is no film in the projector. A study of the graph will show that in some cases a slight error may have but little effect, while in other cases it may have a very great effect; also, that if an error is made it is better to have the interrupter blades too close together than too far apart.

For a shutter having a master blade of 85 degrees and flicker blades 65 degrees. The figures in the vertical column are turns of the crank shaft per minute; those in the horizontal row are the number of degrees in the opening between the flicker blades. The curve shows the fastest speed at which flicker appears.

I am convinced that this is a subject we cannot afford to ignore. For example: In one of the other local theatres new projectors were installed. The interrupter blades of the stock shutters were eight degrees too far apart and the picture flickered all the time. With no film in the projector it was necessary to run 110 to 120 before it disappeared. I provided a shutter designed as per formula set forth above. It reduced flicker tendency so that under the same conditions a speed of 80 was sufficient to remove the flicker. With the film in it is practically invisible at all times.

Maurer Leaving Projection

This is probably the last you will hear from me for some time, friend Richardson, as I am leaving our fascinating profession to follow the paths of higher learning in the Western Reserve University, at Cleveland, Ohio. I shall continue to read the Projection Department, and will depend upon it to keep me in touch with the developments in the game.

We shall indeed be sorry to lose such a man as Maurer. The profession of motion picture projection needs his sort, and when it gets enough of them it will really become

Bluebook School—Answers 118-122

SPECIAL—In the bundle of misplaced answers I have mentioned I found an answer to Question 113, by G. W. Bennewitz, Sioux Falls, So. Dak., which is so excellent that I am publishing it special. Here it is:

Question No. 113—Is the light source inverted at the spot, and can you tell us, using a drawing if you wish to, on what lens action you base your answer.

Bennewitz's answer:

The light source is inverted at the spot, as shown by drawing, in which L is the light source, C the condenser and A the inverted image of L at the aperture. Diverging rays of light from the point of the arrowhead at L are picked up by the collector lens, refracted by it into more or less parallel rays, which in turn are picked up by the converging lens and by it are refracted into converging rays, as its name indicates, which same are concentrated into the "spot" at A. A and L are conjugate foci points of condenser C. Under actual working conditions the inverted image of L must not come to a focus at the film plane since if it did the film photograph would be unevenly illuminated, and as the film is at one conjugate foci point of the projection lens, and the focused screen image is at the other, then the screen image would also be unevenly illuminated.

There, gentlemen, I don't really believe that particular answer could be much improved upon, do you? Also the excellent drawing was made by Bennewitz. On second thought I will also publish Bennewitz's drawing illustrating his answer to questions 114-115. It is "Fig. 2." Fig 1 is the one which goes with the 113 answer.

Question No. 118—Explain why evenness of screen illumination is impossible unless the entire light beam enters the projection lens.

P. E. Thomas, Creston, Iowa; Daniel Constantino, Easton, Pa.; G. W. Bennewitz, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Charles Oldham, Norwich, Conn.; A. L. Fell, Collingswood, New Jersey; Harry Dobson, Toronto, Ontario; Karl H. Sommermeyer, Marietta, Minn., and G. L. Davis, London, England, have sent correct replies. Many other answers have shown a surprising confusion of ideas concerning this point.

It is often very difficult to analyze replies. For instance, one man says: "The reason there will not be evenness of illumination is that the light that goes outside the lens carries part of the picture with it."

Now that is evenly and exactly true, but I cannot call it correct, because I don't know whether or not he has analyzed the action correctly or not. I believe the reply of Brother Fell is best for publication. He says:

Unless the projection lens diameter be large enough to receive all the light from every portion of the aperture area, then there cannot, in the very nature of things, be evenness of illumination at the screen, because every pin point of the film area must be refocused in its appropriate point on the screen, hence it follows that the illumination of every pin point must be received by the projection lens in its entirely and as a separate unit, and by the projection lens be sent forward to its appropriate point on the screen.

It can easily be shown (Bluebook Figure No. 47) that the light from every pin point of the film goes forward to the projection lens as a diverging cone of light, the divergence of the cone being in exact proportion to the condenser free diameter and the distance of the face of the converging lens from the aperture. Under this condition it may readily be seen that the cones from the central portions of the film photograph will enter the lens in their entirety, hence the central portions of the photograph will be sent forward to the screen at their full illumination value.

It will also be readily seen that since the divergence of the light cones from the outer margins of the photograph are the same as that of the cones from the central zones, if the projection lens diameter be too small for the working distance of the lens, then a portion of the base of these cones will or may fall outside the lens, in which case the lens cannot send these points of the film photograph forward at their full illumination value, and there is and must be unevenness of illumination at the screen.

Which is a darned good answer, if you ask me.

Question No. 119—Explain why the light beam diverges between the aperture and lens, when a plano convex, meniscus bi-convex or prismatic condenser is used, and what controls the amount of divergence.

All the above and T. H. Anderson, Vancouver, British Columbia, replied correctly to this one. I have hesitated considerable in selecting the one to publish, but believe Thomas' reply really is in a class unto itself after all. Here it is:

When a source of illumination is greater than a point, it cannot be focused to a point by lens action. It is however, found that the many pin point areas within the light source may be focused to corresponding magnified or diminished pin points, thus forming an image of the whole light source, or of the light source as a whole. The many rays emanating from each point of a light source, carrying an image of that particular point, are received by the condenser, and are by it refracted in such way that, disregarding aberration faults of the condenser, they are converged to a corresponding point at the "spot," the total rays from all points of the source forming an image of the light source.

An analysis of this action will, since we know the image is in reversed position with relation to the original, show that the image must be at the point of least diameter of the condenser beam, and since light rays travel in straight lines when passing through a medium of even density (the air in this case) it follows that they cross at the light source image, and then continue on, which of course means a divergent beam beyond the aperture if the image be at or near the aperture. The amount of divergence is controlled by the effective opening of the converging lens, and the distance from the face of the converging lens to the aperture.

Question No. 120—Explain effect of distance of condenser from aperture, when condensers named in question No. 119 are used, on divergence of beam between aperture and lens.

Constantino, Dobson, Thomas, Bennewitz, Hanover, Sommermeyer, Fell, Davis, Oldham and Anderson all replied correctly. Davis says:

The further away the aperture is from a converging lens of given effective diameter, the less divergence there will be. This may be aptly and effectively illustrated by pinning to the top of a table a sheet of paper —say 28 inches long. Through its center draw a straight line, and on either side, removed from and central line by 2 1/8 in. and parallel thereto, draw another line. Now six inches from the right hand edge of the paper draw two vertical lines, each ending a bit less than ½ in. from the center line. These lines represent the projector mechanism aperture.

Having done all this, which is really a very simple thing, you have but to draw a series of straight lines from the different points in the length of upper outside line, which represents the upper edge of the 4¼ in. free opening converging lens, so that it just touches the end of the LOWER aperture line, to see the exact effect of distance of condenser to aperture upon divergence of the beam beyond the aperture. You may also draw similar lines from the lower line to and past the end of the upper aperture line, thus completing the demonstration. Any projectionist may determine whether or not his lens receives the entire beam by measuring the working distance, the effective aperture of the rear of his projection lens, the effective opening of his converging lens and the distance from its face to the aperture, using these measurements to construct a drawing of his projector optical system, only (warning) use the WIDTH of the aperture opening instead of its height.

And that came from London, England, mind you!

Question No. 121—Give your idea of how heavy the light loss due to divergence of beam between aperture and lens may be, and tell us what other bad effect there may be.

It would consume altogether too much space to give the names of all who expressed their views with regard to this. Bennewitz says:

Under very abnormal conditions the loss due to divergence of light beam may reach as high as 58.6 per cent., as shown on page 188 of the Bluebook. Under ordinary conditions it may amount to as much as 25 per cent. Other evil effects are unevenness of screen illumination, with resultant injury to "depth" in image.

Question No. 122—Can you apply, or have you ever tried to apply the universal method for ascertaining condenser focal length and aperture distance described on pages 194 to 198 of the Bluebook?

Dobson voices the almost universal sentiment as expressed in the comparatively few replies received to this question. He says:

Yes, I can apply both the lens charts or the "Universal Method," which latter I have worked out in my own case. I find, however, that the lens chart is very much superior to the Universal Method, though the latter is very much better than the "hit or miss" method so many use in selecting their condenser lenses and distance Y.

Fog Rectifier

P. E. Thomas, Creston, Iowa, says:

Dear Mr. Richardson: I beg to acknowledge receipt of the Bluebook, which arrived safely. A wonderful fog rectifier, is that book. I can assure you that I am a thoroughly satisfied purchaser. My only regret is that I denied myself the privilege of obtaining it at an earlier date.

The one thing I am most elated over in relation to my books is that though in their four editions they have been on the market for many years and thousands upon thousands of them have been sold, NOT A SINGLE PURCHASER HAS, SO FAR AS I KNOW, EXPRESSED DISSATISFACTION WITH HIS PURCHASE, while thousands of letters have been received setting forth the fact that the purchaser was well satisfied. Some have even been extravagant in their praise, even to the point of placing their valuation of the book at its weight in gold, which I take merely as one way of expressing thorough satisfaction. Well, anyhow, even if I had never done anything else worth while in this vale of sorrer and wickedness, I would feel that the Bluebook offered at least some excuse for my having obliged a perfectly good soul to occupy this old body of mine for a space.

a profession, and will be respected accordingly—and will be paid accordingly, too.

This letter is so long that I shall not try to discuss it. Anyhow, I don't want to, because I want YOU to do that. If YOU discuss it it is a cinch that you will study it, and THAT is what will really help. I am not quite certain what Maurer means when he says "between interrupter blades," but think it must be a fixed interrupter blade width, with the blades moved toward each other, thus increasing the distance from them to the master blade, and decreasing the distance between the interrupter blades themselves.

On Second Thought

On second thought perhaps I had better explain the reading of the graph, or chart. You will observe that the master blade is 85 degrees wide, and that each interrupter blade is 65 degrees wide, so the total opening is not altered. The change is merely to alter the distance of the interrupter blades from the master blade, thus altering the relative width of the two openings next the master blade the same, and changing their width in relation to the width of the opening between the interrupter blades.

You will see by the graph that with the central opening 32 degrees wide (you can easily calculate the width of the other openings by adding 85 and 130, subtracting the sum from 360 and dividing the result by 2) the projection speed must be 100 to eliminate flicker; that as the openings next the master blade are decreased, with corresponding increase in central opening (total light passed remains the same), the speed at which flicker is eliminated is gradually reduced until the central opening is 40 degrees, when flicker is eliminated at a projection speed of 80. But that is the limit, for as the central opening is made greater after passing the 40 degree mark, the speed at which flicker is eliminated mounts rapidly, until at 50 degrees it requires a speed of 140 feet per minute.

Only an "Operator"

Bernard Birdwell, Projectionist Pickwick Theatre, Iowa Park, Texas, arises to remark:

This is my first time to write our department, as I am only a small-town man, with no great amount of experience. I therefore do not consider myself as being a projectionist—yet. Only an operator, struggling along.

Am sending samples of film cut from a feature I projected recently. Two of them will show the work of some sap boneheddo who probably thinks himself an operator, or possibly even a projectionist. At least his brainless work proves his thoughts are incorrect. He ought to be manipulating a number two shovel, or a plow for some not too particular farmer. The sample with two holes with paper pasted over them is evidence that there is at least one projectionist in this territory—a man who tries to improve the condition of the prints and to put a decent result upon his screen.

A chap—I would hate to call him a projectionist, or even an operator—who had charge here before I came, used a hammer and punch to jam change-over marks into the prints.

The first thing I learned in my apprenticeship was the correct method of splicing film. From attached sample you may readily see that some men don't know how. These samples were all taken from the same feature.

One of the samples has a mere twelve (12) holes, each ⅛ inch in diameter, punched in two and one-quarter (2.25) inches of film. The splice is subject to some criticism. It is made in the middle of a frame. From two to four times too much cement was used in making it. It is made crookedly, with the sprocket hole matched on one side and about half out on the other. Outside of these trifling faults it is a very good splice.

What do you mean, "only" a small-town man! Don't be too sure you are not a projectionist. The man who respects his profession and honestly tries to do the very best he knows how, expending a reasonable amount of energy in trying to improve his knowledge of projection, is a projectionist all right. More than that, he is apt to be a better man in a projection room than the chap who declares himself to be an operator, who has had years of "experience" and has scarcely one scintilla of technical knowledge of projection. He proudly declares himself to be a "practical man," and as a matter of fact is merely a d——d nuisance in the field of motion picture projection.

Tipperary Tim

There is one chap who writes for the American Projectionist who seems to have missed his calling when he took up projection. He should have grabbed a typewriter and made some big editor sit up and take notice. Some of the things he writes for the American Projectionist are very much more than worth while. My compliments to

Guarantee Against Breakage by Heat Promised on G. E. Quartz Condensers

A NEW leaflet, "Better Projection with G. E. Quartz Lenses," has been issued by the General Electric Company and the Nicholas Power Company, which has been made exclusive distributors of the G. E. fused quartz condensers. This leaflet gives a list of Power's distributors through whom the G. E. quartz condensers may be purchased, but these condensers may also be had through any "recognized dealers in motion picture equipment." The leaflet gives the following information regarding the new fused quartz condensers:

"After ten years of study and investigation, the research laboratories of the General Electric Company have astonished the world with the recent development of a wonderful quality of clear fused quartz. The motion picture industry is one of the especially favored groups to be benefited by this achievement. Glass condensing lenses which are commonly used in all projection machines have one marked disadvantage—susceptibility to temperature changes. You are now able to exhibit better pictures at a lower cost because uninterrupted service is practically assured and lens breakage reduced to a minimum through the use of G. E. Clear Fused Quartz Lenses.

"Some marked advantages of G. E. Clear Fused Quartz Condensing Lenses are that they are not damaged under the extremely high temperature at which they are maintained in operation and that there is no danger from breakage due to rapid changes in temperature which occur when starting the arc. They do not pit as readily as glass lenses because of the much higher fusion temperature of the quartz and may be resurfaced when necessary. They are more efficient even though one-quarter of an inch thicker than the ordinary glass lens. Most important of all, G. E. Fused Quartz Lenses have stood the test of time. Initial installations made approximately a year ago are still in service."

An article by W. H. Jones, Central Station Department, General Electric Company, gives considerable information about fused quartz condensers which should prove interesting to exhibitors and projectionists, as these new condensers are to be guaranteed against breakage by heat. In view of the fact that there has been so much breakage of condensers in the past caused by the intense heat to which they are subjected, and this is always a source of great annoyance and unnecessary expense, we believe our readers will welcome the facts regarding fused quartz condensers which are now presented to them.

New House For Kingsport, Tenn.

A new theatre for Kingsport, Tennessee, has been announced by W. H. Harmon, manager of the Nu-Strand Corporation. The building, which has not yet been named, will cost $75,000, and is to be the largest in the city. Work has already been started, and it is announced that the theatre will open on January 15.

A unique feature of the completed building will be the row of side boxes extending the full length of main floor on each side of the interior. The main floor is to be equipped with 600 Heywood-Wakefield theatre chairs. Along the entire front of the balcony will extend a line of loge boxes, bringing the total number of this type of seat to much more, proportionately, than is usually found even in the metropolitan houses. The balcony also will be equipped with Heywood-Wakefield chairs.

Shea to Spend $200,000 Remodeling Picture Theatre in Jamestown, N. Y.

OVER $200,000 will be spent in rebuilding Shea's Theatre in Jamestown, New York, it is announced following a conference between Victor A. Rigamont, architect of Pittsburgh; M. A. Shea of New York and Robert C. Hornung, manager of the theatre. Work will be started January 1 and will be completed in time to open the house for the fall season of 1925. The announcement makes public the intention of Mr. Shea to show his gratitude for record attendance by giving Jamestown theatregoers a theatre where comfort, beauty and safety, as well as high-class entertainments, will be combined to make one of the most attractive houses in Western New York. The theatre, when rebuilt, will seat 2,000.

The rebuilding will take all of the present offices and tenants' rooms from the building and the entire structure will be devoted to the theatre with the exception of two stores. The entire front between the stores, which will be at the corners, will be devoted to a large lobby while a marquee will extend along the entire front. The marquee will be studded with hundreds of electric lights and will provide a lighted fountain for the flare of a 28-foot perpendicular sign from which will flash the word "Shea's" in five-foot letters. The color scheme will be cardinal red, golden yellow with touches of light blue and tan. A great safety device will be the provision of an exit for each hundred patrons the house will seat. Enclosed fire exits will be built on each side of the house, with easy sloping stairways.

The projection booth will be located at the top of the East Second Street side of the theatre, far removed from the seating spaces. There will be a small rest room, lavatory and wash room connected with the booth. Two new projection machines will be installed as well as other new and modern equipment. The orchestra pit will be enlarged to accommodate 25 musicians and the organ which will be one of the finest as well as largest in Western New York. New heating and ventilation systems will be put in. The interior decorations will be unusually elaborate.

Big Theatre for Longview, Wash.

Longview, Washington's wonder city, which sprang into being from nothing, to a city of paved streets, brick buildings and permanent homes, is to have a $125,000 motion picture theatre, now being erected by the Columbia Theatre Co., of which Wesley Vandercock is the head. Mr. Vandercock is chief engineer of the Long Bell Lumber Company, founders of Longview. The house will seat 1,214 and will be a combined picture and legitimate theatre with fully equipped stage, large organ, etc. The building alone, which will cost $125,000, will contain several stores and thirty-six apartments, in addition to the theatre. George Purvis is the architect and builder. Longview is indeed accomplishing things on a large scale.

The Value to the Picture Industry of Clear Fused Quartz Condensing Lenses

By W. H. JONES

FOR the past few months there has been wide-spread publicity on the subject of Clear Fused Quartz in the daily press and many of the magazines throughout the country. The stories told, romantic as they may appear, do not adequately convey the possibilities of this wonderful substance. Its properties are not known to the layman, and even to some scientific people simple demonstrations appear weird, if not uncanny.

The raw material, crystal quartz, or silica, is as old as the earth from which it is taken; it is found in all parts of the world and is the commonest substance known.

The process of fusing quartz has been carried out in a crude manner for nearly a century and the product was as crude as the process. It was impossible to make it clear, since it was always contaminated by some foreign substance. It was not until the year 1839 that a small quantity of Clear Fused Quartz was produced by Gaudin in France and its general thermal properties discovered. Since that time many prominent scientists have devoted years of study to the subject in the hope of perfecting a process for the manufacture, at a comparatively low cost, of an absolute homogeneous, bubble-free, transparent mass.

Clear Fused Quartz in limited quantities has been in the market for some time, but the high cost restricted its use to such an extent that practical applications have not been given serious consideration. Another page has been added to the book of progress, and from the Thomson Laboratory of the General Electric Company we have learned of the production of Clear Fused Quartz in large masses—practically bubble-free, and of the manufacture of condensing lenses for motion picture projection.

Some of the reasons why Clear Fused Quartz is of such value may be determined from the following:

First, it will not expand or contract except to extreme temperature: its melting point is approximately 1750 deg. C., (3182 deg. F.), coefficient of expansion, between 0 deg. and 1000 deg. C., .00000058, e. g., a rod 1 meter long at O deg. C., expands approximately .58 when heated to 1000 deg. C., and this is only 1/17 the expansion of platinum, and 1/34 that of copper.

Second, quartz is the most transparent substance available in large quantities.

Third, it will transmit light with greater efficiency than glass.

Fourth, its insulating properties are better than those of glass or porcelain.

With due consideration of all these properties, it is of interest to know that we have a record of many Clear Fused Quartz Condensing Lenses which have been in actual service for a year and, with one exception, are still in use every day.

With a Clear Fused Quartz Lens the distance from the arc to the face of the lens is not limited, as in the case of the glass lens. It can be subjected to intense heat without danger of cracking, or to a sudden change in temperature, which is very disastrous to the glass lens. It is not necessary to raise the temperature gradually until operating conditions are reached, nor to allow the lens to cool gradually before taking it from the machine.

Pitting it from the hot particles of carbon and copper is not as apparent. Consequently with the higher transmission from the quartz, the Clear Fused Quartz Lens remains more efficient than a glass lens operated under the same conditions.

The exception referred to is a lens which was subjected to extreme conditions. The machine in which this lens was installed short-circuited and the arc played directly across the face of the lens. This machine was operated at approximately 150 amperes, and under the circumstances one would expect that the lens would be rendered unfit for further service. By refinishing this surface, however, the lens was again in operation two days after the accident and the cost of refinishing amounted to but $2.

It should therefore be of interest from an economical as well as an engineering point of view to know that Clear Fused Quartz Condensing Lenses are available, and that the use of this material in some other form might be of value and importance to the motion picture industry.

Discuss Plans for Equipment Show

Plans for what it is said will be the largest exhibition of motion picture equipment in recent years were discussed by Manufacturers and dealers of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America at a dinner, Thursday afternoon and evening, October 23. The meeting, called by Sam Lears, president of the Manufacturers' Division brought to Chicago a number of out-of-town manufacturers and dealers among them being W. L. Brandel, National Lamp Works, Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio; J. H. Hertner, Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland; J. W. Brenkert, Brenkert Light Projection Company, Detroit; Irving Samuels, Automatic Devices Company, Allentown, Pa. and L. P. Langford, Wisconsin Theatre Supply Company, Milwaukee.

Mr. Lears, reporting on the arrangements being made at Milwaukee, declared that present plans provide for holding the exhibit of the manufacturers in the same building in which the M. P. T. O. of America will meet —namely the Milwaukee auditorium. Only members of the Association will be allowed to exhibit, according to a resolution passed at the afternoon session. Under the present plans, several angles of which are yet to be definitely settled, there will be no charge to members for exhibiting other than the cost of erecting booths and making signs.

A round table discussion followed the dinner at which all those present spoke, the consensus of opinion being that the association was progressing in an entirely satisfactory manner and functioning to the benefit of its members and the industry as a whole.

American Theatre, Butte, Remodeled

A. M. Larson, who handles all interior decorations and furnishings for B. F. Shearer, Inc., of Seattle, has just returned from Butte, where he had entire charge of redecorating and installation of 900 new fully upholstered Heywood-Wakefield opera chairs and furnishings of the remodeled American, which reopened after a long period, on October 11. New foyer drapes and new lighting fixtures throughout the house were important changes, as was the removal of the projection room from under the front of the balcony to the rear. The American is a Jensen & Von Herberg house. W. J. Sullivan is manager.

Bright and smiling carbon babies

DOES you-all crave brightness? National Projector Carbons are nothing else but. Give 'em the juice and they radiate brilliance.

National Projector Carbons never get fussy, never cry, yell, shriek or go into convulsions. Projectionists adopt these babies with joy and delight to themselves, to theatre owners, and to audiences.

National Projector Carbons are not puny infants, but strong, husky giants that produce strong, husky light; full, rich light, eye-easy but powerful; light that throws on the screen all that is in the film.

New Model C Reflecting Arc Lamp Now Ready for Delivery

THE American Reflecting Arc Corporation, of Boston, announces that the new Model C Reflecting Arc Lamp and equipment is now ready for delivery. The new model lamp includes new design carbon holders. Some changes on the front post or standard have been made to give more sturdiness. In addition, there is a new design of negative carbon adjustment in which the adjustments are positively secured by gearing. A double-acting handle outside the lamphouse controls both adjustments.

The mirror support and adjustment has also been improved. A new mechanism controls both adjustments, which are made by a double-acting handle, also outside the lamphouse. Many other minor improvements have been made, with the result that a sturdy and positively controlled lamp has been produced. All adjustments are made from the outside of the lamphouse.

The new improved mirror is of a special design and curvature. Its improvement over other mirrors is its optical correction, which is such that all rays are brought to a uniform focus. This eliminates diverging rays with a resultant loss of light and results in a clearly defined spot at the aperture and a uniform distribution of light over the entire screen. The optical correction also results in an increase of approximately thirty per cent in light on the screen and a more blue-white light, which greatly increases the brilliancy and definition of the picture. The mirror is made of special heat-resisting glass.

Idaho's American Has 10th Anniversary

Joe George of Idaho Falls, Idaho, celebrated recently the tenth anniversary of the opening of the American Theatre in that city. The celebration also marked George's seventeenth year in the motion picture industry and his tenth year as a subscriber to Moving Picture World.

George's experience as a showman has been confined for the greater part to Idaho Falls. He commenced this career in the western city by erecting the Dime Theatre in 1907. Seven years later he constructed the American, which is equipped with up-to-the-minute devices for the comfort of its patrons and the projection of its pictures.

The anniversary was marked by a special program. Mr. and Mrs. George personally greeted the patrons at the door where candy and cigars were distributed and punch was served.

The Weeks Record of Albany Incorporations

Motion picture companies in New York state incorporated at the rate of one a day during the past week, the records in the secretary of state's office showing that seven were chartered and that all will maintain headquarters in the metropolis. These companies included the following: Charactered Pictures, Incorporated, capitalization not stated, L. G. Bernstein, William A. Sands, Harold Wisan, New York City; Hill-Strauss, Inc., $10,000, Alfred Hills, Benjamin Strauss, New York; Sol. Beringer, Bronxville; P. and S. Producing Corporation, $15,000, Lillian Abrams, Brooklyn; D. L. Budner, H. L. Gutter, New York city; R. and L. Amusement Company, $20,000, Louis Wasserman, Nathan Frankel, Maurice Sutta, New York city; Argosy Amusement Corp., $60,000, Costas D. and George D. Stamastis, Brooklyn; Soteros Cocalis, Elizabeth, N. J.; Pioneer Theatre Corporation, $25,000, Jacob and Esther Schwartz, Jacob Feld, Brooklyn; N. and R. Theatres, Inc., Michael Aronson, Irving Renner, Louis Nelson, Brooklyn.

Tipperary Tim

you, Tip, Old Topper. Long may you wave. Here are some remarks he made in the September Projectionist. They deserve wide publicity, particularly among motion picture projectionists, which profession is INFLICTED with all too many of those "practical men" Tip speaks of. They pretend to take pride in being just that. I personally think it is merely pretense—a sort of camouflage set up to hide their real reason, which is lack of brains, ability to use them or just plain laziness. Tim says:

"It is when we make these comparisons that we realize what a tremendous effect the development of the art of printing has had upon the world. It has made possible the democratization of education. The finest books are now cheap and plentiful and few people are so unfavorably situated that they must remain ignorant from lack of opportunity.

"But all the books in the world are no use to the man who is too lazy to study them. Some men, so far as the cultivation of their minds is concerned, might as well be living in the Stone Age and wearing a fig-leaf and whiskers. Their intellectual horizon is necessarily very limited, because their mental stodginess cuts them off from the inexhaustible supply of information contained in books. If one of these fellows works at a trade he is always very anxious to be known as a 'practical man.' Through continuous misuse this term has lost its original meaning. It might now be defined as 'a man having very little brains, but plenty of experience.' The experience being chiefly a record of previous disasters. If he has been instructed in the operation of any particular apparatus his work will seldom rise above a monkey-like imitation of his instructor. And if he should happen to be up against something which he never saw before he usually proceeds by the old 'trial and error' method, and by the time he is through with his trials and errors the machine has acquired some entirely new characteristics not called for in the specifications. This is the kind of thing that causes the designing engineers to waste half their time trying to make machines fool-proof. But—every cloud has a silver lining—the 'practical man' has acquired some more 'experience.'

"Book Learning Not Necessary"

"Of course, it may be conceded that there are many things which may be done without the aid of book-learning. For instance, shovelling coal is not usually done according to any specific mathematical formula and one may become a fairly successful cuspidor-cleaner without a profound knowledge of physics. But such certainly is not the case with Motion Picture projection. Here a knowledge of optics has frequently a decisive bearing upon the quality of the picture produced. Here, too, we have to deal with the mighty forces of electricity and magnetism, both of which being invisible and intangible afford little information as to their nature to the casual observer. How anybody can have an adequate knowledge of these things without availing himself of the information contained in the text-books must remain a mystery to everybody except the 'practical man.'

"No one will deny that real practical experience is invaluable, but it should be preceded by a reasonable intelligent idea of the work to be done. 'Learn by doing' is rather an empty phrase if one does not know the why and the wherefore of what one is doing."

Stop-Down Losses

G. W. Bennewitz figured out the following stop-down losses in connection with his reply to Bluebook question No. 112:

	Sq. in.	Effi'cy	Loss
Condenser 4½ in. in diameter	15.904	100%	....
Cut off by lens mount.	2.140	87%	13½%
Free diameter of condenser	13.764	87%	....
Cut off by slide carrier	4.048	61%	25½%
Free diameter with slide carrier	9.796	61%	....

The mount loss cannot, of course, be avoided, nor is it especially desirable that it should as it is at the very edge of the lens. The slide carrier loss—well, that is something else again. In the language of the Teuton: "Raus mit the slide carrier" in front of a motion picture projector condenser.

New Suburban Theatre at S. Tacoma, Wash.

South Tacoma's new Community Theatre at 56th and M Streets, S. R. Stalcup's first venture in the erection of a motion picture theatre, is an attractive addition to the community life of this busy neighborhood center. Mr. Stalcup started construction of this $40,000 tile, brick and concrete house last April, opening late in August, with a little gem of a house, seating 500 people. His interior color scheme is of blue and gold, set off against the white walls. Flower gardens, with a background of oil paintings, set off with standards of leaves and blossoms, grace either side of the stage, which is large enough to accommodate vaudeville acts. Opera chairs are all cushion spring upholstered and yield the utmost in comfort, and an excellent view of the screen.

New Community Theatre, South Tacoma, Wash.

A sound-proof baby "crying room" is also a feature, usually confined to the larger downtown theatres. But it was Mr. Stalcup's carefully worked out plan that no modern appointment or detail be lacking in the execution of the Community. A pipe organ, complete with all the features and units for musical presentation, with Charles P. Hewett at the console, furnishes attractive musical numbers, at which times the full beauty of the lighted flower gardens is displayed. Curtains and lights are all on booth control. The booth equipment, which was installed by the Theatre Equipment Co., of Seattle, consists of two Power's projectors, Westinghouse motor generator, Brenckert spotlight and stereopticon. In addition this company installed seating, Superlite screen, Vallen curtain control, drapery and lighting effects.

Before Long Langdon Is Going To Be One of the Biggest Box-Office Bets in the Business; You Should Be Playing Him Now, Now, Now!

"It is only at very rare intervals that a really fine comedian arrives on the screen. . . The trouble with our comedians has been that to produce their fun they have found it necessary to depend upon objects independent of themselves. Their humor has not come from within but is effected only with the aid of outside props and gags. Even the best of our comedians of today are somewhat marred by this failing. . . . .

Harry Langdon, in the few films in which he has appeared, gives every evidence of being the finest and most whimsical comedian that has flashed on the silversheet since the arrival of Chaplin. He is droll, he is pathetic, and he has a most original and distinctive style of expression. But most important of all, the greater percentage of his humor comes from within. . .

He has tremendous potentialities."

MANHATTAN

Famous Players-Lasky production based on "The Definite Object," by Jeffery Farnol. Adapted by Paul Sloane and Frank W. Tuttle. Directed by R. H. Burnside. Starring Richard Dix. Presented at the Rivoli, New York, week of Oct. 26. Running time, 70 minutes.

Peter Minuit.....Richard Dix
Mary.....Jacqueline Logan
Spike.....Gregory Kelly
Bud McGinnis.....George Seigman
Joe Madden.....Gunboat Smith
Brimerton.....Oscar Figman
Mrs. Trapes.....Edna Mae Oliver
Housekeeper.....Alice Chapin

The exhibitors of the country, the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. and the film industry generally can hail Richard Dix as one of the real new stars of the picture field, and at the same time they can pass a couple of hails to R. H. Burnside, veteran stage director of both musical comedies and dramatic offerings, who makes his debut as a director with this presentation. The combination of Dix and Burnside proves a happy one.

"Manhattan" as a picture is going to start Dix off with a bang. He has youth, looks, personality, and above all, he can troupe. Together with this he puts over a fight in this picture that is going to go down as one of the greatest. The fight in "Manhattan" is an out-and-out wow from any angle.

After the screening of the final show at the Rivoli Sunday night there was frequent comment among the women folk of the audience as they were leaving the theatre which was absolute proof that Dix had struck their fancy and that he was going to be one of their favorites.

The story, thoroughly melodramatic, is relieved with a corking comedy vein. The comedy is likewise present in the titles. Providing Famous keeps up the pace as to story and direction with Dix, there is nothing that is going to stop him from soon hitting the top as a box office attraction.

Supporting Dix is Jacqueline Logan as the girl, she handling her role decidedly well. George Seigman plays the heavy, and was on the receiving end in the battle with Dix. Gregory Kelly in a character role, that of the young safe-cracker, managed to be most convincing as a weak-chinned boy that is forced to do the bidding of others. Edna Mae Oliver as a tenement character managed to score.

"Manhattan" will get dough and entertain anywhere. Fred.

Dix means Dough, boys. He's proving it now in "MANHATTAN"

You CAN Get the Facts!

Mr. President:

Mr. Sales Manager:

Mr. Advertising Manager:

There is no reason under the sun for groping in the dark about trade paper values in this field.

You can get all the facts you want—IF YOU GO AFTER THEM.

You don't have to spend five thousand dollars on an important seasonal announcement—and then trust to luck and GOOD GUESSING when you put it to work.

You don't have to spend seventy-five thousand dollars a year on trade paper advertising—and do it with your eyes blindfolded and your hands grasping lottery tickets.

You CAN get facts—if you want them.

And that's fact!

What sort of facts?

Well, for example, perhaps you are interested in the thousand odd exhibitors of the country who do the buying for some six thousand theatres?

Bring your list of those theatres into my office and I will let you CHECK THEM AGAINST OUR SUBSCRIPTION RECORDS. Name by name.

If you haven't got such a list we'll let you use ours.

I will guarantee to show you in BLACK AND WHITE how the present circulation of Moving Picture World reaches a buying power of ten thousand five hundred theatres. And to show you when and where those exhibitors PAID CASH for their subscriptions.

And that's fact!

Perhaps you are interested in "class" circulation—would like to know the first runs reached by a paper.

That's easy.

Bring a list of first run bookings on one of your last season's successes to my office and I WILL LET YOU CHECK THEM AGAINST THE SUBSCRIPTION RECORDS.

I have nothing to hide.

AND A LOT MORE TO BOAST ABOUT THAN YOU HAVE PROBABLY BEEN GIVING ME CREDIT FOR.

And that's fact!

* * *

Very probably you are interested in small town theatres, or in TOTAL exhibitor circulation.

Check the Audit Bureau of Circulations reports.

But, FIRST OF ALL, go to the advertising agency that is handling your Saturday Evening Post copy and ask them to prepare an analysis of the auditing methods of the A. B. C., of the stringent, inescapable, inflexible austerity with which that organization can—AND DOES—get at the truth about trade paper circulation.

YOU CAN'T FOOL THE A. B. C. IN THE TRADE PAPER FIELD!

It has been tried. But never successfully.

And that's fact!

* * *

Facts? Why there are a host of facts that you can get—if you go after them.

Perhaps you are buying certain publications because of supposed strength in certain sections.

Did you ever sit down with a table of TERRITORIAL PERCENTAGES alongside an A. B. C. report—and learn:

What a terrible cost you are paying for certain slim territories—and what a loss of effort in fat territories you are suffering when you don't appear in Moving Picture World?

There's something to learn there.

And that's fact!

* * *

There's only one item necessary to a trade paper analysis that you can't prove by black and white figures.

That's: Reader Interest.

But here's a way: Give me fifteen minutes across your desk to tell you my story and the story of The World. Give the others the same. If WE don't know our papers—then nobody does.

And the paper that can't sell you doesn't deserve a buyer.

You can save time and narrow that down to a half an hour. There's only one man I have to consider when it comes to READER INTEREST. That's Martin Quigley.

One of the others never got started; the other reached the top and then started to slip.

And that's fact!

I repeat: YOU DON'T have to grope in the dark!

I WILL GIVE YOU ANY FACT YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT MOVING PICTURE WORLD!

I make only one request:

Don't ask me for FACTS—while you are content to take the others' GUESSES.

Induce at least one other trade paper to match everything you ask me to do. Then

I AM READY FOR YOU.

And that's fact!

* * *

There's only one place the other fellow beats me.

That is in pages of advertising.

But, essentially, that is YOUR WORRY a whole lot more than it is mine.

John F. Chalmers, and the Chalmers Publishing Company, were here yesterday—a host of yesterdays—and they are going to be here tomorrow—a host of tomorrows.

They reached success in days of battle through adherence to the principle of READER INTEREST. They held to the principle in days that tried principles.

They are going—AND ARE ABLE—to keep on holding firmly to the thought that Reader Interest and Reader Confidence are the essentials of trade paper strength. Through the years—and years to come.

And that's fact!

Mary Pickford in "DOROTHY VERNON of HADDON HALL"

From the romantic novel by Charles Major ~ ~ Adapted by Waldemar Young

A MARSHALL NEILAN PRODUCTION

Photography by Charles Rosher

"Never before have we sat through two hours of a picture and experienced a vision of beauty, sheer beauty, every minute.

"Yes, every minute a beautiful picture, consistently acted, superbly photographed, with settings and costums appropriate and convincing.

"As for the story—it lacks in greatness, it is true, but it makes it up in romance, and romance is the thing.

"All the world loves a lover.

"All the world loves a sweetheart.

"Mary Pickford is the sweetheart of America.

" 'Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall' is one of the greatest sweethearts of fiction.

"So all the world must love Mary and her otherself, Dorothy Vernon, and the picture where so much is seen of both.

Giant Pictures Coming

"GREED"

ERICH VON STROHEIM now gives us his masterpiece—"Greed." No other picture is awaited with keener interest by audiences. It has been more than two years in the making. It has won columns of advance publicity in magazines and newspapers everywhere. In this gigantic motion picture triumph Von Stroheim has given showmen a box-office sensation that will unquestionably surpass the money records of "Blind Husbands", "The Devil's Passkey" and "Foolish Wives."

Adapted by June Mathis and Erich Von Stroheim from Frank Norris' "McTigue."

"He Who Gets Slapped"

VICTOR SEASTROM has made a motion picture that takes its place among the immortal works of the film art. A story for the millions, told in gripping pictures, conceived in love and beauty and human kindness. A photoplay that will undoubtedly be one of the greatest money-makers in the annals of the industry!

With Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Ford Sterling, Tully Marshall, Clyde Cook. Adapted by Carey Wilson from Leonid Andreyev's stage success.

The MERRY WIDOW

"The Merry Widow"

ERICH VON STROHEIM'S magnificent picturization of "The Merry Widow" will soon be ready for your public. You can bet your reputation as a showman that there has never been a surer business-ballyhoo than the combination of Von Stroheim, theatrical history's money marvel "The Merry Widow," and Mae Murray as the Widow plus John Gilbert as the Prince. Every brilliant capital in the world has showered this madcap stage sensation with money and acclaim. Three years on Broadway! Season after season of roadshows. Now it comes to pictures.

Look forward to a box-office event!

"The Great Divide"

A DRAMA that will live as long as America lives. The immortal stage play that was cheered by spellbound thousands in New York and across the breadth of the land has now become a great motion picture, superbly produced, scenically magnificent, powerfully dramatic in its telling. Alice Terry, Conway Tearle, Wallace Beery and Huntly Gordon are in the big cast. What "The Great Divide" has done on hundreds of stages it will repeat on thousands of screens. Its acknowledged money record in the theatre will be many times exceeded in its triumphant coming to the motion picture.

"Sundown" A Worthwhile Production

It took a lot of time and patience to make "Sundown," but it was worth the effort. It is a sincere, honest attempt to put upon the screen a bit of present day history, the conquering of the west by the cattlemen who are themselves driven into Mexico by the onrushing homesteaders. There's not a villain in it; there's only one woman—Bessie Love; but there's more cows than you ever saw all at once in your life. "Sundown" ought to enjoy a long and prosperous season. The whole family can see it and enjoy every bit of it and I'll venture to say it will be talked about long, long after your local theatre has shown it. Took Mrs. Service to see it with me at a private screening and her comment was "There's a real picture."

"Far beyond the ordinary motion picture"

St. Louis Post Dispatch

A Drama of Loyalty.

"THE Silent Watcher," the film play adapted from a story of Mary Roberts Rinehart and now on view at the Grand Central and West End Lyric theaters, goes far beyond the ordinary motion picture play in human appeal and in naturalness.

Anyone can appreciate the genuineness of the opening scenes in which are depicted the simple life of a young married couple, the pride the young husband feels in his prospect of advancement and the skepticism of his wife.

The part of the young wife is played by Bessie Love. Glenn Hunter is the husband, who is private secretary to a New York lawyer who becomes a candidate for United States Senator.

This candidacy is responsible for all the tragedy of the story, and in developing this feature the picture shows vividly the selfishness and heartlessness of politicians, the double life that some men lead, nd how a subordinate can get himself into hot water by being too loyal to an employer who is a little shy of moral principle.

Suffice it to say that the young hero goes to prison rather than reveal that his employer maintained an apartment for an actress who committed suicide, but at first is supposed to have been murdered.

There are a few amusing touches in the picture, but in the main it grips the attention like a well-written short story. Though some of the situations are unusual, none seem impossible, and the "big" scenes are not overdone.

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

The Editor's Views

IN the manner of the after dinner speaker, but with a good deal more sincerity, we wish to state that it is with real pleasure that we publish on another page of this issue extracts from a speech by Charles C. Pettijohn that constitute a summary of arbitration work in this industry.

Will Hays knows that the writer of these lines has never acquired the habit of throwing bouquets at him simply because he is Will Hays. So he, at least, will appreciate our sincerity when we commend him for the work that he and his organization have put forth to make arbitration the standard of action for the motion picture industry.

No greater task has been performed by Will Hays.

This industry needs the healing effects of arbitration. There is no other beacon of hope for the eventual removal of the breach that exists between exhibitor and distributor.

The feeling of SUSPICION that exists in this industry has cost us more millions and greater loss of progress than any other single factor. And it is to arbitration alone that we can look for the soothing effect that will some day eradicate that suspicion.

THE thought of arbitration's benefits comes particularly to our mind at this moment because during the week past we have devoted some thought and considerable conversation to the Federal Trade Commission's hearings in the Famous Players-Lasky case.

Here is a peculiar situation. As far as we can determine the issues that probably started the case —producer ownership of theatres, and allied subjects—are now as dead as doornails. Such practices as Alfred Black and others may have engaged in in spreading their chains of theatres, later to come under Famous control, can be condemned, but there is little use in forbidding them for they are already issues of the past.

So the most important live issue that remains before the Trade Commission is the matter of block booking. As we understand it, the Government hopes to prove and declare that block booking is illegal.

Where are we then?

Let's take it for granted that block booking has been abolished by edict of the Commission. And that the decision has been upheld by courts, should it be taken there.

Imagine a salesman in your town selling pictures. He won't be back again for two months. He has orders to sell twenty or as near to that number as he can.

You want five of the twenty particularly. If the salesman sells you the five alone he probably just covers expenses of the trip—and if he does it all along the line, there will be a new salesman around to see you next time.

Block booking or no block booking—words are but words. When the discussion reaches the point of PRICE there is going to be a club that will book most of those twenty pictures before you get the five for which you are anxious.

NO matter what code of ethics we draw up, this business will always be in the hands of the salesman. And back of the salesman is the driving force of economic necessity that sometimes knows no law.

That is where the principle and the practice of arbitration serve.

Arbitration, carried along the admirable lines in vogue already lifts the business above the bickerings and arguments of salesman and exhibitor, clears away the fog of suspicion and fear that exists on both sides.

Arbitration in the motion picture industry has passed the realm of theory and become an institution that is attracting the favorable attention of many other lines of endeavor. For this mark to its credit the industry is indebted to Will Hays and Charles C. Pettijohn, on whose shoulders the details of organization have been placed.

It isn't possible to conceive of arbitration having reached its present assured place in the industry's affairs had the industry known no Will Hays.

The Hamilton National Bank

130 West 42nd Street

It is one thing to preach service — it is another, and the real essential, to deliver it.

The remarkable growth of Hamilton National in the first few months of its existence MIGHT have been produced by advertising—

But that growth could never have continued, could not be maintaining its present steady and consistent pace—unless—

The preaching of service had been backed up by PERFORMANCE.

"Word of mouth" advertising — the hearty praise and undisguised affection given Hamilton National by those business men who have come in contact with its service are responsible for a record of healthy, remarkable growth that is outstanding among New York's financial institutions.

When advertising brings you in contact with Hamilton National the work of advertising ceases.

It is then up to us to deliver.

Give us the opportunity —and you will become one of the boosters.

Speaking Freely

Listen, boys, while you are shaking Earl Hudson's hand and showering him with congratulations on receiving a hero's welcome back to New York—save a little of that commendation, and mebbe some sympathy, for this time a year from now. Earl did a miracle man's job in the past twelve months—and the simple task ahead of him is to repeat. That's all. Without outstanding star names to bolster up the weak sisters his twenty-seven bosses merely ask him to provide them with a stream of pictures that will outdraw the house across the street with Meighan, Swanson, Lloyd and Valentino. Some assignment. They can't all be "Flaming Youth's." But mebbe the bosses think they should be.

Things are shaping up for a very hectic, exciting, and enticing 1925. Just about the time you decide that one man in this business has gathered all the eggs in his basket somebody scrambles them up and they spread all over the map again.

Joe Schenck is doing the job now. And what a roster United Artists is going to have when he gets through.

Doug and Mary, Norma, Chaplin, there's a hand of aces. Especially when you consider that Doug and Mary are probably going to turn out more than one each year and go back to the "Mark of Zorro's" and others that box offices have never forgotten.

Yessir!—September, 1925, looms up very large and important.

Meanwhile things are now in such shape that we can look over the situation for the balance of the season. Famous with a Forty that seems to stack up just about the same as the First Forty—except that the titles have been soothed and calmed a bit. First National with an unknown number, with the weight leaning on two from Norma and "The Lost World." Universal with a "White List." And therein is a story. First of all, of a very effective and efficient teaser advertising campaign. Second, and most important, of the thought that is back of the "White List." It is selling a new idea, a different angle, something that is above mere pictures and titles. It deserves the success it will undoubtedly receive.

Universal is on the level about this "White List" idea. R. H. Cochrane puts it this way: "We are really trying to set a new pace for the whole business by hitting one hundred per cent. on white pictures, white contracts, white treatment, and white everything."

"It isn't merely a stunt," he went on. "We are going through with it and we are pounding it home to every man in the Universal organization, particularly our sales force. It's good business but, better still, it's good principle and if it does nothing more than give a slight boost to the general tone of the industry it will have been well worth while."

Spoken like a man. And the type of utterance that nowadays means something when it comes from a leader of the industry.

While you are figuring up the cards for the balance of the season, don't overlook Mr. Fox. With leaders like "The Iron Horse" and "Dante's Inferno"—always present, the perennially popular Tom Mix—Bill Fox has something to sell the exhibitor. And going along the line, have you noticed how many new theatres seemed to follow the lead of the New York Piccadilly in booking "Barbara Frietchie" for an opening number? Producer's Distributing is going to be in the middle of the picture with men like Woods, Harris, Hoffman, Stromberg and Christie at work in the studios.

These are "statement issuing days" over at the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. From this angle it looks as if the boys want to back Adolph into a corner and make him do a Minneapolis. Mebbe the one experience cured him.

We would like to give you the details in the news columns only we can't seem to pin it down to anything more definite than a smoke screen.

Speaking indefinitely, as we may on this page, the T. O. C. C. members want an adjustment on the First Forty. Balance replies that they are talking foolishly because most of the members haven't played enough of the Forty to make out a clear case. The T. O. C. C. answers, "We weren't talking to you, we were talking to Mr. Zukor." And there you are.

We could get more definite only there never seems to be any statements the days our news-gatherer calls at the T. O. C. C. office. And we hate to get in the habit of borrowing from the Daily.

We are in receipt of an invitation to the First International Film Congress, to be held in London, November 26th, 27th and 28th. Read carefully through the two page letter, read it again, and still we have to admit that we don't know what it's all about. A lot of very important film and nobility names on the letterhead, but we can't quite figure what they are going to "congress" about, or what Americans are going to be there. The writer asks us to let him know the names of the Americans who will be in attendance. That's what we want to know, old top!—R. E. W.

What does Adolph Zukor think

About producing and distributing combinations and amalgamations?

What does Adolph Zukor think about criticism of his efforts?

What does Adolph Zukor think about price fixing by exhibitor combinations?

What does Adolph Zukor think about the use of Other People's Money for production?

In the course of a remarkably frank interview the outstanding leader of the motion picture industry tells you the answer to these questions in next week's Moving Picture World.

This, the second in W. Stephen Bush's series, "Stories of the Builders," constitutes the most outspoken utterance Adolph Zukor has ever made for publication.

Watch for it next week!

Year's Arbitration Saves $1,500,000

Charles C. Pettijohn Declares That the Benefits of Industry's Tribunals of Justice Are Easily Apparent—Fewer Complaints Now Being Passed On

By SUMNER SMITH

ARBITRATION, that year-and-a-half-old brain baby of the motion picture industry, is growing from a puny, irritable infant to a lusty, crowing child, with all the odds favoring its attaining a stalwart manhood. That, at least, is the opinion of Will H. Hays, for Charles C. Pettijohn, his lieutenant, so informed the Illinois Chamber of Commerce at a recent meeting in Chicago. Arbitration, he said, is here to stay. It has proved its worth both to the distributor and the exhibitor.

During the first year of their existence, arbitration boards, according to the attorney of the Hays organization, heard, decided and disposed of more than 5,000 cases, and he believes that fully four times as many were disposed of before they were actually brought before the boards. The percentage of unanimous decisions in these 5,000 cases was a fraction better than 90 per cent. In less than 10 per cent. the votes were five to one or four to two, and in twenty-two cases only was the seventh arbitrator called in, and five of these cases were in New York City.

Well, what is the most obvious value of the arbitration boards? Money savings in distribution costs, which during this period are estimated at $1,500,000. That is Mr. Pettijohn's figure. He goes on to say:

"About six months have elapsed since the results of our first year of Arbitration were tabulated. Fewer cases are now being tried and decided, the work of the various Joint Boards of Arbitration is decreasing appreciably, for several reasons that are most apparent.

"First: Contracts in the motion picture business now are contracts made in good faith and expected to be kept. I might go so far as to say that contracts in the picture business between exhibitor and distributor are now worth their face value.

"Second: Theatre owners do not over-buy to keep their opposition from getting good product, and salesmen do not attempt to sell theatre owners upon the theory that they can discredit contracts already executed by them.

"Third: Both the exhibitor and distributor know that these Joint Boards of Arbitration will not tolerate sharp practices or shady methods, and exhibitors and distributors alike do not relish being called before one of these Joint Boards of Arbitration for a review of their business methods. As a result certain individuals in both camps have stopped 'playing the motion picture game' and are now engaged in 'the motion picture business.'

CHARLES C. PETTIJOHN

"Under the new uniform contract providing for arbitration, play dates of theatres are a part of the contract. The theatre owner knows when he is going to get his picture; the contract provides the machinery for the automatic setting in one of these dates when the various pictures become available. Under the old system it was one thing to sell a picture and quite another thing to get a play date agreed upon for the production which had already been sold. Ofttimes it cost more money to get a play date than it did to sell the picture originally. The elimination of this unnecessary selling cost has been one of the large items of saving.

"The decisions of the Arbitration Boards so constituted are final and we have no provision for an appeal or a rehearing unless it can be shown that fraud has been practiced on any board, in which instance the board may order a retrial or a new hearing. In spite of the fact that we have no provision for appeal only two cases among the first five thousand settled by arbitration were taken to the courts, and I am quite sure that had there been five thousand decisions of disputes in the motion picture business tried in court we would have had many more appeals from the decisions so rendered.

"Eighteen months ago we started to put into effect arbitration. There were first organized in thirty-one key distributing centers of the United States, in thirty-one cities Film Boards of Trade, composed of the Branch Managers of each distributing company doing business in that particular city. Each of these Film Boards of Trade selected or elected three managers of three companies, alternating from time to time, to sit upon an Arbitration Board composed of six members for that key distributing center. The other three members were selected by the exhibitors or theatre owners of that same distributing zone in like manner, and these six men constituted the Arbitration Board with the provision for and the right to select a seventh arbitrator or an umpire in case of a tie vote. Thirty-one of these Arbitration Boards in these same thirty-one key distributing centers, wherein are located the thirty-one Film Boards of Trade, were thus constituted.

"A Uniform Exhibition Contract was agreed upon by many of the distributors. and I think I am conservative in saying that today nearly all distributors of motion pictures are using contracts providing for arbitration, and probably 95 per cent. of the contracts that are being written for motion pictures today contain these uniform provisions for arbitration.

"Arbitration has proven its own practibility in our industry and I see no reason why its application would not be as practical and as successful in other lines of business and trade.

"The men serving on these Boards of Arbitration are in a sense experts in their respective business. They know their business and they are experts owing equal allegiance to both parties, serving without pay as judges to decide each case fairly and equitably for all parties. The court expert is paid to testify for one side of the case or the other and we would not think of permitting some of our 'alienists of today' to serve as judges. In arbitration, however, it works.

"It stands to reason that two parties in dispute could settle the whole matter better by getting together, choosing an arbitrator, submitting their respective cases in plain language, and abiding by the result, than by throwing their contention into the complicated machinery of the courts.

"Going to court implies expense. Necessarily, the complicated apparatus of official justice has to be paid for.

George Levine, sales manager for Sanford Productions of Hollywood arrived in New York this week.

Henry P. Varner, head of the M. P. T. O. of North Carolina, is expected to be in New York early next week for a conference with the Hays office.

HAWLEY TURNER

Gets Executive Post

Hawley Turner Joins Board of Directors of Ritz-Carlton Pictures

Announcement of the appointment of Hawley Turner to the board of directors and Executive Committee of Ritz-Carlton Pictures was made by President J. D. Williams at a dinner to trade paper editors in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, October 31.

Although Turner is thoroughly familiar with the picture industry, this marks his first direct association with it. He has been a partner in the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, which represents about two-thirds of the picture business in addition to other large concerns. Before that he had handled the motion picture advertising for Curtis publications.

"I am happy to see men of the calibre of Hawley Turner coming into our business," said Mr. Williams. "The personnel of the industry is changing for the better with the recognition of its importance. There is no more significant development than this. Mr. Turner is young, enthusiastic and has demonstrated his business ability. He is transferring these qualities to the pictures. I am delighted to welcome him into the industry and into our company."

C. L. Yearsley, George Ullman, Valentino's manager, and D. W. Henderson, Turner's former partner, also paid high compliment to the guest of honor.

M. J. Walsh Seriously Ill

Michael J. Walsh, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, was reported this week to have been taken to Packard's Sanitarium. According to his personal physician, Mr. Walsh, who had previously been confined to his home in Yonkers, is suffering from a nervous breakdown and will require a long period of rest.

Schenck-United Merger Has Expansion Budget

Merging of the Schenck interests with United Artists was consummated at Hollywood this week following a conference at which Joseph M. Schenck, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Hiram Abrams were present. The merger is expected to become actually effective within the ensuing week. It is understood that the title United Artists will be retained.

Later news dispatches from Hollywood this week reveal that the reorganization project calls for the sum of approximately $2,500,000 to be devoted as a budget in plans for expansion. This report also carries the information that Joseph M. Schenck will head the Board of Directors and that Hiram Abrams will be retained in his capacity as chief of distribution.

Good Psychology

Film Club and T. O. C. C. Share Arbitration Sessions

Exhibitors and exchangemen in Greater New York have so arranged things that both will have an equal say on all matters pertaining to arbitration. Wednesday, November 5, marked the opening of the new regime with the arbitration board meeting for the first time in the headquarters of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce in the Times Building. The event was permanently recorded by the taking of motion pictures.

Heretofore such sessions have been held in the quarters of the FILM Club, composed of exchangemen. Under the new system the arbitration board, consisting of three exchangemen and three exhibitors, members of the respective clubs, will meet alternately in both headquarters. An exhibitor or an exchangeman, wherever the meeting happens to be, will occupy the chair.

To insure an equal footing the T.O.C.C. has insisted in defraying one-half of the expenses encountered, as well as 50-50 in everything else.

Herbert Milligan Dies

Herbert L. Milligan, formerly of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, died November 4 at Corpus Christi, Texas, where he had gone in search of health. He was a brother of Morris A. Milligan, District Manager for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and of Carl G. Milligan, literary agent, of New York City.

Coogans Land Nov. 10

Jackie Coogan, with his father and mother, will arrive in New York on the Leviathan November 10, according to a cable dispatch from Paris where the Coogans are resting after their long journey to Athens, Greece. Present plans call for the Coogans leaving immediately for the coast after their arrival in New York.

MOVE TO LARGER QUARTERS

Cranfield & Clarke, distributors of British and American Films, have moved to larger quarters on the sixth floor, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Schine Circuit Now Boasts 51 Theatres

According to an announcement made by J. Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, head of the Schine circuit of houses, the entire holdings of Associated Theatres, Inc., amounting to twenty-five theatres in New York State, have been acquired by Schine brothers. The deal is said to involve about $700,000.

The Schine circuit now consists of 51 theatres located in about twenty cities and in only two is there opposition. The newly acquired houses are located in Corning, Salamanca, Penn Yan, Bath, Fairport, East Rochester, Newark, Lockport, Canandaigua and Geneva. The house at Bath and the one at Newark are in course of construction.

The headquarters of the chain will remain in Gloversville and bookings for all theatres will continue to be made there. Each house will have an individual manager and for the present at least there will be no changes. The theatres just secured by the Schine brothers constitute what is generally known as the Dygert circuit, of which Harold P. Dygert was president, treasurer and general manager.

Skouras Enterprises Get Site for $2,500,000 St. Louis House

SKOURAS BROTHERS ENTERPRISES announce the acquisition of the corner of Seventh and Locust street, St. Louis, as the site for a $2,500,000 motion picture house to be known as the Ambassador. The lot and present improvements cost approximately $1,750,000 or about $14,000 for front foot, a record price for real estate in that vicinity.

The success of Loew's State Theatre, Eighth street and Washington avenue, it is said, was the determining factor in the Skouras Brothers purchase. They had been watching the business done by the new Washington avenue movie palace and are certain that down-town night life has come back, and that subways and other transportation improvements will settle amusements there.

Rapp & Rapp of Chicago are designing the new theatre which will seat 4,500 persons, the largest of any in St. Louis. Whether the building shall be used exclusively for the theatre has not been decided but it is probable that an office structure will also be erected as the ground is too valuable. The equipment and decorations will cost upwards of $500,000 and are to include a pipe organ costing $100,000. The eventual investment will be almost $5,000,000 according to tentative plans.

Spyros Skouras, Charles Skouras and George Skouras, who control the Skouras Brothers Enterprises are striking examples of what can be accomplished in this country by men of determination and ideals. They started in the motion picture business but a few years ago with one small house on Market street. Today they own the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric and Capitol theatres and have a half interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company, which owns the Tivoli, Pageant, Pershing, Grand-Florissant, New Lindell, North Grand, Novelty, Shenandoah, Arsenal, Shaw, Manchester, Arco, Lafayette and Gravois. They also are district distributors for First National and Educational Pictures and own the St. Louis Film Exchange that handles Warner Brothers Classics, Samuel Goldwyns and other high class pictures.

The new enterprise is being financed by the First National Company, a subsidiary of the First National Bank in St. Louis. This company has no connection with First National Pictures.

Memphis-Little Rock Trade Board Entertains Salesmen

MEETING of the Memphis-Little Rock Film Board of Trade, held at the Marion Hotel, Little Rock, Ark., on Tuesday, October 14, to which all salesmen and bookers representing the different film exchanges in this territory were invited, resulted in a great many of the problems confronting film and arbitration boards being discussed.

The welcoming address was made by Mr. J. K. Adams of the State Film Company, Little Rock, Temporary Chairman. Mr. Adams emphasized the fact that the meeting was held to more fully cement the feeling of good fellowship between all connected with the industry.

Sol Davis of the Arkansas Specialty Film Company, Little Rock, vice president of the Film Board laid stress upon the fact that under no circumstances should one salesman make unnecessary remarks regarding another salesman's product. Davis also read an article by C. E. Peppiett of the Famous Players-Lasky Exchange, Memphis, whose absence was due to his being in New York.

J. L. Franconi of F. B. O., Little Rock, talked on salesmen's duties to their exchanges. W. E. Sipe, of Consolidated Film & Supply Company, Memphis, spoke upon the responsibility of branch managers.

After Sipe's closing remarks the meeting was then turned over to the salesmen who were called upon to express their opinion as to the best methods to pursue in the selling of films, getting the exhibitors co-operation and how conditions could be improved upon in this territory which will, eventually, make the operation of a Film Board of Trade practically unnecessary.

At the conclusion of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was tendered the members of the Memphis-Little Rock Film Board of Trade by the salesmen, who declared that they had gotten a great deal out of the meeting which could be used to the mutual benefit of both the exhibitor and the distributor.

Illinois Theatre Fire

Alton Blaze Singes 8 Heads and Does $35,000 Damage

One man and six women had their hair badly singed when fire broke out on the stage of the Grand Opera House at Alton, Ill., at 2 p. m., October 27, shortly before the premier showing of "The Ten Commandments" in the city was scheduled to take place. There were about 100 persons in the house at the time, the door having been opened thirty minutes earlier than usual to let in early comers.

The fire was believed to be due to defective wiring started on the stage. When a rear door was opened this furnished a draft and the flames shot over the top of the curtain into the auditorium.

Those in the audience rushed to the exits and six women had their hair slightly singed by the flames. M. Bardilio, a member of the orchestra that travels with the picture, was more seriously injured when he returned to the orchestra pit to recover his musical instrument. His hair was burned from his head and he sustained painful burns on the head and face.

William M. Sauvage, manager of the opera house, estimated the loss from the fire at approximately $35,000. The flames gutted the rear of the show house.

Bond Issue of $150,000

Stockholders in the Detroit Motion Picture Co., promoted by Frank L. Talbot, met last week and decided to issue $150,000 in bonds to alleviate financial conditions. By this plan 400 stockholders in the concern will pledge themselves to invest 25 per cent of their original stock investment in the bonds and 15 members of the board of directors, who are creditors to the company to the extent of $80,000, agree to accept bonds in lieu of cash payments at this time. The company's solitary picture, "Mary," featuring Mrs. Talbot, Kenneth Harlan, Mary Thurman and other well known players, is now being distributed on the state rights market.

Associated Will Not Produce This Season, Woody Announces

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS has decided definitely not to engage in production during the current season.

"There is some slight foundation for the stories about a change in our policy," said J. S. Woody, Associated's general manager. "That is, we had discussed entering the production field in connection with this season's releases, but the decision was unanimously against it. Later on—but who knows what conditions will be a year hence?

"As matters now stand it looks very much as if this organization, by the end of the season, would be the only feature distributor having no direct interest in production, but merely that we will stand alone as being engaged exclusively in distribution. In other words we will not be in competition with anyone for whom we are acting as selling agent."

According to Woody, who divides his time about equally between production and distribution, the existing arrangement has decided adventages over combined distribution and production. "As a matter of fact," he says, "I'm not at all certain that results would be anywhere nearly as satisfactory if we were providing part or all of our own product. There are certainly two sides to that question.

"Distributors entered production and producers entered distribution, up-building the existing organizations, solely with a view to protecting themselves. One large distributor, which originally was a buying organization for exhibitors, started making some of its own pictures in order to insure itself of product. It didn't want to put producers too definitely in a position to dictate terms. On the other hand, producers who have ventured into distribution have generally had the idea that they could get more money for their product than was obtainable through organizations which had pictures of their own to sell.

"It has been argued repeatedly to me, for instance, that the advances made to independent producers would finance our own production and give us both the distributor's and the producer's profits. But from my point of view there's another consideration which this argument entirely ignores.

"I'll agree that organization of a stock company, with production being pushed up to the capacity of the personnel and the physical plant, should result in lower average costs than are obtainable through smaller, separately managed, individual units. But where does all this profit the exhibitor? He pays just as much for the picture of cheaper manufacture as for the more expensive production—probably a good deal more, in the long run. Economy in manufacture and economy in distribution don't reduce the exhibitor's rentals. So, as long as he's footing the bill, why shouldn't he have his money's worth in quality?"

"In centralization," says the Associated Exhibitors' executive, "the work of a season is plotted and carried out by one organization—the same executives, writers, directors, camera men and actors, up to the limit of their capacity, figuring in everything that's undertaken. All major decisions fall upon one or two men, who are quite as much divorced from actual selling as is the average independent producer. Maximum output and constant utilization of the contract-bound personnel are essential in order to obtain the efficiency which the system was designed to create. In consequence, there's sameness, duplication of ideas, utilization of left-overs and a general tendency toward monotony. The greater the output, the more pronounced and evident this condition is likely to be.

"With independent production you find the individual unit endeavoring to give maximum value for minimum cost. The producer's future usually depends on this. He must produce profitably in order to hold the interest of capital and of exhibitors."

State Rights Sales

Renown announces that its entire product has been contracted for by Nate Robbins for his theatres in Utica, Elmira, Binghamton and Syracuse; also that the Schein Theatres Corporation of New York has made a similar booking.

Ben Amsterdam has closed contracts on "Playthings of Desire," the first of the new H. F. Jans features, for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Washington and West Virginia; M. H. Hoffman, of Renown Pictures, Inc., has bought the New York, Northern New Jersey and Illinois territories; and Export and Import Corporation has contracted for the entire foreign rights to the feature.

M. J. Winkler, distributor, announces the closing of the following territories by his sales manager, Nat Levine: Cleveland—The new series of "Felix" to the Fischer Film Exchange; Milwaukee—To Jack Grauman of the Celebrated Film Exchange, the new series of "Felix," series of "Reg'lar Kids" and the series of "Alice," as well as Burton Holmes"; Minneapolis—To H. O. Mugridge of the Celebrated Film Exchange, series of "Alice" comedies, "Reg'lar Kids" comedies, "Burton Holmes" and the "Memories" series; Omaha—To Stern Brothers of the Independent Film Exchange, new series of "Alice" comedies and the "Reg'lar Kids" comedies; Denver—To Mannie Drucker of the DeLuxe Film Exchange, "Alice" comedies, "Reg'lar Kids" and the "Memories"; Seattle—To D. C. Milwood of the Western Film Exchange, "Alice" comedies, "Reg'lar Kids" comedies, "Memories" series and "Burton Holmes"; San Francisco—To Gene Emmick of the Peerless Film Exchange, the new series of "Felix" comedies and the "Reg'lar Kids" comedies; to Mr. St. John of the Co-operative Film Exchange, series of "Alice" comedies; St. Louis—To Sam Werner of the United Film Exchange, the new series of "Felix" as well as the "Reg'lar Kids"; to Nat Steinberg of the Columbia Film Exchange, series of "Alice" comedies.

Rayart Pictures this week announces the following sales of its new product: The George Larkin series for Upper New York State to First Graphic Exchanges of Albany and Buffalo; the same series of pictures for Wisconsin to the Ludgwig Film Exchanges and for Minnesota, North and South Dakota to the Equitable Film Company of Minneapolis. The latter corporation also purchased Rayart's new production, "Safeguarded," and "The Street of Tears" for both the Minneapolis and Milwaukee territories. Rayart also announce the sale of the new series of Butterfly Comedies featuring Gloria Joy to DeLuxe Film Company of Philadelphia for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, and for the foreign market to Richmount Pictures, Inc., and the same of "Safeguarded" for the New York City territory to Merit Film Corporation.

Jail for Texan Tax Dodgers

The Federal Government is prosecuting theatre managers in Oklahoma for failure to pay the theatre admission tax assessed by the Internal Revenue Department. A J. Kemball, owner of the Crystal Theatre at Jennings, Okla., was fined $25 and sentenced to sixty days in jail. Kemball pleaded guilty to failure to pay $300.25 tax due the Government on admissions to his theatre. Robert O. Jordan, Cushing, Okla., theatre proprietor, is serving a ninety-day term in the federal jail at Guthrie on the same charge. G. W. McKenzie was arrested on a charge of failure to pay revenue due on his airdome at Duval, Okla., but pleaded not guilty. Investigations are continuing and more cases are to be filed in the near future.

Loew Buys Mansion

Marcus Loew, president of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, has purchased Pembroke, the country estate of the late Captain Joseph D. De Lamar, at Glen Cove, L. I. The price paid by Loew, for the mansion and 46 acres, is said to be over $1,000,000. The estate is considered one of the finest show places in the country and was built 14 years ago at a cost of more than $2,000,000. Loew will move into his new home upon his return from California.

Retires After 10 Years

After being in the moving picture business for the past 10 years at Melfort, Sask., Thomas J. Assaly, proprietor of the Grand Theatre there, is disposing of his interests and is moving to Eastern Canada. The Grand Theatre, which he built in 1919, has 500 seats and is of brick and tile construction, the equipment including two Powers 6B motor-driven projection machines.

Texas State Comptroller Incorporates Film Unit

State Comptroller Lon A. Smith of Austin and Mrs. Bess Strong of Dallas are among the incorporators of the Blue Bonnet Motion Picture Products, Inc., Texas, with a capital stock of $20,000, which has been granted a charter. Headquarters will be maintained in Dallas. Manufacture, production and marketing of Texas motion picture films is the purpose of the company. R. A. Buford of Austin is the third incorporator.

Mrs. Strong has written several scenarios which will be produced by the new company. The company will erect a studio in Dallas to be used for indoor scenes, although most of the sets will be in natural surroundings, Mrs. Strong said.

Berinstein Will Filed

Noted New York Exhibitor Left Estate of About $700,000

William Berinstein, one of the best known exhibitors in New York State, whose death occurred a few weeks ago, left an estate of approximately $700,000, according to a will which has been offered for probate. The will specifically provides that there shall be no division of the estate for a period of eighteen years, but there is a yearly allowance left to each of the four children. The business will continue under the name of the Estate of William Berinstein, with George Roberts remaining as manager of the circuit and buying for the various houses. Mr. Berinstein was for many years a resident of Albany, first owning the Hudson and Colonial theatres, each of which proved exceptional money-makers, and then adding from time to time theatres in Troy, Schenectady, Elmira and Newburgh. Mr. Berinstein removed to New York from Albany a year or so ago.

Arbitration Is Short Cut to Satisfaction

The motion picture industry, a pioneer in the matter of arbitration, is bound to point the way for a tremendous saving of time and money in all other lines of industry, according to the prediction made by Judge Moses Grossman, president of the National Arbitration Board, in a recent address before Milwaukee exhibitors and exchange men.

"The time is not long distant when other branches of industry will follow the example of the motion picture men and submit all of their tangles to arbitration," the judge declared. "There are two ways to handle disputes. One is by litigation which involves great waste of time and entails enormous costs. The other is by arbitration, and, as motion picture men have found, results in saving of time and money."

Minneapolis New Lyceum Bills Dancing as Part of Program

THE New Lyceum Theatre, remodeled at a cost of $500,000 from the Minneapolis Auditorium, opened as a first-run picture theatre in that city last week under the management of Clinton & Meyers. Marshall Neilan's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" was the opening attraction. The Lyceum is the home of Metro-Goldwyn pictures in Minneapolis.

The opening of this playhouse marks the entrance of Clinton & Meyers into the Twin Cities amusement field. James B. Clinton and Charles P. Meyers are prominent exhibitors with large theatre holdings in northern Minnesota, operating the Lyceum, Strand, Doric, Star and Sunbeam theatres in Duluth, the Lyceum in Brainerd, the Lyceum and Rex theatres in Virginia, the Palm in Two Harbors, and the Orpheum in Proctor. They are interested in a large number of real estate properties aside from their motion picture interests. Len S. Brown is manager of the Lyceum. The symphony orchestra of twenty-five musicians is under the direction of E. Joseph Shadwick, assistant concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

An unusual feature of the remodeled theatre is a large ballroom on the second floor of the building which is open to Lyceum patrons for dancing, with music by a separate dance orchestra. The ballroom dancing is a regular feature of the Lyceum entertainment in conjunction with the regular motion picture programs.

The theatre has been in the process of reconstruction for months, and now is one of the most beautiful playhouses to be found anywhere in the Northwest. A massive marquise extending over the sidewalk has been erected above the main entrances. The theatre is situated at Eleventh street and Nicollet avenue.

Said to exceed even Chicago's largest stage, is the Lyceum's stage. The proscenium opening alone is 57 feet in width, and the height from floor to gridiron is 90 feet. Other dimensions are in equal proportion, making it possible for the theatre to present the most pretentious stage spectacles.

Another feature of the service given Lyceum patrons is the Lyceum's free automobile parking space directly opposite the theatre, with an attendant in charge at all hours.

Washington Convention

Big Plans Announced for Exhibitor Meet at Seattle, Nov. 11-12

The second annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington takes place November 11-12 in Seattle. The convention opens in the Modern Woodmen's Hall, 1929½ Third avenue. Speakers have not yet been announced.

Two proposed amendments of by-laws have been suggested as follows: Article 2, Section 6 of by-laws, reads as follows:

Nominations for trustees shall be by petition only, each petition to be signed by three members, except that nominations for trustees elected at the meeting of November 7 and 8, 1923, may be made orally on the floor by any member attending said meeting on said date. Said petitions shall be filed with the secretary at least one month before the meeting of the corporation at which the election is to occur, and it shall be the duty of the secretary to mail a list of the said nominees, together with the names of the proponents thereof, to each member of the corporation; said list to be mailed at the time of mailing the notice of the annual meeting and the election of trustees.

Proposed amendment:

Nominations for trustees shall be made orally on the floor by any member attending said meeting on said date.

Many important subjects will be considered at the convention; some of which are: Non-theatrical institutions showing pictures in competition with theatres; block booking; present contract system; music tax; ways and means of financing; and many others.

The Calhoun Hotel, conveniently near the convention hall and the association office, has been designated as the Convention Hotel.

Committees in charge of the Theatrical Pot Pourri to be held the night of the 11th, beginning at eleven o'clock, are: Charles W. McKee, Heilig; E. C. Bostick, Pantages, vaudeville and music; LeRoy Johnson, Liberty; John Hamrick, Blue Mouse, pictures; John Hamrick, chairman of advertising committee, who is understood to have some nifty ideas that will be carried out with the aid of such experts as Vic Gauntlett, J. Willis Sayre and Eddie Rivers.

Balaban-Katz Deal

Balaban-Katz have leased for twenty-five years a 3,500-seat theatre to be erected on Howard Avenue north side city limits of Chicago. Work will start January first on this building.

REAPPOINTED TO FIRST NATIONAL POST IN VANCOUVER

W. H. Mitchell has been appointed its branch manager in Vancouver by First National Pictures, in place of S. J. Coffland, resigned. Mitchell was manager of the Vancouver branch for First National in 1916 and has since been manager in Calgary and Winnipeg. At the time of his reassignment to Vancouver he was assistant to Louis Bache, the company's district manager for Canada.

F. P. Canadian Corp. Earnings Up 15%; Gets 10 Extra Houses

THE number of moving picture theatres in Canada under the control of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, Toronto, has been increased by 10 since the publication recently of the annual financial statement of the company for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1924. This announcement was made by N. L. Nathanson, Toronto, managing director of the company, at the annual general meeting of shareholders which was held at the head office of the corporation on October 31.

Nathanson stated that nine of the additional houses were located in Montreal, Quebec, and that they had been operated by the Independent and United Amusements, Limited, Montreal. The tenth theatre was one which had been acquired at Welland, Ontario. With the securing of these houses, Famous Players is now operating no less than 82 of the leading moving picture theatres of the Dominion.

Nathanson also made an interim financial report for eight weeks of the new fiscal year, covering September and October, which showed that earnings had made an approximate increase of 15 per cent over the corresponding eight weeks of 1923.

Practically all of the 1,700 shareholders of Famous Players Canadian Corp., were represented at the annual meeting and it was pointed out that 95 per cent of these shareholders were residents of the Dominion. The retiring board of directors were re-elected for the fiscal year of 1924-25 without change.

The theatres at Montreal which have been acquired included the Plaza, Papineau, Belmont, Corona, Moulin Rouge, Regent, Strand, and Mount Royal, the majority of which are new buildings.

Glowing reports were presented at the annual meeting of shareholders of the Eastern Theatres, Limited, Toronto, operating a chain of moving picture theatres in Ontario cities as a subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, the meeting taking place on October 30 in the company's head office.

General improvement was shown by the Eastern Theatres during the past year, according to the statements of President J. P. Bickell of Toronto. Operating expenses had been reduced while, at the same time, gross revenue had shown a steady improvement. Bickell pointed out that the company had been able to wipe out bank loans amounting to $100,000 during the year just closed. Eastern Theatres was established before the organization of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

The board of directors was re-elected without change, the board consisting of President J. P. Bickell, N. L. Nathanson, J. B. Tudhope, D. L. White, Alfred Rogers, W. J. Sheppard and F. E. Maulson, practically all of whom are prominent Toronto business figures.

Unique for South

Ella B. Moore, a negro woman, has spent $125,000 on a theatre in Dallas for her race. It is located at 426 North Central Avenue and bears her full name —the Ella B. Moore Theatre. Pictures, vaudeville and legitimate attractions, with an all-colored cast for the offerings. During opening week special reservations were made for white people, who attended by the hundreds. It has become quite a fad in Dallas, in fact, for a bunch of folk to wind up an eveing's entertainment by a trip through the colored section.

Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club Ball Certainly One Wonderful Night

WHEN the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club at its annual ball held November 1 at the Hotel Astor, set out to signalize the addition of the Goldwyn forces to their membership by eclipsing the wonderful record made by the Loew-Metro Club ball last season, they certainly had to go some. Did they do it? They certainly did.

Everyone thought that last year's affair just about reached the top, but this pushed up several pegs higher, and justified the reputation this club has established of giving just about the most elaborate amusement event of a Broadway season.

The Grand Ball-Room was packed with distinguished guests including many prominent persons from other companies and the theatrical world. There were at least 2,000 persons present.

The program of the evening included dancing of course, and an excellent supper, but the big smash was the "entertainment." There were acts, acts and more acts, it was a glorified combination of a Broadway revue and vaudeville, with numbers from the big vaudeville houses and practically every musical show on Broadway including Chester Frederick's and his Flaskettes, the Bouncing Bozos and the big Tondeloya number from Earl Carroll's Vanities, The Cowboy number and Ann Pennington, Evelyn Law and the full orchestra from Zeigfeld's Follies, Harry White and Alice Manning from Artists and Models, the big spectacular Totem Pole number from Rose Marie with about sixty in the chorus, Moran and Mack from the Greenwich Village Follies, Lester Allen and Tom Patricola from Scandals in an imitation of Ann Pennington and Brook Johns, Fay Marbe, Baby Sylvia Froos, Margurite Finlay, Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, Ben Bernie and his Orchestra, George Olsen and his orchestra, Ted Lewis and his orchestra and still more acts, ensemble numbers and orchestras.

The crowd did not begin to gather in large numbers until about 10.30. Dancing occupied the undivided attention until 11.30 when it had to divide honors with the call for supper answered by a crowd that taxed the capacity of even the Astor's several huge dining rooms. About 1 a. m. the "show" commenced and continued without interruption, excellently handled by Ned Wayburn, until 3.30 when an intermission was declared to allow those who missed the first call to dine. Around 5 a. m. things got under way again with Ted Lewis and his band and still other numbers, making the line on the program "breakfast will be served at 7" no idle jest.

N. T. Granlund, the popular broadcaster from station WHN acted as master of ceremonies, being relieved by Lester Allen. Microphones were installed on the stage and a broadcasting set and announcer at one side, and the entire performance was "radiod" over WHN.

There were a long list of notables and stars present, one of the most popular with the crowd being Jack Dempsey who was introduced from a box.

It certainly was "some" night.

Bomb Used in Third Attempt to Wreck St. Louis Theatre

A THIRD attempt to wreck the Roosevelt Theatre, 810 North Leftingwell avenue, St. Louis, was made early on October 28, when unknown parties tossed a stick of dynamite on the sidewalk in front of the picture house. The front windows were shattered, the canopy wrecked and a large hole torn in the concrete sidewalk. Nick Zotos, proprietor of the theatre, which caters to negroes has been unable to give the police a clew to the attacks.

Three weeks ago early one morning several bullets were fired through the front window of the show house.

Early on the morning of October 25 while making his rounds the patrolman on the beat found a rear window of the theatre had been broken open. He investigated and discovered an unexploded dynamite bomb consisting of several 14-in. sticks of dynamite wrapped with electric tape. A fuse had burned within an inch of the dynamite.

The police are investigating several clews. One is that white persons may have resented the replacement of white operators with negroes.

ARTHUR RIPLEY IS MADE SCENARIO EDITOR FOR SENNETT

According to an announcement made this week by Mack Sennett, Arthur Ripley has been appointed scenario editor of the Sennett Studios. Ripley will take charge of the scenario and "gag" departments, and with Sennett will supervise the preparation of stories for Ben Turpin, Harry Langdon, Ralph Graves, and the other comedians on the lot.

Tear Gas Kills Show

Tears flowed at a picture show in the Helma Theatre, Etna, Pa., on a recent Saturday night, when a tear-gas mace carried by Special Officer Fred Reits was discharged as the officer rose from his seat. As the pungent gas permeated the theatre, the audience began to weep. It was difficult to follow the picture on the screen and the spectators began wending their way to the exits. Within a few minutes the theatre was empty.

Pathe and du Pont Form $1,200,000 Corporation

The duPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Corporation has been formed by Pathe Exchange, Inc. of New York, E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. of Wilmington, Del., and Pathe Cinema Societe Anonyme of Paris, France. This new corporation has been incorporated at Dover, Del., for the manufacture and sale of cinema film and has an authorized capital of $1,200,000 8 p. c. cumulative preferred stock and 10,000 shares of common stock of no par value.

It will commence business with a fully equipped manufacturing plant and research laboratory located at Parlin, N. J. where manufacture of cinema film has been developed and carried on for several years by the duPont Company. The sales office will be located in the Woolworth Building, 233 Broadway, New York.

Commission Continues

Uneventful Sessions in Paramount Inquiry This Week

Due to the holiday, Election day, the Federal Trade Commission hearing into Famous Players-Lasky affairs, which was resumed last week in New York City, was adjourned several days this week.

On October 31 Emanuel Mandelbaum of Cleveland told of his experiences in 1907 when he opened up the Columbia Film Exchange. In 1916 he came to New York and built the Stillman which a year later was taken over by Marcus Lowe, he said. He stated that he had originally negotiated with Adolph Zukor on this matter but the latter withdrew in favor of Loew. That year, he testified, he aided in the incorporation of First National Exhibitors Circuit Company.

The hearing on November 1 was devoted mostly to the taking of Charles McDonald's testimony. McDonald is the house manager of B. S. Moss' Broadway, New York. His testimony had to do mostly with theatrical conditions on Broadway. He expressed a preference for good second-runs; stated that his house believed in first-run exploitation and that it invested weekly from $500 to $1,000 in newspaper advertising.

Before taking the temporary adjournment the testimony was also taken of E. M. Clark, secretary of the Saenger Amusement Company: Lee Ochs, owner of the Piccadilly Theatre and William A. Sherman formerly with the now defunct First National Exhibitors Company of Ohio. Their testimony afforded but a part of the routine necessary to complete the record of the case, and thus was of a strictly formal and uneventful nature.

Publisher Lewis Dies

William E. Lewis, president of the Lewis Publishing Company, which publishes the Morning Telegraph, succumbed at his home at Great Neck, L. I., on October 28 to an illness of over a year.

Mr. Lewis was a journalist of note. Born in Cleveland, he became a lawyer in 1890 but abandoned that profession shortly after being admitted to the bar for a newspaper career. He is survived by his wife and two children and a brother and sister.

Independent Producers Should Have Own Outlet, Says Chadwick

INDEPENDENT producers should have their own outlet for their own pictures, urged I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, at the first formal session of that organization in New York on October 30. The keynote of Chadwick's address, that the independents need a leader like Will Mays, was published in last week's issue of Moving Picture World.

As to the outlet, Chadwick laid stress upon the open market, in which, he said, lies the artistic advancement of the motion picture.

Existing combinations were compared by the speaker to European nations combining to maintain "the balance of power" and, as the result, being led into warfare.

"Balaban & Katz, of Chicago, have an enterprise with a huge investment and when they see an encroaching company coming into the field they go out from their city and get more strength, which gives them a chance to talk to other producers and distributors."

He continued: "If we really think we can show the independent exhibitor a way out, he will take it. The independent exhibitor doesn't want to be a night watchman in his own theatre. It is about time these exhibitors were permitted—indeed even the largest exhibitors were permitted to buy pictures not with a threat of what might happen if they didn't. Maybe it is time we had some new first runs. We are not interested altogether with the 400—the class theatres—but with the 16,000 of mass theatres, the hoipoloi of the exhibiting field."

Chadwick urged that every one present give the subject discussed considerable thought and suggested that at a meeting to be held within the next fortnight, that they be prepared to discuss the matter and to support the idea financially as well as otherwise.

New Mid-West Circuit

Interstate, of 75 Theatres, Seen as Serious Balaban-Katz Rival

The Interstate Theatres, Inc., of Chicago has just been granted a charter. This corporation, reported to be sponsored by Lubliner & Trinz, is said to align 75 theatres in Chicago, Northern Indiana and Illinois. In this respect comes the news that the company will handle bookings from a central office.

The directors of the new corporation are: Harry Lubliner and Emil Stern of Lubliner & Trinz; James Costan of the Sixty-third Street Theatres, Chicago; Leo Spitz, a lawyer, and V. T. Lynch, who has large theatre interests.

Already the inception of this new corporation has aroused exhibitor interest all over the country, especially in the mid-west territory. This is centered in just how largely and to what extent the Interstate will prove itself to be as an opponent of the Balaban & Katz group.

Score 1 for T. O. C. C.

According to Charles O'Reilly, chairman of the T. O. C. C., Warner Brothers have notified him that they will abide by the uniform contract as it effects the jurisdiction of that exhibitor organization. The theatre owners' committee is now working on the matter of prohibiting all clauses except those agreed upon in the contract form as decided by the Hays office and the T. O. C. C.

Must Have Play Dates

Universal Sales Organization So Instructed at 3 Sessions

The sales organization of the Universal Pictures Corporation has just completed its series of three sales conferences, two in New York and one in Chicago. As a result, every Universal exchange manager in the United States and Canada is perfectly set on Universal new spring product.

The meetings afforded the first opportunity the various sales managers have had to get acquainted with their new superiors, the Universal sales directorate, consisting of Ned Marin, Ned Depinet and Jules Levy.

The assembled Universal managers were emphatically instructed not to sell these pictures without play-dates. All contracts to be accepted, by Universal, must have specific dates for all pictures, or a definite playing arrangement, with commencing and expiration dates. It was announced during the meetings that efficiency measures had been instituted in the supply department, so as to give 100 per cent. service on accessories.

Silence Signifies Wisconsin Women's Disapproval of Film

KILL undesirable pictures with silence. That is the new policy of Wisconsin clubwomen, according to information received at the headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin.

According to Fred Seegert, president of that exhibitor organization, thousands of members of the Federated Women's Clubs of the state are making a practice of calling up their friends and recommending good pictures to them and their families, but instead of attacking unfavorable pictures as they have in the past, these women have decided to ignore them entirely. They feel, it is said, that lack of an endorsement from them will lead to a falling off at the box office which will ultimately guide exhibitors in selection of pictures.

"The women by these new tactics are doing just exactly what we have sought for years to have them do," declared Mr. Seegert. "We are ready to co-operate with them to the fullest extent and feel that what they are doing is a big step toward making producers give us the proper sort of pictures.

"By calling up their friends and urging them in turn to call up others, the clubwomen are creating an invaluable advertising medium for motion pictures."

Motion pictures which depict modern youth in riotous and dissipated scenes were attacked by Mrs. A. H. Shoemaker, chairman of the federation's committee on better films, at the last state gathering of the women's clubs held recently.

"Club women must take a stand against pictures which violate American ideals of sanctity of the home and the marriage relation," she declared. "We want films which present real life, but we do not want them to give a disgusting presentation of a sex problem.

"Even if a film has a so-called moral ending, we resent being dragged through the horrors of scenes depicting marriage triangles, carousals and dissipation."

Administrative Problem

Three Owners of a Toronto House Want Assessment Divided

Quite an administrative problem has developed with the municipality of Toronto, Ontario, in the application of the three owners of the Tivoli Theatre, Victoria and Richmond Streets, Toronto, for the dividing of the civic assessment on the property into three separate blocks of equal amount.

With this application came the information that the three owners of the structure and site each hold a one-third parcel of the building as a distinct entity, the frontage of the theatre block being divided into three sections, it is stated. The civic assessment commissioner has decided that the theatre is all one building and, as such, should only have one assessment for taxation purposes, but the three-in-one owners want it otherwise.

The Tivoli was formerly the head theatre of Allen Theatres, Limited, and the structure was leased from the three property holders by the Allens. It is now being operated by W. J. Stewart, formerly the manager of the Rialto Theatre, Toronto, and for some years prominent in film exchange circles, under an arrangement with the three owners.

M.P.D.A. Not to Produce

At a special meeting of the Motion Pictures Directors Association held on the evening of November 3 it was unanimously decided that the association go on record not to produce pictures. This is announced by George L. Sargent, secretary, executive council, Motion Pictures Directors Association.

Franchise Membership

Novel Policy for Potential Distributing Unit in Michigan

With a membership of 68 exhibitors in various sections of Michigan and Detroit already pledged, a new state rights distributing firm, working on a franchise membership plan, is nearly ready to start functioning.

This plan developed by Lloyd Hammond, a veteran local exhibitor and exchangeman, entails the purchase of feature pictures on an outright basis for the state, with the profits to be divided among members of the company. It will be known as the Wolverine Film Co.

The total membership of the company has been set at 150 and this figure will be reached within a few weeks, Hammond confidently asserts. Each exhibitor joining the organization is obligated to pay a $200 entrance fee. This will give him a principal franchise and entitles him to play the pictures purchased by the company's board of directors at a nominal rental fee.

For exhibitors in smaller Michigan cities and towns, where an outlay of $200 might prove burdensome, a system of sub-franchises has been developed. These sub-franchises are being sold for $100.

No effort will be made to secure product until the membership is complete, according to the announcement.

Weiss Bros. to Appeal

An appeal to a higher court will be made by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation as a result of a legal decision rendered against them in favor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the matter of billing, advertising and exhibition of "Moses and the Ten Commandments" in connection with the distribution of "After Six Days."

Royalty in Films

Prince Serge Mdivani, nephew of the former Czar Nicholas of Russia, has been cast for the St. Regis Pictures production now being made under the direction of E. H. Griffith, from the magazine story "The Ultimate Good" by J. C. Brownell. The Prince has just arrived in America from France.

MERCHANTS AND EXHIBITORS' SERVICE STARTED BY BADER

A new service for merchants and exhibitors has been formed by Dave Bader. Bader's new venture, with headquarters at 723-7th avenue, N. Y. C., is known as the Merchants and Exhibitors Service. The nature of this enterprise is along the lines of national tie-ups, applied locally. Arrangements are being made by Bader to have offices for his service in all key-cities.

Loew Profits for 1924 Total $2,949,052.52

The current statement for Loew's, Inc., and its subsidiary companies shows for the year of August 31, 1924, a net profit of $2,949,052.52. This is $533,564 in excess of Loew interests' profits of the preceding year and $1,148,502 more than was realized in 1921.

For 1924 the statement reveals the current assets total $13,057,116.81.

Under liabilities the summation is listed as $49,913,111.18.

Up to Individual

Motion Picture Day in Wisconsin Not Promoted by State Unit

Observance of Motion Picture Day in the Badger State will be left to the discretion of each individual exhibitor, instead of being arranged by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, it has been announced by Fred Seegert, president of the organization.

"Each exhibitor probably has his own ideas worked out for the day and I believe that a definite program worked out by our organization is therefore unnecessary," said Mr. Seegert.

George Fischer, chairman of the public service board of the exhibitor organization in the state, likewise has made no special plans to bring the day to the attention of the movie-going public.

The Wisconsin organization has at various times urged a National Motion Picture Week, taking the stand that little good can be accomplished in a single day.

Drafts War Canine

Vitagraph Signs Wolf, Dog Hero of Marne, for Films

Wolf, a war dog from whose neck suspends the Croix de Guerre personally placed there by General Joffre for the canine's "heroic and meritorious service rendered under fire while wounded," has been drafted into the films by Vitagraph, according to an announcement by that company. Wolf's first job in the cinema will be in the title role of James Oliver Curwood's "Baree, Son of Kazan."

The dog is German and is credited with understanding commands in that language, also in English and French. During the war he first "served" with the Germans, was captured by the French for whom he rendered the singular service in carrying a message from dugout to trench and finally has become the property of an Englishman.

THIEVES TURN VANDALS IN WINNIPEG THEATRE

A determined but unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the safe of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, formerly the Allen Theatre, on a recent Sunday. The thieves tried to blow open the doors of the safe and then attempted to force the strongbox with heavy tools. Nothing was secured but the furniture of the theatre office was badly wrecked. The proprietor of the Metropolitan is Walter F. Davis.

"HOT WATER" TAKES LOS ANGELES RECORD; $41,800 AT METROPOLITAN

Lloyd Picture Betters All Previous Figures for City Without Extra Performances—Other Houses 20 to 45 Per Cent. Below Totals of Same Period of a Year Ago

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

It seemed as though business last week centered in one spot—the Metropolitan. Starting off with a record-breaking Saturday and playing to $8,526 and to $8,936 on Sunday, all existing records set by Julian Eltinge several weeks ago, when the house rolled up a $40,000 gross, were broken by the latest Harold Lloyd picture, "In Hot Water." No extra shows were given nor was the program shortened to handle the mobs. Monday the picture settled down to a little over a $5,000 a day pace.

The exploitation and advertising campaign which the Metropolitan used for this Lloyd picture was the best ever heard of here for any picture. The Metropolitan publicity department, considered a crackerjack organization, worked on all 12 cylinders and did not miss a trick.

Managing Director Kaufman and his crew did the feat of breaking the record without outside aid in exploitation, usually done by the studio men for pictures of this sort. The gross which the picture rolled up is the record for Los Angeles, and warrants the Metropolitan in holding this picture for a second week, which is also establishing a precedent for this house, as in the past, regardless of the business, a picture has been held here only for one week.

Others Not So Good

The balance of the picture houses did not fare so well. All seemed to get a fair Saturday and Sunday start, but from Monday on the returns sagged considerably, with the gross, compared to the same period for last year, in all falling from 20 to 45 per cent. The Egyptian, with "The Thief of Bagdad," in its 15th week, and Loew's, with "Wine of Youth" as the screen attraction and a feeble Fanchon and Marco presentation on the stage ran neck and neck for second.

"Feet of Clay" at the Million Dollar drew its last breath Sunday night after playing to fair returns. "Abraham Lincoln" just could not hit it at the Criterion, and will be withdrawn at the end of next week. Another picture of this type, "Barbar Frietchie," at Miller's last week after a similar length of time at the California, suffered the same fate. Thomas H. Ince spent $10,000 besides the house allotment to get this one over during the two weeks at these houses, but found his efforts futile.

"Cornered," in for a week at the California, did around the average business.

Estimates for Last Week

California — "Cornered" (Warner Bros.) (2,000; 25-85). Did Fairly well opening days, but skidded beginning Monday. $9,000.

Million Dollar — "Feet of Clay" (Paramount) (2,200; 25-85). Lasted as long as could reasonably be expected and finished run. $9,900.

Metropolitan—"In Hot Water" (Pathe) (3,700; 25-65). Got off to flying start by crashing daily receipt records. Kept up pace throughout first week here by reaching high mark and house record of $41,800.

George E. Planck Gets Fine Results from Poster Contest on The Sea Hawk

ALTHOUGH First National does not carry many exploitation men in its exchanges, it has some good pinch hitters, one of the best being George E. Planck, of the accessories department of the Kansas City exchange. Generally he is too busy to write about his exploits, but a series of letters finally brought out his promise to tell of some of his stunts, and we offer his big stunt for The Sea Hawk in Independence, Kans., at the Strand Theatre. It's old stuff, but we like the way Planck handled the selling, and his procedure may help others to land a difficult proposition. It was a tough sale in Independence, but through the use of the right argument it was put over and some unusually good drawings were added to the publicity that will come from this stunt whenever it is tried.

Planck was the original editor of The Close-Up, issued by Paramount in the interest of its theatres department, and he has had the advantage of association with Lem L. Stewart. He knows that to be good a stunt must not only sell the picture but have an excuse for being, so he sold on the merit of the idea.

The Superintendent of Schools was open to conviction, but he was rather skeptical, and the best he would do was to put the matter up to the art teacher in the Junior and Senior High Schools.

That was the way to the open door, for Planck offered the suggestion that here was a scheme to interest the pupils in their work; to show them that there was some other side to their studies than the production of paintings for the home.

Most of the students were interested in motion pictures. To draw posters for a theatre was more interesting than painting a picture of two apples and a banana. It was something of real use, with the suggestion of a path to a vocation.

The posters were required to be on paper 14x22. This paper was furnished by the school. Any other size would have required the purchase of the paper by the pupil and would have reduced the interest in the scheme.

The Strand supplied a large board with 22 stills, two one sheets and a window card. The former were to suggest action scenes, while the posters gave a general idea of colors and general layout.

The posters were to be entered at the theatre, and as soon as they were received they were placed on display in the lobby. Through the co-operation of the newspapers local interest was aroused in the contest and people actually came to the theatre to look at the poster display. They came in droves.

There were 54 entries and a cut on this page shows the eight best. There is not one of them but could serve for pictorial advertisement and several of them possess unusual strength. Work this idea early and you can get an ample supply of better than usual window cards that are certain to find a welcome.

This cost the Strand six dollars and some passes given as prizes. It was largely instrumental in holding business for six days against four days of The Covered Wagon, a political rally with William Allen White, and a local entertainment. This in a town of 16,000.

The campaign is interesting, but the high light is the argument used in landing the stunt on the instructor. It is the best argument to use in most instances. It proves to the pupils that there is a practical side to art.

"Selling the Picture to the Public," Continued on Pages 244-5-6-7-8-9-50-51.

Repeating

The Welcome Stranger stunt worked in Omaha in connection with the Chamber of Commerce on the Producers Distributing Corporation picture of that title has been repeated in San Francisco, where it played the Granada Theatre.

Several street banners were used and taxis carried orange strips with the same legend. Smaller strips with the same lettering and rubber stamped on the back "Take one" were placed in cigar stores and similar places, and while some were merely read and then put down, most of them were taken away to be posted on offices and homes.

Malaney Is First

Apparently M. A. Malaney, of the Loew theatres, Cleveland, is the first to break into the newspapers with one of the popular cross word puzzles. He did it not once, but twice, displacing the newspaper's regular mat service with his specially made puzzles on Dorothy Vernon and Janice Meredith. One seems to conform to the rules on construction, but the other is not symmetrical. Both are better laid out for definition than some of the regulars.

With the present craze for the cross words, this form of publicity probably reaches more persons than could be made interested in any other one approach.

We believe that Goldwyn is preparing to distribute the Janice Meredith puzzle; at least Mr. Malaney informs us that they obtained the mat, and doubtless it will be made available for general use.

Vitagraph has some puzzles prepared, but they all will have to run second to the Cleveland hustler. He went and did it while the others were still thinking.

McVickers reports the same idea but did not get the jump on Malaney.

A First National Release

SOME OF THE RESULTS OF A SCHOOL POSTER CONTEST

George E. Planck, of the Kansas City First National Exchange, is in charge of the accessories department, but he hustles some real exploitation to oblige his customers. This stunt was worked in Independence, Kans., for the Strand Theatre.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

California Theatre Begins Eighth Year of Existence

The seventh anniversary of the opening of the California Theatre, San Francisco, was observed during the first week of November with one of the strongest programs ever put on in this house. The feature film attraction, "The Lover of Camille," was a particularly appropriate one, the theme being one of the theatre, with a love story interwoven. Another feature was a single-reel production made especially for the occasion, entitled "Them Were the Days," recalling incidents of the show world and San Francisco theatres from the days of gold down to the present. James Madison, writer of many comedy acts, assisted members of the California staff in making this reel true to life.

Max Dolin, director of the California Theatre orchestra, wrote a march, "California," for the occasion and dedicated this to patrons of the house. The week also marked the initial presentation of the "California Close-up," a miniature magazine which chronicles the coming attractions and dispenses interesting picture gossip, in addition to giving the program for the current week. All members of the staff, from Manager Nat Holt and Director of Publicity Charles Kurtzmann down to the ushers, worked hard to make Anniversary Week a success and had the whole city talking about the California Theatre.

The Golden State Theatre Company, San Francisco, has had plans prepared by Architect Mark Jorgensen for a 1,000-seat house to be erected at Eighteenth street and Park boulevard, Oakland. Bids for its construction will be invited at once. The estimated cost is $90,000.

James Beatty, who conducts several theatres at San Jose, Cal., has taken over the Casino Theatre, San Francisco, and will offer vaudeville and moving pictures.

Maurice F. Lowery, for some time manager of the U. C. and Berkeley theatres, Berkeley, Cal., conducted under the direction of West Coast Theatres, Inc., is no longer connected with these houses.

M. Klein, who is interested in several theatres in the North Beach district, San Francisco, is confined to a local hospital with a painful attack of boils.

George Roy, for many years an exhibitor of Burlingame, Cal., but of late with All Star Features Distributors, San Francisco, has arranged to open a picture theatre at Reno, Nev.

M. Blumenfeld is having plans prepared for a picture theatre to be erected at Mill Valley, Cal. He has organized a million dollar corporation and is building up a chain of theatres.

Charles W. Heyer has arranged to erect a picture theatre seating 1,200 at Hayward.

Recent visitors on San Francisco's Film Row have included Mattie Shiebley, Star Theatre, Reedley, Cal.; Sam Gordon, Napa, Cal.; J. Ryan, Roseville, Cal.; Sam Levin, Sacramento, Cal.; Nick Turner, Stockton, Cal., and Walter Jacobs, Auburn.

A Call for Aid

Joseph Stern, operating a circuit of New Jersey theatres, expects a Sunday closing battle within the near future and seeks all information and court decisions which may aid him in keeping his houses open on the seventh day. He particularly wants favorable decisions to present as precedents when the matter comes up in the courts. Moving Picture World and Mr. Stern will appreciate any help that readers of this department may give him. Address him immediately as follows: Joseph Stern's Theatrical Enterprises, 805 Ordway Building, 207 Market street, Newark, N. J.

Seattle

A protest against the proposed ordinance reducing the membership of the Board of Theatre Censors from fifteen to three, with a paid secretary, was presented to the city council on October 27 by the Roosevelt Parent-Teachers Association. Although the legislation has never been considered by the council, no ordinance having been introduced, the council has been deluged with protests against the plan, the charge being made that the purpose was to provide somebody with a salaried job. A schedule for fees for review of all films proposed for exhibition was a feature of the bill. The Washington Better Films Association adopted resolutions against the ordinance. Other civic bodies followed promptly. Mystery surrounds the origin of the measure. It was not drafted at the City Hall.

Construction has been begun on a new Community Theatre for Queen Anne Hill, Seattle. It is being built by L. R. Stradley, a resident of the Hill for twenty-one years. It will be completed shortly after the first of the year.

"The Sea Hawk" has shattered all previous records at the Seattle Strand, where it is being staged in a lavish manner. Manager Al Finkelstein has a highly effective lobby, with a piratically clad doorman and a staff of pretty "pirettes" as ushers. It is anticipated the picture will hold for a five-week run.

O. B. Hanson has purchased the Rialto in suburban Portland from O. M. Sandblast.

Milwaukee District Attorney Bans Country Store Feature

The Country Store, for many years a weekly feature at numerous outlying houses in Milwaukee and which in many cases has proven a valuable business-getter because of the prizes awarded patrons holding lucky tickets, must be discontinued. That is the edict that has gone forth form the office of the district attorney, who holds that the Country Store idea is a form of lottery and is therefore illegal.

As a result of a letter sent by the prosecutor to A. L. Guentberg, president, Member of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Milwaukee are expected to adopt a resolution at their next meeting putting a ban on the practice.

The Saxe Amusement Enterprises, controlling a chain of twenty-three houses in Wisconsin, is finding it hard to get a permanent publicity director. In three weeks since the resignation of Jack Cuddy, who held the position for half a year, two publicity directors have come and gone and now a third is about to assume the duties.

What is the best movie weather? That is the question which Fred Seegert, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, is trying to answer following reports to his office from members throughout the state who are springing a new one in the way of weather alibis for slack business.

Heretofore it has been quite common for exhibitors to complain of weather that was too hot, too cold or too wet, but now, for the first time, complaints are coming in that the weather is too ideal.

Wisconsin this year is being treated to the finest Indian summer it has had in a long time, and exhibitors declare that the public is taking advantage of it to ride in automobiles instead of visiting the movies and way itusually does at this time of the year. That's why many exhibitors are praying for a little snowfall.

Capitalizing on the popularity of radio, Eddie Weisfeldt, director of production, has arranged a Radio Week at Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre featuring an elaborate stage presentation. The stunt is in line with a policy, announced by Weisfeldt upon his return from a visit to New York, of featuring big special weeks as often as possible in addition to his regular program.

Aided by the newly installed scenic department, where all stage settings for Saxe theatres are being made, Weisfeldt has obtained a monster radio "loud speaker" measuring 24 feet in width and 18 feet in height. Out of this horn will step forth various artists whose names have become bywords to radio fans and they will go through their numbers on the stage.

For the week following, Weisfeldt has scheduled a Syncopation Week featuring songs, dances and costumes of 1890 and 1924. Models will strut about the stage in everything from bathing suits to fur coats, fashioned according to the styles of both periods.

Leo A. Landau appears to be the champion fisherman of Milwaukee's film colony. Mr. Landau, who directs the Garden and Alhambra theatres, two of Milwaukee's downtown houses, recently returned to the city from Minocqua, Wis., with three muskies, the smallest weighing eighteen pounds and the largest weighing twenty-five.

The wife of Stan Brown, manager of Saxe's Strand in Milwaukee, is recovering from an appendicitis operation.

"Yolanda," after bringing the biggest business of the entire season to Leo Landau's Garden Theatre in Milwaukee, has just closed a two weeks' run. The picture drew as well the second week as it did the first, mainly because of the publicity given it in the Hearst newspaper in the city. On the second Saturday night it attracted a crowd that was forced to stand through a portion of the last show of the evening.

Milwaukee is laying claims to the largest upright theatre sign in the country as a result of the erection of a new sign by the Palace Orpheum, which is eighty-five feet in height. The largest Milwaukee sign previously was the one on Saxe's Wisconsin, directly across from the Palace, which measured approximately seventy-two feet. With both these immense electric signs at the same corner, Grand avenue and Sixth street has become the center of Milwaukee's White Way.

Louis C. Shimon, assistant manager of the new Milwaukee Theatre, is getting excellent results through a system of coaching his usher staff. One of a series of bulletins he gives them reads:

"You start the evening at the Milwaukee Theatre with a smile and a sincere desire to please. The patron coming in contact with you thereby gets the benefit of courteous treatment and efficient service. You've won a friend for the Milwaukee Theatre—a booster. It's just instances like this that make a theatre popular and you a success. So start the evening feeling fine—smile; you're bound to win!"

Nebraska

J. J. O'Hara of the Community Theatre, Elgin, Neb., brought his daughter to Omaha recently for an operation for appendicitis.

Ed Johnson and John Preston are the new owners of the Crescent Theatre, Audubon, Ia.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who were in Omaha recently calling on local exchanges were: Joe Jicha, Center Theatre, Milligan, Ia.; E. Means, Cozy Theatre, Sidney, Ia.; M. B. Conn, Lyric, Sutton, Neb.

Oklahoma

French Vis has taken over the Palace at Blackwell, Okla.

Manager Pat McGee of the Criterion at Oklahoma City is installing a new $50,000 organ. Pat says that future strikes and later troubles along musical lines for the Criterion have been solved for all time.

Seven New Members Sign With M. P. T. O. of Illinois

The organizing work conducted by Joseph Hopp in behalf of Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners is attracting general attention and last week he secured the following new members: E. P. Donahue, Opera House, Wilmington; Hal Opperman, Crescent Theatre, Pontiac; J. G. Gesell, Front Street Theatre, Bloomington; Walter Taylor, Rialto Theatre, Bloomington; C. E. Morrow, Morrow's Theatre, Decatur; P. W. Gebhardt, Alhambra Theatre, Decatur; E. L. Harris, Columbia Theatre, Peoria.

Mr. Hopp says that in Illinois, north of Springfield and outside of Chicago, there are about 440 theatres devoted to motion pictures. This includes small towns and villages showing only from one to three nights weekly and does not include non-theatrical places. Mr. Hopp says these 440 places have about 315 ownerships, due to two or more houses being under same owners.

Mrs. Emma Taylor, 67 years old, wife of John Taylor of Los Angeles, theatre owner, was found dead in the women's rest room on a Santa Fe train bound for California at the Polk street depot. Her death is believed to have been caused by heart disease.

The Columbia Theatre at Davenport has settled its musicians' strike. The Federation of Musicians, after being supplanted by a non-union orchestra for a period of five weeks, accepted the original offer made them.

Hal Opperman of Pontiac opened his new Crescent Theatre on October 28 and is showing an exclusive picture program.

Al Sobler, who for three years has been exploitation manager for First National here, resigned last week and is now with the Midwest Circuit in the same capacity and will look after the exploitation for the fifty houses of the circuit.

W. L. Bedell has been made assistant to Henry Stickelmaier, general manager of the Theatres Operating Company of Peoria, Ill.

The boys along Film Row are extending congratulations to Andrew Karzas and his bride, who was Miss Katherine Kavaginis, who returned last week from a honeymoon abroad which included a trip to Greece. Andrew got back in time to attend the corner laying of the new Karzas Theatre that is to go up at Lincoln and Belle Plaine avenue.

Michael and Walter Gerib, managers of the Westville Theatre, have returned from an extended fishing trip and have some big fish stories for their Film Row friends.

Henry A. Schwartz, Harry J. Walther and James Redding have organized the Harding Lawrence Theatre Corporation with a capital of $60,000 to erect and operate the new theatre that is being built at Harding and Lawrence avenue.

Balaban & Katz put over their third anniversary week at the Chicago Theatre with an elaborate presentation of two stage numbers that used thirty people and played to capacity business throughout the week. "The Madonna of the Streets" was the feature picture and the program was one of the finest put on by that live organization this year. It is estimated that over 100,000 people passed through the turnstiles during the week.

The Iris Theatre at Indianola, Iowa, has been taken over by W. H. Eddy, who will operate the house on an exclusive picture policy.

Perry Hoeffler, manager of the Strand Theatre at Fort Madison, put over a good publicity stunt when he had the exchange send "The Sea Hawk" by aeroplane express.

Immediate steps to curb the theatre ticket scalpers in this city were ordered by the city council last week. Alderman Joseph O. Kostner is leading the movement to revoke the licenses of the theatres that permit the scalpers to sell their tickets. This is of interest to moving picture managers who book their pictures into theatres here and charge the regular legitimate theatre scale of prices.

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago announced last month that it has a membership of 460 picture theatres in this city and Cook County and that it could guarantee 1,000 days' showing of industrial and educational films that do not exceed 1,000 feet.

The business men at Nauvoo, Ill., will contribute 2 per cent. of their sales revenue to a fund for the free picture shows during the winter months, in co-operation with the movie houses in the town.

The Broadway Theatre Company of this city has certified an increase in the capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000. The increase will be used to expand the business of the company.

Victor Geisler has resigned as assistant manager of the Calo Theatre on North Clark street to accept the position as manager of the Sterling Theatre at Sterling, Ill.

The Universal Theatres Company have reduced the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $400,000.

FRANCES HOWARD

Stage player signed for title role in Paramount's "The Swan."

The Ascher chain of theatres put over a fine election night tieup with the Chicago Tribune and Lyon and Healy and broadcasted the returns to their patrons during the shows.

W. G. Studevant, formerly with the Hoyburn Theatre at Evanston, Ill., has been selected to manage the new Spencer and Miller theatre that is being built in that city. It is hoped to have the house ready for opening early next year.

Moving picture owners and managers at Danville, Ill., have organized a local association for mutual protection and to handle labor problems.

Will Pearce, well known South Side manager, is now in charge of the Empress Theatre at 6230 South Halsted street. The house

Laronge Circuit, Cleveland, Plans New $250,000 Theatre

Another theatre is soon to be added to the rapidly growing chain of Cleveland playhouses which have been financed and constructed through the efforts of Joseph Laronge. The latest project is to be a $250,000 theatre and commercial building for which plans have already been prepared and which will be constructed on the northerly side of Euclid avenue just west of Ivanhoe Road.

This new playhouse is to be one in a series of modern neighborhood houses contemplated by Mr. Laronge and his associates for the Greater Cleveland territory. The latest of these to be completed is the new Doan Theatre at St. Clair and East 105th street. In addition to the Ivanhoe Square project, another theatre is to be started at once at Detroit and West 117th street. These theatres, while on a smaller scale than the State, Ohio and Stillman theatres constructed through Mr. Laronge, will be in keeping with the larger theatres as to equipment and modern facilities, it is said.

The Ivanhoe Square building will cover the entire Euclid avenue frontage, is to be brick and concrete construction, three stories in height, and will contain four double storerooms on the ground floor, as well as the theatre lobby leading to a 1,100-seat house directly in the rear and connecting with the front building. The second and third floors will contain sixteen modern suites of five-room efficiency. The theatre is to be of the most modern type, containing stage and dressing rooms.

The building was designed by F. W. Bail, architect, and the contract has been awarded to the W. I. Thompson & Son Company. Under the terms of the contract the theatre is to be ready by April 1, 1925, and the remaining part of the building by June 1, 1925.

Charles T. Prestein, vice-president of the Laronge Company, has closed a ten-year lease upon the theatre with the Ivanhoe Theatre Company, under the terms of which said company will pay the following rentals: $12,000 the first year, $13,000 the next year, $13,500 a year the next three years, $16,000 a year the balance of the term, with renewal privilege of five more years at $18,500 a year.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., of Cleveland will add another theatre to its circuit next spring when the new house at Detroit avenue and West 117th street is completed. This will be the first Loew theatre on the west side of Cleveland, and will be No. 9 in the string in that city. The new house will seat about 2,000. The building proper will be on West 117th street, with an entrance on Detroit avenue. It is reported that a policy of pictures and vaudeville will prevail.

M. B. Horwitz, who operates the Washington circuit of theatres, celebrated the tenth anniversary of his entrance into the picture field on Tuesday, October 28. To commemorate that anniversary the doors of his tenth theatre were opened to the public.

The new house, called the Hough-79 Theatre because the name denotes the location, is one of the most beautiful of the "round-the-corner" cinema theatres in the city. Its opening is another indication of the rapid strides being made by the movies as a medium of amusement.

The Hough-79 seats 1,000 and is equipped with the latest in motion picture machines, intensity lamps and interior decorations. The old rose and gold color scheme worked out through drapes, curtains and electric fixtures is exceptionally pleasing to the eye. A Giant Unit organ has been installed and Walter J. Trimmer will be the organist.

The opening feature picture was "The Red Lily." It was shown for two days. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was the feature for the three remaining days of the opening week.

Horwitz began his career as a theatre owner in 1914. He started with one movie house. At present he controls the Fountain, Haltnorth, Virginia, Globe, Shaw-Hayden, Southern, Amphion and now the Hough-79 in Cleveland, as well as the new Falls and the Alhambra, both in Cuyahoga Falls.

Kansas City

A full fledged fashion show, depicting the latest in Parisian evening gowns and fall wraps, was a special offering to the patrons of the Newman Theatre for the week of October 26. The offering was staged in conjunction with the Woolf Clothing Company. Six specially trained mannikins were employed in the display of apparel, and several thousand dollars worth of wraps and gowns were used. This act was in addition to the feature film, "Cornered," and special syncopation. The show was well received, according to Milton H. Feld, Newman manager.

Chicago

is now running pictures and vaudeville and making good under the new management.

Frank Smith has taken over the Erie Theatre at Erie, Ill., and will improve the house.

Will Smith and Joe Brophy have reopened the Tivoli Theatre at Hurley and will operate the house on an exclusive picture plan, seven days a week.

C. C. McMains has sold the Electric Theatre at Lorimor, Iowa, to S. C. Warren.

Roy C. Merrick, Sidney C. Nierman and Mandel Benjamin have organized the Interstate Theatres Inc., with offices at 25 East Jackson boulevard and a capital stock of $10,000 to operate theatres and deal in and book pictures and amusements of all kinds.

James Coston, president of the Chicago Theatres Corporation, with offices at 111 West Washington street, is booking for eight theatres on the South Side, namely, the Drexel, Lexington, Woodlawn, Kimbark, Harvard, New Regent, Linden and Triangle. He will add other houses to his booking circuit in the near future.

Pittsburgh Managerial Shift Sends McCloskey to Belmar

Dean McCloskey, for five years manager of Rowland and Clark's Arsenal Theatre, has been transferred to the Belmar, owned by the same company. He is succeeded at the Arsenal by Fred Moore, a newcomer to the R & C. organization. Moore was formerly manager of the Lyric and Grand theatres at Butler, and more recently was manager of the Progress Pictures Corporation, Pittsburgh.

M. M. Weir, for years connected with the Rialto at Charleston, W. Va., and familiarly known as "Moody" throughout the territory, has been named to manage the Majestic in Butler which was recently taken over by the Harris Amusement Company of Pittsburgh.

William L. Pearce, old-time exchangeman and exhibitor of the Pittsburgh section, who has been in another line of business in New York for two years, is back again and has taken over the managerial reins at the Harris Amusement Company's Hippodrome Theatre at McKeesport.

Ely Goldstein of the Morris Theatre, on the North Side, has been discharged from St. John's Hospital, where he underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils.

Lots of out-of-town exhibitors were "spotted" on Film Row during the week of October 27. Among those present were: Tom Kinney, Franklin; Mike Marks, Venango; J. R. Black, Rice's Landing; F. L. Farman, Butler; George J. Schweitzer, Titusville; Walter Silverberg, Greenville; George MacGowan, Blairsville; Wm. Lamproplos, Latrobe; Jack Marks, Clarksburg; Dave Baltimore, New Castle; C. E. Gable, Sharpsville; C. E. Claffey, Sharon; Jake Smith, Barnesboro; George Zeppos, Wheeling; C. G. Becker, Butler; Saul Rabinovitz, Weirton; Earl Forsythe, Canonsburg; G. B. Meyers, Derry; M. S. Gelbach, Ellwood City; Theodore Mikalowsky, Masontown; Mike Rosenbloom, Charleroi; Jake Silverman, Altoona, and Mr. Barney, Point Marion.

James Passias has sold his interest in the Star Theatre, New Castle, to his former partner, who is now sole owner. Passias is on the lookout for a larger theatre in the local territory.

After having been closed for alterations and redecorating since September 1, the Columbus Theatre at New Kensington is to be reopened on November 10.

O. M. White will open the new Euphemuan Theatre at Buckhannon, W. Va., about December 1. He was in Pittsburgh recently accompanied by his daughter.

Film folk will be sorry to learn of the death of Fred Sherkel, father of Carl Sherkel, of the Sherkel Theatre, Houtzdale, whose demise occurred on October 21.

Indiana

Manager C. C. Cassady has opened his Joy Theatre, Cloverdale, Ind., on Sundays to big business. "Girl Shy," "The Confidence Man" and "A Self Made Failure" have already been played and other new pictures are following. Being a sign artist and bill poster, Mr. Cassady puts out extensive advertising on these pictures. At least 50 one-sheets are posted each week. A big percentage of his patrons is made up of persons who formerly spent their Sundays in nearby dance halls and picture theatres in neighboring towns. The majority of the town is behind him because they seem to feel that a good, clean picture on Sundays is an asset rather than a detriment to the town. Although Cloverdale is a town of only 625, Mr. Cassady says it pays to advertise.

Louisville

M. Switow of Louisville, one of the leading exhibitors of Kentucky and Indiana, recently served a term on the Jefferson County Grand Jury. Switow has always been known to be a big hearted man. However, a prisoner came before the jury, at his own request, to explain how he had been arrested for transporting an automobile, when it appeared rather conclusive that the owner of the machine might have had it transported, so that he could claim the insurance money on the car, and did not let the prisoner in on what he had in mind.

In the meantime, the prisoner had given his clothes to a jail inmate, who had been released, the prisoner feeling sorry for the jail bird and giving him good clothes to get a new start. Therefore, the prisoner came before the grand jury wearing prison overhauls.

After explaining the case to the jury he was released. Switow furnished him with a suit of clothes, a lumberman on the jury furnished a job, and others kicked in with enough money to keep him going until he can get started. And then they talk about hard boiled grand juries and exhibitors?

Minneapolis

Offices of W. A. Steffes, president of the Allied States exhibitor organization, were moved this week to a suite in the new Nicollet hotel. Invitations have been extended exhibitors of Minnesota, North and South Dakota to attend a house warming party to be given November 6.

Election returns were featured by several Loop theatres on Election Night. Special wires were installed.

James Gallagher has leased the Princess Theatre at Janesville, Minn.

A. L. Hess has reopened the Lyric Theatre at Yankton, S. D. It was recently redecorated.

Theatre owners of Minneapolis aided in making the Community Fund campaign a success last week. Slides were screened and speakers were invited to use the theatres.

Burglars Loot Boston Safe, Using "Can-opener" Method

Using the "can-opener" method, burglars forced the safe in the Gordon Theatre in Broadway, Chelsea, Sunday night, October 26, and looted it of $1,300. When Michael Torcher, theatre janitor, opened the office of the manager, William E. Spragg, the following morning he discovered the wrecked safe. Police declared the work was that of expert safe-openers. The men evidently had hidden in the theatre auditorium after the close of the Sunday night performance, as the entrance and other doors to the building had not been forced. The burglars overlooked $3, which was in a bankbook in the safe. They left behind them a large steel bar, with which they tore open the safe. This robbery is the first to occur in any New England theatre for several months.

According to figures made public by the Internal Revenue Bureau in Boston, Nathan H. Gordon, head of the Gordon Olympia circuit of New England theatres, paid the government $1,394.56 on his personal income for 1923.

Managers of many of the neighborhood theatres in the Boston area are adding two or three acts of vaudeville to their Sunday programs. They are presenting one or two features of rather doubtful age, getting the cheapest subjects possible. The vaudeville seemingly is not boosting the business any, and in the majority of cases the patrons are demanding that the vaudeville be dropped in favor of better features.

George Beban in "The Greatest Love of All," with himself and a cast of 24 persons who enacted roles in the photoplay, were at the Fenway Theatre in Boston the week starting November 1. Mr. Beban and his company appeared four times on Saturday and Sunday and three times daily the rest of the week. The attraction was to be presented at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, immediately after the Boston engagement. Laurence Stuart, managing director of the Fenway, conducted a sensational exploitation and advertising campaign to convince the natives that he had real screen players in person.

"Sacrifice," directed by Ernst Lubitsch, is in the Tremont Temple, Boston, for an extended engagement, whatever that means. It is said that this feature is a version of Lessing's "Nathan the Wise" and that Boston film fans are seeing it for the first time in the United States.

William Fox's picturization of "Dante's Inferno" is slated to open at the Fenway Theatre in Boston, a Paramount-controlled house, on November 8.

Building movers are preparing to move the Woburn House in Woburn to make way for the construction of a theatre on the site. The playhouse will face on Pleasant street. It is estimated that the cost will be $100,000. Actual construction work on the theatre is to be started immediately.

The Orpheum Theatre in Gardner was endangered on October 29 by a fire that damaged the plant of the Gardner Manufacturing Company. Firemen succeeded in preventing the blaze from spreading to the theatre. The property is owned by George A. Giles, who operates the Boston Stock Company at the St. James Theatre in Boston.

The Theatre Treasurers' Club of New England will present a show on Friday afternoon, November 14, the proceeds from which will be devoted to the sick and death fund of the organization. The leading attractions at Boston playhouses will contribute to the program. The club is an organization of ticket sellers employed in the Boston theatres.

Connecticut

The erection of a $60,000 mausoleum in honor of his son, Edward Joseph Poli, who died in 1922, has been completed in St. Lawrence cemetery, New Haven, by Sylvester Z. Poli, owner of the string of theatres which bears his name. The mausoleum has nine catacombs, four on each side of an aisle which leads to an altar. It is 20 feet long, 21 feet wide and 35 feet high; built of Mount Airy granite, quarried in North Carolina. The interior is finished in Tennessee marble. Great bronze doors guard the entrance. The mausoleum will be the resting place for all the members of the family of Mr. Poli. The son had been the general manager of the Poli circuit. He died on November 11, 1922.

Rhode Island

The Park Theatre, Inc., of Cranston has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are George Hadfield, Courtland Potter and Eden Bigney.

Alexander C. Grant, who for many years was drummer in Fay's Theatre, Providence, died on October 22 at his home in Lakewood, R. I. He was 53 years of age.

Texas

Waxahatchie, Texas, is in the throes of the tent show question. The people are apparently divided on the question. Therefore the mayor, taking up the cudgels of neither side, has decided to put the fate of the tent shows before the people at an election.

Manager Sid McDonald of the Melba Theatre in Dallas has changed the opening of his vaudeville bills to Monday instead of Sunday as heretofore. The Melba also runs feature pictures and short films. This gives three opening dates in Dallas, the Majestic, Circle and Jefferson opening Sunday and the Palace, Capitol and Old Mill on Saturdays.

Dallas is to get a new $500,000 city auditorium. Plans already have been approved for the structure. It is to contain a stage large enough for the most pretentious traveling legitimate attraction as well as motion picture road shows.

Denison, Texas, is agitated over the Sunday closing question. Following the arrest there of an exhibitor and his projectionist, the pastors' association passed resolutions condemning showing of pictures on the Sabbath. The exhibitor, however, has a different idea about the matter. Upon the occasion of his arrest, he gave bond and went ahead with a second show. The theatre was crowded for both performances. It is understood the courtroom will be also when the test case comes up.

C. W. Matson, proprietor of the Dixie and Gem theatres in Rockdale, Texas, has added to his holdings by buying the leading picture show in Caldwell. Mr. Matson formerly was a motor car conductor in Dallas. His rise in the show game has been rapid.

Architects have drawn plans for a handsome new theatre at Greenville, Texas, to replace the former Colonial Theatre there, which was dstroyed by fire. The theatre will be two stories in height and will cost about $30,000.

Houston's censor board, stormy center for many years, has again broken loose. Thirty eliminations were ordered in one week, affecting pictures and the "legit" at the Queen, Majestic, Rialto and Capitol theatres. Some of the Majestic's vaude acts were particularly "bad," the censors asserted.

Washington, D. C.

The sixth anniversary of Loew's Palace Theatre was celebrated last week, this being one of the three big theatres which were built during the war period. The house was opened November 4, 1918. Special floral decorations were installed in honor of the occasion. The house recently made itself a birthday present in the shape of a 50-foot vertical sign bearing its name in illuminated letters.

The Hyattsville Amusement Company, composed of business men of Washington,'s Maryland suburb, have purchased property on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and will erect a picture theatre at a cost of about $60,000. The house will be a modern, fireproof building, about 50 by 150 feet, with a main auditorium seating about 700 and a gallery seating about 250. The plans call for a lobby 14 by 30 feet, with a store on each side; on the balcony floor there will be a reception room, a rest room for women and a smoking room for men.

Robert Slote, manager of the Strand Theatre in Cumberland, Md., was a visitor in Washington last week.

Herbert T. Moses, patent attorney, has filed suit in the District Supreme Court against the Knickerbocker Theatre Company of Washington, the Crandall Theatre Company and Harry M. Crandall, to recover $25,000 damages for alleged personal injuries sustained on January 28, 1922, when the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre collapsed.

New York State Chain Owner Uses Autos for Billboards

William Smalley, who now owns an even dozen theatres, is using three Ford cars as traveling billboards over his territory. Mr. Smalley started with one car and found the idea so good that he has added two more. The cars are painted yellow and black and travel over the section in which Mr. Smalley's houses are located, going from place to place with the cars announcing attractions at the Smalley houses.

He uses a three-piece orchestra in each of his houses, except for specials, when his orchestras are increased to six or seven pieces. He replaced two organs with orchestras. Mr. Smalley will open his Hamilton house on November 6, using "Gridiron Glory" as one of the features on account of Colgate University being located in Hamilton. It is the first college town which Mr. Smalley has entered. Mr. Smalley charges a uniform 25 cent admission at all of his houses, with 35 cents for specials. When showing "Our Gang" comedies he features the same, especially in Cooperstown. Mr. Smalley has no partner. While in Albany last week he reported business as good and the outlook as excellent. In his Sidney and Cooperstown houses he is using as lobby decorations artificial vines running from the center to the ceiling. He recently secured a Gila monster from Phoenix, Ariz., and is using this in store windows to attract crowds with an advertisement carrying the attraction at the nearby theatre as a background.

Everyone along Film Row was glad to hear during the past week that Judge Charles McCarthy, owner of the New Theatre at Hoosick Falls, was up and around again. Mr. McCarthy was sick in bed for about a week. Frank Bruner, former manager of the Pathe exchange here and well known to exhibitors throughout the state, is at a Chicago hospital with pneumonia.

Sam Slotnick, of Mahawk, in town during the past week, opened wide his purse strongs as he bought between thirty and forty pictures for his theatre.

The Hunchback of Note Dame" will be shown at the Rose in Troy on November 8 at an admission price of 10 cents. "The Covered Wagon" will also be shown at the same theatre later in the month at a like price.

With the first snowflakes at least two Northern New York exhibitors will hie away for balmy Florida. Arthur Richardson of Schroon Lake, who reports business as having been exceptionally good during the summer, will leave during the month for Orlando, Fla., while Harlan Nicholas of the Photoplay at Keeseville will make the trip by motor.

When Earl Flack, owner of the Star in Potsdam, leaves on a deer hunting trip this month, he doesn't intend to be cut off from the affairs of the world. Along with his gun, Mr. Flack will take his radio outfit and rig it up in the cabin which he will occupy far from the beaten highway.

Ben Apple, owner of the American in Troy and tipping the scales at 278 pounds, joins with his friend Bill Oaten, 210 pounds, in a challenge to bowl any two men in the world at their weight.

Several persons from Gouverneur were guests of the Papayanakos brothers at the opening of their new house, the Rialto, in Potsdam on Monday evenin. Harry Papayanakos, who has managed the Graylin in Gouverneur, will handle the new house, while his brother, James, will look after the Gouveneur Theatre. The house was sold out on the opening night twenty-five minutes after the sale of tickets started. The house seats about 1,000. A decorative painting, with a shield with the word "Rialto" in the center, extends across the top of the stage.

All the theatres in Troy extended the courtesy of the houses to the sailors aboard the destroyers in the harbor last week, when Navy Day was observed in the Capital District.

It's tough on Bob Landry of Ogdensburg to be laid up with a bad cold right after buying a new Marmon roadster. Mr. Landry is also booking for Malone and admits that he has absolutely nothing to complain of in the way of business.

The largest number of tickets ever sold by an organization sharing in the proceeds with the Troy Theatre brought a tremendous jam to the presentation of "Yolanda" at the Troy last week. The Industrial Club of Troy disposed of over 6,000 tickets in advance. The sale was carried on similar to a drive, with every manufacturing industry in the city competing. The same procedure will be carried out next week in connection with "Merton of the Movies."

Observing the second Harvest Week, the Rose in Troy, charging 10 cents admission, certainly furnished plenty of entertainment with double features, a comedy, a news reel and an educational each day, and in addition presented patrons holding lucky coupons with handsome presents. On one night the winners were given beautiful ferns; on another night, potatoes; a third night, apples; a fourth night, blankets, and a fifth night, boxes of candy. Jacob Rosenthal, owner of the house, plans to give away forty turkeys at Thanksgiving time. He goes under the policy that whatever he gives must be of the best. "There is no use giving away anything that is not up to standard," said Mr. Rosenthal last week, "for otherwise you will lose your patrons. The exhibitor shouldn't kid himself by kidding the people."

L. L. Connors, running houses in Cambridge, Granville and Salem, signed up the past week for the entire Universal output.

According to rumors, James Rose, salesman at the local Pathe exchange for the past five years, may take over the management of one of the Buettner houses. Mr. Rose resigned his position the past week and has been succeeded by Vincent Fisher, former booker in the exchange.

Louis Saperstein, manager of the Rose Theatre in Troy, has returned from a two weeks' trip to New York City.

A boy from the Troy High School will be installed as head usher at the Lincoln Theatre and another will also be placed at the head of the ushers at the Troy Theatre.

H. C. Bissell has been elected president of the film salesmen of Albany, succeeding

It Wasn't a Cat

Al Bothner will never, never again attempt to pick up what appeared at least to be one of his wife's Angora kittens. The other night, Mr. Bothner, who runs a theatre in Troy, came home along about 11:30 p. m. and noticed what he supposed was a kitchen near the porch. Just exactly what happened isn't necessary to explain, but at any rate Mr. Bothner's blue serge now reposes under a foot of earth and he has discovered that there is a vast difference between an Angora cat and a skunk.

Mike Kallat of Oneida, with theatres in that city, Rome and Canastota, fared better, for although he saw a skunk calmly walking down the Main street in Oneida one night, he left it alone.

New Arbitration Body Named for the Buffalo Territory

A new arbitration board has been appointed to sit on cases in the Buffalo territory at Buffalo. The exhibitor members, appointed by J. H. Michael, chairman, are: Ben Wallerstein, Broadway Theatre; Dewey Michael, Plaza, and Charlie Hayman, Strand, Niagara Falls. Exchange members, named by President Sydney Samson of the Film Board of Trade, are: Colonel Howard F. Brink of Educational, James Speer of Dependable, Richard C. Fox of Selznick. Exhibitor alternate is James Cardina of the Varsity theatres and exchanges alternates are Mr. Sampson, Henry W. Kahn of Metro and Marvin Kempner of Paramount. The board will alternate in meeting in the offices of the Film Board and Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., in the Root Building. One month all the meetings will be held in the Film Board office, the next month all the hearings will be in the exhibitor organization headquarters. The distributors' chairman will act as chairman during the meeting in the exhibitors' office and the exhibitors' chairman will preside over the pow-wow in the Film Board's tepee. This will make the proceedings more of a 50-50 proposition.

The Auditorium in Auburn, N. Y., has been leased to the Fitzer Brothers of Syracuse, owners of the Empire, Rivoli, Savoy and Happy Hour theatres in the Salt City and Recreation Park in Fulton. Joseph M. Schwartzwalder, formerly proprietor of the Universal Theatre of Auburn, has been appointed manager of the Auditorium. The house is being given a thorough cleaning for the opening date, which is still indefinite. It will be opened with motion pictures. With the announcement of the leasing of the theatre, Fitzer Brothers gave out the statement that the best pictures to be had will be shown at 10 and 15 cents. They claim that because of the large seating capacity as well as the string of houses they control, they can afford to cut the present price in Auburn in half.

The event of the social season in the land of the leaping tin-types in Buffalo was the annual ball of the Film Board of Trade which was held Friday evening, October 31 in the Hotel Statler, Henry W. Kahn, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn office, was chairman of arrangements. There was something doing every minute. Jimmy Speer of Dependable was chairman of the entertainment committee and he was able through the co-operation of the Lafayette Square Theatre to offer several acts from that house. A bountiful banquet was spread at midnight. Music was furnished by a large orchestra. Many exhibitors and exchangemen were hitting the hay the next afternoon. One of the features of the ball was the ballet number put on by Philomena Cavanaugh, the rotund publicity purveyor for the Shea Amusement Company, and Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Producers Distributing corporation office. Similar terpischorean demonstrations by J. H. Michael, Charlie Hayman and Charlie Bowe also evoked much merriment. A goodly throng was there and a large time was had by all. Now there is talk of a ball to be staged by the exhibitors this month.

Manager E. O. Weinberg of the Olympic in Buffalo put over a great publicity stunt in co-operation with the Jolly Junior Department of the Courier when he staged a great party for the children last Saturday morning. Every day the Courier contained a three-column head story with a cut from "The Family Secret," the feature shown. In connection with the party, Mr. Weinberg offered prizes for essays.

Syracuse projectionists will be required to take out a license under an ordinance to be submitted to the common council within a week or so, it is announced by Commissioner of Public Safety James B. Spencer. Safety for patrons of the picture houses will be the argument behind the new ordinance and theatres favor the new measure. A committee of projectionists called on Commissioner Spencer and asked for such an ordinance. They said Buffalo, Rochester and Albany have such ordinances and that one should be on the books in the Salt City. In many of the neighborhood theatres, they pointed out, children as young as 15 years are operating picture machines.

Jimmy Kelly, formerly manager of the Elmwood in Penn Yan, N. Y., has been appointed manager of the Avondale Theatre in North Tonawanda, succeeding L. E. Barger. The Avondale is owned by Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Producers Distributing exchange.

Charlie Hayman has closed a contract for the showing of the entire First National product at his Strand Theatre in Niagara Falls. Charlie has also signed up for exclusive presentation of the Warner Brothers classics and the choice Metro-Goldwyn photoplays.

The opera house in Gowanda, N. Y., operated by Judge John W. Schatt, one of the most popular exhibitors in Western New York, was burned to the ground the other day when fire which started in the theatre and spread to surrounding business buildings, doing an estimated damage of over $500,000. Judge Schatt suffered a loss alone of $80,000.

Albany

James Rose. John Thurloy has been elected vice-president, succeeding Nat Marcus, who has gone to New York with F. B. O.

It takes more than a film salesman to keep Eugene Moe of Burke from getting in his fall harvest of potatoes. The other day Mr. Moe was busy in his potato field digging away for all he was worth when he was approached by a film salesman. Mr. Moe kept on digging and the film salesman kept on talking. Potatoes were dug, film was sold and everyone was satisfied.

"Al" Cyr, owner of the Avon in Boonville, a snappy little Frenchman, is still cutting hair by day and running his theatre by night.

Claude Wade, an exhibitor of North Creek, on a hunting trip in the Adirondacks announced before leaving that he would bring home the bacon in the shape of a deer.

The Troy Theatre is now the home of a fine Angora cat recently presented to Mrs. Walter Roberts, wife of the manager.. The cat arrived from New York, somewhat soiled from travel. Mrs. Roberts decided to clean the cat up a bit, but instead of using soap and water applied benzine. The cat managed to live through the ordeal but probably made up its mind to live a spick and span life from now on.

Many exhibitors from surrounding places are expected in Albany on November 10 for the ball which will be given under the auspices of the Albany Film Board of Trade. Robert Block, manager of the Majestic Hotel in Utica, enjoys the distinction of having been the first person to buy a ticket for the ball. Plans are now under way for bringing a number of film stars to Albany for the occasion.

Samuel Suckno did considerable exploitation work at his Albany Theatre last week in connection with the showing of "The Signal Tower." Mr. Suckno had them standing out practically every night and reported the biggest week since the house went into first runs.

As brown as a berry, Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal in Albany, back from Atlantic City, is thinking of spending a week at Lake Placid. Tough life that Harry is leading these days!

Herman Vineburg, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, is doing his daily dozen these days at the local Y. M. C. A., having joined the business men's class.

Garrick Theatre, Winnipeg, Now Staging a "Come-back"

The Garrick Theatre, a leading independent picture house of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is to be continued, according to the unanimous decision of the creditors of the Garrick Theatre, Ltd., who met a few days ago to consider the position of the company. The Garrick had shown such promising improvement during the past ten weeks that the creditors were enthusiastically in favor of the continued operation of the house under the management of D. E. L. Fisher, managing director of the company, who assumed charge of the theatre some months ago.

The latest financial statement showed that the liabilities stood at $63,318, but it is expected that these will be materially reduced in short order. The Garrick will continue for the time being under the trusteeship of the Standard Trusts Corporation, Winnipeg. The creditors have appointed three inspectors, Thomas Edwards, A. W. Simpson and the MacDonald Dure Lumber Company.

The Capital Trusts Corporation, Toronto, has been receiving tenders for the lease of the Paulton Theatre, 408 Queen street east, Toronto, on a three-year basis, immediate possession being offered. The Paulton is a neighborhood house with 800 seats.

Before leaving Montreal, Quebec, where he had been manager of the Capitol Theatre for two years, Harry S. Dahn was presented with a fine gold watch as a friendship souvenir from the staff of the Capitol. Mrs. Dahn was presented with a large bouquet of flowers, as was Mrs. R. W. Thayer, wife of the new manager. Mr. Dahn has become manager of the Hippodrome and Regent, Toronto, for Famous Players Canadian Corporation, as well as receiving the appointment of assistant to Jack Arthur, general director of music and presentations for the 70 theatres of the corporation in the Dominion. Mr. Thayer was formerly with the theatre department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, New York, and was also with the A. H. Blank Enterprises at Des Moines, Iowa.

A special "One Cent Sale" similar to the familiar selling stunts of drug stores was conducted by Manager Thomas Daley for the Unique Theatre, St. John, N. B., with gratifying results, when, for one day only, he offered two tickets of admission for the price of one, plus the one cent. This brought out a big crowd of people for all performances, starting with an extra morning matinee at 10 a. m. For this one day the Unique offered a program which included Universal's "The Back Trail," a chapter from the Universal serial, "The Fast Express," and a comedy.

The Regent Theatre, Ottawa, started a series of weekly Symphony Nights for the fall and winter months on November 3, the plan adopted by Manager Leonard Bishop being to give a 30-minute recital by an augmented orchestra of 30 pieces starting at 8:45 p. m. This feature is being given every Monday evening in addition to the regular program. The regular house orchestra numbers 12 musicians, under the direction of Conductor Rudolph Pelisek.

The interest of J. A. Shuberg in the Province Theatre, Winnipeg, one of the large downtown theatres of that city, has been purchased by Helmer Jernberg of Winnipeg, the sum of $50,000 being involved in the deal. Mr. Jernberg, who is personally managing the theatre, is a well-known Western Canadian exhibitor, being the president of the Manitoba Exhibitors Association.

The sale of the Princess Theatre, Ottawa, has been made by the Capital Paper Stock Company, Ottawa, to A. H. Coplan, who has been the proprietor of the theatre for several years. The Princess, which is located at 160 Rideau street, has a frontage of 33 feet, a depth of 115 feet, and was erected in 1914 by Isadore Sugarman and A. L. Florence, who later turned it over to the Capital Paper Stock Company. The building, which was sold for $45,000, has two floors and basement, the theatre holding 500. There is a large billiard parlor on the second floor.

"Old Bill Through the Ages" was the English film production which was presented at the Tivoli Theatre, Toronto, a big downtown house, for the one week of November 3 by Manager W. J. Stewart. The Tivoli is operated on the flat price policy, with all seats at matinees 25 cents and the evening prices 25 and 35 cents.

"Monsieur Beaucaire" started the third week of its special Toronto run at the Regent Theatre on November 3 under the direction of Harry S. Dahn, manager of the Regent.

Detroit

Actual construction work on the new Grand Riveria Theatre, Joy Road and Grand River, was started last week by the C. W. Munz interests. This theatre will be one of the most elaborate in the city, judging by the plans. It will seat about 3,500 and be devoted to pictures and vaudeville.

Tainted oysters and sardines laid two prominent Detroit exhibitors low last week. Phil Gleichman and Harlan Hall were forced to their beds for several days as a result of ptomaine poisoning setting in after partaking of the seafood.

The Family Theatre is in shape again after a renovating period that required about two months. About $60,000 was spent in the work, Manager Edward Kirchner declares. The Family is a "grind" theatre situated directly across from the City Hall in the heart of Detroit's famous Cadillac Square.

Glenn Hunter's pictures did not receive a first run in a Detroit downtown theatre until last week, when two of them appeared in competing Kunsky houses. "The Silent Watcher" player at the Capitol and "Merton of the Movies" across the street at the Madison.

"Snub" Pollard, motion picture comedian, made a personal appearance engagement last week at the La Salle Garden Theatre, featuring the vaudeville program at that house.

STRAIGHT from the SHOULDER REPORTS

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

These dependable tips come from exhibitors who tell the truth about pictures to help you book your program intelligently. "It is my utmost desire to serve my fellow man," is their motto.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

Send tips to help others. This is your department, run for you and maintained by your good-will.

Associated Exhibitors

WHY GET MARRIED? (6 reels). Star cast. A real good picture; just the same old thing, a love story. Will do for most houses. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

F. B. O.

AFTER THE BALL. (6,500 feet). Star cast. This is a splendid picture for Sunday. A good moral lesson and pleased everybody. Used paper and lobby. Good attendance. Roy L. Willman, Victory Theatre, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

ALIMONY. (7 reels). Star cast. Fair picture. Poor business. Weak audience appeal. Middle class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Star Theatre (400 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

ALIMONY. (7 reels). Star, Warren Baxter. A good dressed-up picture that tells a good story of every-day life among the upper class. Drew well for one day and pleased. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

AMERICAN MANNERS. (5,200 feet). Full of action. Kept them guessing. Good comedy and thrills. Used paper and lobby. All classes. Roy L. Willman, Victory Theatre, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

DAMAGED HEARTS. Star cast. This is a different picture from the regular one and is a good one. Pleasing to all classes. Used paper and lobby. Good attendance. All classes. Roy L. Willman, Victory Theatre, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

FIGHTING SAP. (5,738 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. A good picture but not as good as some of his others. We played this picture with a "Gump" comedy, "What's the Use?" on Saturday and it simply pleased one hundred per cent, and drew well. Here's to Fred: Hope you will soon be able to make the other seven pictures on your new contract and takes the blues out of the small exhibitor. They all should use your pictures. Simply can't go wrong with them. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

FOOLS IN THE DARK. (7,002 feet). Star cast. Was rather disappointed with this one as I had been led to believe it was an uproarious comedy-drama. My patrons were not enthusiastic about it either. Would call it an average program picture. Tone all right. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

LULLABY. (7,179 feet). Star, Jane Novak. Although this picture is rather depressing, it is a wonderful production and wonderful acting. Glad we showed it. Very sad. Fair moral tone. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Strong audience appeal. Small town and farming class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

GALLOPING GALLAGHER. (4,700 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. A very good western picture. However, not as good as some Thomson pictures I have shown. Town and country class, town of 900. Admission 10-30. Charles L. Nott, Opera House Theatre, Sutherland, Iowa.

MAILMAN. (7,160 feet). Star, Ralph Lewis. As good a picture as one would wish for. Different from most of pictures and has a good heart story. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Very strong audience appeal. Small town and farming class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

MAILMAN. (7,160 feet). Star, Johnny Walker. A dandy picture. Certainly pleased them all. It is what I would call a one hundred per cent audience picture. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Farming class, town of 800. Admission 15-25. A. B. McCullough, Community Theatre (250 seats), Neosho Falls, Kansas.

NEGLECTED WOMAN. (6,265 feet). Star cast. Featuring Seena Owen, with a good cast, liked by everybody. Sunday, yes. Used paper and lobby. All classes. Roy L. Willman, Victory Theatre, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

ON TIME. (6,030 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Audience liked this one. Tone all right. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Residential class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

YANKEE MADNESS. (5,680 feet) .Star, George Larkin. A fair program picture. Should please in houses where they want action. This picture is full of action. Print good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

First National

GALLOPING FISH. (6 reels). Star cast. This failed to please the majority and we had many adverse criticisms. Sunday, no. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

BOY OF MINE. (7 reels). Star, Ben Alexander. Truly a very good production. Alexander very popular here since "Penrod and Sam." Some good comedy and some rather "touching" scenes in it. A good picture for any exhibitor to play. Tone excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very good. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

BRIGHT SHAWL. (7,500 feet). Star cast. A fair drawing card but pleased those who saw it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

DADDY. (5,738 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. This is a good one. Had a full house. All were pleased. Don't fail to buy this one, for prices are right. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes, town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

DANGEROUS AGE. (7,204 feet). Star cast. One that will get them talking and is a dandy to put over and please. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety-five per cent. Country class, town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

DANGEROUS AGE. (7,204 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. This is a very good picture. Pleased all but one. Think he is around the age of forty. Tone good. Fine audience appeal. Farming class, town of 800. Admission 15-25. A. B. McCullough, Community Theatre (250 seats), Neosho Falls, Kansas.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. A fair picture which ought to please the average audience and do a fair business most anywhere. A little too long, however. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

FOR SALE. (7,840 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. Good society drama. Pleased all. Drew average business. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, high class. All classes, town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (6,723 feet). Star, Owen Moore. I didn't think much of this and I think my audience shared my opinion. Parts of this supposed to be comedy were perfectly foolish and disgusting. Nothing to it. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

KINDRED OF THE DUST. (8,500 feet). Star, Miriam Cooper. This is a splendid Peter B. Kyne story. Had many compliments on this. Some said the best show they ever saw. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal very strong. Small town and farming class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star cast. A dandy. Not as good as "Silent Call" but it's good, anyway. I would say book it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. Country class, town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star cast. An average picture of dogs, snow, villain, heroine and hero. It will get by as a good program but too weak for a big special. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

MAN OF ACTION. (5 reels). Star, Douglas MacLean. A good program picture; print a little worn on account of age. Pleased all, with a good drawing from star. Tone okay. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

OLIVER TWIST. (7,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Follows the book very closely and was very entertaining. Had quite a few out to see this one who don't make a habit of attending picture shows. Tone good. Agricultural class, town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. A very excellent comedy drama. In fact the best thing Miss Moore has done for First National. Sydney Chaplin, also in cast, establishes himself as a first rate comedian. Tone good. Sunday, no. Excellent audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

PONJOLA. (7 reels). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. A real good picture. Will please. For some reason had very poor attendance. No fault of picture. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (7,700 feet). Star cast. Might be a dandy where they have read Saturday Evening Post and where they can appreciate the titles. I raised admission. Wish I hadn't. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fifty-fifty. Country class, town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

SEA HAWK. (12,045 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Big advertising campaign got them in to see it, but patrons were dissatisfied at price charged, fifty cents. Have plenty of program pictures that please our patrons more than this one. City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

SLANDER THE WOMAN. (6,400 feet). Star cast. A very good program picture. Pleased a fair audience. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 900. Admission 10-30. Charles L. Nott, Opera House Theatre, Sutherland, Iowa.

SUNDOWN. Star, Bessie Love. A thrilling, vivid story of the passing of the cattle kings, depicting the pathetic exodus of the big ranches from American history because of the smaller farmer's westward movement. How a group of big cattle owners gathered their vast herds and made a final and sensational drive across the Rio Grande into Mexico; the bitterness existing between the cattlemen and the "nesters" who have come to encroach upon the land they pioneered; these are some of the outstanding points of "Sundown." Interwoven with the theme is a beautiful love story. Never again will such huge herds be seen in the United States. More than 100,000 head of cattle will be seen winding their way in a huge line half a mile wide in this great production. Use this picture and the results from the box office viewpoint will be very gratifying. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star cast. A good story with lots of action. Will please all the men but not liked by many women. Too much crook story for them. Action fine and gave satisfaction to the majority. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. College class, town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

TORMENT. (6 reels). Star cast. A fair program picture that will get by. Earthquake scenes are good but somehow Maurice Tournier misses most of the time and only hits the box office about every tenth shot. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN. (6,910 feet). Star cast. Most everyone has either read or heard of this book and the picture is good enough to please the readers of the book, so should make money for any exhibitor if bought right. Nice advertising material on this one and the cast does fine work. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

Fox

ARIZONA EXPRESS. (6,516 feet). Star cast. Typical Lincoln J. Carter melodrama that causes the kids on the front row to tear up the seats. Rated twice too high by Fox, as usual. Tone fair. Sunday, no. College class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-30. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

ELEVENTH HOUR. (6,819 feet). Star, Charles Jones. Very excellent picture. Full of action and thrills from start to finish. Pleased majority. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

IF WINTER COMES. (10 reels). Star, Percy Marmont. Very good picture but too long. Went over the heads of the poorer class. Drew good crowd. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

LONE STAR RANGER. (5,259 feet). Star cast. One of the greatest box office receipts

FOX EDUCATIONAL ENTERTAINMENTS

since "The Covered Wagon." With the Producers you can always depend on a full house. C. H. Dickerson, Criterion Theatre, Logansport, Louisiana.

MAN'S MATE. (6 reels). Star, John Gilbert. A very good picture. Star shows what he can do if given an opportunity to act, and in this picture he sure does some very fine work. Print good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

MAN'S MATE. (6 reels). Star, John Gilbert. Just a fair program picture that pleased only a few, due, no doubt, to foreign atmosphere as scene of story was supposedly in France. The patrons want American stories. Gilbert's acting could not be criticized. Too good an actor for this type of story. Fans want him in melodrama. Tone fair. Sunday, questionable. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

ST. ELMO. (6 reels). Star cast. This was a very good picturization of this famous play. Well handled and people came out to see it. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

ST. ELMO. (6 reels). Star, John Gilbert. Does not run true to the book but nevertheless a dandy good picture. Do not be afraid of this one as it pulls them in. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes, town of 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (300 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

SHADOW OF THE EAST. (5,874 feet). Star, Frank Mayo. Not the big special that it was cracked up to be but it satisfied about eighty per cent as it really was a good program feature. Many of patrons said story did not follow book very closely. We don't know as we didn't read the novel. Tone fair. Sunday, questionable. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

SHEPHERD KING. (8,500 feet). Star cast. Had more good reports on this one than any for a long time. This certainly will appeal to the church people anywhere. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Agricultural class, town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

SHEPHERD KING. (8,500 feet). Star cast. This is a gigantic spectacle that pleased for us but did not draw. It is as big as anything we've seen. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very high. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SIX CYLINDER LOVE. (7 reels). Star, Ernest Truex. Paid a special price but not a special by a long shot. A good picture but price too high for it. Will please any class of patronage. Print good. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

THIS FREEDOM. (7,000 feet). Star cast. We were promised as big a production as "If Winter Comes," but, Great Scott, what a difference! This one has little drawing power and does not please anything like the other. Just a fair picture for any house. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

VAGABOND TRAIL. (4,302 feet). Star, Buck Jones. A fair Jones picture. Not his best, however. Will please a mixed audience. Tone good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

Metro-Goldwyn

MADEMOISELLE MIDNIGHT. (6,778 feet). Star, Mae Murray. Much better than "French Doll," although Miss Murray doesn't mean much at the box office for us. Her pictures are too much alike. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

NELLIE, THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL. (7,000 feet). Star cast. A pretty good program offering. Some very thrilling moments are worked in; but not enough to cause much excitement. Play it but don't promise too much. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

RENDEZVOUS. (7 reels). Star cast. Went good first day. Second day, flopped. Costume pictures do not mean anything to us. Picture very good. J. Russell, Russell Theatre (462 seats), Barnesboro, Pennsylvania.

SLAVE OF DESIRE. (7 reels). Star, George Walsh. This picture drew fairly well on account of the one-time popularity of the star, but the picture pleased but very few. Would class it as a poor effort. Just a business killer like "Second Youth." No audience appeal. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

SLAVE OF DESIRE. (7 reels). Star cast. A good picture. Fair drawing power in small towns. Tone good. Great audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

SPOILERS. (8,020 feet). Star cast. Big picture that brought them in. Will please all the men and a good share of the ladies. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT. (8,000 feet). Star cast. A good, pleasing picture, devoid of any glaring faults. Registered lightly at box iffice. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal rather high. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres. (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

THREE WEEKS. (7,500 feet). Star cast. Opened house to good business. Picture not received well due to censor cuts. Middle class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Star Theatre (400 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

THREE WISE FOOLS. (6,946 feet). Star cast. Very good picture for small town and cities. Lots of humor and capably acted and directed. Will please in most any locality. Tone okay. Sunday, maybe. Audience appeal, eighty-five per cent. High class farmers, town of 2,000. Admission 10-35. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre, Sinton, Texas.

THREE WISE FOOLS. (6,946 feet). Star cast. Well staged, well acted. Gave splendid satisfaction. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. All classes, town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

THY NAME IS WOMAN. (9,087 feet). Star, Ramon Novarro. Good picture but failed to draw. Weak audience appeal. Middle class, city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Star Theatre (400 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

THY NAME IS WOMAN. (9,087 feet). Star,

Friend Martin Inquires About Trailers

"Dear 'Gang': I might be asking too much of you, but I think this question that I want answered through my brother exhibitors is one of interest and essential to others.

"I have always run, and am still running, an average of one trailer a week on my best pictures.

"But I have five changes a week, and I have been wondering if a trailer on all of them would be worth while or not.

"On another point, I wrote to a friend (exhibitor) for advice if $25 a month is too much to spend on it, and he answered that some pictures should not be advertised too strongly.

"Now I am a little puzzled and would like to hear from some other brother exhibitors who run trailers, getting the thing straightened out through a little discussion.

"The one-a-week that I run proves to be a winner; but to run more—up to five of them, say—I wonder what effect it would have?"—Chas. Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

Ramon Novarro. A picture that is decidedly out of the ordinary. Pleased most of our patrons and drew fairly well. It is an intelligent picture. Tone doubtful. Sunday, no. Very good audience appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

TRUE AS STEEL. (7 reels). Star, Aileen Pringle. A very good picture. Business good. Good audience appeal. All classes, city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (668 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

UNDER THE RED ROBE. (12,000 feet). Star, Robert Mantell. A costume picture in which the characters act more like human beings than in any I have seen since "Monte Cristo." Scenery is fine and action is kept running throughout the picture. Tone good. Good attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

UNINVITED GUEST. (6,145 feet). Star cast. I did not see this one, on account of the World Series, but from reports it seemed to please. They said that there were some beautiful underwater scenes. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience papeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

UNSEEING EYES. (8,500 feet). Star, Lionel Barrymore. A fine picture is my opinion of this one. The snow scenes are wonderful beyond description. Barrymore, as usual, is good. The only fault is that it is a bit too long. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

WILD ORANGES. (7 reels). Star, Frank Mayo. A Hergeshimer story. In every sense of the word an entertaining picture that will hold the interest of the average crowd. The story is the big thing. Tone good. Fine attendance. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

Paramount

ALASKAN. (6,736 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A fine feature. Sure this feature will please any audience anywhere. Beautiful outdoor scenery. Fine acting, splendid cast. Direction, photography excellent. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety-nine per cent. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. . B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

ALASKAN. (6,736 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Brought us a record-breaking business. The picture is not near Meighan's standard but the combination of James Oliver Curwood, Paramount and Thomas Meighan is a big one for the box office. Pleases those who just like to see Meighan, but story is not well done and action is very crude at times. Ben L. Morris, Temple Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.

ALASKAN. (6,736 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. We expect more from Meighan. Fair business, but a few pictures like this and he will lose his prestige. City of 10,000. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,850 feet). Star cast. Fair audience picture. Well acted and good photoplay but failed to bring them in. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,550 feet). Star cast. This is an extra good picture. Everyone who saw it was pleased. However, both the title and the paper were not pullers in this town. So the picture failed to draw. Tone okay. All classes, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (450 seats, Graham, Texas.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Tom Moore. Pleased one hundred per cent and is worth playing in any class of theatre. Needs extra advertising as the name and cast will not draw much, but don't be afraid to advertise it because it won't disappoint them. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and miners, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-30. John Russell, Russell Theatre (250 seats), Matherville, Illinois.

Tribute and Aid

"Dear Van, and Gang: I read the reports with great pleasure every week and thought that if I send in a few it might help the GOOD CAUSE along."—L. G. Tewksbury, Tewks Theatre, Stonington, Maine.

Greetings — and appreciation from all of "Our Gang."

Come in often, Mr. Tewksbury.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Matt Moore. Good picture to just fair business. Seems to lack pulling power in itself, and the Big Brother movement is not sufficiently popular to attract wide attention to a picture as yet. Tone very fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE. (5,960 feet). Star cast. This is a good picture. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

CALL OF THE CANYON. (6,982 feet). Star cast. A great picture. Good drawing power in small towns. Tone good. Great audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

CALL OF THE CANYON. (6,982 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Perhaps the best of the Zane Grey stories we have shown so far. Very pleasing, without so much of the bloody murder stuff. Print usual. Managed to get through without any breaks. More loose patches. Tone okay. Sunday, a little rough. Very good audience appeal. Draw mostly from out-of-town and rural districts. Town of 900. Admission 10-30. E. H. Pyle, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Chappell, Nebraska.

CALL OF THE CANYON. 6,982 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A combination of jazz parties and canyons in Arizona. Print was in rotten shape but seemed to please majority at that. Tone fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. My decided opinion is fifty per cent of our bookings should be of this type and everybody would be happy. Farmers, town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

CHEAT. (6,325 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Seemed to satisfy my audience, which was not large. First time for Pola Negri here. Had several good comments. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,290. Admission 10-15, 10-20, 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CHEAT. (6,325 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Star not liked here, hence I'm out. Fair enough picture. Two reels too long. Tone fair. Might be suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, hard to tell. Small town class, town of 1,369. Admission 10-20-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star, Rod LaRocque. About as good a sea story as I have shown in a long time. It is very realistic, especially the storm scenes. One good picture. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star cast. A crackerjack sea story. One of the best we have seen. We played it to a Saturday crowd and it seemed to please one hundred per cent. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal very good. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Very good. Held audience's attention throughout and pleased ninety per cent. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Agricultural class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Another good picture. Personally I thought it as good as his previous efforts. Meighan means something at the box office. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. The weakest picture Meighan has ever made. "Back Home and Broke" caused the Zukor outfit to make a big super-star of Meighan when he is not there with the goods. They demand top money for a picture just merely because it has this star's presence in it. I am paying just four times the money for Meighan that I used to and he is not drawing any more than of old. If you want to play fair with your patronage don't promise them anything in this piece of cheese. As one exhibitor said, a fine picture to sleep through. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

COVERED WAGON. Star, J. Warren Kerrigan. A big picture but overrated. It is good but I can't see quite as big a thing as the producer claims for it. However, I made a few dollars on it and that's what I am after. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town and farming class, town of 600. Admission 25-75. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Played this at fifty cents to the best business of the year. It's a great picture, being educational and surely has enough action to suit anyone. My patrons all said it was worth the money paid to see it. Town and country class, town of 900. Admission 10-30. Charles L. Nott, Opera House Theatre, Sutherland, Iowa.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. Broke all previous records and if you have the music as I had it, it will please everyone that sees it. We showed to more people than the population of our town. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal wonderful. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. A great picture, already sold to your patrons. Broke house record. I put the picture before the public school as historical and got a half holiday for the whole school to see it at one o'clock show at special price. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, greatest ever. College class, town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

COVERED WAGON. Star cast. We played it percentage and made nice money. Did more business than any picture we ever played, and what is equally as pleasing, the picture gave universal satisfaction and will do much toward industry's upbuilding. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. All classes, town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

COVERED WAGON. Star, Ernest Torrence. Could not want a better drawing picture, and as it was a western, my patrons were well pleased. Paid flat rental and put it over. Profit on this made up for loss on others. Farmers, town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (350 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

DAWN OF A TOMORROW. (6,084 feet). Star, Jacqueline Logan. A dandy program picture and suited okay. Many good comments. Farmers, town of 2,500. Admission 10-20, 10-25. H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre (320 seats), Alexandria, Minnesota.

DAWN OF A TOMORROW. (6,084 feet). Star cast. A picture of the London slums; typically English, with an all-American cast. Personally I liked it very much, having been over the ground in London. It will please the majority. Town and rural class, town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

DICTATOR. Star, Wallace Reid. Just moderately entertaining, with small audience. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. Farmers, fishermen, town of 600. Admission 10-25. C. C. Klutts, Glades Theatre (200 seats), Moore Haven, Florida.

DON'T CALL IT LOVE. (6,457 feet). Star cast. Very, very sad affair. Wonderful cast, with absolutely no story whatever. Nothing in it to hold your interest. Nita wears some beautiful gowns and while I don't pretend to be an authority on ladies' wearing apparel, I would say some of them were very unbecoming to her. All the stars do as well as they can with the story, but here is where the picture flops. Will not please over twenty per cent in small towns, and I am doubtful if even the city would take to it. My patrons did not hesitate to tell me what a weak sister it was. Of course you Paramount boys will have to run it as you cannot eliminate it, but my advice is to watch your step, and only call in a few of the society folk who want to see the gowns. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.

Hot Tip

I am rushing this report on the 1924 PENDLETON OREGON ROUND-UP so that it will be of benefit to other exhibitors and probably save some of them plenty worry. The report is simply this—IT IS IN 2 SHORT REELS—about 1,800 feet. These pictures have been in 5 and 6 reels heretofore and it is downright crooked for an exchange to sell the film at full price and say nothing of its length. I had to phone for another film to complete program. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre, Sinton, Texas.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Pola is good in this picture, as it fits her type much better than some of her other American-made productions. However, Pola has never been a drawing card in my town. At the prices we pay we cannot play her pictures at a profit. Tone all right. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star cast. This was a good picture. Poor drawing power. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. Above the average for this kind of picture. They do not please as a whole; just a few warm scenes in it that put it over with the college boys. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Medium audience appeal. College class, town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

TIGER LOVE. (5,325 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. A fair program offering for us. Moreno and Taylor took their respective parts well. Picture did not draw us enough business to pay our expenses. It has the usual Paramount class. Tone, fair. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TIGER'S CLAW. (5,297 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Very interesting picture. A program picture bought reasonable. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Tourists town of 2,440. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD. (8 reels). Star cast. Very good, but also very poor business. Too much footage for summer showings. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30-15-40-25-50. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

TO THE LADIES. (6,268 feet). Star, Helen Jerome Eddy. A very good, clean, amusing comedy drama, well acted and directed. Pleased a good crowd. A good picture for a Sunday showing. Used regular advertising to draw good attendance in face of fairs and local opposition. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall Theatre, Chester, Vermont.

TO THE LAST MAN. (6,995 feet). Star cast. One of Zane Grey's best. Pleased my audience, especially those who have read the book. Comes so much nearer the book than most any picture. Tone good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,290. Admission 10-15, 10-20, 15-25. Hubert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

TO THE LAST MAN. (6,965 feet). Star cast. A western feud picture with action galore. Should please most any audience where westerns are the favorite type of entertainment. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Theatre (700 seats), Union, Maine.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE. (5,695 feet). Star, Mary Miles Minter. This is a very good program picture. tI is bound to please any audience. You can buy it right and can make money on this one. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriver, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE. (5,695 feet). Star, Mary Miles Minter. A good picture which follows the book and will give satisfaction. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 900. Admission 10-30. Charles L. Nott, Opera House Theatre, Sutherland, Iowa.

TRIUMPH (8,297 feet). Star cast. This picture was fair only. Paid too much for "The Paramount sign again." Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

TRIUMPH. (6,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. A good picture but not outstanding and not one that will stand the advance in admission price which is called for by the rental asked for DeMille's pictures. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, eighty per cent. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. A good and pleasing picture, but right here my recommendation ceases. Rated by Paramount at exactly four times too high a rental. Lost money. Tone, all right. Sunday, suppose so. Fair audience appeal. College town class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25, 10-40. C. W. Cupp, Royal Theatre (400 seats), Arkadelphia, Arkansas.

VALLEY OF SILENT MAN. (6,490 feet). Star, Alma Rubens. A very good picture, but the snow scenes get tiresome. Book it, though, as it's a Curwood story, and that helps draw business. Tone, okay. Audience appeal, excellent. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

WAGON TRACKS. Star, William S. Hart. A little old, but it pleased one hundred per cent. Good print. Tone, okay. Excellent audience appeal. All classes town of 900. Admission 10-20. C. E. Robinson, Town Hall Theatre (250 seats), Carmel, Maine.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Wonderful picture and wonderful drawing card. A credit to everybody connected with it. Coloring beautiful. Everybody delighted. A picture any exhibitor can show with credit to his house, Zane Grey, who happened to be in town opening day, visited theatre and acknowledged an introduction to our audience. "Wasteland" will back up strong advertising. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very strong. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre, Redding, California.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Only fair picture, but the color novelty seemed to be an attraction, and box office report was exceptionally good. City of 10,000. Admission 10-25-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

WEST OF THE WATER TOWER. (7 reels). Star, Glenn Hunter. An excellent picture and well worth seeing. William Noble, Majestic Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

WEST OF THE WATER TOWER. (7 reels). Star, Glenn Hunter. A fairly good program picture. We hit a very rainy night on this one, so I can't judge very well as to its drawing power. We had very poor attendance. Tone, fair. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER. (11,618 feet). Star, Marion Davies. We got a poor print on this, and this may account for my lukewarm appreciation of the picture. In my opinion, very much over-rated as entertainment. Business only fair, but we got by all right by charging super-special prices. Patrons divided as to opinion. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40, 25-50. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

WILD BILL HICKOK. (6,892 feet). Star, Bill Hart. Hart is surely going back and must say that while this feature pleased it did not satisfy as the old Hart pictures did. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Attendance, good. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

WOMAN PROOF. (7,657 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A fine production and should appeal to all. Didn't make any money on this but no fault of the picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,775. Admission 10-20-25. Wahl & Worcester, Kil Kare Theatre (579 seats), Wood River, Illinois.

Pathe

CALL OF THE WILD. (7,000 feet). Star, Buck (dog). This is an excellent production. Drawing power great. I ran it two nights and stood 'em up. The largest attendance I have ever had on any picture I have run in five years. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. All classes town of 500. Admission 10-25. A. F. Schriever, Onida Theatre (225 seats), Onida, South Dakota.

DR. JACK. (4,700 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Splendid picture. Pleases young and old. Drew fifty per cent. increase over usual business. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

DYNAMITE SMITH. (6,400 feet). Star, Charles Ray. This story of a timid young adventurer, made bold by love carries you into the romance of "Frisco's" waterfront, Canada and Alaska. There is plenty of explosive action in "Dynamite Smith" the T. N. T. sort and the climax is tremendously exciting. The picture is a sort of a "thriller de luxe, winding up in a thrilling and exciting manner. Sweet Bessie Love helps to make the picture the success that is. William Noble, Express Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Preferred

APRIL SHOWERS. (6,350 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Good program picture but too much shower to get a crowd, all liked it that saw it. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Business and farming class town of 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

BROKEN WING. (6,216 feet). Star, Kenneth Harlan. Might have been a good picture but the print received was poor and not fit for showing. What was left seemed to be very good. Tone, questionable. No audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

Road Show Tip

While not on a picture, this tip from Helen Drexler, Star Theatre, Crofton, Nebraska, may hit somebody who, like good old Adolph Schutz, at one time wanted tips on some road shows.

"A word about Holmes' Shows, owned by a Mrs. Reeves.

"The company consists of six people, all artists in their line. Their music is fine and their specialties are wonderful. They play two days. Fun, fun, fun all the time.

"The wooden shoe dancing put on by one of the gentlemen is alone worth the price of admission.

"A good show. Snap 'em up when any of you showmen get a chance. They are playing Nebraska at present."

Producers' Dist. Corp.

MIAMI. (6,317 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Print okay. Very good Sunday picture. Had good attendance. Well pleased. Klieman & Roben, K-R Theatre, Ashton, Iowa.

NIGHT HAWK. (5,115 feet). Star cast. One of the best Harry Carey subjects I ever ran, and I have used them all. Dave Walsh, Little Hippodrome Theatre, Buffalo, New York.

NIGHT HAWK. (5,115 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Splendid. Held interest all the way. Those that don't like westerns liked this one as it had a different swing. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

NIGHT HAWK. (5,115 feet). Star, Harry Carey. This went over fairly well and comments were all favorable. It was a good program picture. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre Reading, Pennsylvania.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Received more favorable comments from patrons than any previous play. Showed to capacity business during entire run. Have rebooked it for later date. Box office receipts largest for six months. Mrs. Bessie Rutledge, Orpheum Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star cast. Each picture I receive from this company satisfied. Makes me money and full of pep, and, oh boy! talk about Carey losing out. "Roaring Rails" is a wonder, and the kid better than Coogan. You had better keep some open time for Producers, and there is nothing slow about them. L. M. Carroll, Carroll Theatre, Matewan, West Virginia.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star cast. The best Carey I have ever seen. It is different from other railroad stories. Audience well pleased. Business good. H. H. Hustler, Highland Theatre, Audubon, New Jersey.

Selznick

CRICKET ON THE HEARTH. Star, Joseph Swickard. This is an excellent feature if you have the right audience to see it. It is for the highbrows as it is a Dicken's story. We had fair business. Tone, okay. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

FLAPPER WIVES. Star cast. Poorest picture I ever played. Don't let them tell you Strongheart has a lead. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. No audience appeal. Country class town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

LAW OF COMPENSATION. Star, Norma Talmadge. This was an old picture and the continuity was not good. Seemed draggy. It was a substitute and sent for Saturday night. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, nothing extra. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

QUEEN OF SIN. (8 reels). Star cast. A great big piece of cheese story, keep away from it if you don't want them to lynch your print. According to Moving Picture World eight reels, received in six reels in bad condition. Sunday, no. No audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

RUPERT OF HENTZAU. (9,400 feet). Star cast. Lots of stars, lots of film, lots of them walked out on account of too much of the latter. I say about a fifty per cent. picture. Country class town of 900. Admission 10-25, 10-35. W. F. Haycock, Star Theatre (253 seats), Callaway, Nebraska.

United Artists

track. Did not draw quite as well as it should have. Some very good shots of the ponies in this one in the race. Tone, good. A family picture. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

WOMAN'S SECRET. Star, Mae Marsh. A very poor attraction that failed to either please or draw. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand and Liberty Theatres (700-500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Universal

ACQUITTAL. (6,325 feet). Star, Norman Kerry. Not up to expectations. Do not get the opinion that it was punk. It was all right but not as good as reports on it had led me to suppose. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, average. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

BACK TRAILS. Star cast. One of the best Hoxie's I have played. Plenty action. Good business. Fred P. Hornscheidt, Gem Theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas.

BUTTERFLY. (7,472 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. Beautiful society drama. Excellent acting and lavishly staged. Our patrons liked it. Laura La Plante deservedly starred. We did fine business despite strong opposition. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Splendid audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 25-40. Children ten cents. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

CHAPTER IN HER LIFE. (6,330 feet). Star cast. A Christian Scientist picture. Fair entertainment for children and will get all Christian Scientists if advertised accordingly. I don't have many here so did not break any records. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. College class town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

DARING CHANCES. Star, Jack Hoxie. A good western story with a child actress that is a wonder. All of Hoxie's westerns are good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

DARK STAIRWAYS. (5,030 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A very good crook story but Rawlinson seems to have lost out here. Fails to draw any more. Print good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

DRIVEN. (5,400 feet). Star cast. A good picture but prints bad. All the Jewels I have run yet have been bad prints. Would advise the exhibitor to stay away from these unless he can get prints. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (187 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WANDA HAWLEY

Featured in the Al Christie production, "Reckless Romance," released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

FIGHTING AMERICAN. (5,251 feet). Star, Pat O'Malley. Just an ordinary picture, bordering on the foolish. The aeroplane shots save it from being a joke. Supposed to be a special but is a long way from it in my estimation. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Residential class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

HIGH SPEED. (4,927 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. One of Herb's good ones. Took very well with my audience. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Residential class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

LAW FORBIDS. (6,262 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. Don't pass this up. She is sure a wonderful little star and the story has a good moral. Picture very fine. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

RAMBLIN' KID. Star, Hoot Gibson. My patrons liked it, and it pulled them in. Well pleased with the production. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

RECKLESS AGE. (6,954 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. This is Reginald Denny at his best. A snappy high class society film which pleased our customers immensely. Denny is rapidly becoming screen's most popular male star. Tone, splendid. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. City of 250,000. Admission 25-40 Children, ten cents. Jean Darnell, Capitol Theatre (1,044 seats), Dallas, Texas.

RECKLESS AGE. (6,954 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. This is by far the best thing Denny has done so far. Let's hope that Mr. Laemmle will be far sighted enough to secure only the best vehicles in the future so as to keep up the undoubted popularity of this star. Advise all exhibitors to grab it. Those who have not yet played "Sporting Youth" should secure both immediately. They are both comedy-dramas. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

RIDERS UP. (4,904 feet). Star, Creighton Hale. A very ordinary program. I think people were glad that it was a short feature. Tone, fair. Hardly suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal, not much. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

SAWDUST. (4,800 feet). Star, Gladys Walton. Splendid program picture. Circus feature fine. Good entertainment for everybody. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Rural class town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andrews Theatre, San Andrews, California.

STORM DAUGHTER. (5,303 feet). Star, Priscilla Dean. Not a picture for Dean. Business fair. All classes city of 40,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (668 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania

TURMOIL. (7 reels). Star cast. An average picture, nothing out of the ordinary. Look before you book. Quite a lot of hokum, especially the incident where the dam gives away. I don't imagine it would appeal strongly in some localities. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

TURMOIL. (7 reels). Star, Charles Ray. A truthless woman, a romance upset, a whirling, swirling catastrophe of life, diverting drama that will grip you. William Noble, Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

WINE. Star, Clara Bow. A good picture with Clara Bow's personality that made the picture a knock-out. Pleased one hundred per cent. Drew a full house with Corinne Griffith in "Island Wives" as competition and they walked a mile further to see it. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. College class town of 2,100. Admission 10-25. Robert X. Williams Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

Vitagraph

BEHOLD THIS WOMAN. Star, Irene Rich. A good picture that pleases, and that's enough. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

CODE OF THE WILDERNESS. (6 reels). Star, John Bowers. This picture is a world beater, and if Paramount had it it would be another "Covered Wagon." It will stand boosting and an advance in prices. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

CODE OF THE WILDERNESS. (6 reels). Star cast. Went over one hundred per cent. Very clean. Thrilling western picture. Extra fine cast and knocked them for a row of thrills. A real outdoor story. But this one, it's good. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. City and country class town of 2,000. Admission 10-25-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (400 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

LADDER JINX. (5,068 feet). Star cast. Fine comedy drama and went over fine. Prints in good shape. Tone, good. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. City and country class town of 2,000. Admission 10-25-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (400 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

MASTERS OF MEN. (6,800 feet). Star cast. A sea picture in seven reels. A story that will interest the boys. Not a slow moment in the story. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

Warner Bros.

CORNERED. Star, Marie Prevost. This picture was brand new and we advertised it, that way. A good crook picture but no box office value. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

HEROES OF THE STREET. (6 reels). Star, Wesley Barry. Wesley Barry don't go much here. This is a good one, but failed to draw. Print in worst shape I ever received from Warner Brothers. Can't hardly get it through machine. City and country class town of 2,000. Admission 10-25-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (400 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

THREE WOMEN. (8,200 feet). Star, Pauline Frederick. A splendid picture. Wonderfully directed and pleased everyone. Splendid business throughout week in spite of Spark's circus. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes city of 91,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O. Kimmer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

Comedies

DRENCHED. (Eductiaonal). Star, Cliff Bowes. They certainly must have used a lot of water to make this one. Bowes must have spoiled a couple of suits making this one. It sure is wet. A fair Cameo laugh maker. Tone, okay. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

FLIP FLOPS. (Mack Sennett). An extra good comedy. Small class town of 300. Admission 10-25, specials, 25-50. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

GREAT OUT DOORS. (Pathe). Spat Family. Just about the craziest thing you have ever seen. Book this one and kill business. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, none. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississipi.

GREEN AS GRASS. (Educational). Good. Lots of fun in this one. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good. Neighborhood class town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

HALF BACK OF NOTRE DAME. (Pathe). Star, Harry Langdon. Booked this on strength of Straight from Shoulder Reports, ani it is a humdinger. Book it if you can buy it right. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

JUNIOR PARTNER. (Educational). Star, Johnny Fox. Good kid comedy that pleased the children immensely. Played it with "Penrod & Sam," and made a good combination, as it was a "Kid" program all the way through. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 15-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

NO LOAFING. (Educational). Star, Poodles Hanneford. Seems like loafing, though, after seeing Lige Conley and Jimmie Adams in the other Educational comedies. This fellow not as clever as the two afore mentioned boys, although the comedy pleased a few. Tone, okay. Sunday, guess so. Fair audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 15-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

OH TEACHER. (Educational). Juvenile comedy. A very good comedy. Well worth playing. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

RINGER FOR DAD. (Mr. & Mrs. Carter DeHaven). Like the majority of DeHaven's, nothing extra. Not even good comedy fillers. Condition of print, good. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25-20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

"Excuse our recent NEGLECT! —will do better," says our good scout who has long contributed to these dependable pages—J. A. Herring, Playhouse, Strong, Arkansas.

Anybody else been neglectful? SHOOT IN THE TIPS!

ROUGHING IT. (Pathe). Spat Family. Another Spat bull's eye. These Spats are clean and humorous, containing a good share of that your and mine family stuff that appeals to all classes. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission, regular 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

THERE HE GOES. (Educational). A real two-reel comedy. Will knock them off their seats. I run Educational comedies one hundred per cent., and they plase 100 per cent. This is a real one. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. City and country class town of 2,000. Admission 10-25-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (400 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

WAGGIN' TALE. (F. B. O.). Better than the average DeHaven, as it has a few laughs in it. Good print. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25, 20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

WEAKLING. (Fox). Fox comics are all good. This one is real good. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

Serials

INTO THE NET. (Pathe). Star, Jack Mulhall. Judged by the first two episodes, this is the best police serial ever made. I opened this with the first two episodes in conjunction with "In Hollywood." This will help your box office any time. A very good Sunday night serial. This is the first serial this house has ever run. Robert Elliane, Palace Theatre (1,307 seats), Norwich, Connecticut.

Short Subjects

FIGHTING BLOOD. (F. B. O.) Star, George O'Hara. A good short subject liked by old and young, and is different from the ordinary short subject. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Farmers and small class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

KINOGRAMS. (Educational). We have had this news reel for about four months and are pleased with it. The prints are always in good shape and we get good service. Tone, okay. Good audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TELEPHONE GIRL. (F.B.O). Star, Alberta Vaughn. Would call these the very best two-reelers ever made. My patrons are unstinted in their praise of each and every one of them, and this series has started many new fans for me. Am on number ten and found no flivvers so far. Residential class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. John McGill, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Port Orchard, Washington.

Miscellaneous

BACK FIRE. (State Right). Star, Jack Hoxie. A good western full of action and just as good as Universal Hoxie's. Star made up too heavy for closeups. Print good. Tone, okay. Not suitable for Sunday. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

BAFFLED. (State Right). Star, Franklyn Farnum. Fair western picture with little action. Some producers think that all necessary to produce a western is a few backgrounds with a cactus here and there, a little sand, and a few cowboys riding around on sleek, well fed horses. Franklyn Farnum deserves better direction. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Weak audience appeal. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

BROKEN SILENCE. (State Right). Star cast. This is a very poor Curwood. One is very foolish to buy an old picture at any price unless it was a real success when new. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Small town and farming class town of 800. Admission 10-25. Welty & Son, Mid-Way Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

DAUGHTERS OF PLEASURE. (Principal). Star, Monte Blue. (6 reels). An exceedingly excellent picture, full of passion and excitement, and very interesting. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

DRUMS OF JEOPARDY. (Truart). (6,529 feet). Star, Elaine Hammerstein. A very good picture sold to me right. Good cast and print new. Star somehow or other does not draw for me. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

EAGLE'S CLAW. (State Right). Star, Big Boy Williams. Fair western story. Give this star, if you may call him one, better stories and he will make good. Print fair. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

FIGHTING SKIPPER. (Arrow). Star, Jack Perrin. Action and plenty of it. One of the best serials I have seen for a long while. People came just for the serial. Tone, good. Neighborhood class city of 15,000. Admission 10-15. V. A. Ponsant, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Waterville, Maine.

GAMBLING FOOL. (Celebrated Players). Star, Franklyn Farnum. This is just another good Independent western subject. Will please the ladies as well as men. The Independents are getting better all the time. Their westerns are great. Stay with them, boys, and watch them improve. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

GENTLEMAN UNAFRAID. (State Right). Star, George Larkin. Pleasing story. Larkin dances in this picture, and it reminds you of Valentino in "Four Horsemen." Print good. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

GOLD MADNESS. (State Right). Star cast. (5,860 feet). This is far below the average for a James Oliver Curwood picture. Lacks action and audience appeal. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, forty per cent. High class farmers town of 2,000. Admission 10-35. P. A. Preddy, Elaine Theatre, Sinton, Texas.

HIGH SPEED LEE. (Arrow). Star, Reed Howes. Reed Howes is certainly good looking and with more experience should make good. Average feature. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Neighborhood class city of 15,000. Admission 10-15. V. A. Ponsant, Bijou Theatre (500 seats), Waterville, Maine.

I AM THE LAW. (Affiliated Distributors). Star cast. (6,800 feet). Pleased about fifty per cent. Those enjoying "mounted police" stories will appreciate this. Not much for those who don't. Business very light with us. Fair tone. Sunday, questionable. Audience appeal, fifty-fifty. All classes town of 4,000. Admission 10-20-25. C. T. Meisburg, Opera House (600 seats), Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

Quoting Laemmle Will Help to Sell

Here is a frame used in many of the Universal exchanges to sell the exhibitors through the vigorous column run in the Saturday Evening Post each week.

THE LAEMMLE FRAME

This is one of the best selling advertisements in the entire list of national advertising, and if you use Universal Service, you cannot do better than to copy the frame and make it a permanent feature of your lobby display. Even where it does not refer to your own bookings it will assist in that it sells the general Universal idea, and sells it remarkably well.

The same thing can be done with other national advertising, but the Universal column is better than most of the full or double pages, and easier to read.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

BESIDES "Tarnish" as the feature photoplay of the week's program, a great deal of interest was centered in the reappearance here of Mme. Elsa Stralia, after a world tour. Exploitation was brought to bear for this dramatic soprano, as well as for the film feature, with the result that musical Brooklyn was on its toes for the event. In addition there were two other cinema incidents, namely the Topical Review and a novelty reel called "Trickery" distributed by Allyn B. Carrick. Also, four other musical presentations helped make the show one of the most diversified seen here. The music end of the performance took up thirty minutes, while the films required one hour and thirty minutes, bringing the whole up to the customary two hours.

The overture was Wallace's "Maritana," used here for the first time. Brooklyn audiences, usually cold to music unfamiliar to their ears, received this with enthusiasm. The lighting included one rainbow-hued flood from the dome, of 150 amperes, on the musicians, and another of orange covering the first, likewise from the dome. Two light pink entrance spots crossed on the ceiling drapes and sides of the orchestra shell. Borders of large stage full blue, and green one-half. Silver draw curtains were closed over the production stage and used as a transparency. Four spots behind these curtains, two light amber and two light orange. Two deep blue open box lamps lighting blue plush cyclorama backing up silver draws. Amber and orange arch spots also hitting the draw curtains. Eight minutes.

For a novel pantomime-dance-song presentation the Ritz Male Quartette was doubled up with the ballet, the incident programmed as In Silhouette. The music was Toselli's "Serenade" and Burgmein's "Carnival." The quartette was costumed as black and white pierrots, and the dancers wore black and white ballet dresses. The drop, revealing a garden and balcony, was done by P. Dodd Ackerman. Eight steel blue open box lamps lighted this drop from behind, giving the silhouette effect in striking manner. No other lights were used. Five minutes.

Girl of My Heart, six minutes, required the services of a tenor and five girls of the ballet, as follows: Irish girl, Spanish girl, Italian girl, Scotch girl and American girl. The tenor sang the verse and chorus of the song in front of the gold curtains of the production stage, the curtains then opening to reveal a scrim, two runways, sign post, all backed up by deep blue plush cyclorama. As each of the girls appeared the tenor sang a measure of appropriate songs: "Peggy O'Neil," "Lolita," "Maria Maria," "Bonny" and the second chorus of "Girl of My Heart." As the American girl gets on, the scrim is drawn to show the other maidens posed for a full-page finish. Amber and orange arch spots were used on the gold draws, and a magenta spot in each of the transparent windows at either side of the orchestra reflected light on the musicians. Blue borders large stage; green and magenta entrance spots crossing on the ceiling drapes. Lights for the dancers were from overhead and sides

Elsa Stralia, dramatic soprano, appeared on the apron of the large stage under a pink spot from the dome on her head and a blue spot from the dome on her dress. The front llama cloth curtains at the proscenium served as the background for the number. From the booth was thrown a dark violet Mestrum flood on this curtain. Entrance spots on the ceiling of green and magenta. The singer's selection was "Ernani Involami" from Verdi's "Ernani." Five minutes.

An Orange Grove, six minutes, introduced a soprano, male quartette and dancers. The scene was a neutral back drop flooded by blue box lamps, and props included ten orange trees and orange crates. These were wired for lights for a finish. Men wore blue overalls and big straw hats, and girls wore gingham and sunbonnets. Theme selections were "An Orange Grove in California" and "Home in Pasadena."

A western exhibitor writes that the stunts he sees here are so much better than his own that he sends none in. Suppose all of you felt the same way about it? Send in the stuff that has helped you and it will help others, who have helped you.

Metro-Goldwyn Releases

TWO OF THE STUNTS USED ON THE RECENT METRO-GOLDWYN WEEK IN VALDOSTA, GA.

It has already been told in these pages how the Strand Theatre framed its own private "week." These photographs show a pair of the stunts that put the idea over. On the left is the peep-hole window with advertising material for Three Weeks, Along Came Ruth and Little Robinson Crusoe. On the right is the bannered trolley. The lettering is crude but it served.

Three Way Stunt Worked on Bread

Free samples of bread have been used in many places to put over the Metro-Goldwyn production of Bread, but in Evansville, Ind., the stunt was welded to the Jackie Coogan milk idea by offering a pass to anyone who bought a loaf of a certain sort of bread and handed it to a representative of the Salvation Army stationed in the lobby.

For the convenience of patrons a drug store directly opposite the theatre was sold on the idea of adding a bakery department for one day and the drug concern and the bakery took an entire page in the papers to tell about it.

Since there was a charity angle to the idea some 500 window cards were laid off to other stores, completely covering the town.

The stunt got enough attention for the play to get a profitable patronage.

Music Won

Putting in an orchestra for the showing of The Covered Wagon at the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ga., was what sold the big production for J. Wright Brown.

Neither theatre in Columbus regularly uses an orchestra and so the announcement that a specially engaged orchestra would interpret the score of The Covered Wagon did more to make an impression of bigness than any of the special advertising, and made for a decided success.

The lobby display was a cross banner and a cutout of the wagon from the 24-sheet. A trailer and special slides were employed for two weeks in advance, with 43 inches of special advance advertising, but the music and the announcement that the house would open two hours earlier than usual to accommodate the crowds was what made these crowds develop.

A First National Release

A NEATLY DESIGNED FRONT FOR SECRETS FROM SEATTLE

Done by the Strand Theatre, mostly with cutout material ingeniously combined with the work of the house artist. Located on a very busy street, the display value of the two marquise cutouts is many times that for a neighborhood house.

Using a compo board airplane with the title, Sinners in Heaven, in block letters on the under side was about all that Frank J. Miller did for the Daniels-Dix combination at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

The plane had a propeller working on a fan, but this did not make enough noise, so Mr. Miller added a buzzer. You can get about the same effect with a piece of tin so placed that the tips of the propeller barely touch it.

It's Good IF—

Here's a good stunt if it doesn't land you in jail. If you don't plan it all in advance with the civic authorities it probably will get you a heavy fine and the sort of publicity you don't care for. It was worked for the Columbia Theatre, Erie, Pa., by a Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, David Flair.

He arranged for 200 piles of sand, each a foot in height and each carrying a banner for The Arab. The night before the opening he slipped a pass into one out of every four of the piles and advertised the fact in the morning paper.

AN ATMOSPHERIC LOBBY ON THE ARAB FROM H. B. CLARKE

He used painted palms and a flat tent for the Garing Theatre, Greenville, S. C., but it got the idea over as well as real palms probably would have done. The two oil paintings were put in for photographic purposes. They don't regularly show.

Made Yolanda Debut High Society Event

Charles Raymond, of the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., gave a special performance of Yolanda to official and diplomatic Washington, and made it a real society event. The ladies of four cabinet officers had parties in the house, the District Commissioners were also among those present, as were the members of some of the minor legations and embassies. The White House was represented by one of the President's numerous secretaries and Mrs. Coolidge's personal secretary, while there was a goodly sprinkling of Army and Navy officers and official society in general.

It made the society columns instead of the amusements page, and did the house considerably more good than double the space in the section reserved for amusements.

Mr. Raymond also used a paraphrase of the police summons, which were placed in the cars parked at one of the ball games just when the close race for the pennant was drawing crowds to the ball park. This was done for Butterfly and not for Yolanda, which did not require much additional publicity after the big stunt.

In some ways it is easier to work a big society stunt in Washington than in any other city in the country, but this does not detract from Mr. Raymond's achievement.

A Paramount Release

TWO STUNTS USED BY HOWARD WAUGH ON FEET OF CLAY

One is just the poster cutout, but the other is modeled to show the feet of clay where others got less with an entire statue, and the feet are more within the reach of the average artist. Done for Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis.

Had the Mayor

Valdosta, Ga., is the latest to swing into line with the mayor barking for a special week. It was Metro-Goldwyn this time and the stunt was swung by the Strand Theatre.

Mayors are getting almost too common. If you want a special week you must at least get the Governor and his staff to get a write-up.

Blew Themselves

Two hundred children were induced to take an encore on the familiar Jackie Coogan impersonation when Little Robinson Crusoe played the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga.

C. B. Stiff not only gave each child a tin horn but he offered prizes of $5, $2.50, $1.50 and $1 for the best impersonations, permitting one of the newspapers to take the credit for the stunt so long as he got the space.

The kiddies were judged in front of the newspaper office and then handed the horns and marched to the theatre in a body. It's been done before, but it always works.

Put Over Reno for Return Engagement

Harold E. Rice, of the Majestic Theatre, Pueblo, Colorado, put over Reno for a return engagement to a nice summer business through the intensive use of a petition.

It was primary time, and all sorts of petitions were being circulated, so Mr. Rice got out his petition on behalf of the henpecks; the ostensible object being the doing away of the necessity for a trip to Reno by persuading wives to treat their unfortunate spouses more kindly.

He obtained several yards of signature to his burlesque petition and then made that his chief lobby display, placing it on an imposing velvet-draped pedestal with a rolling pin to serve as a paper weight.

The lobby was further decorated with flat irons, coffee cups and other implements of domestic warfare. That's not so new, but Mr. Rice added to this the complete set of forms used in divorce cases, which he obtained from the clerk of the County Court.

Comparatively few persons have seen divorce decrees, and this was his best bet. As he trusts to the lobby to do the bulk of his selling, the value of this stunt was unquestioned, and he drew a much better business than he had anticipated.

A United Artists Release

THIS IS JUST ANOTHER WINDOW BUT A HANDSOME ONE

Keep it until you want to sell your local dealer on a window and then give it to him for a map. Not all of the copies are Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, but the stills and cutouts overshadow the other titles. From C. B. Stiff, Chattanooga.

Adapted

Adapting the Welcome Stranger billboards used by Omaha, the Granada Theatre, San Francisco, sold the Federal Securities Corporation the idea of running a daily advertisement with the catchline covering a general welcome. The copy was changed for a month, but the heading stayed, to advertise the Producers Distributing Corporation picture when it came along thirty days later.

Just what the value was to the financial company seems more or less open to question, but the value to the theatre is apparent.

The scheme will work better where the greeting is on behalf of the community organizations.

A Paramount Release

HERE IS ONE COVERED WAGON THAT IS NOT HEADED WEST

It is touring New England in the interest of the Poli theatres, where the Paramount picture is to play. It was originated by Gordon Wrighter, of the Palace, Springfield, but it is working for as many towns on the circuit as it has time to make.

Covered Wagon to Tour New England

Sylvester Z. Poli has a considerable circuit in Connecticut and Massachusetts, and he has The Covered Wagon booked, so Gordon Wrighter, of the Palace Theatre, Springfield, Mass., built a good reproduction of the original prairie schooner and sent it cruising around town on behalf of the picture.

There was a fair during the showing of the picture, and the four-horse team with its picturesque vehicle did much to get the fair crowds headed to the Palace.

After its showing it was started for Hartford, Conn., where it was met by Boy Scouts and Campfire Girls and escorted into town. The Mayor looked it over and gave a parking permit for a city park.

It is the intention of the Poli general management to send the wagon to all the towns where they can use the perambulator, and as most of the cities are within reaching distance, the schooner will cruise over most of southern New England.

There is a real veteran down in the southwest that may be rolling up a greater mileage, being chaperoned by the Paramounteer for that district, but it is likely to be an even break, at that.

Roused Singapore with Robin Hood

Very black Robin Hoods were one of the features of an intensive campaign on Robin Hood when it opened in Singapore to give the Fairbanks production a start in the Straits Settlement and the Orient generally. The picture opened at the Victoria at a dollar top, and Max Baker, of the United Artists agency, worked hard on the exploitation.

Native boys were decked out with bows and arrows to impersonate the hero while they peddled bills, and there was a more carefully gotten up native for a special bally. A 60-foot banner was stretched on the front of a government building under construction, and native artisans turned out Robin Hood dolls, which found a ready sale.

At a fancy dress ball prizes were offered for the best impersonations of Robin Hood and Maid Marian, and for the first time in Singapore a picture was prologued.

This last was purely scenic effect, a drop showing the entrance to the castle. During the overture the drawbridge was let down to disclose the screen on which the picture ran. It was inexpensive, and yet decidedly good.

Adroit

Austin, Texas, is a college town, and right after the fall term opens it is the custom of the students to put the freshmen over the jumps. One of the favorite stunts is to invade a picture show and "let" the freshies address the audience. Even police protection is of no avail.

La Mert Guyer, of the Majestic Theatre, had The Covered Wagon, and he did not want the show spoiled. But the students figured that here was where they could get the largest —if not the most appreciative—audience, and they started to crash in.

Guyer met them with a better idea. He had a regulation covered wagon for a perambulator. Why not let the victims haul that around town? The idea made a hit, and instead of breaking up the show the students advertised it for about an hour a day for each day of the run and it made more talk than would a twenty-mule team with Warren Kerrigan driving.

Tact and quick thinking help a lot sometimes.

Police Passed 'Em

Getting the police to hand out theatrical circulars has been done before, but not so often that the matter is stale news, so pin a badge on A. G. Stolte, of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines. The police put out 20,000 folders on The Sea Hawk, and asked for more.

The reason was that the bills also carried the new traffic regulations. Every traffic officer in the city was given a supply and in four days there was a request for a fresh supply.

The girl ushers, dressed in Spanish costume, put out blotters in the business district and a mechanical display figure with changing cards was dressed as a pirate and put into a store window to exploit the novel.

It all helped to make a wonderful business.

Gaudy

They like bright things in Laredo, Texas. Jack Rowley, of the Royal Theatre, got Cytherea too late to get hold of paper from the exchange, so he painted his own cards. One of them was in red, black, blue, green, yellow and white. Then he ran out of paint, but still the sign attracted considerable attention.

Get These

Eddie Bonns, of Metro-Goldwyn, has revived the slate window card for Buster Keaton in The Navigator. This shows the comedian holding a slate on which any sales message may be written, the message being erased for a new sales announcement when desired.

These were first put into use with one of the old Wesley Barry pictures and they made windows where nothing else would be taken in. They should do as well for Keaton and can be used for other Keaton comedies.

Get as many as you think you can land. They are more than ordinarily useful.

A First National Release

THESE BANNERS COST ONE PASS APIECE IN JACKSONVILLE

Guy Kenimer advertised free passes in the paper and so many autoists called that he had to have more banners painted for The Perfect Flapper. A pass was the only reward, but the stunt helped to swell the receipts by about $800 over the average.

Metro Exploiteers Like Make-up Idea

Showing examples of stage and screen make-up, which has been extensively used in the Southeast, is traveling toward the setting sun.

H. D. Grove, Jr., of the Strand Theatre, Des Moines, worked it with Charles Simpson, of the Metro-Goldwyn forces, and got four windows instead of only one by slightly changing the idea.

As previously worked, the make-up has been landed on some drug store, the girl presumably using the cosmetics supplied by that store. In the Des Moines campaign the exploiteer shrewdly took it over to a furniture store and then sold three leading drug stores the idea of dressing their windows to connect with the display.

The girl worked from twelve to one and from five to six, and it was necessary to have special police detailed to keep the crowds from breaking the heavy plate windows. At other times the window carried a card announcing that on the stated hours a lesson on screen and street make-ups employed by Aileen Pringle, would be demonstrated.

In addition to the three windows, the furniture store took a third of a page the opening day of His Hour to plug the showing and the Elinor Glyn production. They still take Elinor Glyn seriously out in the middle west, and the stunt materially swelled the crowds.

Another useful idea was the coating of the colored 22x28 cards with bleached or "white" shellac to suggest oil paintings. Set into borrowed frames they made as good a showing as actual paintings, which is a good thing to remember.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

ANOTHER ADAPTATION OF THE MAKE-UP IDEA FOR HIS HOUR

This time the stunt was worked in Des Moines and a furniture store was tied to the use of the model instead of the usual drug store, but three drug stores were linked to the cosmetic idea which gave the Strand Theatre four windows for one.

Here, too

Ace Berry, of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, used Stanley N. Chambers' idea of a surprise week, and carried it to the point where the newspapers in their reviews of the show withheld the name of the picture. He had a surprise picture, a surprise overture, a surprise presentation, a surprise comedy and a surprise novelty, but he admitted frankly that he was going to have a news reel.

Now that it is all over it won't hurt to tell that the picture was In Every Woman's Life.

It's one of those occasionals, but it is a good, hard worker. Why not try it. It's specially good when you have a really good picture with a non-selling title.

A special showing of America at the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, made such an impression that several of the guests urged Charles Morrison to hold a second. He very promptly did and got more than double the usual value out of the stunt.

Votes for Women

Madera, Calif., is small enough to get an entire town interested, so when Lew H. Newcomb decided upon a voting contest for The Perfect Flapper he did not require that tickets be purchased. You just cut out a ballot from either newspaper and voted it in one of several stores where boxes had been provided. This tied the papers and the stores to his advertising.

A curling iron, a two-pound box of candy and some tickets were the prizes that had the whole town talking and working. Sunday night he came within $11 of the record for that day and beat his Monday record for a follow, and the record was not made at regular prices, either, while the Colleen Moore picture carried no extra charge.

A Paramount Release

AN UNUSUAL WINDOW HOOK-UP FOR THE ALASKAN IN DALLAS

There is little in common between a beauty shop and Alaska, but the line "Gold attracts men, but beauty holds them" enabled the Palace Theatre to get this desirable window for the Meighan picture. Planned by John J. Friedl and Raymond Jones.

Moon Sells Coffee

Turn about is only fair play. With all the trade hook-ups available, it was inevitable that the dealers should ask some reciprocity.

Russell B. Moon, Chicago Paramounteer, has written a booklet on how to sell coffee to be given the trade handling the Monarch brand. This was displayed in the store where Merton of the Movies used to clerk, and a little tricking of the still has given an additional display that looks like a demonstration. This has been made into a window hanger which is being sent all through that sales district.

The booklet suggests a number of good sales ideas linking the coffee to Merton and his adventures and marks a new departure in hook-ups.

Points the Way

Having booked the Famous Forty, Claud Cady, of the Gladmer Theatre, Lansing, Mich., has added a new sign to his house front. It is an arrow seventeen feet long by three high, so built that the lettering on the shaft can be changed for each change of title, but the Paramount trade mark has been built into the feather. It shows on both sides and is visible about eight blocks distant. It worked fine on Manhandled, but he is wondering what he can do with The Story Without a Name.

A Paramount Release

THE FOYER ADVANCE ON FEET OF CLAY FROM ATLANTA

How Howard Price Kingsmore advertised in the Howard Theatre lobby. The statue in the foreground is a clay model and not a flat. He used the rain insurance idea and white footprints on a black ground which were pasted to the sidewalks.

A Window Contest Got 200 Displays

Hitting off on a new tack, Roland G. McCurdy, Universal exploiteer, cooked up a nice little three-way stunt for Wine in San Francisco.

He hooked the Wildroot Company and the manager of the Examiner's Merchandising Service Bureau to a window dressing contest. The company offered $200 in prizes, the Examiner gave the newspaper space and the California Theatre got the space and the display value of 200 windows for nothing at all.

We don't know what connection Wildroot has with Wine, but there must have been some hook-in angle, for dealers took up the scheme and all of the windows were illustrated with scenes from the play.

Fifty more windows were won with a special sticker gotten out by the theatre, and with 250 windows back of a good newspaper campaign, featuring the fake story of the floating cabaret, the picture went over.

That cabaret story has done a lot for the play even though it narrowly escaped going on a bust when a U. S. revenue cutter was sent on a wild-goose chase for the mythical ship.

Free Cards

George Brown used 3,000 of the postcard reproductions of the 24-sheet on Her Love Story, but he didn't pay for them. He did pay for the printing of the sales message on the back, but a local real estate firm paid for the cards and the printing of their own one line message on the front. The cards were given out at a local exposition.

Much use was made of two cuts of Miss Swanson, one in the bobbed hair in Manhandled and the other the long wig in Her Love Story. These were only two items of a campaign that sold the star to a 20 per cent. increase over the usual business.

Teachers Helped

School did not open until the week after Clayton Tunstill, of the Rialto Theatre, Chickasha, Okla., worked on Paramount Week, but he got the school co-operation just the same.

The teachers had reported for duty to register the classes and look after other details. Tunstill persuaded the school boards that Wanderer of the Wasteland had real educational value, and as a result each pupil on registering was given a herald on the feature and advised to see it.

That gave the kids a "teacher says" to take home, and the result was an unusually large juvenile patronage, while the adults crowded in for Manhandled, which shared the week.

Pleased Prisoners

A special showing of the Lincoln film to the inmates of Auburn (N. Y.) prison got a fine run of publicity for the Strand Theatre, Syracuse. The film was sent over to Auburn with the offer of small cash prizes for the best criticisms by the inmates, and these were used for press and lobby work to good effect.

The idea was old, but it had not before been done in Syracuse, and Lincoln was particularly appropriate for such a stunt.

Borrowed a Burro

It was not very difficult to dig out an old prospector and a burro in Fresno, Calif., and the pack was decorated with banners reading, "I am the Wanderer of the Wasteland."

The prospector led the animal through the streets and managed to get him stalled at some of the important intersections, all of which was good business for the Liberty Theatre.

It beat the usual "I am a jackass" stunt three ways for ticket selling.

Incensed

Utilizing the tie-up with the Temple of Allah incense, the Garrick Theatre, Minneapolis, distributed 3,000 sample packages on behalf of The Arab.

This is better than the sand idea in that it will be more lasting. Sand is looked at and thrown away, where the incense will be burned, and the extra time and effort required will all work on behalf of the Metro-Goldwyn production.

A COVERED WAGON TABLEAU WITH SPORTING SHOE TRIM

This was built by R. K. Thomajan, Paramounteer, of a backing and three ground rows, with a sand and rock floor. The log frame gives a finish to the display, which is smaller than the window space.

Novel Cut Device Puts Over a Title

By all the rules this plan book cut for The Side Show of Life is a poor one because it does not clearly display the title, and yet it really is good because the novelty of the display leads the reader to stop long enough to get the title, even though he may not be looking for the amusement advertising. Doing this, it does more than the most eligible type lettering could effect. The Ohio Theatre, Indianapolis, employed the cut in this 130 x 4 to very good effect, and held the selling talk to the centre, where it became a part of the cut. This line cut, with little detail, is better than the average and one of the most useful that Paramount has worked out for the Famous Forty.

AN ATTRACTIVE SELLER

Ingenious Hooks

A nice co-operative page was used by the Gateway Theatre, Glendale, Calif., on Never Say Die. No prize stunt was used, the aptness of the title getting the interest of the readers. A tire company advertised that its product never says die, and a candy concern urged a similar sentiment with the suggestion that she could be won with a box of candy. They even hooked in a tent repertoire show to advise that after seeing Never Say Die the reader also see the tent troupers. That's something new.

Poor Typography Hurts Big Space

This display from the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, looks like one of those things you find in some little backwoods sheet when the compositor is trying to spread himself. It's "yap" clear through to the bone, with its excess of all capitals, carefully centered banks and even that old time "!!Enormous!!" Some comp from away up the banks of the famous Wabash must have blown into the composing room of the newspaper. It is one of the poorest displays ever originated by the Circle. The copy is good and probably the original layout was better than this. It looks as though a good idea had been foully murdered in the printing office. The worst offense is that three line bank of all capitals eleven inches long. And this bank is the keynote of the play and the main line of the advertisement, apart from the title. The space is a six nines, and that gives ample room in which to gain real effects, but there is no use trying to get a nice layout with a compositor who has no ideas. About the only thing he did not do was to centre the title, and probably that was marked so he could not. Centre the title, and you would have a typical back-country layout.

Bi-colored Letters Hurt Display Value

We do not often get a chance to find fault with Milt Crandall. Generally it is the other way around. Perhaps this will help to keep his head down a little, for Milt has been pulling stuff that justified a swelling of the skull. But this space from the joint ad of the Rowland and Clark houses in Pittsburgh is very much small-town. The alternation of white and black in the lettering of the title is atrocious. If there is a stronger word than atrocious, slip it in, for we never got anything worse. When Milt did fall he surely went the distance—all the way down. And there is so little excuse for it. The sea hawk did not have to be that size. Lots of theatres have managed to get along without any hawk at all and still fill all the seats for a couple of weeks or more. The hawk should have been reduced to a size that would bring the tips of the wings below the main title. We imagine that Milt knows that as well as we do. Probably the artist sprang it on him too late to make a change, and we don't imagine it will happen again. Certainly not in just that way, though newspaper artists find more ways of breaking out than smallpox. The Liberty did a big business with this picture, as did the downtown house. But there were few tickets sold on this appeal. The campaign was so big that a single poor advertisement could not affect the run, but that does not alter the fact that this is a darned poor piece of advertising drawing.

ROTTEN LETTERING

Taking Chances Out in Milwaukee

Someone took a big chance out in Milwaukee, and came through with it fairly well. Appreciating that The Sea Hawk was out of the ordinary, an effort was made to suggest this fact in the displays. And they decided upon what was more or less on the magazine style. But they knew they were taking chances on getting the cut work mussed, so they shrewdly put enough type into the layouts to ensure sales even if the cut did not come through. Take the first example. This is 10½ across three. Save for the top line and the panel the face of the display is a grey tint that seems to be benday rather than a halftone screen. The portrait, however, is halftone. In a magazine this would be a very pretty display. In a newspaper it is up to the printer. He can blotch it and utterly ruin it, but it came through better than was to be expected. But had it gone wrong it still would have been a good seller because the talk was in the panel, where it could not be hurt. The effect over to the left, at the bottom of the space is one we do not recall having seen used in a newspaper display before. The benday was overprinted in black type before the cut was made, so that the lines stand out with type clearness against the grey ground, instead of being hand lettered, and therefore more or less illegible. A little more color on the portrait and this would have equaled a magazine page, but considering the paper stock, the quality of the ink and the speed of the press this came through better than anyone had the right to expect, and it made a thoroughly appealing display, giving added strength to the panel. Through this device the small panel has the same strength than would be given had the entire space been taken for that type announcement and yet they have three times as much space for the attractor and achieve a result that is individual and artistic. In their second attempt they were not quite so fortunate. Here the grey ground comes out all right. It has to, since it is benday, but the two figures are a bit vague. As in the other the space is made fool proof by doing all the talking in type with the exception of the entirely safe reverse strip for the title. The Strand took a chance and won out, but it was a pure gamble and an effort to repeat might result in a loss, though with the precautions taken they are sure of a good type advertisement, no matter what happened to the cut.

Fool Proof Space Is Terminal Idea

We think that they could use roofing composition in the ink fountains and still get a fairly good impression on this display from the Terminal Theatre, Newark. Certainly the cheapest grade of ink is going to give something that can be read, for there is not a letter in the entire four elevens that can be blotted out. Coming from a house which offered about the worst in the country last year, this is the more remarkable. The figure of Mix is done with benday to give a halftone effect without the halftone risk, and the lettering is all type, very little all caps and these lines not more than one inch wide. The pressman who can spoil this is a hand-made genius. The Terminal has used only one of the old-fashioned cuts this season, with five scene sketches and a lot of tiny hand lettered captions, but mostly it goes in for these bold effects and licks the entire amusement page. There is nothing "artistic" about this, but it is a fine example of common sense layout that will bring results.

Beaucaire Cuts Make Good Ads

One of the prettiest ads on Beaucaire yet to turn up on this desk is sent in by the Capitol Theatre, Pittsfield, Mass. Apparently the fine drop-out cut designed for the full page display in the press book encouraged Manager Frederick to use a good thing while he could get it, so he took the figure, cut it down to go into five columns and got something that sold just on the looks of the space. Had Mr. Frederick put nothing but the title into this five by seventeen and a half, he probably could have sold. He added just enough talk and did not proceed to spoil it by adding more. He realized that white space was the proper setting, and he avoided the common fault of over stuffing the space and spoiling the entire effect. Before you ever see the title, you are sold on the idea that here is something big, and of course the combination of star and play verifies that first impression. When a manager learns that an extra large space does not call for an additional number of words, he is well on his way to the Master Craftsman degree, and we think Mr. Frederick qualifies. He has turned out an exceptionally pretty display, not marred by the usual faults, yet he gives dates, show times and all other necessary details. But that cut is an incentive to good work.

Flashy

A cutout from the 24-sheet on Secrets was used several weeks in advance of the date at the Empress Theatre, Owensboro, Ky. To get attention it was lighted on the flasher system and few of the patrons during these weeks overlooked the cutout in spite of the fact it was above the usual sight line.

The result was an exceptionally good three-day business when the cutout was removed to the front of the house with a "Now playing."

Special Scaramouche

When Scaramouche came to Berkeley, Cal., the Strand Theatre not only interested the public schools in the educational side of this production but arranged a special session for the students in history at the University of California. A special rate of twenty cents was given on the special tickets, and the Professor at the head of the history department gave a lecture preparatory to the showing.

Fox's Service Picture Released November 30

THE William Fox screen version of Robert W. Service's best seller, "The Roughneck," which was completed at the Fox West Coast studios under the working title of "Thorns of Passion," will be released with the original book title. This special production, backed by an intensive advertising campaign, will go to exhibitors the week of November 30.

In view of the success of the novel, which is listed among the six best sellers of current fiction, it was decided to retain the original title of this popular novel for the screen version of the first full-length novel from the pen of the man who made the Yukon country famous through his poems. Thousands of picture fans are familiar with the writings of Robert W. Service and the original title of this photoplay will prove to be of great value in presenting this attraction.

George O'Brien, one of the strongest box office attractions today because of his work in "The Iron Horse," "The Man Who Came Back" and "The Painted Lady," is starred in this picture, his fourth for William Fox. One of the best supporting casts ever gathered for a big picture will assist O'Brien in making this production one of the best William Fox has ever produced. Billie Dove is cast in the leading feminine role. The other principals include Harry T. Morey, Cleo Madison, Charles A. Sellon, Anne Cornwall, Edna Eichnor, Buddy Smith, Harvey Clark and Maryon Aye. The story was adapted for the screen by Charles Kenyon.

San Francisco Applauds Harold Bell Wright Film

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT'S "The Mine With the Iron Door," the Principal Pictures Master Production presented by Sol Lesser, is proving one of the outstanding successes of the season, according to reports received by Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal, from big houses in which preliminary runs are taking place. At Loew's Warfield, San Francisco, the picture did a big business. San Francisco newspapers were enthusiastic in their praise of it. Following are some of the comments:

San Francisco Chronicle—It found favor in the eyes of the big crowds. The picture is exquisite scenically, the final picture with the Indian Natachee taking his station as guard for La Canada del Oro, home of his ancestors, is as beautiful and soft as a mezzotint.

The Examiner—Local theatregoers are giving the new film a rousing premiere reception. There is much action in the unfolding of the plot and the climax depicts a fight between the Indian and the villain that's as thrilling almost as any seen on the screen.

The Call—"The Mine With the Iron Door" is a decided success. At last we have a western that is not "blood and thunder" but has a real story and real merit. A splendid cast, wonderful settings in mountain and desert country, and a story with plenty of action by Harold Bell Wright are a combination pretty apt to spell success. There is action jammed into every foot of the film. The cast is magnificent.

News—Warfield audiences and others will doubtless eat up "The Mine With the Iron Door." The acting of Frazer, Pat O'Malley and Raymond Hatton is acting as Wright's prose in writing. Dorothy Mackaill brings something more to the film—credence, sincerity, uncrystallized reaction.

Strong Vitagraph Cast for "Pampered Youth"

VITAGRAPH has recruited an extraordinary cast for "Pampered Youth," work on which is about to begin at the company's Hollywood studios, with David Smith as both producer and director. This is the picturization of "The Magnificent Ambersons," Booth Tarkington's Pulitzer prize-winning novel.

"Pampered Youth" will bring together no fewer than eight Vitagraph favorites who had important roles in previous successes, besides several other artists who have long lists of popular productions to their credit. Cullen Landis is to impersonate the grown George Minafer, who is the central figure in Mr. Tarkington's story and whose tendencies as a spoiled boy and self-satisfied young man justify the new title selected for the picture.

Ben Alexander has been engaged to impersonate George Minafer, the boy. Alice Calhoun, George's attractive young mother; Allan Forrest will have the characterization of Eugene Morgan, the family friend for whom the pampered George develops a consuming hatred.

Emmett King is cast as Major Amberson in "Pampered Youth." Wallace McDonald is to play Wilbur Minafer. Charlotte Merriam will have the role of Lucy Morgan, George's fiancee. Kathryn Adams plays Fanny Minafer. Aggie Herring plays Mrs. Foster and William J. Irving is cast as George Amberson, the uncle.

Buddy Messinger in the Century comedy, "Here He Comes."

"Top of the World" Completed

"The Top of the World," a Jack Cunningham adaptation of Ethel M. Dell's famous novel, has been completed by Paramount under the direction of George Melford.

Startling camera effects have been obtained of James Kirkwood, who plays a dual role. Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton and Sheldon Lewis are the other featured players. The story is laid in England and South Africa.

Nearing Completion

After over seven years' work the film version of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, "The Lost World," is nearing completion. Earl Hudson hopes to approve the final scene within one to two months. Watterson R. Rothacker started work on "The Lost World" over seven years ago. Last spring he joined forces with First National for its completion. Bessie Love, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone and Lloyd Hughes finished with their roles some weeks ago.

Pathe Short Subjects

Sixth Chapter of Serial in Program For Week of November 16

"Ten Scars Make a Man," goes into its sixth chapter on the Pathe program releases for the week of November 16, supported by a strong lineup of short subject product. This chapter of the latest Patheserial is one of the most exciting episodes seen to date in this thrilling drama of the great west.

Another important unit on the program of Pathe for the week is the Hal Roach "Our Gang" comedy entitled "Fast Company." "Love's Sweet Piffle," featuring Ralph Graves, is the Mack Sennett comedy offering for the week. This production is the forth picture of the first series of Sennett Star Comedies. "Gridiron Glory," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," is also one of the releases for the week.

Pathe Review No. 46 contains three subjects. The first is a second installment of "Jungle Life in India." This subject thrills with scenes of tracking down the rhinos with both camera and gun. The second subject is "Classical Jazz." The third is a Pathecolor on American industries and covers the growing of "Cherry Coffee in Hawaii."

"She Knew Her Man," animated cartoon comedy of the Aesop's Film Fables, "Topics of the Day" No. 46 and Pathe News Nos. 94 and 95 complete the program for the week.

A Screen Find

Billy Boye, the two-and-a-half-year old boy wonder who appeared in several of the Ricordo Film Corporation's two reel comedies, notably "Engaged for Ten Cents" and "The Boarding House Battle," has been placed under a five year contract by M. H. Karper, the well known playwright and head of the Karper Productions of 1480 Broadway.

Mr. Karper discovered his latest protege one day at a private showing of little Billy's latest picture, "Stealing a Sweetheart," in which the tiny screen wonder displayed the rarest of screen gifts in natural pantomime unusual in screen children.

New York Critics Vote "Hot Water" Great Fun

WITHOUT a single exception New York newspaper critics declared Harold Lloyd's latest comedy one of the funniest this comedian has ever made. The picture opened, Sunday, October 26, at the Mark-Strand to the biggest business ever experienced by this theatre for an opening day. The figure reached with "Hot Water" for the opening day was close to $1,000 bigger than the opening day of "Girl Shy," while the house record for any picture was broken by several hundred dollars.

The New York World stated: "It seems a little indecent that any critic should have as much fun in a theatre as I had yesterday. Something probably ought to be done also to prevent audiences becoming so demonstrative as those sitting before this new comedy, 'Hot Water,' of Harold Lloyd's. . . . no one should let it pass unseen."

Louella O. Parsons in the New York American said: "I defy any man, woman or child to go to the Strand Theatre this week and not laugh at Harold Lloyd's latest comedy 'Hot Water.' The mother-in-law bugaboo may be an old-time gag, but I have never in a cartoon, a short story, a motion picture, or on the stage seen any mother-in-law situations as funny as the side-splitting comedy of Josephine Crowell and Harold Lloyd. 'Hot Water' is the best comedy up to this moment I have ever seen."

Mildred Spain in the New York Daily News said: "'Hot Water' is funny. Yesterday's audience couldn't have waxed much more mirthful. Shrieks, giggles, grins and laughs—all were there. Here's a dandy picture for children. But make no mistake, grown-ups will enjoy it, too. You shouldn't let it get out of New York without seeing it."

The New York Evening Bulletin: "At the Strand Theatre yesterday we waited in a dense mob for thirty minutes to get in to see Harold Lloyd's new picture 'Hot Water.' Now that is popularity—to see the crowd one might have thought that the Strand was the only picture theatre in the whole of New York. But Lloyd is always worth waiting for; and never more so than in this picture."

Girard Added to Cast

According to advices received by George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin of Banner Productions, Inc., Joseph Girard has been added to the cast of "The Three Keys," which Ben Verschleiser is making on the Coast from Frederic Ormonde's novel, with Edith Roberts, Jack Mulhall and Virginia Lee Corbin in the featured roles.

Edward Le Saint is directing the production, which has new been in work for about a fortnight and is scheduled for release by Banner, Dec. 15. Besides those named, the cast of "The Three Keys" includes: Gaston Glass, Miss DuPont, Charles Clary and Stuart Holmes.

Among Mr. Girard's recent productions are: "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter" and "Judgment," both First National features.

Paramount Signs Robert Cain

Robert Cain has been engaged by Cecil B. De Mille for his new Paramount production, "The Golden Bed."

He is the latest addition to the featured cast of this screen play by Jeanie Macpherson from Wallace Irwin's novel. Mr. Cain has a most interesting role in a cast which includes Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynolds, Lillian Rich, Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff, Julia Faye, Robert Edeson and Jane Winton.

"Barbara Frietchie" Scores Big Success in Boston

THE Thomas H. Ince special, "Barbara Frietchie" has registered a decided hit in Boston where it was presented at the Modern and Beacon Theatres.

Jake Lourie in a wire of congratulation to Paul C. Mooney, vice president of Producers Distributing Corporation, said: "Congratulations on 'Barbara Frietchie' which opened to the biggest day's business in the history of the theatre. The gross for the week's business was most gratifying and our patrons went out 100 per cent. pleased. Your pictures are not only good but are registering at the box office."

Boston newspaper critics were unanimous in their praise of the production and the following excerpts are accurate reflection of their critical opinions:

Prunsella Hall in the Boston Post said: "'Barbara Frietchie' is one of our bigger and better pictures. Florence Vidor brings not only beauty, but intelligence and personality to her portrayal of Barbara, while Edmund Lowe is a handsome and gallant Captain Trumbull."

"'Barbara Frietchie' will give the public thrills galore and a series of dramatic climaxes well arranged by the director."—Boston Advertiser.

"Florence Vidor is an appealing and very beautiful Barbara. Edmund Lowe acts the captain to perfection. The supporting company was very good. Lambert Hillyer directed the production and some of the war scenes were most realistic. Those who like good melodramatic fare in their movies will enjoy this film."—Boston Herald.

"The direction is particularly good. The picture is full of good action good humor and splendid sentiment which is never overdone."—Boston Globe.

Held for Second Week

First National's Edwin Carewe production, "Madonna of the Street," from W. B. Maxwell's popular novel, "The Ragged Messenger," with Nazimova and Milton Sills, proved such a popular attraction at the new Piccadilly Theatre in New York this week that Manager Lee Ochs decided to hold it over for a second week, although First National's new special, "Sundown," was booked to begin a two weeks' showing there on November 1. "Sundown" will have its New York premiere a week later, on November 8.

Kirkland Works Fast

"Tom Boy" Rapidly Being Finished for Chadwick

The next ten days will see the completion of "The Tom Boy" which David Kirkland is directing for the Mission Film Corporation as one of the units in the Chadwick Nine. Reports from the West Coast indicate that Mr. Kirkland is rapidly finishing the last scenes, following which he will cut and edit the picture and rush it east to the Chadwick headquarters in New York for early release.

Herbert Rawlinson and Dorothy Devore head the cast, which includes also James Barrows, Lee Moran, Helen Lynch, Lottie Williams, Harry Gribbon and Virginia True Boardman.

"Tainted Money" Completed

C. B. C. announces that "Tainted Money," the new picture of the Perfection series, has been completed. The cast is headed by Eva Novak and William Fairbanks and includes Bruce Gordon, Edwards Davis and Carl Stockdale. The direction was in the hands of Henry MacRae. Action and thrills typify this picture from beginning to end.

New York City Official Says Picture Is Finest Argument for Preservation of State Parks

"The Finger Lakes," a William Fox Educational Entertainment released November 9 by Fox Film Corporation, was declared by Murray Hulbert, president of the Board of Aldermen of New York City, to be one of the finest arguments ever presented to the public for the preservation of state parks.

"The beauty, grandeur and exquisite scenes of nature shown in this Fox picture of the Finger Lakes," said Mr. Hulbert, after viewing the reel, "should make every citizen of New York proud of the natural beauty of the Empire State and should imbue him with a desire to preserve this natural charm and develop it."

Mr. Hulbert is a member of the Finger Lakes State Park Commission and the members of this commission recently were invited to view the Fox Educational.

"Fool and His Money" Started

A wire from Harry Cohn, head of C. B. C.'s producing forces, states that Earl C. Kenton has started the filming of the fifth Columbia special, "A Fool and His Money." This is the film version of George Barr McCutcheon's novel of the same name. The featured players are William Haines and Madge Bellamy, supported by Stuart Holmes, Alma Bennett, Charles Conklin, Lon Poff, Eugenie Besserer, Carrie Clark Ward, Edwards Davis and Baby Billie Jean Phyllis.

"On the Threshold" Cast

Renaud Hoffman, who is now directing the first of his four productions to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation on the Spring program, has engaged Sam de Grasse, Willis Marks, Robert Gordon and Margaret Sedden for important roles in support of Henry B. Walthall and Gladys Hulette in "On The Threshold."

Willis Marks played the part of the father in "Not One to Spare" and in "On the Threshold" he will portray another strikingly vivid characterization of a sympathetic old man.

Alice Terry's Plans

Alice Terry has been signed for the leading role in "Kings in Exile," the romance by Alphonse Daudet which Victor Seastrom is to produce for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

This announcement, coming from Irving Thalberg, production executive, sets at rest many rumors as to Miss Terry's next work, and also confirms the fact that on completing the Seastrom picture she will join Rex Ingram in Europe, where she is to play the lead in her husband's picturization of "Mare Nostrum," the Blasco Ibanez novel which Willis Goldbeck has adapted for the screen. She will play opposite Antonio Moreno in this picture.

Charles Cohen Promoted

Charles Cohen, who has been exploitation man for the New York exchange of Renown Pictures, Inc., has been promoted to the post of publicity director and will have charge of the exchanges located in New York, Buffalo and Chicago, as well as five additional offices which this firm will open in the near future. He will also handle the exploitation for the parent organization, Truart Film Corporation, producers and national distributors of many of the pictures released by Renown.

Start New Comedies

Two new comedies were started this week at the Mack Sennett Studios, one featuring Harry Langdon and the other with Ralph Graves in the principal role. Ralph Graves' picture depicts the comedian as a plumber who breaks into society. Eddie Cline is directing and the cast includes Eugenia Gilbert, Alice Day, Elsie Tarron and Vernon Dent.

Harry Langdon is a wealthy clubman in his new comedy, which is being directed by Harry Edwards. Natalie Kingston plays the feminine lead and Vernon Dent and Yorke Sherwood have important parts.

Cody Will Make Another Series

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, has signed Bill Cody up to make another series of eight pictures when the series on which he is now at work, has been completed.

Gilbert with Mae Murray in Metro's "Merry Widow"

JOHN GILBERT, whose appearances in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions this season are winning him a large following, will play Prince Danilo opposite Mae Murray in "The Merry Widow," Erich von Stroheim's special production on which camera work is about to start.

The selection of Gilbert for one of the most sought-after roles of the year was decided by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives this week. The decision, it is made known, was based largely on Gilbert's splendid performances in "His Hour," "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Snob" and "The Wife of the Centaur." "His Hour," the Elinor Glyn production and the only one of the four pictures thus far released, has definitely established Gilbert's popularity with the public. "The Snob," Monta Bell's picture, was released this week, and the Seastrom production of "He Who Gets Slapped" follows it in two weeks. By the time King Vidor's "Wife of the Centaur" reaches the screens of the country, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials are confident that Gilbert's popularity will be second to no leading man in the industry. It will be his first appearance opposite Mae Murray, and this combination, under the direction of Erich von Stroheim, is expected to make "The Merry Widow" one of the biggest box office pictures that has been produced.

Tully Marshall, one of the favorite character actors in pictures, has been cast for the role of Sadoja, a part of leading importance in "The Merry Widow." The first woman chosen as a member of the large company that will lend support to Miss Murray is Josephine Crowell, selected for the role of Queen Milena. Announcement of other cast additions may be looked for shortly from Irving G. Thalberg, production executive.

Von Stroheim himself prepared the screen adaptation of the Lehar operetta, in collaboration with Benjamin Glazer. Produced originally by Henry W. Savage, "The Merry Widow" is still the most popular light opera that has been seen, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plan to make it one of the biggest spectacular specials on their schedule this year.

New Griffith Film

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes.

The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn." The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art."

New Renown Picture

The secret is out. The entire Renown staff has been talking about a great picture soon to be released by that organization and promising that the title would be a big box-office attraction. It is "Soiled," from the Red Book story, "The Debt of Dishonor," by Jack Boyle, and was made by Phil Goldstone. The cast includes Kenneth Harlan, Robert Cain, Vivian Martin, Mildred Harris, Johnny Walker, Mary Alden, Wyndham Standing, Alec Francis and Maude George. Jack Bellman is planning an extensive advertising campaign.

Title Final Three of Series

The titles of the final three bouts of the "Flying Fists" series of two reel features starring Benny Leonard are "The Jazz-Bout," "His Sur-Prize Fight," and "The Comeback." Sam Hellman, the famous Saturday Evening Post humorous writer, is responsible for stories and titles. Lawrence Windom, the director, completed the cutting of the series this week.

1st National Gets Prints of Three New Pace Makers

DURING the past week First National headquarters has received the prints of three more productions in its group of Pace Makers. The three pictures in question, "Husbands and Lovers," "Inez from Hollywood" and "Sandra," have been screened for company executives and the publicity and advertising departments, among whom an unusual degree of enthusiasm has been aroused.

"Husbands and Lovers" is a John Stahl production for Louis B. Mayer, with a distinguished cast, including Lewis S. Stone, Florence Vidor and Lew Cody. Sam Rork's "Inez from Hollywood," with Anna Q. Nilsson, Lewis S. Stone and Mary Astor, directed by Al Green, while a story of Hollywood is also a dramatic domestic drama.

"Sandra" is a Sawyer-Lubin production, directed by Arthur H. Sawyer, starring Barbara La Marr, supported by Bert Lytell, and contains a number of spectacular situations which give the star opportunity for dramatic moments. Pearl Doles Bell's novel, upon which the picture was based, has enjoyed a big circulation and its readers will want to see the picture. With Barbara La Marr's great personal following, this picture should have a big box office pull.

These are fine additions to the Pace Makers, which already include such outstanding productions as Frank Lloyd's "The Silent Watcher," Norma Talmadge's "The Only Woman," the Goldwyn-Fitzmaurice "Tarnish," Samuel Goldwyn's "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter," Thomas H. Ince's "Christine of the Hungry Heart," Garrick Pictures' "Born Rich," Edwin Carewe's "Madonna of the Streets" and First National's own productions, "The Perfect Flapper," "Single Wives" and "For Sale."

Obstacle Overcome

"One Glorious Night," the fourth Columbia special featuring Elaine Hammerstein and supported by Al Roscoe, Phyllis Haver, Freeman Wood, Lillian Elliot, Mathilde Brundage and Margaret Selwyn, is rapidly nearing completion. Scott Dunlap, the director, has had great difficulty in having to properly stage a very difficult scene in which a train of cars on a roller coaster at an amusement park plunges from its tracks into the sea many feet below. This has been accomplished and all work proceeds smoothly.an exteremely unusual finale.

Print of "White Man" Here

The first print of the new Preferred Picture, "White Man" was received in New York this week. The picture will be delivered to all B. P. Schulberg exchanges within the next fortnight prior to its general release on November 15th.

"White Man," is Gasnier's latest production, and is adapted from George Agnew Chamberlain's popular novel. In the cast are Alice Joyce, Kenneth Harlan and Walter Long.

Peninsula Buys "The Detour"

In line with its policy of producing pictures adapted from successful stage plays and novels, William J. Connery of Peninsula Studios Inc. announces the purchase of the film rights to "The Detour" by Owen Davis author of a long list of outstanding stage successes. "The Detour" is a comedy drama of domestic life in which there are a number of decidedly novel situations that climax in

Stern Signs Wanda Wiley

President of Century Places Comedienne Under Five-Year Contract—To Make Series of Two-Reelers

Wanda Wiley, that comedienne extraordinary, who has been making the world laugh with her unusual acting in Century Comedies, has been signed by Century for five years, according to word just received from Julius Stern, president of the organization, and now in Hollywood supervising production.

In commenting on the contract, Mr. Stern said: "So convinced am I that I have made one of the greatest, if not the greatest discovery, of my career in Wanda Wiley, that I decided to sign her up for a long term contract and so insure her appearance in Century Comedies, which I try to keep in a place above all other two-reel comedy productions.

"As her leading man in the first of the new series, I have engaged Joe Moore, a member of the famous family of motion picture actors. To direct this series I have engaged Jess Robbins, one of the best known comedy directors in the business."

The first of the new series of Century Comedies starring Wanda Wiley has been temporarily titled "Up in the Air."

Jumps to Third Place

Omaha Shows Big Gain in Eschmann Month Drive; Coast Branches Going Strong

The sixth week of the Eschmann Month sales contest closed with Portland still in first place, with Cleveland again second. The biggest single change in the standing of the branches for the week was the jump of Omaha from the eleventh to the third place, passing Charlotte.

The West Coast branches have been going strong in the contest. The western district, of which Joseph Skirboll is manager, has stood in first place among the districts from the beginning of the drive, while Portland has steadfastly maintained first place among the branches.

The national average of the contest at the close of the sixth week was 99.20 per cent. of the national quota.

Goldburg Announces Plans

President of Independent Pictures Maps Out Ambitious Program for Next Season

Fifty-two productions for the year 1925-1926 is the program of the Independent Pictures Corporation according to the statement of Jesse J. Goldburg, president.

In addition to another series of eight Bill Cody pictures, eight society melodramas and eight Marguerite Clayton specials in which this screen favorite will be given stories on the style of those used by Mae Murray, the program includes eight westerns starring a new western hero whose selection has not been definitely decided upon, and twenty special productions sixteen of which will be made for national release to be distributed by one of the largest national distributors in the industry.

These fifty two productions will all be five or more reels and do not include the fifty-two single reel features to be known as "The Screen Book of Knowledge." The purpose of the latter group is to give the public films of an educational value that are at the same time entertaining and comprehensive. The exact plan for these has not been completely decided.

Complete Cast of "Dixie"

Reginald Barker has announced the complete cast of "Dixie," the Gerald Beaumont story which he is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the adaptation made by Waldemar Young. Frank Keenan, Claire Windsor and Lloyd Hughes have the leading roles in this production, and are supported by John Sainpolis, Otis Harlan, Joseph Morrison, Otto Hoffman, Edward Martindel, Ruth King, William Quirk, James Quinn, Loyal Underwood, Bert Lindley, William Orlamund, Milton Ross and J. P. Lockney.

Miss Clayton Will Make Eight

Marguerite Clayton has been selected by Jesse J. Goldburg to make a series of eight special productions. She will appear as the vivacious, carefree butterfly who flits her way out of trouble as easily as she gets into it.

Banner's Latest Production Available at Exchanges Nov. 15

PRINTS of "Those Who Judge," the third and latest of the Banner Big Four Series, will be available at exchanges on November 15, according to an announcement by George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin, directing heads of Banner Productions, Inc.

A full line of paper and art and novelty advertising accessories has been prepared on this elaborate feature, which are set forth effectively in an attractive press book of sixteen pages which Banner has just sent out to the exchanges handling its product. In it the exhibitor is given every aid and facility for putting on the biggest kind of an advertising and exploitation campaign on "Those Who Judge," which Banner officials assert sets a new high mark in independent attractions, both in the quality of the story's drawing power, the elaborateness of its settings and in its cast, which throughout is of the best box office talent.

A comprehensive advertising campaign in the trade press will also be conducted as an adjunct to the selling activities of the exchanges handling the Banner Big Four Series.

"Those Who Judge" is based on the novel by Margery Land May, originally published under the title, "Such As Sit In Judgment," which has had a wide sale, both here and in England. Burton King directed it.

The cast is headed by Patsy Ruth Miller and Lou Tellegen, both favorites of established screen reputation and box office value, and includes: Edmund Breese, Mary Thurman, Coit Albertson, Flora Le Breton, Walter Miller, and Cornelius Keefe.

New Vitagraph Picture

A remarkable cast was recruited for the picturization of Marie Conway Oemler's gripping novel, "Two Shall Be Born," whose production Whitman Bennett has just completed at his Yonkers studios. Jane Novak impersonates the leading woman character, while Kenneth Harlan plays the hero. Sigrid Holmquist and Frank Sheridan have the next most important parts, and other popular players in the cast are Fuller Mellish, Joseph Burke, Blanche Craig, Joseffá de Bok, Catherine Evans, Walter James, Ellah Inez Shannon and H. Cooper Cliffe.

Many Enter Contest

Vitagraph is being deluged with answers to the question it is asking of exhibitors and their helpers throughout the United States and Canada: "What is 'Greater Than Marriage'?" The $100 prize contest is open till November 15, but already what their senders are convinced are solutions of a universal problem are rolling in by the hundreds.

The contest is open to every exhibitor and all members of the staff of every picture theatre in the United States and Canada. Each entrant writes his answer in ten words or fewer and mails it to Vitagraph, Brooklyn, N. Y. In case of a tie, each of the contestants suggesting the winning answer will receive the full amount of the award.

Leonard Bookings Heavy

With the conclusion of production on the final three bouts of the six Benny Leonard pictures, "Flying Fists," the lightweight champion is planning to co-operate with Henry Ginsberg in personal appearances and other exploitation aids in connection with the exhibition of the pictures.

Bookings for the series of two-reel features has been heavy during the past two weeks, Henry Ginsberg reports. Advance showings in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have been received with enthusiasm by the critics. Chicago reports heavy bookings also the territories west of the Mississippi.

Exhibitor and Director Must Understand Each Other Better

"A VERY vital factor in motion picture production should be a clearer understanding between the exhibitor and the motion picture director," says Tom Terriss, producer of "The Bandolero" for Metro-Goldwyn release.

"Speaking on behalf of the latter, I can only say that at present we seem to be copying the example of the allied armies before General Foch stepped in. We all seem to be trying for an objective point, but with a complete lack of unity.

"It seems to me that it should be quite possible, when a director is about to launch upon an important production, to send out a round robin asking for an immediate expression of opinion upon the subject matter in hand. It may not in the director's eyes serve any real radical purpose, but I feel certain that a few good tips may come along, and if only one of them are used, then some benefit will have been obtained. And I hold nothing should be left undone to please the exhibitor and let him know that we are working as much for him as we are for ourselves.

"Personally I have made it a custom to become acquainted with quite a few of these gentlemen, and I am sure I have profited by my acquaintance. I make it a rule to visit all the pictures I can, and the more I see of them the more I realize what a little I know. The more I see of them the more I realize how much there is to learn. The supply is illimitable, the source eternal.

"I have stood up with some of my exhibitor friends and had many a friendly argument, and in pictures there are so many different angles that these could become neverending. On one occasion I was in a well known theatre watching one of the latest releases with the proprietor of the theatre when he turned to me and said: 'If some of you fellows would have the sense to know that kind of stuff hurts us all.'

"This happened to be the big punch of a picture made by one of our leading directors, and doubtless the particular scene in question may have gained some kind of notoriety through its daring and originality. But in this case it hurt. As the exhibitor admitted, he said he would rather have had the picture without it, had the producer intimated beforehand his intention of making this particular sort of scene. In this case every one would have been better off, and the exhibitor grateful.

"Then, as the picture proceeded, he said: 'That's the kind of thing—more of that. I'll bet 'So and So' didn't know what he was doing when he put that in, or didn't give it much thought. But that is just what they like here,' and so forth.

"This particular 'stuff,' as he called it, which always went over, was new to me, and I made a mental note that I would incorporate the same kind of thing in any of my future productions. Harmony between the producer, the exhibitor and the director would be most admirable. Perfect accord between them and the public would be millennium. Well, we're working at it."

Adapts New Gasnier Picture

The script for "The Triflers" which will constitute Gasnier's next production for B. P. Schulberg, has been finished. The screen adaptation of this novel by Frederick Orin Bartlett was written by John Goodrich. The feature will be the third release on this year's schedule of Preferred Pictures.

Starts on Third Production

Working Title of New Fleming Picture is "Followed by Fate," Prints of First Two on Way East

According to word received by the New York office of the J. J. Fleming Productions work has started on the third of the series of six pictures which they are releasing on the Independent market.

The working title of the third picture is "Followed By Fate" and the cast consists of Al Ferguson who is featured throughout the series and Lillian Du Bois, Frank Clark, Paul Emery, F. S. Heink and is being directed by F. J. Grandon. Lillian Du Bois has been playing leads opposite Lloyd Hamilton.

The first two pictures in the series "Shackles of Fear" and "The Trail of Vengeance" have already been completed and prints are now in the New York office. According to reports territory on these pictures is moving rapidly and a number of sales have already been closed.

J. Charles Davis, Junior, who is general manager of the company in charge of sales will leave on an extended trip very shortly at which time he expects to visit the majority of the key cities.

Peninsula Buys Kyne Story

"Cornflower Cassie's Concert," one of Peter B. Kyne's classical stories of the desert country, has been purchased by Peninsula Studios to serve as a coming Frank Woods' production on the Producers Distributing Corporation Spring program.

The characters in the story are all of the picturesque types with which Kyne always peoples his desert tales, among them Chuckwalla Bill Redmond who has figured in several of the Kyne stories including "The Parson of Panamint" and "The Land Just Over Yonder."

Lionel Barrymore's Third

His Latest for Chadwick Being Planned for Early Production

Following Lionel Barrymore's short tour in David Belasco's play, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," in which the noted actor scored a big success in New York last season, he will appear in his third starring vehicle for Chadwick Pictures Corporation to be released on the independent market this season as one of the famous unit, the Chadwick Nine. Mr. Barrymore's earlier two pictures in this series were "Meddling Women" and "I Am the Man."

No choice of story for Mr. Barrymore's third picture has yet been announced by Chadwick officials, but it is generally known that several famous plays of recent seasons are being considered, and it is not unlikely that Mr. Barrymore may make a decision between these on his return to the city some time within the next few weeks.

Barthelmess at Work

Richard Barthelmess, having completed for First National release his new Inspiration production, "Classmates," is deep in preparation for the succeeding production, "New Toys," in which his wife, known professionally as Mary Hay, will be his leading woman. This was produced on the New York stage last year by Sam H. Harris, with Ernest Truex in the chief role. The comedy was written by Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd, in collaboration with Milton Herbert Gropper. John S. Robertson will again direct Barthelmess.

Many Good Comedies Due Through Educational Co.

BOBBY VERNON'S third comedy to be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., will be "French Pastry," following "High Gear," which will be released during November.

In "French Pastry," which is about finished, Ann Cornwall returns to the Christie lot as leading lady with Vernon. During the production of "High Gear," in which Marion Harlan played the leading feminine role, Miss Cornwall was loaned to Douglas McLean, and she will be seen as leading lady to this star in his new feature production. "French Pastry" will be a comedy laid in France and Germany with the Army of Occupation.

The next Christie Comedy under way will be "Easy Pickin's," featuring Neal Burns. Supporting the comedian will be Molly Malone as leading lady, Victor Rodman, Ward Caulfield and Eddie Baker. The novel plot of the comedy features a prize fight in which both contestants are hired to lose.

Walter Hiers has finished his second Walter Hiers Comedy, "A Fat Chance," which will reach the screen in the latter part of November. Under his contract with Educational, Hiers will be allowed to appear in feature productions, and has been cast in a big picture to go into production. Duane Thompson is his leading lady in "A Fat Chance," which was produced under the title of "Slim Chance."

Kathleen Myers, who played the lead in the recently filmed Christie Comedy, "Why Hurry?" featuring Jimmie Adams, is playing opposite Tom Mix in a feature production and will then return to the Christie Studio to play leads in new comedies opposite Neal Burns and Jimmie Adams. In the meantime, Vera Steadman and Molly Malone are playing leads with these two comedians in comedies now being filmed.

"Bigger and Better Hamilton Comedies" has been the slogan of Lloyd Hamilton, star in Educational-Hamilton Comedies, since the start of his present contract for six of the short subjects starring himself to be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., during the 1924-25 season.

Hamilton has just completed "Crushed," one of the most pretentious comedies he has ever attempted, and in line with the "bigger and better" idea considerable time and money was spent in the production. A complete subway station was erected at the Fine Arts Studio for this picture. Two "subway trains" were also built and these run into and out of the station on the tracks.

Hamilton's next comedy through Educational will be "Hooked." This will also be "bigger and better," and makes use of a setting duplicating one of the big passenger ships plying along the Pacific Coast.

"The Deadwood Coach" Finished

Tom Mix has just completed what officials of Fox Film Corporation believe to be his greatest western picture. This is "The Deadwood Coach, adapted from Clarence Mulford's well known novel, "The Orphan." Director Lynn Reynolds has made a thrilling screen play out of this colorful story of the old West.

Doris May has the leading feminine role and George Bancroft plays the villain. The other principals include DeWitt Jennings, Buster Gardner, Lucien Littlefield, Norma Wills, Nora Cecil, Sid Jordan, Frank Coffyn, Jane Keckley and Ernest Butterworth.

"Sundown" Proves a Hit in Two More Big Cities

"SUNDOWN," First National's epic of the retreat of the cattle barons from the ranges of the Southwest to the grazing lands of Mexico, is meeting with fine receptions in every city where it is shown. Washington, D. C., pronounced it one of the screen masterpieces of all time, and now Philadelphia and Indianapolis have capitulated to its tense drama and great humanity.

The reviewer on the Philadelphia Inquirer wrote of it: "A real epic and one of the most moving commentaries on the passing of the old West that has ever been seen on any screen. . . . Well deserves the name of being a bit of the supreme artistry of the screen. Story full of appeal and has romance, comedy and a fine cast. . . . Charles Murray relieves the terrific tensity of the plot."

Philadelphia Record: "Staged with remarkable attention to details by a director who knew not only the West but the hearts of people. 'Sundown' deserves to be preserved as a record of the country's progress. Cattle in stampede lend thrill to the story."

Philadelphia North American: "A picture with much pathos and human appeal. . . . Full of anxious moments, breath-taking episodes, of thrilling climaxes, of pathetic incidents and sobby suspense, all tempered with occasional flashes of humor. One cannot forget in a hurry such scenes as the tremendous stampede of some 100,000 cattle or the rescue of the herds from the burning plains."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "'Sundown' is the latest all-American picture since the enormous moving tapestry of 'The Covered Wagon.' The two are comparable in half a dozen ways, but the fundamental idea at the base of both has been to make graphic great events in the history of the West. It will grip the imagination and compel the admiration of the most frivolous movie fan."

Philadelphia Evening Ledger: "The epic theme of the ever-shifting American frontier is mirrored in 'Sundown.' A stampede of almost half a million cattle, a tremendous forest fire and an onrushing train stopped by clever tactics are highlight events in this drama."

Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "A spectacular portrayal of the disintegrating elements which made the vast stretches of the Golden West picturesque and romantic is the foundation upon which is constructed 'Sundown.' Represents a page from current history. The picture also dramatizes the passing of the big cattle owners. Throughout the film there are many striking scenes, including a prairie fire and a stampede of cattle."

Schulberg Signs Mae Busch

Mae Busch has been engaged to play the leading feminine role in B. P. Schulberg's next Preferred Picture "The Triflers." By special arrangement entered into between Mr. Schulberg and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Miss Busch will head the cast of featured players in this story which is now in production for release through B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc.

"The Triflers" which is a filmization of Frederick Orin Bartlett's novel deals with the adventures of an American society girl seeking a thrill on the fringe of Parisian respectability. Gasnier will direct.

"The Mirage" Is Completed

Florence Vidor Starred with Clive Brook in Picturization of Selwyn's Play

"The Mirage" picturized from Edgar Selwyn's brilliant stage play and scheduled for release on December 28 by Producers Distributing Corporation has been fully completed by Regal Pictures at the Thomas H. Ince studio and the first prints will undoubtedly be ready for exhibitor screenings within the next two weeks.

"The Mirage" is the second of the special features starring Florence Vidor and while it is a subject different in every way from "Barbara Frietchie" the producers are confidently anticipating a dramatic triumph for Miss Vidor in "The Mirage" that will equal her success in the Clyde Fitch play.

The adaptation of "The Mirage" was made by C. Gardner Sullivan and produced under the direction of George Archainbaud with Clive Brook featured opposite the star and Alan Roscoe, Vola Vale and Myrtle Vane in the supporting cast.

Praise MacLean Comedies

"Going Up," the first of Douglas MacLean's independent comedies released through Associated Exhibitors, is now being released in Canada. It played a first-run engagement at the Palace Theatre, Calgary and "Spotlight" reported it in the Albertan, as follows:

"Uproarious laughter echoed and re-echoed throughout the Palace Theatre on Saturday evening during the initial showing of the screen comedy 'Going Up.' The comedy is rich in incident and is so good that all is forgotten in the joy of the moment."

Completed "Locked Doors"

William De Mille has filmed the final scenes of his production of "Locked Doors" at the Lasky studio and will bring the prints to New York where he will edit and title the picture in collaboration with Clara Beranger, author of the story.

Betty Compson, Theodore Roberts, Kathlyn Williams, Theodor von Eltz and Robert Edeson are featured in the production.

New York Reviewers Laud Norma Talmadge's Latest

FIRST NATIONAL'S new Norma Talmadge picture, "The Only Woman," is the week's offering at the Capitol Theatre, New York, and the metropolitan reviewers found it an excellent vehicle for her fine acting talents.

Louella O. Parsons in the New York American wrote: "A box office attraction whose possibilities for making money cannot be denied. Norma Talmadge is lovely as the heroine and she gives at all times a sympathetic performance."

Mordaunt Hall in the New York Times: "The story contains interesting situations which are effectively pictured. Miss Talmadge is quite beautiful to look upon."

The Morning Telegraph: "When two such skilled technicians as Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien get together, and when their wares are taken in hand by such a director as Sidney Olcott, something considerably worth while is pretty sure to result. There is an utterly realistic storm at sea which is superb."

The Daily News: "Brings Norma Talmadge back to present day fashion. For this reason alone—if there were no others—female fans should try out Norma's latest. But there do happen to be some other reasons for looking the film over. There's a plot, some excellent camera work on the part of Norma and Eugene O'Brien, and the fine direction of Sidney Olcott. Norma always is a dandy. . . . There is a very splendid storm scene. An exceedingly box office photoplay."

George Gerhard in the Evening World: "Emotional movie-goers will have a delicious time of it at 'The Only Woman.' If a picture ever was a thriller, this one is. The shipwreck scene is the most realistic thing we have ever seen. Norma Talmadge is excellent. Sidney Olcott directed and he made an excellent job of it."

Rose Pelswick in the Journal: "'The Only Woman' has color and action. The picture is well costumed. Norma is beautiful. Realistic storm features yacht cruise."

New York Evening Bulletin: "Miss Talmadge seems to be increasingly popular, for at every performance the huge playhouse is sold out, with a generous proportion of her admirers standing."

New York Evening Graphic: "'The Only Woman' is fine film fare—a 'sure-fire' box office attraction and there isn't a Norma Talmadge fan in the country who will not want to see his beloved idol in the role of Helen Brinsley, the self-sacrificing society girl."

Vitagraph Special Has Premier

Another Vitagraph special, the third in a row, is about to have its world premiere on Broadway. J. Stuart Blackton's production of "The Beloved Brute" makes its bow at the Rialto Theatre next week, starting Sunday, November 9.

Though the official release date is still several weeks in the future—November 30, the eager interest of exhibitors had been stirred in pre-views, and not only was competition for the honor of the first presentation insistent, but the lucky exhibitor was impatient to profit from his prize. Accordingly, the pre-release run was arranged.

Elaborate Production Program Planned by Peninsula Studios

THE first six months of the new regime at the Peninsula Studios in San Mateo, California were brought to a successful conclusion this week with the completion of the Frank Woods' production "On the Shelf" to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation on January 4th.

With Elmer Harris and Frank Woods jointly supervising the Peninsula productions, four successful pictures have been produced since last January. These are "The Wise Virgin," "Chalk Marks," "The Girl on the Stairs," and "On the Shelf" and plans are now being made for an elaborate production program for the next half year.

During the coming six months the activities of the Peninsula Studios will be confined exclusively to the picturization of stage plays and published stories that have proved successful in their respective fields and the stars and supporting casts will embrace only those whose names have proved box office value.

First of the new pictures to be made is "Poor Mama," a stage farce by Elmer Harris in which Trixie Friganza was starred a few seasons ago. It is to be filmed with an all-star cast. Production on this picture will start early in November. "Poor Mama" is to be an Elmer Harris Production.

The second will be "Cornflower Cassie's Concert," a story of California's gold days by Peter B. Kyne. The story was published originally in the Cosmopolitan magazine. This picture is to be directed by William Worthington, under whose direction "The Girl on the Stairs" was filmed, and is to have a feminine star as yet unnamed. "Cornflower Cassie's Concert" is to be released as a Frank Woods' production.

The third production will be "The Awful Truth," Arthur Richman's delightful comedy of the smart set in which Ina Claire was starred on the stage. This will be an Elmer Harris Production under the direction of Paul Powell, who has just completed "On the Shelf."

The fourth production so far listed will be the Owen Davis stage success "The Detour." This will also be directed by Paul Powell with a star of the first rank in the leading role.

All of the Peninsula pictures will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season.

Clara Bow to Lead

The first announcement concerning the cast for "Capital Punishment," the special B. P. Schulberg production, was made recently by the producer when he selected Clara Bow for the leading feminine role.

Miss Bow is the first of a list of box-office names which Mr. Schulberg will feature in this unusual story.

Real Exploitation Tips on "Dante's Inferno"

IF ever there was an attraction ready-made for the best motion picture exploitation possible, it is the William Fox production, "Dante's Inferno," which is now establishing long run records in New York and Chicago, Fox says. The important part that exploitation has in the presentation of this picture has been proven by the success attained by the Fox special not only at the Broadway showing but in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Detroit as well.

Fox Film officials believe that this picture deserves the utmost in exploitation to obtain the maximum results from this type of production. The New York campaign can be modified for use in any city and for any type of theatre. For the benefit of those exhibitors who are about to present "Dante's Inferno," a description of the Central Theatre lobby display is outlined here.

The Central Theatre contains ten spaces in which paintings of various sizes can be placed. For each of these was made an oil painting based on the still pictures of the attraction and showing the figures undergoing punishment in the various circles and pits of Hades. All of these paintings are carried out in a red tone, no other colors being used; simply the red in its lights and shadows and with enough of black and white to give the necessary contrast and modeling of the figures.

Every painted sign in the lobby was also given a similar treatment of red tones, the background invariably being red and the lettering usually being in flame-colored yellow.

Under the marquee, running directly across the sidewalk, so as to arrest the attention of all who passed along the street, was hung a long sign which read: "Through Hell With Dante on the Road to Happiness." This, likewise, was accentuated in flame-colored letters on a vivid red background.

The newspaper campaign was conducted along similar lines. Although it was impossible to make use of the color red employed at the theatre, the illustrated advertisements in the metropolitan press carried out the same atmosphere of a trip through Hell and the weird mysteries of the Inferno revealed through this screen realization of Dante's immortal poem, and this living reproduction of Dore's masterpieces of art brought to life on the silver sheet.

Beverly Bayne and Elliott Dexter in Warner Brothers' "Age of Innocence."

Paul Powell to Direct

Paul Powell, who has just completed the direction of the Frank Woods' production "On The Shelf" at the Peninsula Studios in San Mateo California, has been engaged to direct three more pictures at the northern California studios for release by Producers Distributing Corporation. The first of these will in all probability be the film version of the New York stage success, "The Awful Truth."

Cody Starts Work on Next

Bill Cody, western star who is making a series of eight pictures for Independent Pictures Corp., has already started work on his fifth production under the personal supervision of Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent.

William J. Craft will direct. The story for the fifth picture was written by William Lester, staff scenarist for Independent, and Aileen Sedgwick has been cast for the female lead.

To Again Feature the Star of "King of Wild Horses"

HAL ROACH is completing preparations for making a new feature production starring Rex, the famous equine star of the screen. The phenomenal popularity of "The King of Wild Horses" has brought an insistent demand from Pathe Exchange for another picture with this magnificent stallion. "The King of Wild Horses" ran six weeks in Los Angeles and was equally successful everywhere else it was shown.

Fred Jackman, who directed it, has just returned from an automobile trip through California, Arizona and Nevada, on which he has been seeking suitable locations for the new story. He chose a desolate spot in the vicinity of Las Vegas, Nevada, where Arizona, Nevada and Utah meet. It is the habitat of the largest herd of wild horses still at large in America.

Percy Heath, widely known photoplaywright and scenarist, is collaborating with Hal Roach and Fred Jackman on the new screen story for Rex. The horses to be used in the picture have already been shipped to Nevada and camps are being pitched to accommodate the motion picture company, which will probably leave the Hal Roach Studios within the next week.

There has been no definite announcement as to the cast of the new picture, but it is understood that Marie Mosquini will have the leading feminine role. Carl Morrison, Roach's chief horse trainer, is now at the film camp in Nevada getting the horses acclimated to their different surroundings. The Roach Company expects to spend about two months there.

Cast of "Adventurous Sex"

Flora Finch, J. Barney Sherry, Maude Hill, Edna Giblyn and Marie Murray have been added to the cast of "The Adventurous Sex" now in production under the supervision of Howard Estabrook for Associated Exhibitors.

The production is being made in New York and will feature Clara Bow, supported by Herbert Rawlinson and Earle Williams.

Choose All Star Cast for Fox Version of "Dancers"

TWO important players were added this week to the cast of the William Fox screen version of "The Dancers," which is in production at the Fox West Coast studios. Alma Rubens will play "Maxine," the girl of the dance hall of the Canadian Northwest. Madge Bellamy has been assigned the important role of "Una."

George O'Brien will be seen in the leading role of "Tony." Richard Bennett made one of the biggest hits in his stage career in the part which has been assigned to O'Brien. This character, as created by Gerald Du Maurier and Viola Tree, authors of "The dancers," is ideally suited to O'Brien's personality. This will be the fifth Fox special featuring George O'Brien.

Both actresses to play opposite O'Brien have had important roles in big Fox specials this season. Alma Rubens plays the beautiful Lady Hermoine in "Gerald Cranston's Lady." Madge Bellamy received unusual praise at the start of this season because of her work in the part of "Miriam" in "The Iron Horse."

Emmett Flynn, who directed O'Brien in "The Man Who Came Back," is making the screen version of "The Dancers." The screen story was written by Hubert Parsons and Edmund Goulding prepared the scenario. Other character players added to the cast this week are Freeman Wood, Walter McGrail, Templar Saxe, Joan Standing and Alice Hollister.

Aileen Pringle and John Gilbert in Metro-Goldwyn's "His Hour."

"Lighthouse by the Sea"

Warner Schedules Strong Rin-Tin-Tin Production

"The Lighthouse by the Sea," which Warner Brothers have made from a version of Owen Davis' celebrated play, revamped only to make it a strong stellar vehicle for Rin-Tin-Tin, the famous police dog actor, will be ready for exhibition within the next few weeks. Indications are that the Warners are going to make an unusual amount of noise about this production.

Louise Fazenda is the only girl in the cast. William (Buster) Collier, Jr., has the leading male role. Rin-Tin-Tin's stunts are said to be more sensational than any he has yet done.

First Runs on "Hot Dog"

C. B. C. has received contracts for first-runs on their two-reel comedy novelty, "Hot Dog," a film which is enacted entirely by small animals. The two contracts are for the Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago and Loew's Theatre in Buffalo, N. Y.

Pathe's "Hot Heels," with Jimmy Finlayson.

The Play, From The Picture Angle

By Robert G. Lisman

"THE COCK OF THE ROOST," a comedy by Rida Johnson Young, produced by the Dramatists Theatre, Inc., at the Liberty Theatre on October 13, 1924.

This is a story of a hack writer and his family who live beyond their means. The hero is a son of fortune and "Cock of the Roost." He saves the writer's daughter from a loveless marriage and makes them all like living within their means. A conventional and unconvincing tale and not worth picturizing.

"IN HIS ARMS," a comedy of Lynn Starling, presented by Sam Harris at the Fulton Theatre on October 13, 1924.

The heroine is engaged to a selfish egotist when the cave man of her dreams appears on the scene. The cave man does a successful Lochinvar. The plot is frail but the situations are human and suitable for picture purposes. The dialogue is brilliant and should make excellent sub-titles. It is not difficult to see Constance Talmadge as the heroine of the picture.

"CLUBS ARE TRUMP," a comedy by Leslie Hickson and W. Lee Dickson, presented by Walter Hast at the Bijou Theatre on October 14, 1924.

This is a very bad play but it is good picture material. The hero is an advertising man who believes that golf brings business success. The play tells of his struggles with golf and love. In the end he loses the championship but wins the girl of his dreams. The publicity angle in connection with this property should not be overlooked.

"ARTISTS AND MODELS," a revue, presented by the Shuberts at the Astor Theatre on October 15, 1924.

Directors with a passion for cabaret scenes and producers making two-reel comedies should not miss seeing this show.

"THE FIREBRAND," a comedy by Justus Mayer, presented by Schwab, Live-right and Mandel at the Morosco Theatre on October 15, 1924.

The hero is Cellini, the famous Italian sculptor of the fifteenth century. At a glance the play appears to be a dramatization of a "Decameron Night." The lines are salacious but nothing very censorable happens. Romance and action are always good picture material and with slight changes this play should make a good vehicle for Valentino.

Tellegen Starts Fourth Vitagraph Film in Year

IN "The Redeeming Sin," production work on which has been started by J. Stuart Blackton, Lou Tellegen will appear in his fourth Vitagraph picture within a year. In "Let Not Man Put Asunder," from Basil King's novel, the "screen's greatest lover" played the most important role, that of a cynical millionaire who finally succumbs to the fascinations of a beautiful woman, thereby proving himself a normal man. In "Between Friends," from the Robert W. Chambers best-seller, he appeared as a talented sculptor, who is forced to take revenge upon his chum, who has run away with the sculptor's wife. Both of these were Blackton productions.

In "Greater Than Marriage," produced and directed by Victor Hugo Halperin, which is soon to be released, he is the playwright-husband of a dramatic star whose insistence that his wife shall abandon her career causes domestic infelicities and a temporary separation.

Playing opposite Mme. Nazimova in "The Redeeming Sin," Mr. Tellegen will appear as a French Apache, a role widely different from each of his other characterizations. Only an artist of outstanding ability and versatility could assume successfully such varied characterizations.

Miss Marian Constance has prepared the scenario for "The Redeeming Sin." This is the fifth consecutive scenario which she has written for the Blackton unit, and these five are the only ones she has ever prepared—an unbroken line of successes. L. William O'Connell, Ernest F. Smith and Herbert Fajens have been re-engaged as photographers.

Fox Completes "Gold Heels"

"Gold Heels," the William Fox screen version of the famous racing drama, "Checkers," was finished last week at the Fox West Coast studios. This special production, which was screened from the most famous racing story ever written, is scheduled for early release by Fox Film Corporation.

W. S. Van Dyke directed this production. John Stone made the screen adaptation from the original play by Henry Blossom, Jr. Robert Agnew and Peggy Shaw, who have appeared in many of this year's Fox specials, have the two leading roles. The other principals include: Lucien Littlefield, William Norton Bailey, Carl Stockdale, Fred Butler, Harry Tracy, James Douglas, Winifred Landis, Katherine Craig, Buck Black and Betty Hisle.

"Troubles of a Bride" on Fox Release List

FOR the week of November 16, the release schedule of Fox Film Corporation includes the Tom Buckingham picture, "Troubles of a Bride," featuring Robert Agnew and Mildred June. The story was written by Mr. Buckingham in collaboration with John Stone and the production was directed by the former. The story tells of a kidnapped bride who is recovered eventually by her frantic husband, after a series of thrilling adventures.

The schedule also releases "The Brass Bowl," starring Edmund Lowe, the new Fox ace, in a picture based on the story by Louis Joseph Vance, which ranked as one of the very best of the best sellers. Jerome Storm was the director. Claire Adams plays the leading feminine role and J. Farrell MacDonald, who created a sensation as the character lead in "The Iron Horse," has an important part.

Shirley Mason's picture, "My Husband's Wives," written by Barbara La Marr, is on the schedule for the week. Maurice Elvey was the director and Bryant Washburn has the principal masculine role. Evelyn Brent plays an important part. Miss La Marr said that she obtained the material for her story from life.

Numbered among her many friends in Hollywood there is an actress whose name is known wherever motion pictures are shown, who is married to a man with three previous weddings to his credit. His present wife frequently meets up with one or the other of his former loves. But the expected embarrassing moment never comes. The lady is competent to handle any situation. In referring to the girls who went before, she invariably puts it, "my husband's wives."

From this Miss La Marr has built her story.

The balance of the week's release schedule consists of the Sunshine Comedy, "The Masked Marvel," along with Nos. 12 and 13, Volume 6 of Fox News Reel.

Vitagraph Drive Planned in "John B. Rock Month"

NOVEMBER is "John B. Rock Month" in the Vitagraph organization. This drive differs from most drives in the picture industry in the fact that it was conceived and planned by the sales organization itself, instead of being initiated by executives. It happens that the birthday anniversary of John B. Rock, general manager, falls in November, and branch managers and salesmen arranged the drive as a "present" to their chief.

Mr. Rock became general manager of Vitagraph a little more than eight months ago. The first thing he did was to make a tour of the company's twenty-nine branch offices, shaking hands with the managers and their helpers. At the outset he won a warm spot in their hearts by constituting himself "one of them," and the spirit of co-operation and renewed loyalty which he instilled was strengthened when he brought them all together at an "experience meeting" in Chicago last spring.

More than all this, Mr. Rock, in collaboration with Albert E. Smith, the Vitagraph president, arranged such a schedule of special productions as Vitagraph has never offered before. Naturally enough, this endeared the general manager to the sales force more than ever.

Incidentally, the character of Vitagraph's current product seems to assure for the drive a far greater success than any that has been made in the past history of the organization. The branch managers, with the aid of the sales officials, have perfected a special organization in every part of the country, and they are prosecuting a concerted campaign which they are confident will yield results which the general manager cannot but regard as a most acceptable birthday compliment.

Rayart to Handle "Safeguarded"

Rayart Pictures Corporation announces having secured the distribution rights for a five-reel production entitled "Safeguarded," featuring Eva Novak.

This picture was written and directed by Robert J. Horner and produced on the West Coast.

The picture will be a January release on the Rayart program.

"Going to court often means bitterness, for by the time the fight is over we may have won our judgment for a thousand dollars and created hard feelings that will cost us ten thousand. Besides this, the courts are already overcrowded, calendars are too full, and the judges are overworked.

"The whole gist of arbitration lies in the fact that in most cases of business dispute both parties are honest and want to do the fair thing. Of course there are instances where one side is unjust and vindictive. Maybe both sides. But in ninety-nine instances out of a hundred the dispute is caused by a different point of view, a different apprehension of the facts, and not over a plain desire to do a wrong.

"The arbitration law in New York State provides that: 'Two or more persons can agree in writing to submit any actionable difference or controversy to arbitration, and such written agreement to arbitrate is binding and irrevocable.' It provides that the arbitrators selected by the parties shall have power to subpoena witnesses and otherwise exercise the same authority as a judge. It also empowers the court to confirm the award of the arbitrator, which then becomes a judgment of that court, and enforceable like any other judgment. This award of the arbitrator is final and will be vacated by the court only if procured by fraud. The constitutionality of this law has been confirmed by the Court of Appeals.

"There is an Arbitration Law in Illinois. I think you will find the difference between it and the New York law is that the New York law permits a summary application for specific performance, while in Illinois there is merely a claim for nominal damages: also that while New York arbitrators determine all of the issues (fact and law), the Illinois arbitrators can refer issues of the law to the court.

"New York State, by the Arbitration Law of 1920, removes the element of revocability in arbitration contracts and submissions, and makes them valid, enforceable and irrevocable."

Chadwick Heads Elated at Reception of Films

I. E. CHADWICK, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, and officials of his organization are highly elated by the manner in Chadwick Pictures for the independents this season have won admiration from distributors and exhibitors all over the country for their entertaining qualities and box office power.

Letters keep arriving at the Chadwick offices from all corners of the United States in praise of those pictures of the Chadwick unit of nine that have already been exhibited, namely, "The Fire Patrol," "Meddling Women," "I Am the Man" and "The Painted Flapper." Particularly the two Lionel Barrymore specials, the second and third mentioned, have aroused wide comment, and critics everywhere have been unanimous in saying that these two pictures are easily among the best this famous actor has done on the screen.

Chadwick Pictures have had phenomenal success in the leading theatres of the country, playing first runs in key cities almost immediately after being released and in many cases being signally honored with important pre-release engagements.

Pictures being projected to complete the Chadwick Nine are "The Tom Boy," now in production under the direction of David Kirkland, with Herbert Rawlinson and Dorothy Devore in the leading roles; "The Street Singer," which John Gorman will produce in New York; "The Romance of an Actress" and Lionel Barrymore's third special production.

Lillian Gish to Appear for Metro in Specials

LILLIAN GISH, through her contract with Charles H. Duell, Jr., becomes an exclusive Metro-Goldwyn star, according to the announcement by Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn. The deal is one of the most important that has occurred in the film business this year. It not only marks the first independent production of Charles H. Duell, Jr., but it sets at rest endless rumors regarding the future affiliations of Miss Gish.

As the popular star of "The White Sister" and of "Romola," shortly to be released by Metro-Goldwyn, she has been spoken of for several famous roles, and her services have been sought after by every American company and several foreign producers. "Romola," made by Inspiration Pictures, is a Henry King production and was directed by him in Italy.

By the terms of the Duell contract, Miss Gish will appear exclusively in a series of special productions for Metro-Goldwyn, it was stated by Mr. Schenck.

Metro-Goldwyn regards the new Lillian Gish series as among the most important it has ever handled. Mr. Schenck stated: "Our arrangement with Charles H. Duell, Jr., for the new series of Lillian Gish specials is particularly gratifying to us, as it will enable us to give exhibitors absolutely one of the most popular box-office stars before the public. Mr. Duell's name connected with a picture has always been a guarantee of splendid artistic quality as well as assured box-office values. "The White Sister" and "Romola" prove that. We anticipate immense success for Miss Gish's new series, and are happy to continue our association begun with 'The White Sister.' "

The new arrangement follows almost directly on the deal closed several weeks ago between Mr. Duell for Inspiration Pictures and Metro-Goldwyn for the distribution of "Romola," a Henry King production over a year in the making at Florence, Italy. Dorothy Gish is featured in "Romola" with Lillian, who is starred. This is George Eliot's famous novel.

No announcement has yet been made by Mr. Duell regarding the producing organization that will surround Miss Gish. Several stories are under consideration for the first picture under the new contract. When this decision is made, preliminary work will be started at once. In all likelihood the first production will be filmed in the East, which has been the headquarters of Mr. Duell's picture activities.

At Metro-Goldwyn Ball

Among those present at the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Ball at the Hotel Astor on November 1 were the following members of the Nicholas Power organization: President Burns, General Sales Manager Griffin and Advertising Manager McGuire. Messrs. Burns and Griffin were accompanied by their wives.

F-N's Sales Conference Gets News of Forthcoming Product

THE conference of First National district managers called by E. A. Eschman, manager of distribution, at the company's home office, generated more enthusiasm for First National product and sales policies and more serious purpose to boost sales than ever before in the history of the organization. This is not a one-man opinion, but the opinion of Mr. Eschmann, of Messrs. Smith, Steele, Morgan and Hatch, his associates in the distribution department, and of the seven district managers.

The conference lasted for three days, with sessions daily at the Roosevelt Hotel from 10:30 to 5:30, with an added day of informal discussion at the home office.

Enthusiasm was registered at the start when the district managers were informed of the product which will be ready for distribution during the first half of 1925. The list of productions, stars and directors gave immediate point to the claim made for this coming product that it would surpass in audience appeal and box office magnetism any group of pictures ever released by First National or any other company.

Special attention was devoted at one of the sessions of the conference to selling pictures in the small towns, and the subject was gone into with thoroughness from all angles.

Announcement was made that in the new product would be seven special productions and twenty-one releases to be sold as The Leader Group, the title having been chosen because they form the finest assemblage of productions that any company has distributed and will still further enhance First National's reputation as a producer and a distributor of product of the first rank.

"One thing is certain," said Mr. Eschmann, at the conclusion of the three-day conference, "First National has got the pictures, the sales organization, the enthusiasm and the punch to step out in 1925 and show the industry at large that its pace of leadership is one that cannot be overtaken."

"Sunset Trail"

New William Desmond Feature From Universal

This week marks the release of "The Sunset Trail" by the Universal Pictures Corporation. It is an unusual western drama fashioned from the widely read story, "Overland Red," by Henry Herbert Knibbs.

William Desmond, seen in the starring role of many successful Universal features and serials, has a co-starring role. His work in this picture is a ditinct deviation from his accustomed he-man western role. In "The Sunset Trail" he plays the part of a lovable tramp. The other co-star is Gareth Hughes. Ernst Laemmle directed.

"The Sunset Trail" was adapted and supervised by Isadore Bernstein, a moving picture veteran who recently has turned out a remarkable succession of western features for Universal. Wyndham Gittens wrote the continuity for this picture.

"The Tornado"

Universal-Jewel Is Forceful Melodrama With Tremendous Climax That Should Please Majority

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

The Universal-Jewel production, "The Tornado," is an adaptation of a stage play by Lincoln J. Carter, the celebrated writer of stage melodramas. King Baggot directed and House Peters is starred.

This picture is melodramatic but runs less to the thrill and hair-raising action type than is usual with Lincoln J. Carter's plays, and leans more to the drama of human interest and pent-up emotion, although there is a smashing big climax that will thrill the majority of patrons and have them clenching their seats.

There is an underlying note of power and strength all through the picture. In the earlier reels it is the emotional restraint of a man who has suffered and tried to forget and suddenly has the old sores reopened by the reappearance of the woman he loves and the false friend who tricked him. In the later reels it is the tremendous power of the elements.

The title has a double significance, as it is not only the name by which the hero is known to those in the lumber camp in which he has sought refuge, but refers also to the tornado that furnishes the big climax. This scene is a wonder. Starting with the jamming of the logs, causing the river to rise and inundate the town, we see men working in the blinding rain, finally breaking this jam, but not until houses have been washed off their foundations. Then there is the force of the tornado, which bowls over houses and carries roofs across the streets into the houses on the other side, causing them to topple and imprisoning refugees in a cellar with the water rapidly rising; and to cap the climax, there is the terrific piling up of hundreds of logs against the pillars of a bridge, which gives way just as a train is crossing, throwing several cars into the rushing stream, ending with the rescue of the girl by the hero and the death of the villain whom he was unable to save.

King Baggot has made an excellent job of directing this picture. There is good human interest and fine construction. More than once an opportunity for a punch scene is passed over or handled briefly in order to save the smash for the big climax.

House Peters is ideal for the role; his emotional work is splendid and he effectively portrays the man of power and kindliness who is holding himself in check. His acting is restrained, yet forceful. Ruth Clifford also measures up to the strong emotional opportunities which her role provides, and Richard Tucker is a capable weakling-villain. Kate Price and Snitz Edwards supply some effective comedy touches and Dick Sutherland furnishes heavy melodramatic atmosphere.

Story

Grim and severe, but with a kindly heart, the boss of the lumber camp was known as Tornado. Returning to his shack in the village, he sees Ruth Travers the girl he has come to the wilderness to forget, and her husband. Ruth sends word by her husband that she must see Tornado, but the husband lies to keep them apart. Tornado, learning the couple are unhappy reaches the hotel in time to prevent Ruth from being beaten by her husband, and tells her the story of his perfidy, how he left Tornado to die in France, lied about him and finally won Ruth. The couple start to leave on an early train, but a cyclone comes up. Tornado manages to break the log jam and save the town, but the logs pile against the bridge and destroy it as the train is going over. Tornado saves Ruth and goes back for her husband, but it is too late to save him.

"He Who Gets Slapped"

Seastrom Produces Remarkable Picture With Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer and John Gilbert

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Leonid Andreyev's play, "He Who Gets Slapped," aroused considerable discussion when seen on the New York stage. There were those critics who professed to see deep subtlety in it; others vehemently declared that it was but a shell of a plot glossed over with ambiguity. But the play went on to a financial success and was acclaimed by many as one of the most artistic productions ever put on by the ambitious Theatre Guild.

It was this professed subtlety pervading the stage play that made some folks doubtful whether it could be made into a good motion picture for Metro-Goldwyn. Carey Wilson, who adapted it for the screen, and Director Victor Seastrom did not have an easy task. Nevertheless they have accomplished wonders, producing one of the most human, gripping and at the same time artistic motion pictures that it has been the pleasure of the writer to witness this year. It is real box office stuff.

Naturally it is unfair to credit Seastrom and Wilson with the entire responsibility for a difficult task exceptionally well done. Aiding them was a splendidly capable cast—Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Tully Marshall, Marc McDermott, to mention only a few. Chaney again scores as a gifted character actor, making the grotesque clown of the circus a human, lovable victim of misfortune, and Gilbert is not far behind him as the impetuous circus rider in love with Consuelo. Norma Shearer screens marvelously, and especially in her scenes with Chaney surpasses herself.

It is about time to say that "He Who Gets Slapped" is primarily a circus story. "He" is a scientist who, his invention and his wife stolen by his best friend, takes a satirical satisfaction in becoming a circus clown, the butt of ill-mannered jokes. But even in this role the man's genius manifests itself, so that he becomes the best clown in France. Romance comes again in the person of Consuelo, but it is a hopeless love finely portrayed by Chaney.

The climax of the picture deftly sketches the meeting of "He" and his betrayer, Baron Regnard. Then the drama waxes intense, with "He" endeavoring to prevent Count Mancini from marrying off his daughter Consuelo to the lascivious baron. Here the picture departs from the plot of the stage play and heightens the dramatic interest by so doing. Stabbed by Count Mancini's cane sword, "He" brings about the death of Mancini and Regnard by a lion, and himself dies, still laughing at the bitter irony of fate. Bezano, played by Gilbert, thus is left free to marry Consuelo.

Victor Seastrom's direction is of finest craftsmanship. His staging of each scene is well night perfect and the backgrounds are marvels of beauty and artistry. Thus it may be said that "He Who Gets Slapped" combines a gripping story, human characters, perfection of action and unusual, romantic and beautiful backgrounds.

Story

"He Who Gets Slapped" is a highly educated student who has spent his life in study. On the eve of his recognition as a great scientist, Baron Regnaud steals "He's" discovery and, as a crowning blow, "He's wife." "He" joins Briquet's circus and becomes a famous clown. "He" falls in love with Consuelo, daughter of the improverished Count Mancini, who is living on her earnings as a bareback rider. She loves Bezano, another rider. "He" is never taken seriously. The crowds laugh when "He" tries to denounce Baron Regnaud from the ring, and Consuelo laughs when "He," torn by great emotion, tells her of his love. Mancini plans Consuelo's marriage to the dissolute baron. They are found together in the circus office by "He," who looses a lion upon them, and they are killed after Manicini has stabbed "He." By a superhuman effort "He" drags himself into the circus ring and staggers about as the crowds roar with laughter, taking it for more buffoonery. Then "He" dies in the arms of Consuelo, who is free to marry Bezano.

"Worldly Goods"

Agnes Ayres and Pat O'Malley Get the Laughs in Domestic Comedy
Reviewed by Sumner Smith

There are as many honest laughs in the Paramount Picture "Worldly Goods" as there are thousands in John D. Rockefeller's income tax return. This second directorial effort by Paul Bern treats in a light but nevertheless emphatic way the part that money plays in married life, with Agnes Ayres and Pat O'Malley scoring in both the comedy and the sober touches. Sophie Kerr's magazine story makes excellent screen material and it has been handled in just the right way. Enhancing the humor are many clever subtitles.

It seems as though "Worldly Goods," though following very conventional comedy-drama lines, will prove a strong box office picture because of its especial appeal to women. Mere man is made the goat all the way through, thanks to O'Malley's adept delineation of a husband who could talk far faster than he could make money. Strengthening this "propaganda" discrediting the male is Bert Woodruff's fine characterization of a middle-aged man who could run the United States and all of Europe but who couldn't hold his job. The women in the Rialto Theatre, New York, were laughing all the time that "Worldly Goods" was on the screen. Undoubtedly they told their husbands all about it.

The supporting players do uniformly good work. Edythe Chapman is an able foil for Woodruff and Otto Lederer is effective as the salesman of engagement rings on a two-dollar-a-week basis.

Story

Eleanor Lawson chooses to marry Fred Hopper, a breezy salesman, instead of Clifford Ramsay, the young and wealthy head of a big department store. The honeymoon is hardly over when bill collectors besiege Hopper and his wife learns that he is more talk than industry. They are in a bad way when Eleanor gets work and Hopper decides to ask Ramsay for a job. He overhears Ramsay discussing the purchase of a site, obtains an option on the property through the loan of money from an infatuated married woman and cleans up $70,000. In the meantime, Eleanor has left him because of the other woman, but they are reconciled after Ramsay has failed to induce Eleanor to sue for a divorce.

"Romance and Rustlers"

Pleasing Arrow Western Starring Rodeo Champion Has Abundance of Action, Comedy and Romance
Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Under the alliterative and highly descriptive title of "Romance and Rustlers" Arrow Film Corporation is offering a Ben Wilson production, the third of a series staring the celebrated rodeo champion, Yakima Canutt.

With such a title, cattle rustling naturally figures largely in the story which centres on the activities of the rascally foreman who secretly works with an outlaw gang and seeks to place the blame on the hero, who of course vindicates himself in the end. In this respect it follows the lines of a large number of westerns, but there is a pleasing variation in the development of the angle covered by the other half of the title.

The hero first sees the girl when he has imbibed too freely to beguile his loneliness and she seeks refuge in his cabin and goes to sleep. Warned that the stuff he drank would make him see angels he thinks he is "seeing things." The next time he sees her, she has her eyes closed and as he is just regaining consciousness as result of an injury and he again thinks he is "seeing" his sleeping angel as he calls her. This introduces a pleasing note and good comedy. In fact these situations are quite out of the ordinary for a picture of this type.

The rustling part and melodrama is made more than usually interesting by the presence of Yakima Canutt in the leading role. Naturally his performance with the cattle and on horseback is the real article and excellently done. Particularly good is the stunt where he mounts a horse with his hands tied and the fight with the villain where Yakima hangs on to the side of the running horse. So snappy is his work that one would like to see more of it.

The star has an easy-going manner and is never camera-conscious and makes a good impression. As an actor he can hold his own with a number of the screen stars. Harris Gordon does not seem to quite fit the role of the villainous foreman, but Dorothy Woods is attractive as the girl and Joe Geard satisfactory as her father.

"Romance and Rustlers," because of Yakima Canutt's work, good comedy, plenty of typical western situations, and pleasing romance, should prove a pleasing attraction wherever Westerns are liked.

Story

Bud Kane, nearly crazy with loneliness in his job as line-rider on a ranch goes to a near-by bar for company and imbibes of liquid which he is told will make him see angels. Returning home he finds that Ruth Larrabee his boss' daughter has sought refuge in his cabin. She leaves while he is sleeping off the effects and he believes he has been seeing things. The Foreman, Wallace is in league with rustlers and throws the blame on bud. Bud discovers Wallace with the rustlers but Wallace turns the tables on him and brings him to the boss and sends for the sheriff. Ruth takes Bud's part and with the arrival of the sheriff and the round-up of the rest of the gang, Wallace is captured by Bud after he tried to escape and arrested with the others. Old Larrabee is amused and pleased at the prospect when he catches Bud calling her his real angel.

"In Every Woman's Life"

First National Offers Unusual Story With Lavish Settings and Tremendously Dramatic Climax
Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Whetting the interest with the opening subtitle that there are three men in every woman's life, the man she should have married, the man she could have married and the man she did marry, all three sometimes combined in one man, First National's "In Every Woman's Life" is a decidedly out of the ordinary production.

The action starts out in the palatial home of a French Count who is in love with one of his guests, an American girl, but is opposed by another American. There is no hint of villainy and the impression is produced that it is another triangle—society romance. But there is an unusual note in the development and a certain sophistication in the handling that somewhat mystifies you as to just how the plot will develop.

Suddenly the heroine elopes with the American, and then things begin to happen. A scene aboard ship discloses the fact that there has been no marriage and the chap is a villain. The French Count appears and marries the girl to save her honor. Then her real sweetheart turns up on the same boat. From here on there is plenty of action. Suddenly there is a thrill when the young fellow falls into the sea and another when the Count jumps in to rescue him. A lifeboat strikes the Count and he is entirely paralyzed.

This leads up to a situation in which the villain again appears and attempts to attack the heroine, with the Count helpless in bed. By a supreme effort of will he manages to raise one hand enough to fire a pistol, killing the villain. The heroine is arrested, but the paralyzed man, though unable to speak, makes known the fact that he is guilty and then dies. Melodramatic as this seems, due to the superb acting of Marc McDermott as the paralytic it is one of the most dramatic situations imaginable, and packs a terrific punch with nerve-tingling suspense.

This production has been lavishly mounted and a feature of more than ordinary interest is a banquet in a big hall with about fifty guests on horseback. There is also a well-pictured scene of a horse race.

Virginia Valli seems slightly miscast in the earlier scenes but redeems herself by fine work later. Marc McDermott really holds the center of the picture and his portrayal of the Count is truly remarkable. Stuart Holmes is satisfactory as the villain in the main, although he over-acts the scene where he is shot and takes too long to fall, making it rather unconvincing.

Some of the comedy appears forced, but the drama is certainly there with a punch. With the other thrills and McDermott's wonderful work, it is a picture that will probably afford good entertainment for the majority, even though the earlier part may prove somewhat perplexing.

Length, 6,300 feet.

Story

Count Coti, wealthy French sportsman whose horse is defeated by one owned by his guest Carlton, an American, arranges for a return match. Both are in love with Sara Langford, Carlton arranges to elope with Sara but due to an accident they just make the ship and Sara expects to be married in America. Coti learns Carlton is married, catches the steamer and to save Sara's name marries her. On board the boat is Julian Greer whom she really loves, and whose grouchy father has broken off the match. Julian in seeking to embrace Sara falls into the sea. Coti dives to his rescue and is hit on the neck by the lifeboat and paralyzed. Arriving in America, Julian and Sara take care of him and tell him his horse won the race, but Carlton comes to collect the winnings, and in full view of Coti tries to attack Sara. Julian comes to her rescue and in the fight Carlton is killed. Sara is arrested but Julian takes the blame, Coti who can neither move or speak, manages by a supreme effort of will to demonstrate that he was able to grasp a pistol in the bed and fire the shot that killed Carlton. This exertion kills him and leaves Sara free to marry Julian.

"Cheap Kisses"

Interesting Story and Effective Comedy Makes C. Gardner Sullivan Picture a Pleasing Offering

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Produced by C. Gardner Sullivan, who also wrote the story and prepared the scenario, "Cheap Kisses," which is being distributed through F. B. O., deals with a chorus girl of excellent character who marries into a wealthy and snobbish family and gets a taste of the sham and artificiality and cheap morals of certain persons of that type.

Mr. Sullivan, who has a host of successful picture stories to his credit, is a skilled technician and has made this production with the box office in view, introducing elements which have proven their audience appeal. The story is interesting and holds the attention throughout, even if the big situation is not altogether plausible.

The action is built up along somewhat out of the ordinary lines and for a considerable part of the footage the spectator will probably believe that it is going to be more of a comedy than drama, for there are some excellent comedy situations in the early reels. As the story develops, however, it is seen that Mr. Sullivan has made a certain type of snobbish rich the object of satire, holding up to ridicule the attempts especially of those who have passed their prime to appear jazzy and kittenish, making their actions appear foolish but amusing. He also takes a fling at their moral weaknesses, even picturing the young hero not only as a chap who falls for a scheming adventuress, but turns out to be a cad.

There is considerable jazz atmosphere for those who like it, and the story runs along smoothly. Audience sympathy is well placed and you are thoroughly in accord with the action of the heroine. Lillian Rich gives a good performance in this role.

The outstanding point of this picture, however, is the unusual and decidedly original comedy contributed by Jean Herscholt in a character-comedy role. There are a number of laughs that are hearty and genuine in the scenes where, as a famous sculptor, the idol of society, he visits the home of the heroine, dons an apron and helps in the kitchen, and even in this attire ushers in her snobbish in-laws. The comedy grows naturally out of the situations and is never forced, making it doubly effective.

The picture is portrayed by capable players, including Cullen Landis as the young husband, Vera Reynolds, Phillip Smalley, Louise Dresser, Lincoln Stedman and Sydney De Grey. It is a picture that should entertain the majority of patrons.

Story

Donald Dillingham marries a chorus girl, Ardell, and his wealthy family turn him down, but when they learn that the celebrated sculptor, Borgstrom, who is being lionized by society, has selected Ardell as the most beautiful American woman, they call on Donald and insist that he and Ardell and Borgstrom visit their big estate. Among the jazzy crowd present is an adventuress, Maybelle Westcott, and Donald falls for her. Ardell, using as a lever, his father's infatuation for a show girl, gets money from him and then buys Maybelle off and exposes her when she does not live up to her bargain. Donald resents her attitude and she leaves him. Returning to their home she finds Donald, contrite, is already there and she forgives him.

"Is Love Everything?"

Associated Exhibitors Offers Society Problem With Alma Rubens, Frank Mayo and H. B. Warner

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Whether a girl should marry the man she really loves or a man of wealth in order to save her family from financial embarrassment, and having chosen the wealthy one, just what the husband's attitude should be when he believes she still loves the other fellow, furnished the basis of the Associated Exhibitors production, "Is Love Everything!"

While the theme is a familiar one, the development and the climax are out of the ordinary, as it is the wealthy husband who gets a large majority of the sympathy. He is a sterling fellow with everything in his favor and if love was guided by logic there would seem to be no reason why the woman should not be happy with him, as the other fellow is flirty and easy-going and has really nothing to recommend him.

William Christy Cabanne, who directed this production, has introduced a yacht sequence with a reasonably effective wreck and rescue by a rum-runner, with a mutiny aboard and considerable fighting among the ruffians. Here the lover shows his mettle, saves the girl and finally wins his reward.

The climax is unusual, as you naturally expect the husband's return and when he appears you anticipate he will win his wife back, but finding her in the other fellow's arms he goes back to the sea with the captain who rescued him. This has the element of surprise and novelty, but it is doubtful if it will prove satisfactory to a large number of patrons who have had their sympathy for the husband built up all through the picture.

Mr. Cabanne, in directing this picture, has weakened the force of the story by certain inconsistencies, he leaves you to guess how the husband was rescued, and other points are unexplained. The settings are elaborate and there are a number of picturesque scenes. The picture will probably prove pleasing to those who like society dramas with a certain amount of melodrama, even though it does not develop any real strength or depth.

Alma Ruben gives a good performance as the girl, but is handicapped by lack of real sympathy for her, and the same is true of Frank Mayo as the hero who has not much to do except in the rescue scenes. The remainder of the cast is satisfactory, the best performance is by H. B. Warner as the husband. His work is sincere, dignified and excellent, and the scene where he sacrifices his own love for the happiness of the girl, is especially fine.

Cast

Length, six reels.

Story

Unable to decide between steady-going Jordon whom she admires and happy-go-lucky Robert whom she really loves, Jordon's money influences her mother's opinion and Virginia marries him. Her scapegrace brother Boyd steals her old love letters from Robert and tries to sell them to Jordon, who destroys them. Jordon however plans a test by inviting Robert to a yacht cruise. A collision destroys the yacht but Robert, Boyd and Virginia are among those rescued. Robert continues to plead his love and although Virginia is true to his memory, she finally consents to marry him believing Jordon dead. Jordon however has been picked up and comes home just at this time. Realizing their happiness and willing to sacrifice his own feelings in his great love for Virgina he decides to let them continue to believe him dead and goes away with the sea captain who rescued him.

"The Garden of Weeds"

Paramount Offers Adaptation of Stage Play, Starring Betty Compson and Directed by James Cruze

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Paramount is offering "The Garden of Weeds," an adaptation of a stage play by Leon Gordon and Doris Marquette, with Betty Compson as the star and James Cruze handling the directorial reins.

The title is the name given by a wealthy crook, devoid of all the better principles, to his estate where he entertains chorus girls and hangers-on until he tires of them, and the story principally concerns this man and a girl who after being his mistress for a while marries an upright chap without disclosing her past. The drama lies principally in her fear of her secret becoming known and in the manner in which her old associates again cross her pathway, even including the man who taunts her with veiled insinuations.

NEWS AND REVIEWS OF SHORT SUBJECTS AND SERIALS

"Fast Company"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Hal Roach's latest "Our Gang" comedy, "Fast Company" toes the line with the rest of these unique kid offerings. The "Our Gang" brand is becoming so established that whenever you hear it mentioned immediately there comes to mind—funniest antics, heartiest laughs and best entertainment. Thus when we say "Fast Company" toes the line we mean it's great stuff and the best of material for any box office. The freckled boy, Mickey, changes clothes with a poor-little-rich-boy and gets a chance to familiarize himself with the interior of a big hotel. The wealthy youngster, on the other hand, falls right in line with the gang and develops into a regular kid. The whole bunch raids the hotel, led by Mickey's goat. They are excommunicated but return via the fire escape. A cop sees them and then starts another wild rampage through the hotel. One of the funniest scenes is when the youngsters get into the hostelry's new grille, known as "Cocoanut Grove." There they pretend they are cannibals. They indulge in a couple of whiffs of a corncob laid down by an absent carpenter and wind up on a park bench, with each and every one holding his respective "tummy."—T. W.

"The Nickle Plated West"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

Old-fashioned rural melodrama is burlesqued in this Fox Sunshine comedy with highly amusing results. The picture opens on a farm on Christmas morning with everything covered with snow and the temperature hovering around zero. The girl appears, seeking shelter from the storm, but instead of being in rags she is in tights and explains she was in a balloon that was wrecked. The hero and his uncle volunteer to take her back to Hollywood and start out with a caravan of flivvers ending in getting mixed up in a real estate boom in Los Angeles, where the tent flies away, carrying the girl who finally falls into the arms of the hero. The action follows familiar burlesque lines, but there has been a lot of excellent gags along novel lines, such as milking a cow that gives frozen milk resembling macaroni, some ingenious and new stuff with flivvers and some fine "snow" stuff, making it altogether two reels well filled with action and situations that will bring smiles, chuckles and laughs to the face of the average patron. It is one of the very best of the recent Sunshine comedies. Harry Sweet has the leading comedy role.—C. S. S.

"Sweet Dreams"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

With more of a connected plot than the usual Century comedy distributed by Universal, this two-reeler concerns a poor girl, who posing for an artist meets a rich fellow who falls in love with her. His mother seeks to force him to marry another girl who poses as an heiress, the poor girl learning that she is the rightful heir; rushes to the wedding in time to prevent it and all ends happily. There is quite an amount of amusing material, including several gags, particularly in the scenes where the girl meets with all kinds of difficulties in seeking to prevent the wedding. While this is not entirely original, it will provoke a number of laughs and quite a little ingenuity has been shown in some of the situations. Altogether, this subject is well up to the Century average.—C. S. S.

"She Knew Her Man"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

When the farmer forbids his feline mouse getter from associating with an ardent backfence soloist she "steals away at midnight encased in her lover's furry arms." The farmer repents when the mice take advantage of her absence. When she returns with "hubby" she gets a royal welcome until —the farmer discovers the kittens outnumber the rodents. "She Knew Her Man" is well up to Cartoonist Paul Terry's high standard.—T. W.

"The Artist's Model"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

This Pen and Ink Vaudeville by Earl Hurd portrays theatricals in which a briefly clad girl steps out of a poster, a Wild Zulu Jazz Band is operated by means of the conductor's club, slack wire artists perform on a barrel, "Props" cleans out the Zulu group with the dice and the colored conductor seeks revenge. The sketching is well done but there is little novelty of idea, except, perhaps, where the piano player strips the keys in his contortions.—S. S.

"Poor Butterfly"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Jack White's Mermaid Comedy gets off to a good start with excellent subtitling and introductory characterization of a country girl, Oleander Anchovie, her suitor, her grandpa and an uncle so tough he played tiddle-de-winks with manhole covers. The amusement heightens when a bugologist is introduced, and he figures in by chasing to find garments for his nether extremities. The rest of the comedy possesses average slapstick appeal, until several characters begin performing the time-honored stunt of losing their clothes. There are quite a few good gags in this subject and, all in all, it ought to satisfy the not too critical. But it does seem that watching a man run around in his underclothes and a colored man slice off part of a woman's dress with a sword no longer is the essence of humor. The cast is excellent. It includes Ruth Hiatt, Jack Lloyd, Jay Belasco, Jack Ackroyd, Wm. J. Dwyer, Peg O'Neil, Otto Fries and Louise Carver. —S. S.

"Antony and Cleopatra"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

The latest offering in Universal's Hysterical History series burlesques the love affair of Marc Antony and Cleopatra, with Julius Caesar as the rival. A bee stings Cleo on the nose, swelling it up to unusual size, a blow from the slave restores its shape. Antony cuts Caesar out and flees with Cleo down the Nile in a row boat. Caesar sics his pet alligator after them, but Marc captures it. Cleo runs away in a Ford chariot, but when the chap begins pulling the familar stuff she dons arctics, gets out and starts to walk home. There are a number of amusing scenes, but it is hardly up to the amusement average of the majority of this series.—C. S. S.

"The Bull Fight"

(Fox—Instructive—One Reel)

With the exception of the actual killing of the bull, the entire career of the bullfighter, the idol of the Spanish populace, is shown in this interesting Fox Educational. We see even the small children on the farm imitating the fighter and the bull and learning at an early age the tricks of the profession. Then is shown how the ambitious youngster fights his first bull at his home town fiesta and if victory continues to crown him how he finally goes from triumph to triumph, finally becoming a noted fighter in Seville or some other prominent city. The manner in which the bull is excited and all the details of the fight are pictured except the actual death blow.—C. S. S.

"Gridiron Glory"

(Pathe—"Sportlight"—One Reel)

Grant Rice's "Gridiron Glory," as the title implies, is especially appropriate for the current season when the pigskin oval is the center of discussion in the world of sport. This "Sportlight" takes excellent advantage of the theme to show the highlights of many of the recent collegiate clashes on the greensward. It also shows football teams in training and depicts details of some methods with which even some football fans may not be familiar.—T. W.

"Watch Your Pep"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

In this Cameo Comedy, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance board the train for a vacation at Malaria Lake. Their baggage, including one dog, generally interferes with the Pullman car passengers and they are thrown off the train. At the lake the tent falls down several times through the stupidity of Vance, who is subtitled as a son-in-law "whose only exercise consisted of jumping at conclusions." There are spills in the water, etc. The subject manifests little originality but will get by with audiences that like slapstick.—S. S.

"Garden of Weeds"

Naturally, there is no sympathy for this man, and the heroine forfeits most of the sympathy she would naturally get by her affair with him, for which no excuse is given and over which she seems to have no deep regret. There is very little action except a melodramatic touch including a fight and the fall of the villain to his death; the fight is brief and the fall has been handled in the same way.

The production depends largely on the characterizations of the two leading players. These have been skilfully developed by Director Cruze and admirably played by Rockcliffe Fellowes and Betty Compson. The story moves along smoothly and is interesting, although it seems slight for the footage allotted. There are good atmospheric touches, and in fact no fault can be found with the direction and acting. There are a couple of very finely handled scenes, notably where the girl attempts to tell her story, and you wonder whether the husband is asleep as he pretends; also the scene in which there is excellent suspense and considerable clever dialogue where the villain is apparently telling her husband of another case, when in reality he is making veiled references to the wife.

Warner Baxter is satisfactory as the husband, but has little to do, and the same is true of Al St. John as a vaudeville actor. Charles Ogle seems somewhat out of place as a confidence man. The remainder of the cast are all good types, especially Lilyan Tashman.

"The Garden of Weeds" appears to be a picture which will appeal more strongly to high class audiences.

Story

Of great wealth but lacking in the better traits, Flagg maintains an estate which he calls his "Garden of Weeds" where he entertains girls of the stage until he tires of them. Attracted to Dorothy Delbridge, he has her fired because she refuses to accept his attentions. She later accept his invitation and becomes the mistress of "Garden of Weeds." Meeting Crawford, another wealthy chap, she breaks with Flagg and marries him but has not the courage to reveal her past. Crawford engages Flagg's butler, who threatens to reveal the secret. Flagg comes to see Crawford and arranges to fleece him in a shady deal. He begins to taunt her with veiled jibes to get even. Dorothy, unable to stand it any longer, reveals the truth. Crawford says he has known it all the time and proceeds to thrash Flagg, who falls over the balcony railing and is killed.

"Teeth"

Duke, a Big Dog, Shares Honors With Tom Mix and His Horse Tony in Pleasing Fox Feature

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Tom Mix's beautiful horse, Tony, has a rival that makes him take a back seat, and for that matter, Tom himself is pushed somewhat into the background by these two animals in this star's latest production for Fox, "Teeth."

The new rival is Tony, a dog, not a police dog, just a big black intelligent fellow that even grabs the title of the picture, for "Teeth" is the name Tom calls him. There is something unusually appealing and interest-holding about a dog on the screen, particularly if he is a good one, and this dog, "Duke" certainly is a clever and likeable animal, he does not do any remarkable stunts, but he certainly has a full bag of tricks.

The story is a melodrama built to show these two animals and especially the dog to advantage and it accomplishes its purpose. There is a good story running through it that entertains thoroughly even though there are a number of improbabilities and the dog has been pictured as possessed of almost unbelievable intelligence that weakens the force of some of the scenes.

There is, of course, a romance, but it is a secondary consideration and does not occupy much of the footage. There is plenty of action and it deals principally with the arrest of Tom for a murder he did not commit, and the way in which the dog proves a real pal and aids him in getting out of the scrape and rescuing the girl. Tom is his usual likeable self, and Lucy Fox is well cast as the girl, George Bancroft makes a despicable villain, and Lucian Littlefield is surprisingly good as a comedy sheriff's assistant.

The climax and rescue occurs in a forest fire, and these sequences have been well-handled and are very realistic. An effective scene shows the couple seeking refuge in a water hole with various other animals of the forest including a big bear. There is a pleasing note in the situation that brings the hero and girl together, both claiming the dog that wants to be loyal to both and has his problem settled when the romance culminates.

With unusually good animal stuff, a pleasing little romance, effective melodrama and a story that builds up sympathy and holds the interest, and with nicely balanced comedy relief for the villainy, "Teeth," despite its improbabilities provides entertainment that should prove better than average for practically all classes of patrons.

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

Some Questions

George J. Mahowald, Garrison, N. Dak., asks some interesting questions, as follows:

I have one of your handbooks and have learned sufficient from it already to convince me it is worth twice the price I paid for it. However, I have a few questions to ask of you: First, do you consider the reflecting type of arc lamp a good buy where we are using 110 volt D. C. and a 73 foot projection distance? Second, is the motor generator a good buy where you use 220 volt D. C., Our light plant has informed us that we will have to use 220 volt current. If we put in a motor generator it would eliminate a goodly part of the heat. Am I right or wrong? Third, what, in your opinion, is a fair wage for a projectionist in charge of one Power projector, running four nights a week, one show a night?

The reflecting arc, which I think should be termed the "Low Intensity Arc," is giving excellent satisfaction. You have not given me sufficient data to enable me to say definitely whether or no I would consider it advisable to supplant your present lamp with the low intensity (reflecting type) lamp. In small places, it is not an unknown thing for the power company to charge a "flat rate" to the village theatre, in which case, unless you could get a lower rate with the low intensity lamp, there would be no large advantage in making the change. On the other hand if you are paying a high rate—say ten to twelve cents per K. W.—for current, it might be alright to invest in the new lamp, though with only four shows a week it would take quite some while to get back the money invested through current saving.

You see, Friend Mahowald, in any event your current bills must be quite small, and those lamps cost quite a bit. With 110 volts and forty amperes, which is as much as I would suppose you are using, your power consumption would be 4,400 watts with your present lamp. With the low intensity you would use say twenty amperes, which would be 2,200 watts. This would amount to considerable if you were running even as much as two shows a day, and six or seven days a week. As it is—well, figure it out for yourself by multiplying the saving (2.2 K. W. if you use 20 amperes) by the number of hours you run per week, and that result by the price per K. W. you pay for current. Figuring the new equipment at say $250.00 (I don't remember its exact price, but that is about it) you can then see how long the time required for the saving to equal the amount invested would be and decide whether or no it will pay. The low intensity would, I think, give as good or a better result than you now get.

As to the motor generator and 220 D. C., again it is a question of the necessary investment and the hours you run. Using a rheostat you will use electric energy (K.W.) equal to the line voltage times the amperage, hence if you use forty amperes from 110 volt lines through a rheostat, you will use 110 x 40=4,400 watts, whereas if you use forty amperes from a 220 volt line you will consume 220 x 40 = 8,800 watts, or precisely twice the power, all the extra power being wasted in the rheostat, appearing in the form of heat therein.

IMPORTANT: Your light company undoubtedly proposes to oblige you to connect to the two outside wires of a 3-wire, 110-220 volt system in order to prevent the unbalancing effect of the projection arc, and the loading of one generator more than the other. THIS WILL RESULT IN ABSOLUTELY NO ADVANTAGE TO THEM IF YOU TAKE CURRENT THROUGH A RHEOSTAT, except that they will have an equal load added to the second generator, without in any way relieving the one now carrying the unbalanced load, and they will thus collect just twice the money from you. They do not, I think, quite understand the matter, or they would not issue such an order. If you were using a motor generator, then such an order would represent good practice. You are right about the heat matter, but that is comparatively trivial. The real effect when using a rheostat is to double the load on the power plant and to double the charge to you. The only solution is to remain as you are, which is, under the conditions, common sense, or the installation of a costly motor generator set.

As to wages—frankly I don't know. Altogether too much depends on how capable you yourself are, and what the local conditions are. A small village theatre has a strictly limited patronage and cannot possibly go very high in the matter of compensation to employees. On the other hand the living expenses are usually quite low. I am sure a moment of thought will convince you that it would be utterly impossible for me to make an intelligent reply without knowing ALL the local conditions, and knowing your own capabilities as well.

Question No. 152—Does making the sides of the picture parallel remove the distortion due to projection angle?

Question No. 153—Describe, in detail, all the various evil effects of distortion in the screen image.

Question No. 154—How may the sides of the picture be made parallel when there is keystone effect? Watch your step here.

Question No. 155—Is keystone effect accompanied by out-of-focus effect? If you say yes, then tell us why.

Question No. 156—Tell us the different methods available for shapening the definition all over the screen when there is a heavy pitch in the projection.

How He Did It

Our readers will remember that some while ago Samuel F. Cooley, Projectionist, Lyric Theatre, Manchester, N. H., wrote concerning his inability to get his picture and its edges in sharp focus at the same time, using Mazda light source. He now writes setting forth what he has been able to accomplish in the clearing up of the trouble, as follows:

As to the blurred edges of the picture, you understand what my trouble was, so it is unnecessary to go into detail on that point. However in order to have it clear, there are two points to bear in mind, viz: I have Mazda equipment, with picture not filling screen all around by three inches, thus giving a clear view of edges.

After a lot of experimenting I honestly believe it is impossible to get the edges perfectly sharp, and at the same time have the picture itself in perfect focus, but I have learned a lot and have improved matters by fully 100 per cent. The following is, in part, what I did.

When I first encountered this difficulty I assumed the fault to be in the projector mechanism. I promptly installed new film tracks, aperture plates, tension shoes and tension springs, with absolutely no beneficial results. I then tackled the Gundlach half size lenses. I focused the picture as sharply as possible, removed the film and projected the white light to the screen. Was obliged to pull the projection lens back 3/64" in order to get the edges perfectly sharp. It then occurred to me that instead of pulling the lens back I would leave it alone and build the aperture plate out, but after a very pleasant Sunday spent in trying, I found it could not be built out far enough to cure the trouble without scratching the film, so that bright idea was OUT.

Next I tried out a different make of lens, with some improvement, but I was not satisfied. I then secured a Bausch and Lomb Cinephor lens, half size, which went so far toward straightening out the difficulty that I began to think I would win out after all. With these lenses the blur at the edges was reduced fully seventy five per cent., and there was no color left at all (Friend Cooley reported color fringes as accompanying the blurred edges.—Ed.) The edges were just a soft outline.

Here, I thought, was the time to return to the aperture plate, and I did so. I found I could shim out the aperture plate 5/1000" without having the film rub, and did so. The net result was very, but not perfectly sharp edges when the picture is in perfect focus.

My projectors are Simplex and when using a half size lens and the regulation 50-50 two-wing shutter there was slight travel ghost both up and down. Might be due to some extent to lost motion in the mechanism. Tried a shutter the Simplex supplies for half size lenses, but Mr. Flicker got on the job, so that was "out." Re-installed the regular, stopped the lenses down a trifle and all is lovely. No flicker, no travel ghost. What more could you ask?

I think the Bluebook school is just great. Would like to hear from other projectionists using Mazda as to what kind of screen they are using. Mine is a Gold Fibre. Have watched results in another theatre using a "special Mazda screen" and am not enthusiastic about either my own or it. The trouble with both is that when you get right down close to the screen and watch the picture closely it seems to have what I would describe as "prickly heat." IF EVERY PROJECTIONIST WOULD SPEND FIFTEEN MINUTES EVERY DAY IN THE FRONT ROW WATCHING HIS PICTURE, A GOODLY NUMBER OF THEM WOULD BE SURPRISED TO FIND WHAT A REALLY POOR RESULT THEY ARE PRODUCING. I thank you.

I put that last in capitals myself, because I'm not so sure but there is a really large size idea there. It is well worth thinking over

Bluebook School—Answers 123-127

Question No. 123—Is the rotating shutter an integral part of the projector optical system? In replying to this question merely give your view as to just what various things constitute a part of the optical system of the projector.

Wm. A. Burnett, Newton, Iowa; Charles Oldham, Norwich, Conn.; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Arthur Gray, Boston, Mass.; Karl H. Sommermeyer, Marietta, Minesota; Harry Dobson, Toronto, Ontario; James J. Hodbell, East Boston, Mass.; A. H. Fell, Collingswood, New Jersey; and T. L. Grigsby, Jacksonville, Florida, all made acceptable replies to this question, though Gray was the only one who named the aperture and screen. Hanover, however, has what I think is by far the best of it, in that he has made what seems a really sensible division. His reply reads as follows:

In replying I shall have to take issue with the Bluebook, Page 206, because I hold it—the shutter—not to be an integral part of the optical system. In my opinion the optical system of a motion picture projector consists entirely and wholly of a condenser, or whatever may replace it, and the projection lens. However, there are certain other things which are so closely linked therewith that the optical system would be utterly useless without them and those things I hold to be what might be termed necessary adjuncts to the optical system.

I would put it this way: The optical system of the motion picture projector consists of two main parts, Viz: a condenser or mirror to collect and concentrate the light, and a projection lens to receive the image-laden rays and send them forward to the screen in such manner that the rays will be focused there as an image of the transparent photograph at the aperture, AND certain necessary adjuncts without which the system could not operate, viz: A light source, an aperture to define the outline of the picture, a rotating shutter to mask the lens while the film is moving, and a receiving surface called a screen. In one way of looking at it these adjuncts are really an integral part of the optical system, since without them it could not function properly, but as I said, I believe it is better to separate the elements named into the divisions I have indicated.

My compliments to brother Hanover. That is some considerable answer, if you ask me, and in that I believe our friends will all agree. Your suggestion cannot but be accepted, I think. I myself have never quite liked the idea of naming these various things a part of the optical system, but my thinker did not stretch far enough to find the obvious solution which you have named.

Question No. 124—Explain the relation between projection lens diameters and the rotating shutter.

Oldham, Gray, Dobson, Burnett, H. Y. Ballou, Hollywood, Calif.; Sommermeyer, Hanover, Hobell, Fell, and Grigsby all made acceptable answers. Here is Gray's reply:

From the viewpoint of efficient light transmission through that section of the light beam extending through the projection lens and revolving shutter (without sacrificing accuracy of image registration) the relationship between the lens free diameter and the rotating shutter becomes that of co-ordinating factors. Furthermore, the shutter question itself must be split into two factors, i. e. (a) Time ratio between the period required for the edge of the master blade to traverse the light beam, and the duration of the period of total eclipse. (b) Time ratio between the total eclipse (all blades) and full exposure; the duration of total eclipse being governed by the rotating speed of the shutter and width of its blades.

The question of primary or secondary importance of these factors is variable under varying conditions, thus: if the beam emerges from the projection lens (1) divergent, (2) parallel, (3) slightly convergent and then parallel for a short distance, then any increase in the free diameter of the lens beyond that necessary to admit the entire beam of light at the rear factor and pass it out unobstructed at the front factor will not be advisable because it will necessitate an increase in the width of the shutter master blade, as well as, probably, the interrupter blade or blades. This is because the light beam will be increased in diameter at any possible shutter plane in the three instances, regardless of whether or not the shutter be at the plane of the aerial image. Under these conditions the more important relationship is between lens diameter and shutter factor (b).

In case the light beam emerging from the lens converges from the lens to the aerial image, then any reasonable i crease in lens diameter will not necessitate an increase in shutter blade width (Not correct there, I think, as increase beyond the actual beam diameter would allow of a halo of reflected light surrounding the beam, which if not cut off by the shutter master blade would injure definition and possible set up faint travel ghost.—Ed.), and the more important relationship, which though not under the control of the projectionist, still exists, becomes that existing between the lens diameter and shutter factor (a).

Incidentally, with reference to Brother Griffith's opinion regarding the advisability of total eclipse for the entire duration of the film movement period, I hold with him in the matter. It is not good practice to "burn the candle at both ends," which homely simile applies rather aptly.

Friend Gray, if you need twice as much light and can get it by double the candle consumption—well, I dunno. Anyhow that last has nothing to do with Question No. 124. —Ed.

Question No. 125—What is the "aerial image" and wherein lies the advantage of locating the rotating shutter at its plane? Also is there always advantage in locating the rotating shutter there?

Gray, Burnett, Ballou, Dobson, Oldham, Sommermeyer, Hobdell, Fell and Hanover all 'got by,' though Sommermeyer said "Collector lens" where he evidently meant to say converging lens. Fell had an excellent answer and a mighty good one to question 124 too. This time, though, I think, Hanover, has the best of it. He says:

The aerial image is an image of the front surface of the converging lens which is present in the light beam and which may be made visible by interposing a screen at the proper plane, first having made some ink marks on the face of the converging lens, the focusing of which will enable one to find the image plane accurately.

The position of the aerial image varies according to the focal length of the projection lens and the distance of the face of the converging lens from the projector aperture. With short focal length lenses it may be inside the lens barrel. With very long focal length lenses it may be as much as sixteen or eighteen inches from the front of the lens.

Under most conditions the aerial image will be found at the point of least diameter of the light beam, though where the beam is parallel or nearly so, for some inches, it may be anywhere within that section; also under some conditions the beam is of greater diameter at the aerial image than elsewhere.

Obviously if the image is at the point of least diameter, then there is advantage in setting the rotating shutter there, because (a) that being the point of least diameter the master blade width may be reduced to its least possible width, with the possibility of also removing some from each interrupter blade, thus gaining substantially in light. (b) At the aerial image the cutting of the light beam produces a dissolving effect on the screen, which some hold to allow of a still greater reduction in shutter blade width, though I myself rather doubt this latter as being of practical advantage.

Question No. 126—What various things does the term "Projection" properly include?

Dobson, Ballou, Gray, Oldham, Grigsby, Sommermeyer, Hobdell, Fell and Hanover all made replies of varying excellence, several of which I would like to publish, did space permit. I believe that of Ballou, however, covers the ground in fairly complete way, and certainly wastes no language. He says:

The term "Projection" as applies to motion pictures, includes the following: knowledge of the mechanics of motion picture projection apparatus. A knowledge of light action and optics as applies to motion picture projection.

A knowledge of electricity and of electric arcs and projection incandescent lamps.

A knowledge of screens and screen surfaces, and above all, plenty of good, old-fashioned, common, every day HORSE SENSE.

To which I would add ability to judge of naturalness of action in moving objects, a knowledge of auditorium lighting as it affects the screen image, viewing angles, effects of distortion caused by projection angle and the effect of screen surroundings with regard to contrasting colors.

Question No. 127—Just what do you understand the term "Projectionist," which really is a contraction of "Motion Picture Projectionist," to mean, and why is its use preferable to "Moving Picture Machine Operator, or, as usually used, "Operator?"

Dobson, Ballou, Hobdell, Sommermeyer, Oldham, Gray Burnett, Grigsby and Fell all gave really excellent replies to this one. There are several I would really like to publish, particularly those of Fell, Gray, Sommermeyer, Ballou and Hobdell. For several reasons I have finally decided upon the answer of Ballou. Here it is:

The term "Projectionist" is properly applied to one who has a thorough understanding of all the subjects, both theoretical and practical, named in the answer to Question 126.

The Cinematographers are endeavoring to get away from the term "Cameraman." A "Cameraman" may be any PUNK who carries a camera around. A cinematographer is one who "paints with light"—an artist in every sense of the word. A projectionist "paints with light" in one sense of the word, though doubtless there will be those who will ridicule me for making that assertion, only the operation is the reverse of that of the cinematographer. For more reasons than one the term "Operator" should be thrown bodily into the discard. In the first place an "Operator" is looked upon as one who looks after or is the attendant of a more or less automatic machine. As an instance, take the operator of a bolt cutting machine. When the operator is taught how to set up the work and set the machine in motion to do the cutting, he then has nothing to do but watch the machine do the work. No great amount of skill is required and what it is necessary for him (or her) to do may be learned in a very short time. He (or she) therefore is not looked upon as being possessed of knowledge or skill having high value, and the "boss" resents having to pay him anything more than a very low compensation. Day after day he has but one thing to do, viz: feed material to a machine which itself makes the bolts.

It is not necessary that he make a study of steel or iron from which the bolts are made. He need know but very little about the motor which drives the machine. It is not expected that he will make a study of the best type of belt to drive the machine. In other words he need not use his brains to any considerable extent, hence he is largely a mere automaton—one who threads 'er up, closes a switch and lets 'er go!

To this excellent answer I will append that of Gray, because it is short and gives us a slant at another angle of the matter. He says:

PROJECTIONIST— A person engaged professionally in the art of projecting motion pictures. Projectionist is the correct nomenclature, having been accepted and adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers (And several states and Canadian Dominions.—Ed.) Eventually the term may and will be applied to all those engaged in professional projection, because improvement and advancement in projection mechanics and optics will necessitate a practical ability and theoretical knowledge far in advance of that now possessed by the average person now thus employed. It will inevitably be a survival of the fittest, and when that time comes we shall all have to be "there" with the real goods.

The term projectionist, as used today, quite accurately distinguishes as between the ambitious, progressive men and the only too large group of "I" hell with that kinder stuff" nonenities, who are engaged in projecting motion pictures. An operator is one who operates a machine of some sort, and since the mere operation of a propector is a mightly small part of the duty of a projectionist, the term "operator' is inadequate and misleading, not to say nonsensical.

Progressive

A projectionist whose name and location is withheld, for very obvious reasons, sends in a subscription for that excellent little publication, the American Projectionist, the address of which he has not got, and remarks:

I am an eager follower of your good work. Have the Bluebook; also I keep up with the Department work, subscribing to the Moving Picture World to be sure to get it without missing any numbers.

Some of these days I hope to write you a very interesting story. I am a progressive. I have myself gone to the extent of buying parabolic condensers and many other needed things after being refused them by my manager—that is to say, he does not exactly refuse them, but just doesn't get them.

Well, that is progressiveness with a vengeance. I love the progressive and I know just how you feel about going without the things you need to produce the results, BUT I'm denmad (spell it backwards for results) if I'd do that. I'd see him right square in the exact geographical center of the place my loving enemies all say I'm going to—before long I guess, as this 25th day of October is my fifty-eighth birthday — before I'd let any manager get away with that! You're pretty evidently a man who loves and respects his profession, and just for that I'll say more power to you—and next time that manager "forgets" to get what is needed, you get a six foot club, chase him far off into the tall timber and bust one of the trees right smack over his solid ivory dome.

Its Weight in Gold

K. J. Horton, Projectionist Solon Theatre, Spencer, Iowa, in the course of a letter says:

I have not previously written our department, but am a constant reader of it just the same. I have the Bluebook, which is worth its weight in gold. I have projected motion pictures for the past eight years. Am still at it and what is more I intend to remain at it because I like it. Am projecting at the Solon Theatre. Have two Simplex projectors and a 50—50 motor generator set. If I do say it as ortent, we certainly do put on a wonderful picture, thanks to the Bluebook, which sure has helped.

Just a Sample

That is merely a sample of many, many letters. This man is no greenhorn. He has been projecting pictures eight years. He is wise enough to know he does NOT know it all, and that it is the COMBINATION OF PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE AND BOOK LORE THAT MAKES FOR REAL SUCCESS. The man who thinks he can learn all about anything in the nature of a trade or profession out of a book or books is a fool. The man who thinks he can learn it all by practical experience is just as big a one. Study AND practice is THE thing and the ONLY thing too.

How He Did It

anyhow. If we can improve the picture as seen from the front row, certainly it will be improved all over the house, and one must emphatically see plenty of punkness from the front row. I would suggest serious consideration of brother Cooley's front row stunt.

I'm not going to comment on the rest of the letter. It is all good stuff and is just passed along to you as such. Take notice, my good brother, that when Cooley had a difficulty, forninst him he did NOT stand around with his finger in his mouth and cuss it. He sought help and then promptly proceeded to get busy; also when he discovered the remedy he did NOT hide it way back in the dark corner of his closet, like a hungry dog burying a bone. He acted the part of a MAN, and tried to help his brother projectionist by telling him. That will NOT in any way injure Cooley, and probably will be of benefit to dozens and perhaps hundreds of other projectionists. Cooley is NOT a tightwad seeking to keep every bit of knowledge he gets to himself. ARE YOU???

Busts the Peace

F. W. Bradley, Projectionist Belle Theatre, Belleville, Ontario, sets a bottle of good ink forninst him, spreads a sheet of white paper before him, grabs his t—rusty pen and says:

Having been a reader of the department for two years I feel it is about time for me to bust the peace, so here I go—asking questions.

Am using two Simplex Mazda-equipped projectors, C—900 watt lamps, and General Ele-Electric transformers, type H. D. S. (Page 829 of Bluebook), 220 volt 60 cycle supply. The machine delivers 30 amperes at 30 volts.

What I want to know is this: No. 1 transformer will deliver 28 to 32 amperes or more, while No. 2 delivers 30 amperes on the first contact after passing off the warming contact and very frequently I cannot keep it below 31 amperes—that is to say when the supply voltage is a bit strong, or so I think. My ammeters are mounted on the lamphouses, and the transformers are on the floor below. The meters register correctly.

What way would you go about it to make No. 2 deliver as low as 28 amperes. Do you think a field rheostat hooked in one side of the supply circuit would do the trick! Am enclosing plan of wiring.

No Plan Found

No plan found in letter. I am afraid any field rheostat you could get would have entirely too much resistance at its lowest point. I will immediately ask the General Electric Company to advise you as to the best plan of procedure. Meanwhile you might get a piece of ordinary soft iron wire, about No. 10, and form it into a loose spiral, like a spring, by winding it around a broom handle. Break one side of the circuit on the lamp side of the transformer and hook this wire in. Make a small clamp of any convenient kind with which to clamp the end of the iron wire and the circuit wire together so as to get good electric contact. Use plenty of the wire to start with, and then keep moving the contact back, cutting out the iron, until a point is reached where you get the result you want.

Mind you this is a make-shift, and NOT for permanent use, but the high voltage will raise merry His Satanic Majesty's Dominions with your lamps, so I'm telling you how to fix that until you hear from the G. E. folks.

A Suggestion

Some one who looks, on writing paper, like C. L. Eadand, or Elland, writes from Davenport, Iowa, as follows:

As you have asked for suggestions on how to keep prints in good shape and get away from the punch marks and other freak change-over marks, I would like to suggest the following: First, that all exchanges get together on this matter, clear up and clean up their prints—also their reels, supplying new ones where necessary. Having done this, notify every exhibitor, large and small, that from a set date all films shipped to him will be in first class condition, and if they be not in the same condition when checked back, allowing of course, for reasonable wear, that they will receive notice, and after two such notifications they will be cut off from all film supply until he is able to satisfy those in authority that proper care will be taken of the films in future.

Punch Marks Out

Secondly, that all projectionists cut out all punch marks, etc., just as they have cut out mis-frames in the past. This will soon set up a very noticeable film shortage, and the exchanges will then get busy in the matter of trying to get some real, honest-to-gosh results, instead of merely wailing and gnashing their alleged teeth all the time, to the annoyance of many and the damage of no one or anything.

Thirdly, the increase of price of projector parts recently announced by the manufacturer of one of the popular projectors will play its part as to keeping up the projectors and saving them from unnecessary wear. Of course it was doubtless true that projector manufacturers are at great expense in equipment, time and general overhead, interest on investment, etc., but as it was it was quite hard enough for exhibitors to keep up their equipment, and what will it be now? Of course there are exhibitors to whom the increase will mean little and to whom it will make no difference in the number of repair parts they buy, but as a general thing I believe it will be noticed very plainly in the poorer condition of the projectors.

Two Sides

That is all very well, my good brother, but the exhibitor has no real right, as I think you will agree, to expect the manufacturer to supply repair parts at either a loss or at no profit at all.

And make no mistake about this: the exhibitor who puts up a terrific kick at having to purchase a three or four dollar sprocket, will very often cheerfully cough up ten times that sum for something not nearly so necessary "down front." I don't myself want to see the exhibitor treated unfairly by any one, nor would I keep silent if I knew it were being done, BUT I do know that in all the history of the motion picture industry, the place where expense has always been literally howled at is in the theatre projection room, and until I see greater evidences of kicks at unnecessary expense in other directions I am not so much interested in opposing a fair price for projector repairs.

An exhibitor will often trim down on pro-

"Received your samples of D. C. carbons and am glad to state that they are all you claim them to be, even better."

2. From Ohio:

"We received the samples of D. C. carbons and the operator went crazy over them."

3. From Kentucky:

"Received your sample set of D. C. Phelco Carbons and after a thorough trial find that they fully justify your claims. They burn perfectly steady and quietly and give a brilliant white light."

4. From Maryland:

" . . . this is a slower burning carbon combination and an almost perfect crater. We also found a decrease in condenser deposit."

5. From New York:

"To date they are the best I have found. . . . You can be assured that I am with you for better carbons and I will recommend the Phelco carbons until something better shows up on the market, if there is any better."

Some Suggestions

Chauncey L. Greene, Minneapolis, writes at some length, but interestingly, as follows:

The scheme I proposed for re-grinding the pitted surfaces of collector lenses was really the idea of my very good friend O. S. Keay, of this city. The price of one dollar for resurfacing, suggested by me, is what we pay here in Minneapolis for the work, which is done by a local spectacle firm.

As I said, Mr. Keay is my friend, but if we ever met without an argument it is so long ago we have both forgotten it. Keay is a projectionist. His equipment consists of two Power projectors and a "Rexolux" single arc motor generator. Change-over is made by 'stealing' the current, hence the collector lenses pit very rapidly. When he installed Cinephor the condition was made worse, due to the relatively short crater distance. He and I discussed the matter several times. I was strong for a glass baffle plate, such as Bausch and Lomb now propose (which, by the way, was suggested by John Griffith, in this department a long while ago.—Ed.), while he was for re-surfacing the lenses. That was last November. The collector lens surfaces have been reground twice since then, and seem good for two more surfacings. One of them has cracked. It started with a very tiny crack in the center of the lens—the collector and converging lenses are NOT in contact—and gradually increased until in two or three weeks the crack reached the edge on one side and nearly to the edge on the other.

The Pin-Hole Idea

In August 23rd issue there was further discussion of the "rear of the lamphouse pin hole" idea. Why not put a dark observation window in the rear wall of the lamphouse and look directly at the reflection of the crater face on the face of the collector lens? If the window be so placed that the line of sight passes as nearly as may be to the edge of the crater there will be no trouble from multiple images.

Aspheric Mirrors?

Perhaps it is not quite the thing for me to fail to mention a thing at the proper time and then, long after, cut in. However, the answer of Brother Bennewitz to question 83, August 30 issue, seems to me to be incorrect as to its third section, wherein he says the reflecting arc mirror is spherical. All the reflecting arc mirrors (American Reflecting Arc) I have examined have been aspherical mirrors of 2.25 in. focal length, which is the reason for the wonderful quality of light from the reflecting arc lamp. There is practically no spherical aberration, and there can be no chromatic aberration in such mirrors. The resultant beam very closely approaches the ideal, or theoretically perfect condition, and mathematical theory can be advantageously applied. I shall now describe the method I use for setting up the reflecting arc, in the hope that it may prove useful until such time as Griffith has a chart prepared for us.

Setting Up Reflecting Arc

First I chuck a block of wood in a lathe and tack a piece of sheet metal to it. I then drill a hole about 1/64" with a drill held in the tailstock chuck. If no tailstock is available, press the dead center against the metal while lathe is running, and then drill with a hand drill in the center thus made. Next put in back gears, and with a tool having a slender point commence scribing a circle in the metal the exact inside diameter of the projection lens mount. A good stunt is to get a junk lens mount and make the thing permanently. Advance the tool until the metal is cut through. Place this sight plate in the projection lens mount and mount the lens in the projector in the usual way. (Evidently what he means is to either obtain a duplicate lens barrel, or to remove the lens cells from your regular projection lens barrel.—Ed.)

Arrange two threads diagonally across the aperture (from corner to corner.—Ed.) Line up the jaws of the lamp with each other by clamping one perfectly straight carbon in both jaws. (A straight carbon may be selected by rolling carbons on a perfectly flat surface.—Ed.) After lining the jaws, remove the carbon and mount the lamp in the lamphouse and so adjust it that when looking through the sight plate in the lens barrel the cross threads will center exactly in both positive and negative carbon holders. After clamping the lamp in place the negative carbon may be lowered the required amount to cause the crater to burn correctly.

When this is done remove threads and sight plate and replace the lens cells, or if you use a dummy lens for the purpose, then replace the projection lens in its mount."

For Griffith

Friend Green then continues with the following, which is respectfully passed along to Griffith and the other optical sharks. He says:

Call distance from crater to mirror X, distance from mirror to crater image Y and focal length of mirror F. From the optical theory $\frac{I}{X}+\frac{I}{Y}=\frac{I}{F}$. Call the ratio of crater image diameter to crater diameter R. This is also the ratio of Y to X. That is to say Y=RX.

Crater image diameter equals the diameter of the rear factor of the projection lens, and Y equals distance from mirror to lens. The idea is to just fill the rear factor of the projection lens with the crater image, since that is smallest part (diameter) of the light beam, and the larger it is the less will be the distance from crater to mirror. Even in extreme conditions breakage of mirrors seems to be negligible, or at least that has been my experience, even using 35 to 40 amperes.

We then have:

$$\frac{\frac{I}{X}}{\frac{R}{RX}}+\frac{\frac{I}{RX}}{\frac{I}{RX}}=\frac{\frac{I}{F}}{\frac{I}{F}}$$

$$\frac{\frac{R+I}{RX}}{\frac{I}{RX}}=\frac{\frac{I}{F}}{\frac{I}{F}}$$

Multiply both sides of this equation by XF and it becomes $\frac{(R+I)F}{R}=X$, which is the distance crater should be from the mirror. RX is the distance mirror should be from the rear factor of the projection lens.

Spot adjustments are made with the mirror, NOT by moving the lamp. Crater diameter may be obtained beforehand by assuming a conservative utilization factor of 100 lumens per ampere and measuring craters at the need current value on the smallest carbon which will carry the current, taking an average of three or four trials on as many different carbons.

Phew! That's all "yourn" Griffith, and I wish you every joy with it. I've just returned from a month's absence and a couple of bushel baskets of letters literally scream for attention, therefore I can't stop to dig out the why and wherefore of all that X times Y business, which probably is allright and of genuine value.

As to the plan for lining the optical system, it is effective, but I believe a more simple and just as effective way is to secure a perfectly straight round steel rod of sufficient length, testing its perfect straightness by rolling it on a surface you have tested for flatness with an ordinary carpenter's square. Remove the lens cells from the projection lens, open the projector film gate. Pass the rod through the lens barrel and projector aperture and on into the lamphouse, clamping its end into BOTH carbon jaws, so aligning them that they fit the rod perfectly. Then so adjust the lamp that the rod is EXACTLY central in both projector aperture and projection lens barrel. But at that I'm not so certain but that Greene's method is better and more accurate. Anyhow there are the two practicable methods of doing the trick.

I don't really know about the rear-of-the-lamphouse observation window. I am inclined to believe the pin hole is the more satisfactory method, always provided it be rightly done. How about it Griffith, its your stunt?

As to reflecting are mirrors being aspheric—well if that is true you certainly have pulled one over on me, for I did not know it. Always supposed them to be spherical. What do the rest of you know about this?

As to Carbon Sizes

Coy Lambert, Projectionist Young's Theatre, Lexington, N. C., says:

My manager and I have had an argument concerning the size carbon I would better use. He insists on my using ¾ inch, though ⅝ inch burns best and makes the best light. It is impossible to get a decent light with ¾ inch carbons.

I might get a fair light with them if they would burn steady, but they sputter and work very badly indeed. You have probably tried to burn D. C. carbons on A. C. It might be the carbons and might be the lamp, but I believe it is the carbons because the sputtering comes at irregular intervals, just as though there were hard spots in them.

Am using A. C. at the arc, 60 amperes through Compensarcs. Simplex projectors. The main reason I think the trouble is in the carbons is that the ⅝ inch ones burn just fine, while the ¾ inch won't burn without taking the spells of "sputtering."

Confusing in Spots

Your information is a bit confusing in spots. However, just why your manager insists on the use of a wrong size carbon I cannot say. If you are only using 60 amperes A. C. at the arc, then ¾ inch is entirely too large. The ⅝ inch is correct.

If the ¾ inch carbons are White A. C. Special, then they are a high grade carbon, but too big for your amperage. They are probably damp, which would account for the sputtering. I would suggest that you lay half a dozen of them on top of your lamphouse, or inside in its bottom, for TWO FULL DAYS, and then try them. If the sputtering then continues the fault is in the carbon itself, and they should be sent back for examination and test.

As I understand you, the ⅝ inch carbons are not White A. C., but just ordinary carbons intended for use on A. C. You can get excellent results with them all right, but the quality of illumination will not be equal to that of the White A. C. Special. I would advise your manager to get White A. C. Special ⅝ carbons. It is impossible to get maximum results with ¾ inch carbons when using only 60 amperes A. C. White A. C. Special is the thing.

A Comparison

Many, many times I have seen a production (spoken drama) on Broadway, and have been enthusiastic over it. Then long afterwards, I have seen the same thing in some smaller city, only to find it either very mediocre or just plain punk. The play was exactly the same, BUT it was altogether different. By this I mean that the words were the same, merely as words. The situations were in the same, viewed merely as situations.

In one case, however, there were real actor artists and the words and the situations were nothing short of intense. They rocked one with laughter or brought one to the verge of tears many times.

Mediocrity

In the other case the play was in the hands of actors of mediocre ability—not barn stormers perhaps, but anyhow men and women not possessed of 'that something' which distinguishes the artist from him who, however worthy, is not an artist. The result was that the splendid play was splendid no longer. The situations were no longer tense. The words brought little laughter and no tears.

And now I make the assertion that the difference in results when a play is enacted by artists and by others is in greater or less degree the same as is the difference in results, insofar as concerns the audience, when the motion picture is put before them through the medium of high grade projection and when it is placed before them with projection which is not high grade. Poor projection and the barnstormer are twin brothers.

Lens Chart Good

Wm. Burnette, Newton, Iowa, writes:

Dear Mr. Richardson: Received my lens chart and here is another order for a friend who has fallen in love with it. That chart certainly is all the lens dope in a nutshell all right. Any projectionist who doesn't invest a dollar in one of them is missing the biggest dollar's worth he could possibly get. Between it and the Bluebook I am getting a whole lot of practical ideas and real knowledge I never would have got otherwise.

If I were not so infernally bashful and modestly modest I would agree with brother Burnette as to both the chart and the book. Being my modest self, however, I spare my blushes and don't say a word—well, anyway, only a few of them.

A Suggestion

jection room expense to the point where he makes it utterly impossible for the projectionist to put a really decent picture on the screen, apparently without any conception of the fact that by so doing he is COSTING HIMSELF A HUNDRED TIMES THE COST OF THE CURRENT AND OTHER THINGS NECESSARY TO PUT A HIGH GRADE PICTURE ON THE SCREEN. Then he wails about "dull business."

"Dull" Business

Of course business is dull. People are not so keen about spending money to see a "dull" performance of even a motion picture. In my opinion the new prices are no higher than they ought to be to allow the companies to turn out the high grade repair parts we must have in order to get satisfactory results on the screen.

As to your plan of combined action by exchanges—well, it is all right, IF you or any one else can find a way to get all the exchanges to follow it. As to projectionists eliminating punch marks—why the projectionist does do that, but you must remember that we still have a very heavy percentage of men who are merely "machine operators," and so long as their "machine" runs well they very naturally, having reached the height of their ambition, don't do much worrying about films and the faults they shoot out to the screen. That has nothing to do with "operatin' a machine." That has to do with projection.

The Famous Forty

Paramount Pictures

IT is no longer necessary to make promises, however well founded, about The Famous Forty Paramount Pictures. It is possible now to offer absolute proof, based upon dollars-and-cents results at the box-office, that The Famous Forty have made and are making more money for exhibitors than any other group of productions ever known in this business.

Danny said recently in Film Daily: "The crying need of this industry is for doggoned good, worthwhile pictures week after week." The Famous Forty fill that need perfectly. For this great group of productions not only includes the outstanding money-makers of the year, such as "The Covered Wagon," Rudolph Valentino in "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "A Sainted Devil," Gloria Swanson in "Manhandled" and "Wages of Virtue," Thomas Meighan in Curwood's "The Alaskan" and "Tongues of Flame," Cecil B. De Mille's "Feet of Clay" and "The Golden Bed," and Pola Negri in Lubitsch's "Forbidden Paradise." It also provides you, week after week, with such surefire material as "Merton of the Movies," "Sinners in Heaven," "Manhattan," "The Enemy Sex," "Changing Husbands," "Wanderer of the Wasteland," "The Sideshow of Life," "The Fast Set," "Empty Hands," "Dangerous Money," "The Border Legion, "The City that Never Sleeps" and "The Garden of Weeds"—pictures that have equaled and, in some cases, even surpassed the record receipts taken in by the headliners named above.

In the pages that follow are the actual facts on the drawing power of each of The Famous Forty, based on reports of exhibitors who have played them. They tell an impressive story. They echo what the industry well knows:

The Famous Forty is the greatest buy exhibitors ever had, because The Famous Forty has made good in every particular!

HERE is unquestionably the greatest Swanson money picture of them all. Playing a pre-release engagement in New York, it stood them up during the three hottest weeks in August at the Rivoli and Rialto. It got $30,312 in one week at McVickers, Chicago which is a record. Other towns report the same sensational success with this wonderful comedy-romance. The box-office figures far surpass those of "The Humming Bird" — and you know what that means. IT would take a whole book to recount the astonishing success this picture is winning throughout the conutry. Not even "The Birth of a Nation" can compare with its triumph; it is something absolutely unique in entertainment history. For example: After playing 34 weeks as a road-show at Grauman's Egyptian, Los Angles, and taking in $750,000, the picture came back to Los Angeles as a regular film attraction and did $26,000 the first six days! As for the small towns, in Lander, Wyoming (pop. 2,133) "The Covered Wagon" broke all past records at the Grand four times over, scores saw it three and four times, and many people drove in over a hundred miles to see it! Jack Holt Ernest Torrence Lois Wilson Noah Beery

IN the same broad, sweeping, conscientious manner in which "The Covered Wagon" was filmed, "North of 36", by the same author, has been picturized on the actual location of the story in the remote plains of Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. Willat, who made "Wanderer of the Wasteland", is the producer. The story deals with the exciting struggles of the Texas ranchers to drive their herds through hostile Indians, floods, fire and bandits north to the western limits of the new transcontinental railroads. It is a tale that every American thrills to. It has been superbly acted by a cast of stars.

GLORIA SWANSON in "HER LOVE STORY"

An ALLAN DWAN Production

THE star and producer of "Zaza" and "Manhandled" offer you another money-maker in "Her Love Story". Produced from the popular Cosmopolitan Magazine serial by the ever popular Mary Roberts Rinehart — a story that the 1,200,000 readers of that publication raved over — this Swanson romance is captivating audiences everywhere, particularly the women. You know where Glorious Gloria stands among the money stars today. You know that any Swanson subject is cash in the bank in advance. Get your share from "Her Love Story." George Fawcett, Ian Keith, Mario Majeroni in the cast.

THOMAS MEIGHAN in "Tongues of Flame"

By
Peter Clark Mac Farlane

Joseph Henabery Production

IF ever there was a Meighan picture set for big money, "Tongues of Flame" is it. It's Macfarlane's last novel, the story that was praised in all the papers as his best at the time of his death a few months ago. Just finished publication in the Cosmopolitan as a serial and now coming out as a best-selling novel. Meighan has the slashing, loving, he-man type of role that they're crazy about him in. Directed by the man who made "A Sainted Devil". Bessie Love and Eileen Percy in the big cast.

Screen play by Townsend Martin.

PRESENTED BY ADOLPH ZUKOR, JESSE L. LASKY

"CHANGING HUSBANDS"

With Leatrice Joy

SUPERVISED BY CECIL B. De MILLE

READ the exhibitor's reports on this comedy in Exhibitors Herald and you'll know what a smashing success it's scoring. The cast also includes Raymond Griffith and Zasu Pitts. Ben Morris, who runs the Temple, Bellaire, O., writes, "This picture will please more than lots you pay three times as much for. It leaves everyone happy."

Adapted by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin from story by Elizabeth Alexander.
Directed by Frank Urson and Paul Iribe.

Get the FACTS!

Mr. President:
Mr. Sales Manager:
Mr. Advertising Manager:

Get the FACTS about the greatly-changed trade paper situation.

You CAN get them—at least from The World.

I wish I had you with me for a round of a dozen exhibitor offices in Detroit last week. I wish I had you with me to SEE The World as I did, to see it IN USE as I did, to hear it praised as I did.

Not in the fulsome, meaningless phrases of flattery—but in specific mention of specific services The World was rendering them.

I'll tell you more about them later—with names and FACTS.

I love FACTS. And let me tell you:

If you are not in touch with the present trade paper situation you are wasting a lot of money, and losing a lot more.

You are wasting the money you are paying for "slippers"—and losing the revenue that the up and coming, fast-moving, GAINING Moving Picture World can get you.

I could use four pages for this house ad, and a thousand words and not say anything more important to you, more definite, more true, more FACT!

Is There Any Audience Anywhere That Such a Picture Will Not Please?

His master completely—this little chit of beautiful femininity whom a storm had blown into his bachelor apartment through the raging elements outside. She, at least, saw the humor of the situation and pressed it at every possible opportunity.

The little factory town was in an uproar. Things had happened which demanded investigation. And Doris was fleeing from the police. Why, only she and a few others knew. And from Simon Haldane she drew that help and sympathy which always goes to the "under dog."

Love is life's great leveler. They belonged to vastly different strata of society. Doris, accustomed to every luxury, was self assured to an exceptional degree. Simon, shy and retiring, was ill at ease among even his every day associates. But for both the future together was filled with most roseate promise.

Block Booking

ONCE upon a time there was an editor who, in the course of a discussion of arbitration, expressed a few opinions on block booking, and the agitation thereon

The editor's view was that, while the arguments against block booking make very convincing theory, nothing under the sun was ever going to translate the theory into practise so long as the salesman and PRICE were the ruling factors in this industry.

Then the editor boarded a train, not caring particularly where it brought him so long as its destination was "out on the firing line," and alighted in Detroit. For an hour he sat alongside the desk of H. M. Richey, executive secretary of the Michigan exhibitor organization. And he heard the opposition to block booking stated with an intelligence, clarity, and REASONABLENESS that still has him a bit stunned.

Perhaps he should explain his surprise. Well, here you are: Never expect any faction in this industry to be reasonable when embarked on an argument. Because we have been trained to BARGAIN, and we have learned the Oliver Twist principle, "The more you ask for, the more you get." Too often, we have found, the side that talks the LOUDEST wins the fight.

All the more reason for our surprise when we heard an exhibitor spokesman outlining an argument that in effect admits that the campaign against block booking is a fifty-fifty proposition: Equally as much a matter of educating the exhibitor as it is of opposing distributing policies.

THE Michigan exhibitor organization has an actual and tangible campaign against block booking under way.

How that campaign is working out makes another, and a different, story that we will probably ease into our typewriter some time in the next few weeks. Right now we are sticking to the argumentative phases.

As far as we can learn from rambles through Detroit away from the atmosphere of exhibitor headquarters, Richey's position at the start of this argument must have been about the same as ours. Richey is not the type that enjoys waving a red flag merely because flag waving improves blood circulation.

When the organization declared against block booking as a principle, we think that deep down in his heart Ritchie was wishing his fellows would stick to the rule, "Don't ever start a fight that you can't finish."

But in the past few months Richey has spent considerable time talking throughout the state to luncheon clubs of the Kiwanis and Rotary type. And he has come back a zealous apostle of the anti-block crusade.

This is why:

"I DON'T care where you go," says Richey, "nor whom you meet outside of this business, one of the very first questions you will have thrown at you is, 'Why are there so many obviously POOR pictures shown in our local theatres?'

"You sit down and argue specific titles with them and convince them that the industry is making a very, very great number of GOOD pictures. But they expect that—for the simple reason that they are paying you GOOD coin of the realm to see those GOOD pictures. What they can't understand is why they so often pay the same GOOD money to see POOR pictures. They never forget the poor ones. And when you get through arguing with them you have to admit that it is the system of booking sight unseen in block that is foisting those POOR pictures on the public in return for GOOD money.

"Now my zeal against block booking isn't based alone on the injuries it frequently wreaks on the exhibitor. We must realize in this industry that when we say 'exhibitor' in that sense we really mean the PUBLIC. If a condition exists that is daily driving the public away from picture theatres that condition is eventually going to injure the ENTIRE industry."

RICHEY mixes his theory with sound practicality. "I don't say," he declares, "that every exhibitor in the state of Michigan should see every picture he plays before he books it. That is impossible.

"But I do say that the exhibitor is indolently foolish, and the producer shortsighted, when they contract for pictures that are no nearer production than the title and the scenario. I say that for the interest of this ENTIRE industry, the day must come when the exhibitor won't book a picture unless he knows SOMETHING about it. If he has been able to pre-view it, that's fine. If he only has reports on the first run, that is something. But no man considering the PUBLIC has a right to ask that public for money in return for a picture that he bought before it was in the can on the exchange shelves.

"I know the economic side of it, that producers feel they must sell in blocks to keep the selling cost within reason. But I maintain that the producer, and the exhibitor, will eventually learn that it is better to pay fifteen dollars for twelve pictures that have known value, than to pay ten dollars apiece for a block of twenty-five that contains thirteen unknown quantities."

THERE are the highlights of Richey's argument. In fairness to him we will have to round his views out in more complete manner at a later date. But, meanwhile, while we argue the pros and cons of block booking let's remember Richey's thought that the PUBLIC deserves, and will eventually demand, a place in the argument.

Speaking Freely

(By Wire from Detroit)

John Kunsky and Sam Katz got together in Atlantic City, fixed up a deal, issued a statement and declared the matter closed. George Trendle won't be quoted but says the official statement told it all. But Detroit refuses to stop worrying or conjecturing. Every man you meet wants to know what New York knows about the "inside story." You have to admit that New York doesn't know a darn thing. Then he wags his head and proceeds to tell you just why there must be an "inside story." But it all runs in a circle, and you finish up where you started. Which is in the correct Detroit position—waiting—waiting—waiting. And expecting almost anything.

First of all you are told how Balaban and Katz offered John Kunsky four and a half million for his entire holdings. Dame Rumor is quoted as authority for the figure. Then you are given the present status: Kunsky, fifty-one per cent. of the stock. Trendle, twenty-four per cent., Balaban and Katz, twenty-five per cent.

Next comes the information that Balaban and Katz are going to supply the money to complete their new theatre here. And the emphatic statement that when completed it will be entirely controlled and directed by the Kunsky organization. That at no time will Balaban and Katz put a finger in the pie—either the new house, or the present Kunsky chain.

"I can't see it," says the man who is doing the worrying. "There must be something else. Balaban and Katz don't want simply a minority investment paying good dividends. They want power. And if this story of the deal is correct all they have done is to have made a good investment."

About this time the two of you agree that maybe Balaban and Katz have acquired the power. Regardless of what is written in the contract there is certainly going to be a community of interest between Mr. Kunsky and his new partner. And with his partner's other friend, A. H. Blank. When you visualize that community of interest stretching across the Mid West map you get a mighty imposing and impressive picture.

Especially when you add to it the possibilities in the Kunsky dream of a new Stanley buying giant in Michigan. "That's dead as a doornail," they tell you at exhibitor headquarters. "Trendle hasn't got eight outside theatres working with him. He's given up the idea."

You walk up the street from the Wolverine to the Film Building. "Trendle has twenty theatres with him," Joe Friedman, Universal manager, informs you. "And, listen, George Trendle isn't in the habit of quitting. He'll keep right on going ahead."

Oh, well, oh hum, tomorrow we are going to see George Trendle himself. Mebbe we will get some real facts then. Mebbe we won't. Accent on the second mebbe, because George isn't a talkative citizen.

There you are—take your choice. And here's another chance for choice: On the rumors about allocation of product, secret agreements, and controlled towns. But that makes a story too long and complicated for writing on a portable typewriter in a Statler stall. We'll have to save it for a week or so. Watch and wait. (Adv.)

Shucks, we may as well slip in another ad. Phil Gleichman is talking: "Say, I read something good in a trade paper recently—a fine analysis of Paramount's situation on the Second Forty." He proceeds to tell it to us. Takes five minutes. "Did you read it?" he concludes. "We wrote it," we reply shyly. Modest-like we repeat it here.

Phil, by the way, is entirely out of the picture business now. Not even a member of his beloved organization. But we should say, "temporarily out." Because he is watching conditions with both eyes open. And anything might happen.

For that matter you can't say Phil Gleichmann is out of the picture business as long as his suit against Famous is still running "And running nicely, thank you," sez he.

Had a dandy chat with Jim Ritter. He arrived just after H. M. Richey had been telling what a wise exhibitor Ritter is. Has three houses, changes twice a week, and sees every picture he plays before he buys.

"If they were all like that," says Richey "We wouldn't have so many mediocre pictures driving patrons to the radio."

We don't know where Charlie Pettijohn picks them, but it all his Film Board secretaries have the cheery smile and wholesouled personality of Dave Palfreyman we know one of the important reasons why the Film Board idea is having such smooth sailing.

Ralph Peckham, Producers Distributing Corporation manager come in with fire in his eye. Has three cut-outs from a practically brand new print. And some butcher of an operator has punch-holed them like a swiss cheese. Criminal.

If Peckham saw the line-up for "Welcome Stranger" at the Broadway-Strand Sunday night, and heard the comments we heard, he is probably smiling again. This is a tip: The picture is there with audience value.

Universal has poured some fifty thousand dollars worth of atmosphere into the Broadway Strand and you wouldn't know the old friend. The job has been done in bang-up fashion and in Eddie Toledo Zorn the house has a live-wire, go-getter, he-showman who is getting results.

We are gazing up at the Strand's second balcony. "Just a lot of waste space these days, isn't it?" We venture, sympathetically. "Not always," laughs Eddie. "You should have seen us pack that sky-loft at thirty-five cents a head for 'Captain Blood.'" There's another tip straight from the box office.

Here's hospitality. We happen into Joe Friedman's office simultaneously with the arrival of Fred McConnell, general sales manager of Universal short product. A sales meeting scheduled. We try to bow out. "Stay right here," says Joe. "Sit in, we'll go right through with everything just as though you weren't here." What's more, they did.

Incidentally, we heard a talk on the value of serials to the exhibitor that is too good to keep within sales meetings. That's something else we'll have to feed into a real Remington later. Or get Fred McConnell to play it on his own typewriter for us.

We'll make a bet with anyone that the Detroit "U" office jumps fifty per cent. on short product in the next sixty days. And then double the bet on "The White List."

Ollie Brooks got tired of Pullman golf and homesick for Detroit so he said good-bye to Fox and is now back in the home town as special representative for the U exchange.

Guess the homesickness got Charlie Davee, too. Because he shook the Minneapolis dust and is now selling The White List in Michigan.

"Hot Water." "They" will tell you it is not as good as "Girl Shy." "They" said it so often that we did not hurry to see "Hot Water" in New York. Paid a dollar CASH for the privilege Friday night at the Adams. Got our money's worth. And don't know which we enjoyed the most, the picture or the honest-to-goodness LOUD enjoyment of the audience that packed the house at six bits and a dollar. "They" may be right. "They" are. But that's just like telling you that a five dollar bill is not as pretty as a five dollar gold piece. It isn't. But each will get you five hundred cents worth of value.—R. E. W.

Stories of the Builders

Amalgamations and Price Fixing As Pillar of Industry Views Them

By W. Stephen Bush

"FAMOUS PLAYERS," as no doubt everybody remembers, appeared on the horizon of the film world just as the possibilities of the single reel or short subject seemed about exhausted. It had always seemed to me that the patron saint of the screen, whoever he may be, had something to do with the new departure. This, according to the founder of "Famous," is quite fanciful and not supported by the facts.

"No Vision or Dream But Observation"

"The thought of creating a company, which would make longer and better films, features as we called them afterwards, was not born of any dream or vision but came as the result of my observation as an exhibitor," Mr. Zukor spoke with evident conviction and finality. His memory, by the way, was strong as his conviction.

"Away back in the early days," he continued, "when I was just an exhibitor, it struck me that there were greater possibilities ahead than short subjects. The novelty of the motion picture was bound to wear itself out. It seemed to be that real stories, such as are told in the legitimate drama, were quite within the reach of the motion picture. I thought, too, that if well-known artists, famous on the speaking stage, could be induced to appear in filmed versions of the play that had helped to make them famous, they would naturally attract a better and a more numerous patronage to our motion picture theatres. It really did seem very plain and obvious to me.

Could Not Sell His Idea

"However, I could not sell this idea to any of the directors and producers either in the legitimate or in the motion picture field. Neither Mr. Brady nor Mr. Laemmle, both of whom I talked to, could see my point. I approached a number of people in the show business but failed to make an impression."

Mr. Zukor paused for a moment or two, gazing down into Fifth Avenue, as he evidently let some very trying experiences pass through the gates of his memory. He registered amusement but quite faintly. It seemed like an effort to summon a smile that was held back by recollections pulling in the other direction.

ADOLPH ZUKOR

There is a singular moderation and directness in Mr. Zukor's speech, suggesting a constant and conscious effort to remain within the facts. He resumed his talk with increased emphasis and perhaps just a touch of feeling, though the cause of it all must have happened more than a dozen years ago.

Men of Little Faith

"Well, I could not get anybody to believe that people would be willing to sit through more than a couple of thousand feet of film at the most. Everybody was positive that it could not be done. I had watched the reactions of my patrons to the longer reels and I knew that all the foreign features of greater length like Dante's "Inferno," Homer's "Odyssey," "Quo Vadis," had been well liked by the public. In fact, I could see that the public was getting tired of the short reels. I did not depend on my manager's observation. I saw all this with my own eyes. When I found that no one would agree with me, and how little the General Film Company believed in this new development there was nothing left for me but to try and finance myself, which I did. You know how we started with Sarah Bernhard and James K. Hackett. There were no screen celebrities in those days and the stories were often weak and thin because too short. With famous artists and stories of weight and reputation we blazed a new trail. As an exhibitor I had begun to feel that I would not be able to stay in business long if such a change had not come. Thus we started in and continued to make a better grade of pictures at a higher cost, being assured of the public demand for such a development. Even at this day men prominent in vaudeville found it hard to believe that it would be all right to run a full feature with their show.

Adolph Zukor Speaks from the Heart

Only when they realized that one well-known screen star did more business than their best headliner did they finally yield their prejudice and regret their hesitation.

"Derided and Lambasted"

"When I had begun to lift the business out of the rut and the narrow limits of the nickelodeon and charged and advocated higher prices of admission, because I felt the public would be glad to pay for an improved order of pictures, I provoked no little hostility and resentment from other exhibitors, in fact from the majority of them. I was derided and lambasted on all sides and conventions were held for that express purpose.

"The very men whose business future I sought to insure and protect turned against me. I met other difficulties, but they were easily overcome. I always could put myself on terms of understanding with stars and directors, but the exhibitors for a long time stuck to their unreasonable attitude. I was denounced by men who ridiculed the idea that any picture could ever be worth more than a nickel. Just for being able to see a little bit further ahead I was declared an enemy of the business."

Mr. Zukor was still full of emphasis but there was no trace of any tone of resentment. He confirmed this view presently, when he said:

"I am no longer surprised and disappointed about such things. I am used to criticism of this kind, which one often meets even within one's own organization. Now I take such things as a matter of course, maybe I am immune by this time."

And here Mr. Zukor turned to another subject, which seemed quite pertinent for one of the real builders of the industry. He protested—now with rising emphasis—that all his building had been done with his own money.

Never Speculated with O. P. M.

"I never in my life have taken any chances with exhibitors' money. I made negatives with my own money and never asked them to pay for them in advance. I backed every idea I thought worth trying out with my own money. If I had failed no one would have sustained any loss outside of myself. And I would like to have it set down that I never did anything that did not spell an advance of the motion picture. The consideration of the financial benefits was secondary. Such considerations, let me add, are secondary today."

The punch of Mr. Zukor's statement came in the end of my talk with him. It was particularly clear and brief.

"There is talk of consolidation and amalgamation among producing interests. My personal opinion is that the competition between producers results in better pictures. That defines my position.

Sees Danger Ahead

"I do believe, however, that an attempt on the part of exhibitors to arbitrarily fix the price of features will be most injurious in its final effects not only upon the producer but upon the exhibitor as well. If the producer knows that no matter what work and money he puts in his pictures some one else is going to tell him what his profit will be, it destroys all ambition, all enterprise, all initiative. It automatically stops him from doing his best. He should be free and untrammeled in his production and distribution.

"The exhibitor with his investment in buildings and real estate must have good pictures and if the production and proper distribution of such pictures is hampered or prevented by arbitrary price fixing the exhibitor will be the greatest sufferer in the end. Such methods blight all ambition. The public does not want that."

All of which goes to show that this early builder at Fifth Avenue is busier and livelier than ever and full of architectural plans and ideas. Perhaps he is too much in the present—too keenly interested in today and tomorrow than in yesterday. In spite, however, what tomorrow may bring forth, Mr. Zukor's place in the history of the motion picture is quite well defined. It is a large one. He stepped in when the old builders had lost their cunning. Whether we owe the first great evolution in the history of the motion picture as a public entertainment to Mr. Zukor's vision or to his greater power of observation, his name will be identified with it for all time. He broadened its foundation and built with better material. The edifice looks more sightly and more impressive by reason of what he has done. It is more and more firmly established in public favor.

"My first thought has always been to advance the motion picture." That sounds very much like the language of a builder. It was his language in the little office and studio on West 26th Street—it is his language now, twelve years after, on Fifth Avenue.

Coming and Going

Sam Sax of the Lumas Film Corporation has just returned to New York from the Coast.

Frank Currier of the cast of "Ben Hur" is expected to return from Italy within the next few weeks.

Fred J. McConnell, short product sales manager for Universal, left this week on a series of one-day conferences with his company's eastern exchanges.

B. Berger, general manager of Gerson Pictures Corporation, arrived in New York early this week.

Among the prominent picture folk who were aboard the S.S. Leviathan which docked in New York this week were Jackie Coogan and his parents, Rudolph Valentino, Pat Powers, Nita Naldi and Richard Walton Tully.

S. L. Warner and Abe Warner left New York this week. The former has gone back to the Coast and the latter is headed for Cleveland.

John Gorman is now in New York, completing the last details for "The Street Singer," the next production in the Chadwick Nine series which he will direct in the east.

John Seifert, of the Page Organ Company, Lima, O., is in New York City this week on important business.

Lem F. Kennedy left early this week for Miami where he will supervise several state rights releases.

George Harris, English comedian, is in New York from London and will leave shortly for the west.

Joseph Simmonds has returned to New York from a trip overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Walker are on from the coast. They expect to spend the next few weeks in and about Manhattan.

A. J. McAllister, of the Lee-Bradford Corporation, has returned after two months in the field.

Kathlyn Williams, Paramount actress sailed this week on the President Cleveland from San Francisco for a four months' tour of the Orient.

Edward Auger, assistant general manager of Vitagraph, left last week for a business trip in Canada.

Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., left today, November 13, for the West Coast. Pearson's visit to the Los Angeles producing centers will be largely in the nature of a business trip. He expects to be gone about five weeks.

H. W. Walker, screen title-writer who titles Hal Roach's comedies, is in New York on his annual visit. He will spend the month of November here.

Paul C. Mooney, vice president of Producers Distributing Corporation is now enroute on a business tour of the Central and Mid-Western divisions that will extend over a period of three weeks.

Mike Connolly of the Metropolitan Casting Agency left this week for the Coast on a short business trip.

Nathan Burkan left New York this week to attend to an important business matter in Hollywood.

Constance Talmadge, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, arrived in New York this week from Hollywood.

John J. Payette, assistant general manager of the Crandall theatres, Washington, D. C., returned from a trip to New York where he looked over current offerings of pictures.

Ace Berry, general manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, visited Washington, D. C., last week ,where he was the guest of Charles Raymond, managing director of the Rialto Theatre. Messrs. Berry and Raymond were formerly associated together in various enterprises.

Will Hays was a visitor to Washington on November 10, being accompanied by Al Christie, of the Christie Company. Mr. Hays visited the White House, where he congratulated President Coolidge upon his recent success at the polls and introduced Mr. Christie.

Attorney Charles Pettijohn of the Hays' office is now in Chicago.

Testimonial to Zukor

Parchment Signed by 7 Governors Is Presented to Paramount Chief

Following the national celebration of Paramount week this year, Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, received a testimonial, as shown above, from the governors of the Rocky Mountain states acknowledging his leadership for better motion pictures. The testimonial is printed on parchment paper and states:

"To Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, on this the seventh Paramount anniversary celebration in the interest of better motion pictures, the Rocky Mountain West sends greetings. Your fond dream of giving the new art of the screen a finer expression strikes a responsive chord in the heart of every American. No art that is so essentially and necessarily as democratic as the motion picture art has done more for the imagination, the intelligence, the education and entertainment of mankind. In its creative powers lie the visualized soul of the whole past, the new visions of knowledge and beauty and countless hours of romance and adventure for a great class of people who could not otherwise afford the luxury of entertainment. All the world supports your leadership for better motion pictures."

The signers are: Charles R. Maybey, governor of Utah; C. C. Moore, governor of Idaho; Joseph M. Dixon, governor of Montana; William E. Huent, governor of Colorado; F. E. Lucas, governor of Wyoming; J. F. Hinkle, governor of New Mexico.

Canadian Alliance?

Paramount and Keith in Canada Seem to be Getting Together

A persistent report at Toronto, Ontario, indicates that two of the big theatre companies of Canada are getting together on something more than a working agreement.

The rival organizations are the Famous Players Canadian Corp., and the B. F. Keith Company of Canada, Limited, Montreal. The Keith company was organized some few months ago to establish a chain of theatres in principal cities and Keith houses are now to be found in the chief centres of Eastern Canada. When the Keith people secured the former Loew Theatre in Ottawa, Ontario, in August, Famous Players announced that they would build a large new theatre there as a competing house. This plan has now been called off, it is understood. Announcement of an alliance is expected.

May Change Contract

Will Hays Answers Edelhertz's Complaint of Unauthorized "Riders"

Charging that some distributors are making unauthorized changes in the Uniform Contract in the form of "riders," Bernard Edelhertz, who as chairman of the Uniform Contract Committee for exhibitors devoted much time to its drafting, has asked Will H. Hays to put a stop to such practices.

"Space would not permit me to set forth in this letter the various modifications that have been attempted," wrote Mr. Edelhertz, "but I shall be glad to submit to you, if you so desire, a detailed statement of the various unauthorized clauses that the distributors have actually inserted in the Uniform Contract, and have insisted upon exhibitors signing such contract."

Accepting the offer of evidence of the allegation, Mr. Hays wrote Mr. Edelhertz on November 6 in part as follows:

"As you know, the question of whether or not some changes might be advisable, based on the experience of the last few months, has been under consideration, and for study of the situation in that regard a committee has been appointed, consisting of representatives of the exhibitors and the distributors, and this committee, which will be a continuing agency, will take up suggested changes."

Mr. Hays then goes on to say that he has already requested the San Francisco Film Board of Trade not to change the provisions of the Uniform Contract before action is taken by this committee.

Hays Office Moving

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America makes known this week that upon the expiration of its lease at 522 Fifth avenue, New York City, where headquarters are now maintained, more spacious quarters will be secured at 469 Fifth avenue. The new quarters will possess a projection room. The change will probably be made before the first of the year.

Must Pass Test

Motion picture machine projectionists at Port Arthur, Texas, will be required to pass an examination before an examining board. The examining fee will be $5, and the penalty for operating a moving picture machine without one is up to $2,000.

James R. Quirk, editor, presenting the Photoplay Magazine Gold Medal to Adolph Zukor, in recognition of the achievements of his "Covered Wagon."

"Covered Wagon" Awarded Gold Medal as Best Picture of Year

THE Photoplay Magazine Gold Medal of Honor awarded annually for the best picture of the year has been won for 1923 by "The Covered Wagon," James Cruze's production for Paramount. This award is made by the votes of the readers of Photoplay Magazine, reported to be 2,500,000.

This is the fourth medal awarded by the Photoplay. The first in 1920 was given to William Randolph Hearst for "Humoresque." The next year Inspiration Pictures won the prize with "Tol'able David," in which Richard Barthelmess was starred. The 1922 medal went to Douglas Fairbanks for "Robin Hood."

Photoplay impresses upon its readers in announcing this annual contest that the award should go to the picture which most nearly approaches perfection in the matters of theme, story, direction, acting, continuity, settings, photography and general technique.

Aside from the distinction which it carries, the medal itself is intrinsically well worth winning. It is of solid gold two and a half inches in diameter and weighs 123½ pennyweights. It is made and suitably inscribed by Tiffany & Company, New York.

James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine, in an editorial said in part:

"It is the best American film drama in years. This panorama of a pioneer train of the roaring forties crossing the virgin America is well nigh an epic in its sweep. 'The Covered Wagon' is not just a historical picture, its characters live. As you watch it, their perils—and they run all the way from death at the hands of savages to starvation in bleak lands—become yours. You struggle with these brave women and brave men in their fight to carry forward that outrider of civilization, the plow."

"The Covered Wagon" opened at the Criterion Theatre, New York City, on March 16, 1923. It stayed there 59 weeks, a record never approached by any other motion picture. In that time it was seen at that theatre by approximately 600,000 people. In Hollywood, "The Covered Wagon" played 34 weeks to 710,000 people. In Boston it played 29 weeks to 300,000 people. In Chicago it played 23 weeks to 250,000 people and a year later made a return engagement to enormous audiences.

Interstate Secretary Sees No Danger of Mid-west Circuit War

LEWIS F. JACOBSON, secretary of the newly-organized Interstate Theatres Inc., of 25 East Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, says that the company was organized to get better film service and protection from the producers of moving pictures in the territory served by the Chicago Film Board of Trade, which covers the city and Cook County, Northern Indiana, Northern Illinois from Springfield north, and the Wisconsin territory from Janesville south.

According to Jacobson, there are 930 theatres in this district and the new company will have 72 houses to start off with.

There will be no war with any other circuit, according to the management and the booking for the Inter-State group will be on a business basis that will bring the members of the organization the best returns.

The officers are Emil Stern of Lubliner and Trinx circuit president, Harry M. Lubliner, treasurer and Lewis F. Jacobson counsel and secretary.

The vice-presidents of the organization will be selected at the next meeting which will be held on November 13 and other matters of interest to the members of the organization will be taken up at that time. Owing to the illness of Emil Stern, who recently underwent an operation at the Michael Reese hospital and who is now recovering at his home, the organization of the offices of the Interstate Theatres has been held up temporarily.

Key to "U" Spirit

The Editor Attends a Dinner in Detroit and Sees an Idea Back of it

Detroit.—(Special)—There's a story—and a real story—to be written about what Universal has done in the Michigan territory this past season. But a sidelight on the story, and an evidence of the spirit that has made it possible is the "dinner-dance habit" that the "U" exchange folks in Detroit have acquired.

We were lucky enough to be invited to the dinner dance given Saturday evening, November 8, at the Elks Club. Everybody was there, from Manager Joe Friedman through to the office boy. The hackneyed phrase of "a happy family" is the only one that describes the folks and the party. And if you don't think that deserves notice in the news columns let some sales manager tell you what a difference it makes when the branch manager has his whole "gang" working with him and for him. If there is a clique or a faction in the Detroit "U" exchange it must have been parked in the lot across the street from the Elks clubhouse.

Among those present at the dance were:

Verna Clark, H. Flynn, Hazel Hener, Anna Kennedy, Florence Dumas, Fred McConnel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Friedman, Mgr.; Mr. and Mrs. F. Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Cleaver, Mr. and Mrs. R. Moon, Mr. and Mrs. C. Davee, Mr. and Mrs. S. Gilbert, Mr. H. Fowser, Mr. H. Houdoif, Mrs. L. Cohen, Irene Nolan, J. Grimshaw, Lenore Murtagh, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hibler, E. Culp, O. Brooks, Mabel Templeton, G. Warde, S. Kimmel, Mr. and Mrs. H. Greenberg, Meyer Coleman, Vera Stewart.

THEATRE OF 2,200 SEATS FOR HEMPSTEAD, L. I.

The Calderone Corporation announces that within the next week it will commence the erection in Hempstead, L. I., of a 2,200-seat theatre. The building, according to the plans, will have stores and apartments. It is expected to be ready for occupancy early in the spring.

Police Close Winnipeg's Penny Arcades

The free admission parlors, otherwise known as penny arcades, are to be abolished in Winnipeg, Manitoba, as a result of the recommendation of a coroner's jury made on November 5.

Illinois Sunday Shows Lose by Small Majority

Galesburg, Ill., voters in the election registered a 452-majority against the proposal to operate motion picture shows on Sunday. The film issue excited more interest than either state or national questions, various civic groups lining up on opposing sides.

Joseph Hopp, managing director of the Illinois association, reports that last year the exhibitors lost by 902 votes and next year when the matter will be brought up again they hope to win. To lose by less than five hundred votes out of the twelve thousand cast gives the movie element hope for success next time.

Both Win! Preachers Move Pulpits to Theatres and Ashtabula Opens Sundays

AFTER three weeks of it, blue laws disappeared in Ashtabula, Ohio, Sunday, November 9, and the theatres and other business places were opened again, under a unique compromise.

City Manager Cotton proposed that all motion pictures houses be opened on Sunday and that the pictures be first censored by a committee of two ministers and a business man. The ministers are also to be allowed fifteen minutes in each theatre Sunday nights to deliver a sermon, using the story of the feature pictures as a basis for their talks, if they choose.

The theatre owners and ministers arrived at the above plan after several conferences, and agreed to give it a fair trial.

The blue laws went into effect after two factions of clergymen got into a jam over the question of showing pictures on Sunday. Some ministers have been showing films in their churches Sunday nights, drawing the crowds, while at other churches attendance was not so good.

Then the City Manager enforced the laws, closing not only the movie houses, but all stores, restaurants, gas stations and garages.

During the period of "closed Sundays" the churches continued to show to [illegible]s, presenting religious subjects whenever possible.

The situation in Ashtabula, which is only a short distance from Cleveland, aroused exhibitors in the latter city and they took part in the negotiations in Ashtabula.

Indications Are Congress Will Not Discuss Tax Until Dec. 1925

THERE will be no special session of congress next summer and further tariff and revenue legislation will probably await the opening of the new congress in December, 1925. That this will be the administration's program has been indicated by the President in conversations with congressional leaders and others who have visited the White House since election.

In his discussion of the tax situation, the President has indicated that he desires to make a very complete study of the matter before again bringing the subject to the attention of congress. Furthermore, the make-up of congress during the session which convenes next month will be practically the same as that of last session, when it was found impossible for the administration to get any legislation through without the democrats and insurgent republicans, acting as a block mutilating it almost beyond recognition.

The next congress will be of different caliber, however, and the republicans will easily keep in the saddle as a result of gains in the recent election. Then it will be possible for republican measures to go through in the form desired by the administration. Tariff and revenue will undoubtedly be among the subjects then to be brought up, the former as a result of experiences with the present law and the changes which have occurred since its enactment, and the latter in conformity with President Coolidge's expressed intention of reducing the tax burden as rapidly as the requirements of the Federal Establishment will permit.

The President is known to be in favor of accomplishing his reforms with as little disturbance to the even tenor of industry as possible, and for that reason he is reluctant to call congress to Washington at other than its regular sessions, realizing that while congress is considering legislation affecting business, industry slows down to some extent until something definite is reached.

When revenue revision is brought up, and possibly during the coming short session, it is very likely that efforts will be made to secure a further revision of the admission tax. The legitimate theaters, which did not benefit at all, or at most to but a limited extent, from the provision in the revenue act of 1924 exempting admisions of 50 cents or less, are seeking relief and will probably attempt to have the tax either entirely repealed or greatly modified. This effort will receive considerable support in congress, where several members are known to be of the opinion that the admission tax is no more justified than were some of the other taxes which were repealed by the last law.

Balaban-Katz Income

Report Shows Net Profits Exceed Last Year's by Nearly $100,000

Balaban and Katz Corporation reports profits of $1,669,861.21 for the first nine months of this year before depreciation. The net income for that period after allowing for depreciation and Federal income taxes amounted to $532,470.75 as against $442,429.04 for last year, an increase for the period in the net of almost one hundred thousand dollars.

The company paid in dividends to the stockholders during the first nine months of this year $149,693.25. The checks are sent out each month so the stockholder in the Balaban and Katz Corporation has a monthly income.

The plans for 1925 call for the completion of the Uptown Theatre now building at Lawrence and Broadway and the erection of the Howard Avenue Theatre with a seating capacity of 3,500 and the downtown theatre in the new Masonic Temple building.

Coogans Return

Near East Relief Issues Statement Highly Praising Jackie

Jackie Coogan returned Nov. 10 to New York on the Leviathan, accompanied by his father, mother and tutor, after a triumphant tour half-way across the world, that concluded in Athens with the distribution of the million-dollar cargo raised by Jackie for the Near East Relief. The Coogans will not remain in New York, but expect to go at once to the Coast, where "The Rag Man" awaits the final "O. K." of Jack Coogan, Sr., before its release by Metro-Goldwyn.

In addition to the Cross of George the First, which was presented to the young star and crusader by the Greek government, the Greek Orthodox church awarded him the Golden Cross of the Order of Jerusalem, in recognition of his humanitarian services for the refugee orphans of the Near East.

In explanation of the action of the Greek church, the Near East Relief issued the statement, which in part states:

"The visit of Jackie Coogan to the Near East has typified the heart of America to these governments and to their churches, schools and general public. It has been regarded by them as symbol of the philanthropic interest of America in their great refugee problems. It has shown them in a very graphic and convincing way, that the charitable assistance which America has given them, is not a political thing with a background of imperialistic ambition, but a sympathetic gesture representing the heart of the American people. The Golden Cross of Jerusalem is intended by the Greek Church as a gift and a token of appreciation, not merely to young Mr. Coogan, but through him to all the children of America who made his crusade possible."

F. P.-L. Dividends

At a meeting this week the board of directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock, payable January 2, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 15, 1924. The books will not close.

After 20 Years Actor Makes Debut in Print

Vitagraph just makes known that for twenty years it has had an actor who, although purported to have played "more than 3,000 important parts," is heralded as being "so modest he doesn't care" about publicity.

All along this actor, according to the Vitagraph story, has explained the reason for his ultra conservatism with: "An audience doesn't care a hang who plays a given part as long as it is played well."

On the eve of the commencement of a new J. Stuart Blackton production this modest one makes his debut in print, if we are in accord with the Vitagraph announcement. His name is William Dunn.

Approve Daylight Saving

Massachusetts Voters Poll Small Majority for Unnatural Time

Despite the attempt to enlist the theatrical men of Massachusetts in aiding to defeat the daylight saving law, the voters on November 4 decided in favor of the summer time schedule. Fifty-three per cent. were in favor of daylight saving and the ratio of opponents was 47 per cent.

This is almost close enough to indicate that the people of the Bay State are fairly divided in their opinions on the matter. There is no danger of the legislature passing a law to compel 47 per cent. of the residents of the state to change their clocks for the summer months, as this, of course, would be carrying the issue too far.

Connecticut attempted the other thing, but the most that could be done was to forbid the exhibition of clocks in public places that did not conform with eastern standard time.

Ignored by City Fathers

Eighty per cent. of the business and professional men of Corydon, Ia., signed a petition recently asking the city council to hold a special election to determine whether Sunday picture shows might be held in that city. F. G. Sterns, who operates the Auditorium Theatre offered to pay the entire cost of such special election. The city council vote was 3 to 2 against the special election.

Kunsky-Balaban-Katz Building in Detroit Proves Incentive

THE recent announcement that both John H. Kunsky and the Balaban & Katz forces, brought into partnership through the Atlantic City merger, would build new theatres in downtown Detroit has acted as a stimulus to other theatre building enterprises in the motor city. Judging by the flood of announcements pertaining to new houses that have come forth recently, Detroit will experience a theatre building era during the winter and spring that will make history.

The northern and northwest sections of the city, which have doubled in population during the past year with Detroit's rapid extension growth in those sections, will be the chief scenes of the building strides.

Following is a list of the proposed new theatres and their sponsors:

John H. Kunsky—One downtown first-run theatre to seat 3,500 people; one neighborhood theatre in the northern section of the city to seat about 2,500.

Balaban & Katz—One downtown first-run theatre to seat 4,500 people. The site to be announced within two weeks..

Samuel Brown—One 2,000-seat theatre on Fenkell avenue, to be known as the Sheridan-Plaza. One 2,000-seat theatre in Highland Park, now under construction, to be ready for opening December 15.

Alexander Scheriber—Three and possibly four high class neighborhood theatres to be situated in the north and northwest sections of the city. Plans now under way.

Henry S. Koppin—Two neighborhood theatres in the northwest section of the city and a new downtown house in the shopping district.

Joseph Cosco—A new theatre in Highland Park, near the Ford Motor Company, under construction now, and to be ready December 15. Seats about 2,500.

On top of these certain announcements, it is known that Charles H. Miles, who now operates five vaudeville and motion picture theatres in various sections of the city, has been casting about for a first-run site downtown. And then there is a possibility that Warner Brothers will include Detroit in their building plans. Sam Warner, who was in the city a few days ago, intimated that Detroit was being seriously enough considered to warrant an investigation of possible locations.

Negri to Live in U. S.

Pola Negri plans to sell her estates in Poland and devote all her attention to those recently purchased in California, Paramount announces. The magnificent parks near Bromber, Poland, with the three hundred year old castle, will soon be sold according to the star's plans to return to her home in the spring. The castle where Miss Negri's mother lives contains forty rooms, is built of stone, and is considered one of the finest country homes in Poland.

Richard E. Enright, N. Y. Police Commissioner, was the principal guest at a luncheon given in his honor by Brentanos, the publishers, last week. State Rights Sales

Independent Pictures Corporation announces it has just closed a contract with the Argentine American Film Co. whereby the film company secures the right to distribute Independent's entire year's output including eight Desmond Holmes, second series of eight Franklyn Farnum, eight Bill Cody, and the special "Dangerous Pleasure," in the following territories: Argentine, Paraguay, Uraguay, Chile, Bolivia, Peru and Equador. Other Independent deals which have already gone through include, the Havanah Film Co. represented by Mr. Reed who signed for eight Desmond Holmes, eight Bill Cody, eight of the second series of Franklyn Farnum and "Dangerous Pleasure"; Creole Enterprises represented by L. M. Ash with offices in New Orleans includes all the Farnum, Cody and Desmond Holmes pictures as well as "Dangerous Pleasure." And the five reel comedy, starring Raymond Griffith, "When Winter Went." Creole's new offices covering Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Georgia, Florida, N. & S. Carolina and Ala., Louisiana and Missippippi heretofore excluded in the territory is now included.

Additional territorial sales made by Henry Ginsberg of the Benny Leonard series of two-reel features, "Flying Fists" were reported as follows: Connecticut, Fairfield Film Exchange, Greenwich, Conn.; Iowa, A. W. Kahn, 1005 High St., Des Moines, Ia.; Nebraska, James Winn, 1511 Chicago St., Omaha, Neb.

J. G. Bachmann, in charge of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions, has signed a contract for the release of this season's Preferred Pictures in Denver by Edward J. Drucker of the Mountain States Film Attractions. The contract just signed involves the distribution of the following pictures this year: "The Breath of Scandal," "White Man," "The Triflers," "The Boomerang," "Faint Perfume," "When A Woman Reaches Forty," "My Lady's Lips," "The Mansion of Aching Hearts," "Frivolity" and "Capital Punishment."

Jack Bellman, manager of Renown Pictures Inc., reports the sale to the Loew Circuit of theatres of "Black Lightning." .. ..

According to an announcement by Louis Weiss, president of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, distributors of Buddy Roosevelt and Buffalo Bill, Jr. series of five part feature action-melodramas, the U. S. Shipping Board has purchased "Battling Buddy" of the former series for initial presentation on all the lines operated or controlled by them. The Weiss Brothers have also sold prints of "Rough Ridin'" the first of the Buddy Roosevelt features released by them, to the U. S. Navy Film Division, for exclusive exhibition on all ships of the U. S. Navy and in all Government reservations under the control of Navy officials.

Ascher Circuit Expanding

An executive of the Ascher Brothers circuit confirms the story that the company will start an expansion of the circuit and three houses are planned for the next year; the site of the first one will be near Lawrence and Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, and will seat 2,000 people. Work is expected to begin after the first of the year. The locations of the other houses will be announced in the near future. There are sixteen houses in the Ascher chain at present.

CAPITOL, NEW YORK, CELEBRATES FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

This week the Capitol Theatre, Broadway, New York, is celebrating its fifth anniversary. In the five years of its existence the Capitol, its management estimates, has entertained "upwards of 26,000,000 people."

Marcus Loew Tells About George Walsh and "Ben Hur"

GEORGE WALSH was released from "Ben Hur" and the role given Ramon Novarro due to no failing or fault of Walsh's, it was stated by Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation this week. The substitution of Novarro for Walsh was unavoidable due to circumstances of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer merger, and was compelled by a change in the policies of the combined organization regarding productions, which naturally included "Ben Hur." This statement was made by Metro-Goldwyn to vindicate George Walsh, and to clear up a misunderstanding that appears to have arisen.

"I thought the reason was obvious why Ramon Novarro was given the role in 'Ben Hur,'" said Marcus Loew, president of Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, "but since a wrong interpretation appears to have been put upon Mr. Walsh's retirement from the production, it is only fair to Mr. Walsh, who is a splendid artist, that our position should be explained, and Mr. Walsh vindicated from unjust rumors.

"Ramon Novarro was one of Metro's leading favorites prior to the amalgamation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Following the merger, which united the destinies of the three organizations, it was naturally to the interests of the combined company to advance the prestige and popularity of Mr. Novarro. Since production was not underway on 'Ben Hur' at the time of the merger, and since Mr. Walsh consequently had not appeared in any scenes of the production, the change in policy of the company made it advisable that Ramon Novarro be given the role of 'Ben Hur' in order to further establish his position as one of our leading stars."

Loew, in a personal communication to George Walsh, branded as untrue any rumor that the substitution of Mr. Novarro was due to any other circumstances.

"I hope that that rumor has not been widespread," Mr. Loew's letter said, "because nothing would be more unfair and unjust to you than the dissemination of such information, since you had through no fault of your own no opportunity to play the part. In fact, at the time Mr. Novarro was substituted, none of the work in connection with the screening of that picture had taken place.

"I hope the public will know, as you know, that the reason for the substitution was the change in policy in connection with the screening of the picture.

"I regret that you did not have the opportunity to show the motion picture trade the work you could have done, but I am sure that in the new parts allotted to you, your public, who knows the splendid work you have done in other pictures, will be glad to receive you when you next appear. I can assure you that everybody in our organization wishes you the utmost success."

N. Y. Censorship Stronger

Republican Control Makes Repeal More Dubious, Albany Reports

With the Republicans in control of both houses of the Legislature, there seems to be no chance of the present censorship law in New York state being wiped from the statute books during the next two years, according to Albany reports. The measure has always been regarded as a Republican one, coming as it did, under the administration of former Governor Nathan L. Miller. On two occasions, Governor Smith in his inaugural addresses, has publicly come out against the censorship law and recommended its abolishment.

Although Governor Smith will continue in office for two years to come, he will find his hands more securely tied than ever when it comes to motion picture censorship. Last year, as well as the year before, bills were introduced in both houses of the Legislature, calling for the abolishment of motion picture censorship in New York state. These bills were passed in the Senate, which was then in control of the Democratic party, but went down to defeat in the Republican assembly.

Just what Governor Smith will do in regard to filling the vacancy which will be occasioned on December 31, when the present term of Helen M. Hosmer as a member of the New York State Motion Picture Commission expires, is a question. Should Governor Smith decide to appoint a Democrat to the position, he will have to look to a Republican Legislature for confirmation. The term of George H. Cobb, chairman of the commission, does not expire for another year.

Tax Free Tickets Need Only Specify Admission Price, Washington Decrees

TICKETS to moving picture theaters and other places of amusement for which a price of 50 cents or less is exacted, being tax free, need show neither the name of the place of amusement nor a serial number, but must have printed thereon the price for which sold, it is provided in the new regulations on admissions (Regulations 43, Part 1) just issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue under the Revenue Act of 1924.

In the csae of tickets sold for more than 50 cents, the regulations formerly providing for the marking thereon of the name of the theater, a serial number of seat identification, the established price and amount of tax, and total of price and tax, remain in force.

It is also required that moving picture and other theatres post prominently signs accurately stating each of the established prices of admission and, in the case of taxable admissions, the tax due and the sum total of the established price and the tax. Where no tax applies that fact should be stated, as, in the case of a moving picture theater, "Balcony—Admission 40c, No tax."

With the exception of the changes made to comply with the new revenue law's provision for the exemption of admissions of 50 cents or less, the new regulations are practically the same as those previously in force.

Going Up in Chicago

Lubliner and Trinz have just purchased another site in Chicago. It is on Lawrence avenue between Campbell and Artesian street. There, according to present plans, they will erect a 3,000 seat theatre. The adjoining block, it is learned, has been acquired by the Redding Company, which also plans the erection of a good size house.

Census Bureau Report

The Census Bureau is now engaged in compiling data on moving picture production in 1923, and will probably make public the results about January 1. Considerable interest is being manifested in this census, which is the first to be taken as part of the regular manufacturing census taken every two years by the bureau.

Allege Trade Restraint

T. O. C. C. to File Complaint With Federal Commission Against Loew

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, Greater New York exhibitor organization, at its meeting this week endorsed a report drawn up by one of its special committees to file with the Federal Trade Commission a formal complaint against circuits and Loew's, Inc. This action was officially made known at the T. O. C. C. headquarters following the meeting.

The report, matter from which it is said will be incorporated in the complaint, contains material designed to show the damage exhibitor members of the organization claim they have suffered as the result of the circuits' alleged violations. Loew's, Inc., is made a potential defendant because, it is reported, it is classed by the organization statement as the most flagrant violator and would therefore make the best test case.

Chairman Charles O'Reilly is credited with having stated that the matter was precipitated to its present state as the result of many complaints from members of his organization that it was impossible to secure pictures because of the buying club said to be held by the Loew Circuit in Greater New York. Such alleged power is reported from T. O. C. C. headquarters to have caused theatres which would ordinarily receive first-run pictures from important distributors to have been relegated to a secondary place. This, according to O'Reilly, will form one of the important allegations in the complaint charging restraint of trade.

Amusement Tax Decline

That there is to be a substantial reduction in the Amusement Tax collected by the Provincial Government of Ontario, following the similar action taken by the United States Government some little time ago, has been intimated by Col. W. H. Price of Toronto, the Treasurer of Ontario. In place of the present ticket tax, which averages about 10 per cent. on the face value of admission tickets, there will probably be a new levy on gasoline in Ontario to raise the revenue required by the province for highway development. Ontario exhibitors have been agitating for a reduction or the total abolishment of the Amusement Tax for some time past, the argument being advanced that the tax on theatre tickets was introduced solely as a war measure.

NEW F. P.-L. EXCHANGE BUILDING IN CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Built on the standardized plans which Paramount has followed out in all its exchange buildings, the Charlotte, N. C., exchange, just completed, is the delight of not only the Paramount officials but the local authorities as well, who recognize all the latest equipment for systematic operation and ideal working conditions. It is situated at 207 Mint street.

FRANK L. NEWMAN

WALTER HAYS

Ritz-Carlton Directorate Is Augmented by Hays and Newman

WALTER HAYS of Buffalo and Frank L. Newman of Kansas City, have become members of the board of directors of Ritz-Carlton Pictures, according to an announcement by J. D. Williams, the company's president.

Newman is president and general manager of the Newman, Royal and Twelfth Street theatres, Kansas City. Hays is vice-president of the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation, which has also become a heavy stockholder in the Ritz company. Hays' company owns and operates the New York and Brooklyn Strands and important houses in Albany, Troy and other eastern cities, with an investment in the neighborhood of eight million dollars. Moe Mark, well known exhibitor and one of the original First National franchise holders, is the president of the Strand company.

"I am proud to make this announcement," said Williams, "for Mr. Newman, Mr. Hays and Mr. Mark are among the best known and most progressive exhibitors in America. They are all pioneers in the field of metropolitan exhibition, the Strand, New York, being the first big theatre devoted solely to motion pictures. The Newman of Kansas City was the second, both houses in point of size and luxurious equipment being years in advance of their time. I am very happy to have the counsel of such far-sighted men who, I am sure, will add greatly to the strength of our company. An organization is only as strong as the men who compose it. Every member of the Ritz board of directors has been selected because of his experience in a particular branch of the industry. It is our purpose to build a well-balanced board whose members, because of a diversity of viewpoint, will be qualified to deal most successfully with problems which affect both production and distribution.

"In addition to Messrs. Newman and Hays, who represent exhibitor interests, I shall, personally, represent the stars and production side, to which I shall devote my entire time and attention.

"Our other directors are William Vogel, a well-known exporter, Hawley Turner, Doctor Brazill and C. L. Yearsley. In Doctor Brazill we have a New York professional man who is valuable for his wide acquaintance and contact with the general public, whose point of view he will represent. He might be termed our commissioner of public relations. Dr. Brazill is an old friend of mine from during the days of my association with W. W. Hodkinson in 1914. Mr. Turner is a well known business expert whom we recruited from the national advertising field. Mr. Yearsley was for five years in charge of First National's advertising and publicity department and for the last fifteen years has been at my right hand in all my enterprises."

In accepting a place on the Ritz board Hays said: "Our transaction is now happily closed. Bringing the two agencies together, the producer and the exhibitor, in a bond of common interest is a step forward in the progress of this business. It is my earnest hope that Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc., will stand for fine business conduct and great productions—and success is sure to be ours."

Newman said: "I feel very proud to be associated with the gentlemen on the Ritz board. I thoroughly believe in the Ritz plan of releasing six big pictures a year. With two Valentinos annually we have a great start. The Harold Lloyd association on our Special Paramount Distribution Plan, with sales under John Ragland's supervision, gives exhibitors the opportunity of buying such stars as Lloyd and Valentino on a unique independent basis. Messrs. Zukor and Kent through Paramount are, for the first time, giving the big stars a distribution service that they have always needed. By safeguarding the Ritz brand we will soon create a great asset for exhibitors. And speaking as an exhibitor I can say that most theatre profits are made on a few big pictures a year. A plan like that of Ritz which will eventually give us six more winners a season is worth a great deal to the business, and I personally mean to work hard to bring it about."

"U" Moves Headquarters

On November 15, Universal announces, it will move its headquarters from 1600 Broadway to the Heckscher building, Fifth avenue and 57th street, New York City.

Bandits Secure $7,000 from 2 Skouras Houses in St. Louis

IN one of the most daring crimes in the police records of St. Louis, Mo., three bandits obtained between $6,000 and $7,000 from the safe of the Lyric Theatre, 114 North Sixth street, early on Monday, November 10. The money was the Saturday and Sunday receipts of the Lyric and Capitol theatres, a block away, both owned by Skouras Brothers. The loss was covered by insurance.

The safe was opened by George Bowser, manager of the two houses, who had been abducted by the bandits and forced to return to the theatre. He was on his way to his home when his coupe was crowded to the curb at Taylor avenue on Chouteau avenue by a large touring car containing the three bandits.

"Get into this car or I will kill you," one of the robbers commanded Bowser, pointing a revolver at his heart. Bowser complied, leaving his own automobile at the curb. The party then returned to the theatre where Bowser was forced to open the safe by the light of a flashlight furnished by one of the trio.

Changes in New Congress for Industry's Better and Worse

DEATHS and elections will give the Sixty-ninth Congress, convening in December, 1925, a very different complexion from the Sixty-eighth Congress, which convenes for its short and final session on December 1. As a result, the motion picture industry will lose a few of its enemies and several of its best friends.

Representative Dallinger of Massachusetts, author of the pending copyright bill and a firm opponent of censorship, running for the Senate, was defeated and will not be present when the next Congress convenes. Representative Dallinger, who wrote the minority report against the censorship bill of 1916, has always been a good friend of the industry and will be missed.

His position as chairman of the House Education Committee will probably be filled by Representative Daniel A. Reed of New York, who appears to have leanings toward censorship.

Senator Bell, chairman of the Senate District Committee, defeated for re-election, will probably be succeeded in his chairmanship by Senator Wesley Jones, author of the Sunday closing bill for the District of Columbia, or Senator Arthur Capper, who is friendly to the industry.

Representative Reed of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, did not run for re-election. The man in line for that chairmanship is Representative Zihlman of Maryland, who is chairman of the Committee on Labor, and would have to give that chairmanship up to accept the position on the District Committee.

The deaths of Senators Brandegee of Connecticut and Colt of Rhode Island leaves two vacancies on the Senate Patents Committee.

Many other changes occurred in both House and Senate and the new Congress will bring to Washington a number of men whose attitude on questions connected with the motion picture industry as yet is unknown.

Government Seeks Ideas to Better Tax Collecting System

SUGGESTIONS for the betterment of the tax collecting system of the Government will be sought of individual taxpayers, business concerns and industries by the Senate Committee Investigating the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which is about to continue its activities, suspended during the recess of Congress.

Any individual or organization having recommendations to make as a result of experiences in getting tax matters finally adjusted will be welcomed by the committee, which is seeking a way to make the adjustment of tax disputes easier and less expensive to taxpayers.

One of the big questions to be considered by the committee in connection with this purpose is that of the decentralization of the administration of the tax laws. It is the opinion of some members that this step would remedy many of the troubles now complained of. It is declared that officials before whom taxpayers must appear in Washington are often unfamiliar with local conditions which might have an influence upon their decision and that, also, many taxpayers cannot well afford the cost of several trips to Washington, accompanied by lawyers and tax accountants.

M. P. Day, Red Cross, Education Week Theatre Tie-ups

Making the motion picture theatre screens of the United States serve a triple purpose this month in advancing National Motion Picture Day, American Education Week and the Red Cross Membership Drive is the effort being made by the officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

National President M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the board of directors; R. F. Woodhull and National Treasurer L. M. Sagal have jointly addressed a series of letters to the theatre owners of the nation calling their attention to these three outstanding events in November.

Valentino Back

Ritz-Carlton Star Acquired "Red" Beard While Abroad

Rudolph Valentino arrived in New York on the Leviathan Monday and will leave Tuesday of next week for Hollywood, where he will produce his first Ritz picture. The star is wearing a small red beard, which attracted front page space in New York newspapers. He grew the beard for the part of a Moor, which he will play in "The Scarlet Power." While abroad he made beautiful atmospheric scenes in many of the picturesque spots of Spain, including Granada, for his first independent production.

On his arrival Mr. Valentino said to reporters:

"I have never been as happy as I am now, nor have I ever looked forward to my work with such zest. At last I am free of litigation and worries. At last I have the freedom for which I have contended so long. Under my new contract with Ritz-Carlton I can make pictures the way I want to make them. My difficulties with Famous Players-Lasky are now happily ended. In fact, my Ritz productions will be distributed by that company through a special arrangement. These pictures will be made without the supervision or interference of any one. I have authority in all production matters."

Mass of Testimony

Over 15,000 Pages Transcribed in Paramount Inquiry

In the course of the Federal Trade Commission inquiry into Paramount affairs now being conducted in New York nothing of a startling nature was brought out during the past week. Over 15,000 pages of testimony have already been transcribed.

The Government Examiner sustained a previous ruling that testimony by Charles McDonald, which was a general resume of 189 pictures which were played in Moss' Broadway prior to September 1, 1924, should be stricken from the record on the ground of irrelevancy to the matter in question. The Commissioner ruled that inasmuch as the list contained more than one-half second-run pictures, it is logical to infer that producers and distributors do not consider the Broadway as a Broadway "show window" for first runs. By such ruling this testimony is excluded from the record but is allowed to remain in the minutes awaiting future developments in the case.

Paul Raiborn of Famous Players was called upon for some expert testimony concerning such technicalities as the number of feet of film to a reel, etc.

The endeavor of Paramount to enter into the record a computation of footage issued by various companies since 1912 was denied. It was, however, read into the minutes as in the case of McDonald's testimony.

Belgians Honor Swanson

A high honor was conferred on Gloria Swanson by the Belgian government, when a ward in the post-war hospital, Woluwe Saint Pierre, was named after her. Colonel Drousie, commandant of the hospital, notified Miss Swanson of the honor, which was given in appreciation of the time which Miss Swanson gave to the hospital during her recent visit to Brussels.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Book Markers Are in General Use in Southern Enterprises Territory

ALTHOUGH no section of the country can lay claim to a monopoly of the book marker idea, the theatres of the Southern Enterprises string have been working the idea with signal success, following a suggestion from Lem L. Stewart, of the Paramount Theatres Department. Some of the houses use them almost every week, and in some places where there are two S. E. houses they alternate.

For example the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, used the concession for America the week of September 31 and the Arcade worked it for The Alaskan the week of October 19. That for America was worked with copy not unlike that for the Palace Theatre, Memphis, reproduced on this page. However, it added Maurice Thompson's Alice of Old Vincennes and G. O. Trevelyan's The American Revolution to the list suggested by Howard Waugh.

In the case of The Alaskan the reference was confined to books by Curwood. In each instance the basic idea was to sell the distribution of these books through the library.

Librarians Appreciate

A public library without readers is worse than dead, and librarians are anxious to make the best possible showing in their reports. Most of them take a real interest in circulating the better types of literature, and welcome any aid.

Few of them have appropriations for advertising. They cannot afford to print up inserts or to make special displays, but they know that they can widen their circles of readers if they have proper help, and almost all of them will distribute book markers, while most of them will permit the bulletin board to be used for the display of stills and cards, if it will help the library.

That's where some managers make a mistake. They approach the librarian with a suggested piece that is about ninety per cent advertising for the house. And they get turned down.

If they let the librarian write the copy, or assist in its preparation, they can afford to give the library the long end of a 60-40 split, getting the real benefit from the stamp of approval.

WAUGH'S TELEPHONE PAD

This is a very simple form of advertising, for the cost of the markers is small. In Jacksonville they used very cheap wood stock, a heavy paper almost a card. In Memphis Waugh used white paper and printed in two colors, using a good linen stock.

Generally you can find the trim from some other job that can be worked up into markers at little or even no cost for stock. Keep your eye on the printer and get him to save the trim from big jobs. He'll be glad to do it if later he gets the job printing this stuff up for you.

Another Good Idea

In Memphis Waugh has gone even further, and supplies business firms with padded telephone slips similar to the one reproduced on this page. These are issued a pad at a time, and the copy is changed for each weekly distribution.

In a way this is somewhat costly, for a pad of one hundred blanks may not reach more than a dozen persons. In most instances it would be better to print up with a permanent advertisement for the house. On a large distribution it will probably pay to print up weekly, and if the pad can reach eight or ten persons several times a day, they are worth while, in spite of their cost as compared to a throwaway.

It All Helps

Anything that will bring the theatre to the special attention of possible playgoers is worth while. It used to be said that B. F. Keith was willing to pay 23 cents to sell a 25-cent ticket. He never went that high, but he had the right idea of being willing to spend money to make more, and Waugh is working along the same line with these pads. This is another case where you can get cheap stock by watching your chance at the printer's.

The telephone pad is less useful than the book marker, but it is good. The book marker is the big bet. It is working like a tractor for Southern Enterprises. Why not put it to work yourself?

Two girls in sailor dress recently distributed Life Saver mints in Akron, Ohio. The envelopes carried a picture of Buster Keaton in The Navigator, with a life ring around his neck, making a better hook-up than usual. The girls brought a lot of money into the box office of the Allen Theatre.

HAROLD WAUGH'S BOOKMARKER ON AMERICA WITH REFERENCE TO A READING LIST

Most Southern Enterprises managers are using these book markers to gain the co-operation of the libraries on pictures derived from books, listing other novels by the same authors, but for America the reference is to both the historical and fiction reading connected with the period of the play. This has made business for the Griffith production wherever used.

The New York Mark Strand box office records, covering a period of ten years, fell last Sunday under the onslaught of "fans" struggling to get a glimpse of Harold Lloyd in his newest Pathe feature comedy, "Hot Water." Lloyd broke his own records, which ranked high in the archives of the Broadway Mark Strand, but the record that has held top position in the Strand's list for approximately three years was that scored by Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid."

Courting Death

Not since George Schade pulled the telephone stunt between 2 and 5 A. M. in Sandusky has an exhibitor come so close to death as W. B. Strong, of the People's Theatre, Pleasantville, Mo.

Strong booked America and then hired Paul Revere, or at least a substitute. Paul had a horse, (not provided by a western trade journalist), and he started out about midnight to alarm the neighborhood with the cry: "To arms! The British are coming! For three days only. At the People's Theatre."

Lots of people answered the call to arms, but by the time they reached their shotguns Paul was doing his stuff at the next house.

After they got over being sore they all went to see America, but if they had caught Strong that first morning this story would have to be moved over to the obituary page.

Harrison Animated

J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas, had an animated display for Three Women, but unlike the others, he did not parade the three women in front of an opening.

His display showed the three women caught in a spider's web, in the center of which was Cody's face, mounted against a black circle. This stood out from the surface of the display and was held by a peg around which a property spider slowly revolved.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

PROPERTIES used in previous shows came in handy with "Captain Blood" and indicated to what extent stage numbers may be made interesting while at the same time the bank roll is saved for another week. The prologue to this Vitagraph production was made up of two scenes, the first being the exterior of an English colonial residence and the second being the cabin of a pirate ship. The exterior had been used in old Southern selections, and was a transparency, thus permitting the second scene to be set behind it, thereby making a transition scene. The ship's cabin had been made up for "The Sea Hawk," and by changing the costuming of the artists and using a different lighting scheme it was made to appear as another set entirely.

Besides "Captain Blood," which required one hour and forty-one minutes, there was an overture by the orchestra, with soloist, a Topical Review and the prologue. The overture ran eight minutes, as did the Topical Review, and the prologue was seven minutes, bringing the complete show up to two hours and four minutes.

For the overture the silver draw curtains were closed over the production stage, and were lighted as follows: Four arch spots, two of them violet and two medium green, hitting the pleats of the curtains, colors alternating; two open box lamps of blue flooding the curtains from the back, giving the transparency effect. Two entrance spots from overhead covered the musicians with light blue, and over these were two pink spots from the transparent windows at either side of the stage. Blue borders, and medium green and violet spots crossing on the ceiling drapes. The overture was selections from Wagner's "Tannhauser," and for a close the dramatic soprano appeared in front of the curtains, entering from the center, and sang "Hail Hall of Song," from the same opera. She was spotted by light pink spots from the transparent windows at either side, thus the dome and booth floods not being used for this number in any way. Eight minutes.

The prologue to "Captain Blood," seven minutes long, was equally divided between the two scenes. For the first, as already described, the English colonial mansion on the scrim was lighted by orange floods from the booth and dome, while two other floods of amber, also from booth and dome, covered the musicians. From the left ten members of the ballet, five costumed as ladies and five as nobles, came on in pairs and did an old English dance somewhat on the minuet type. Then premiere danseuse as English lady came on for a solo dance and pantomime, other five ladies making an exit to right. At close of the dance, and as dancers exited the lights dimmed down and from behind the scrim the orange spots came up on the ship's cabin, showing five pirates and their captain. Two transparent windows of the cabin were lighted from behind, one yellow and the other green. Above the deck rail the back drop transparency was lighted by open box lamps of blue, giving the sky effect. The captain of the group, a basso, sang "Bells of the Sea" (Pede) and the male quartette sang "Haul Away" (Parry), closing the number. The picture was thrown on the scrim while the artists held their pose, and as the lights slowly dimmed out the screen was lowered into the picture.

Yielded Radio

Tod Browning, of the Olympia Theatre, New Haven, has an arrangement with a local broadcasting station to put his musical program on the air Monday night.

In the heat of the recent political campaign there was to be a special rally, and Browning gave up his right to the radio to the politicians. This got him a special notice in the advance story of the meeting, the newspaper explaining that it was through his courtesy that the speaking could be broadcasted, and adding that the musical program for Abraham Lincoln, which was the omitted feature, was unusually good. It gave Tod a wonderful advertisement where it would reach others than his regular patrons.

A Vitagraph Release

HYMAN'S TWO-PART PROLOGUE TO CAPTAIN BLOOD AT THE MARK STRAND THEATRE

A description of this presentation will be found in Mr. Hyman's regular department, from which it will be learned that the cabin scene is a camouflaged holdover from The Sea Hawk, while the other setting has been used a number of times in various productions. Eleven girl dancers are employed in the colonial scene and five singers and two fillers in the other.

A Universal Release

WHO SAYS THAT THEY CAN'T EXPLOIT OVER IN ENGLAND?

Here is positively the best cathedral yet to be shown, and it comes from the Rivoli Theatre, in the Whitechapel district of London. The rose window was illuminated in the evening and the bell rang when a Quasimodo impersonator appeared.

Drawing Lincoln

One of the most successful revivals of the drawing contest, first used by Vitagraph on Black Beauty, has been the sketching of Lincoln's head in connection with the First National feature by the Rockett Brothers.

It is easier to get the newspapers interested in this than in most similar contests, and the stunt has worked well, notably in Cleveland, where it ran for ten days as an advance to the showing of the picture at the Stillman, the Press taking the newspaper end of it.

Two other valuable angles devised by M. A. Malaney were a tie-up with the Public Library and its 26 branches and a drive on the clubs.

Scrappers Helped

Fights helped two Metro-Goldwyn pictures lately. Down on the Canal Zone the American Theatre, Colon, advertised "two fights," the same being the Wills-Firpo catastrophe and the fight in The Spoilers, which was much more like the real thing.

Then the Nemo Theatre, Johnstown, Pa., horned in on a boxing and dansant on behalf of The Great White Way. Joe Humphries, the famous announcer; Tex Rickard and Pete Hartley were all present in person at the old mill site and Humphreys announced they could be seen in the picture at the Nemo.

Both stunts helped, for all the fans love a fighter and a fight.

London Is Stirred by The Hunchback

Beating the best previous record for simultaneous release in London (which was 22 houses, by the way), the European M. P. Company, the English office of Universal, had 35 first runs on The Hunchback of Notre Dame, with fourteen of these houses holding over a second week.

James V. Bryson, head of the exploitation staff, literally plastered London with posters, ranging from 28-sheets down, and made a general campaign on behalf of the united bookings.

Easily the best handling was that of the Rivoli Theatre, in Whitechapel, where the entire front was masked in with a reproduction of the cathedral, with its famous rose window arranged to be illuminated at night. There was a runway below the window on which an impersonator of Quasimodo worked, his frequent appearances being heralded by a peal from the chimes. We don't know whether the crowd in the picture is waiting to buy tickets or looking for jobs as sandwich men, for sandwich men are still staple exploitation.

The campaign sold the picture to upward of half a million admissions the first week. One manager reported all expenses covered the second day of his run, and S. R. O. was reported from most of the houses participating in the campaign.

Bryson beat all sorts of records in putting this over, and there was no back kick, either. It was all clean-cut work.

A Good One

Even though you may not be given to prologues to your pictures, you can use to advantage the idea originated by the Egyptian Theatre, Long Beach, Cal.

The High School Chorus was employed in a spectacle called "Twenty Minutes at the Court of Yolanda," singing old English glees in period costume. It was easy to rent the costumes in Los Angeles, but inc ase a customer is not available the stills will give suggestions for home-made equipment that will suffice since the big idea is the employment of local talent.

A Producers Distributing Release

TWO OF THE STANDS USED BY THE PICCADILLY THEATRE, NEW YORK, FOR THE OPENING

These are a combination of the 24-sheets on Barbara Frietchie issued by the Producers Distributing Corporation and the 28-sheet paper planned to introduce the new house to its desired patrons. It put the theatre over to a running start, but it took several acres of paper to properly cover the business and residental sections. It was an excellent campaign.

Makes Small Herald Into a Throwaway

Very often you can use an accessory in a manner different from the original intention and get something better. It's just like the cuts in the press book. You do not have to use them in the original form.

First National got out a small folder on When a Man's a Man. The front showed the cover of the book with four scene stills, a reproduction of the 24-sheet and a blank page for the house imprint. The pages were 1¾ by 2¼, and in their original form they worked nicely as program enclosures and envelope stuffers.

But the Hippodrome Theatre, Warren, Ohio, had another idea. It had locally printed a card about 3½ by 6 inches with the front as shown in the illustration. To these were pasted the necessary folders, the house space being the portion pasted. It could be opened out to get all of the material.

On the back was a combination of local pride and house advertisement, the best-house-in-the-best-town idea, very well worded. The slogan was "Everybody goes to the Hip. Be among the everybodies."

The folder gave the toch of color that was needed to make the card distinctive, and the folders cost little—if any—more than the second color on a local job.

MOUNTING A SMALL HERALD ON A LARGER CARD IS GOOD

Over on the right is a small herald issued by First National on When a Man's a Man. The Hippodrome Theatre, Warren, Ohio, mounted these on a card 3½ by 6 and got a more effective job at a small additional cost for the local work.

Fitted In

The "We dare you to hand this to your wife, unopened," envelope worked nicely with Secrets when Russell F. Brown played the Norma Talmadge production at the Rex Theatre, Eugene, Ore.

He got it up very nicely with the envelope printed in the upper left hand corner "Don't keep secrets from your wife." In the lower right hand corner was "If you really love her, hand this envelope to her unopened."

Inside was a card starting off: "Call him by name and read aloud . . . we've been married (say number) years and I have never kept a secret from you." Then follows the suggestion that the play be witnessed.

It's a veteran idea, but it bobs up every little while and still seems to be good.

Another Yellow

Eddie Bonns spread himself on the yellow fellow for Janice Meredith. With the Hearst co-operation stunts to fatten the products of his own fertile imagination, Eddie has given a seven-pager that is literally packed with box office aids, including the set of cartoons drawn by the Hearst artists and which are now available in mat form.

Eddie has departed from the usual mimeograph style in favor of a printed sheet about the size of a small newspaper, and it works into one of the best of this Metro-Goldwyn series of almost-automatic aids.

All in the Day

All Claude Saunders Chilluns Got Wings, too.

George W. Gambrill, Paramounteer, blew into Villa Groves, Mo. He spotted a big water tank. It was too late to post it for the West of the Water Tower, but he did get the Mayor to assent to its use as a stand for Covered Wagon paper.

Gambrill posted the paper himself when he found no one else willing to tackle the job and the paper will stand an advertisement for the Star Theatre until it washes down.

H. R. Regan, of the Star, collaborated. He loaned George his overalls.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

C. B. STIFF'S LOBBY MINIATURE FOR THE ARAB

Worked in the lobby of the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn. C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, claims the credit, but we think that some should go to Mr. Stiff. The tents and toys are from the ten cent store. The sand was free.

Heavy Advance Work

Ace Berry put everything he had or could borrow on the ball when he started to put over The Sea Hawk at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis. He put out 71,000 pieces of distributed matter, posted the entire front of a vacant building just across from the theatre, had two 12x10 special paintings for the lobby and a shadow box 22x8 feet, fifteen inches deep and ten smaller boxes for window displays.

These were just the high points in a campaign that kept the picture booming for two weeks.

Pretty Soft

Barnum and Bailey and Ringling Brothers were scheduled for Chickasha, Okla., lately, and Clayton Tunstill arranged a float to crash in on the parade. But there was no parade and Tunstill quickly changed the signs to read: "The circus will not parade this morning. Now's your chance to attend a reel show at the Rialto and see Betty Compson in The Enemy Sex."

Thousands were waiting along the supposed line of march and enough of them took the hint to make it a record morning matinee.

A Fox Release

TYING THE BANK TO THE MAN WHO CAME BACK

We don't think a lot of a man who would come back to Paterson, N. J., but the local bank did, and Louis Abraham, of Fox's American, sold them on this shadow box with the suggestion that a savings account has started men back.

Ran Lincoln Film for an Authority

Knowing that Henry B. Rankin, of Springfield, Ill., had studied law in the offices of Lincoln and Herndon, the Princess Theatre made a special trip to his home to show the Rockett picture to the venerable invalid, who was not able to come to the theatre.

Al Rockett had made a journey to see Mr. Rankin when he was preparing to produce the play, and obtained much intimate material from the old gentleman.

Knowing this, Al Sobler, a First National exploiteer, suggested the stunt. It not only got a long local story, but it was put on the wire and used by a majority of newspapers in that section.

Old pupils of Lincoln are not at the call of the average house, but there are still alive a few of those who voted for Lincoln, and they can be put in for a pinch hit if you are to show the First National offering. It involves considerable trouble, but not more than a column write-up with a local angle will more than pay for.

J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas, got over the idea of Lovers' Lane very simply with a rustic bench and two side trellises. The latter, flower draped, stood either side of the narrow lobby. In between but a few feet to the rear was the bench.

Splendid Lobby Is an Expert Salesman

A sumptuous lobby helped The Sea Hawk to extra business even for such a feature at the Garrick Theatre, Minneapolis. The suggestion of the lobby display was applied to the picture and everyone who could possibly make it saw the Frank Lloyd production.

The exploitation really started when the photoplay edition of the book was issued. H. E. Daigler bought a number of copies of the book and loaned these to his patrons. Of course the name and address of the borrower were taken, and these names formed a special mailing list when the feature came.

Several weeks in advance of the showing Mr. Daigler made a cutout of the ship, mounted it on a neutral ground, framed it in gold and hung it with velvet. Only the title was stripped across the front. This was done in the auditorium where the seated patrons could see it.

For the lobby he made a special display of stills for his advance.

The week before the opening he arranged two lobby banners. Over the entrance to the foyer he built a shadow box twenty feet wide. This showed the vessel riding the waves between two promontories. Not only did the ship roll with the waves but the waves themselves were animated. A small wind machine added to the realism. All of the lettering was translucent red.

Facing the departing patron was a less ornate frame, and cutouts of the ship were hung in the four corners, just below a canopy of gaily colored strips. It all helped toward a sustained capacity business.

Loading the Cart

Co-operative pages are a bit slow just now, so a double for The Covered Wagon is almost a novelty. Jim West, Paramounteer, helped the Strand Theatre, Morris, Minn., to land it.

The sales were made on the idea of starting each advertisement with the uniform "If we had equipped The Covered Wagon it would have carried—." Just what they would have done with vacuum cleaners and electric irons is problematical, but it got the pages.

A First National Release

TWO SHOTS OF AN INTERESTING LOBBY ON THE SEA HAWK FROM MINNEAPOLIS

H. E. Daigler went to extra endeavor to put over this big smash and was well repaid by his capacity business. On the left is the entrance to the foyer. The ship in the shadow box is roller mounted and the ground rows of waves are animated. A small wind machine adds a complementary sound effect. The other shot shows the street entrance. Note the cutout ships.

A TOY TRAIN DISPLAY WITH THE TRAIN GIVEN SOME CHILD

W. F. Brock had to buy the outfit for the window display, so he gave it to a child who made the best estimate as to how long an eight day clock would run. This display was run night and day and the lighted train in the dark window was a hit.

Girl Ballyhoo Is Help to Barbara

Tying in on a political parade was one of the ways they put over Barbara Frietchie at the Modern Theatre, Providence, R. I. This time, instead of trying to crash the parade, they had an inpersonator of Barbara review the marchers. She had a military guard of honor at her private reviewing stand—two soldiers, each carrying a banner, one of which advertised the play, while the other greeted the marchers.

An old department store, celebrating its 158th Anniversary, naturally made a fuss about the affair, and welcomed the loan of some of the original costumes worn in the play as an aid to window dressing.

Outside of having the Governor welcome the pseudo Barbara on the State House steps it was not necessary to do very much more.

Gilds the Lily in a Toy Train Stunt

Generally it is not necessary to do anything thing to get attention for a toy train in action, but W. F. Brock, of the Strand Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., got a window show for The Signal Tower that carried with it the offer of a train the tower was signaling.

He had to buy a ten dollar train outfit to get the window, but the investment covered the current used to run the train. Since the train was his, he offered it to the boy or girl who estimated the time a clock on display would stop.

There was no string tied to the offer. Blanks were free in the store and any child could enter an estimate. There were crowds around the display all of the time.

All of the time means at night, too, for in the evening the store lights were cut off, but the electrically lighted train ran all night, with the signals glowing in the semaphore, and this caught the night shoppers. There were two semaphores and a lighted target, as well as smaller lights around the track, and it made a fine night display.

A LOBBY DISPLAY AND TWO WINDOWS ON FEET OF CLAY FROM AUGUSTA, GA., BY FRANK J. MILLER

There's a real girl back of the beach umbrella in the lobby of the Modjeska Theatre with a painted backing and some cutout bathers from old lithographs. The real girl was dressed in a bathing suit. The lower pictures show a double hook-up with a furniture store and show the Harlem home of the heroine fitted up with the leaders of the local concern.

"Bungalow Boobs"—Roach-Pathe
Uproariously Funny
Type of production....1 reel comedy
In "Bungalow Boobs" one sees the gag man at his best. Inspired, one might say, for if there aren't two laughs to every foot of film it is because there is only one laugh, continuous from start to finish. Charley Chase does the clowning, but in this case it isn't so much Chase as it is the really comic story that has been written for him. For once, one finds a comedy film minus a lot of aimless running around in order to make it funny. Neither is there any of that desperate striving for humor which blights most shorts. The humor is inherent in the story of the two newlyweds being visited by their welcoming neighbors, who with the perverseness of human nature pick the bungalow to pieces by showing that "this is not real velvet" and proceed to prove it by tearing the drapery to pieces; "this house isn't constructed well," whence a pillar is torn right from its support as concrete testimony, until nothing is left of the house but the knob on the attic door. And so on, the whole thing being exceptionally well done.

"All Wet"

Hal Roach Comedy

One Reel

With Charley Chase

Hurrying to meet a train. Meets another motorist stuck in the mud. Pulls him out. Gets stuck himself. Asks the man he helped to help him out. Other chap says, "Sorry, but I've got to meet a train," and drives away. Car slowly sinks out of sight in mud and water. Lots of trouble and laughs. And then he gets a ticket from a cop for breaking the parking law!

Sparkling with originality and peppered with new gags. It's a good sample of the way the Hal Roach One Reel Comedies are running.

The title's "All Wet" but the comedy isn't.

It's all laugh.

Everybody and his sister likes detective stories

It is said that the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt sought recreation in detective stories. Of the last eight Presidents five were fond of such stories.

Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes" became one of the most popular characters in fiction on record. Why? Because he cleverly solved crimes in new ways.

Here are four pictures that will be liked by all. Clever, original, dramatic, fast in action, and TRUE.

The Amazing Discovery of the Age

A million dollars worth of newspaper publicity for your benefit

When H. Grindell Matthews first announced his discovery of the Death Ray, long cabled reports of it were printed in the American newspapers.

When Mr. Matthews visited this country a few weeks ago front page stories day after day were devoted to him and this deadly thing that KILLS AT A DISTANCE. Every paper in the country had them.

Now comes the picture that shows just what the Death Ray really is, how it acts, what it may do.

And there's a million dollars of publicity behind it!

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

Competing Theatres Run Ads in Ottawa House's Program

It is not very often that the advertising of other theatres appears in the printed literature of a theatre, but such is the case in Ottawa, Ontario, in the publication of a new and elaborate official program of B. F. Keith's Theatre, the manager of which is J. M. Franklin. The new weekly publication of the Keith house comprises twelve pages of theatre news and general advertising, included in which is a paid advertisement for two competing theatres, namely, the Laurier and Eden theatres, which are situated in Hull, Quebec, just across the Ottawa River from the Canadian Capital. The Laurier and Eden are operated by parties who are totally outside the personnel of the Keith Ottawa house. Incidentally, the new Keith house organ is the most complete theatre program ever issued in Ottawa.

The O'Brien Theatre at Renfrew, Ontario, one of the best known theatres in the Ottawa Valley, was threatened by a fire which swept through a portion of the business section of Renfrew on the morning of November 8. The flames, which were fanned by a high wind, reached the structure but it was saved by the firemen when, as a last resort, the theatre's sprinkler system was turned on. The result was that the whole theatre was drenched with water and the interior was considerably damaged. The O'Brien will resume operations after it has been dried out.

First National's "Secrets" has followed "Monsieur Beaucaire" into the Regent Theatre, Toronto, the downtown two-a-day picture house of the Ontario Capital. "Secrets" opened at the Regent for an indefinite run on November 15 after "Beaucaire" had played four weeks at $1 top. Previous to "Beaucaire," the Regent had presented "The Sea Hawk" for seven weeks. Harry Dahn, formerly of the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, is the new manager of the Toronto Regent, with Jack Arthur in charge of music and presentations.

An interesting development has taken place at Hamilton, Ontario, in the adoption of a new policy of pictures and vaudeville, in place of straight pictures, at the Capitol Theatre by Manager George Stroud. Starting November 10, Loew vaudeville was booked into the Capitol to supplement the film program, this marking the return of Loew acts into Hamilton. Previously there had been a Loew theatre there, but this was acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corporation, which also controls the Capitol of Hamilton. Mr. Stroud also directs the Pantages and Savoy there, the Savoy giving special presentations of special productions twice daily. At the Capitol the new price scale ranges up to 40 cents, a slight advance over the previous admissions. I. Thomas is named as director of the Capitol orchestra, while R. S. Symmers now has charge of the Capitol Theatre pipe organ.

Announcement has now been made that Fred. W. Crosbie of Winnipeg, Manitoba, former exhibitor and previously with Toronto film exchanges, had been appointed manager of the exploitation department of the Universal office at Winnipeg.

An important tour of inspection of all theatres in Western Canada of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation is being taken by H. M. Thomas of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Western Division manager of the company . Mr. Thomas is covering the territory from Fort William, Ontario to Vancouver, B. C. During his absence, the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, is under the temporary charge of Walter Wilson, manager of the Capitol at Edmonton, Alberta, Mr. Thomas having personal direction of the Winnipeg house.

Speakers at the regular monthly luncheon of the Ontario branch of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Canadian Division, on Tuesday, November 4, included Ald. J. P. Summerville of Toronto, owner of the new Prince of Wales Theatre on Danforth avenue, and W. H. McMullan, proprietor of the Castle Theatre, Guelph, Ontario. In charge of the meeting, which was held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, was J. C. Brady, owner of the Madison Theatre, who is the Ontario president of the M. P. T. O. Rae Lewis presided as secretary.

A big party was conducted at the Palace Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, on the evening of November 4 as a farewell to Norman Smith, for eight years manager of the Calgary branch of Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto, Mr. Smith having been promoted to an important departmental post at the head office of the company in Toronto. Every exchange office and theatre in Calgary was represented at the party and, after music and refreshments had been enjoyed, John Hazza, manager of the Capitol Theatre, presented a handsome table set to Mr. Smith in behalf of the local picture men. Abe Cass, assistant manager of the Calgary Regal branch for some time, was introduced as the successor to Mr. Smith as manager. Manager Ray Tubman and R. B. Barron of the Palace Theatre were the hosts of the evening. Others present included John Hazza, M. Allen, I. H. Allen of Vancouver, B. C., A. Cass, J. Cathro, Joe Plottel, J. Hutchinson, T. Davey, Ivor Price, J. S. Hepburn, M. Skoray, W. Campbell, Harold Bishop and George Margetts.

A Dog's Life

A woman went into a Boston theatre —one on Tremont street—and asked if she could have her husband paged.

This was refused, so she asked if she could whistle for him.

Permission was granted just for the fun of it.

The woman whistled and up one aisle came hubby, meek and mild-eyed.

Schine Company's Rialto Opens in Lockport, N. Y.

The Rialto, the newest addition to the Schine Theatre Corporation Chain in Western New York, was opened in Lockport, N. Y., November 11. The Rialto is one of the most attractive in this end of the state, is beautifully decorated inside and out and equipped with every modern device for the proper accommodation of the public. Two Simplex machines furnish the projection. They are equipped with Superlite lenses. A Raven screen is used. Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply Company of Buffalo installed the booth equipment.

M. Slotkin of the Lafayette Square Theatre, Buffalo, has been appointed to the board of directors of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y. Mr. Slotkin is also the new chairman of the finance committee of the organization. Buffalo exhibitors were shocked to hear that President Michael Walsh of Yonkers has again suffered a nervous breakdown and been forced to go to a sanitorium. New memberships continue to come into the Buffalo zone office in the Root building and Chairman J. H. Michael is especially pleased with the showing the Buffalo territory is making.

John Stevens, well known in Buffalo, where he has managed several theatres, and who recently has been in charge of the Regent and Princess, Corning and the Schine houses in Oneonta, N. Y., is back in Buffalo as assistant district manager of the Buffalo area for the Schine Theatre Corporation.

Monday, November 24, has been selected as the opening date of the new Babcock Theatre in Bath, N. Y. Decorators and interior workers finished this week and the seats, 700 in number, are being installed. Buff, tan and gilt is the color scheme for the lobby and auditorium. The doors and furniture will be of walnut. The ceiling will be cream ivory, broken by groups of overhead lights.

Irving Lipowicz, owner of the Family Theatre in Lackawanna, N. Y., has been elected to the New York state Senate from the 49th district.

Presence of mind on the part of Chris Schwarzmier, projectionists, averted a panic when some film caught fire in the booth of the Columbia Theatre, Buffalo, one evening last week and did $200 damage. When the blazing film lit up the auditorium, Chris switched to the other machine and continued the picture. Then he grabbed a fire extinguisher and put out the blaze. The orchestra continued to play, the patrons were reassured and the show went on in an orderly manner. Manager Joseph A. Schuchert Jr., said there was little excitement.

Bids were opened on November 10 for the new house which M. Shea is to build in Main street, above Chippewa, in Buffalo. Work begins at once. The house will be one of the most elaborate in the country, seating 4,000 and possessing a number of original ideals in theatre construction.

A new 30-foot sign bearing the name Olympic is being erected on the front of the Olympic Theatre in Lafayette Square, Buffalo, by Strauss & Co. of New York. Three new marque signs with changable letters are also being placed by the same firm. The Olympic is operated by Universal.

A motion picture of views of Buffalo in color has just been completed by Pathe and Manager Vincent R. McFaul will show the film at Shea's Hippodrome the week of November 16.

Manager Arch McCallum has started a series of Saturday morning presentations at Fay's Theatre in Rochester which he calls "Kiddie Shows." A special admission price of 10 cents is made for these shows and special films for the younger generation are presented. The show opens at 10 a. m., one hour earlier than usual, and continues until noon.

Connecticut

Martin Peterson of New Haven has bought the picture business conducted in Guilford by Robert H. Norton. Mr Norton is one of Connecticut's pioneer exhibitors, for he has been presenting moving pictures in Guilford for sixteen years. Mr. Peterson will continue giving the shows in Norton's Hall.

The Lyceum Theatre in New Britain began a vaudeville and film policy on November 10. There will be two complete bills each week.

Fall Carnival Week was observed at the Capitol Theatre in New Britain the week of November 10. The vaudeville bill was enlarged to seven acts.

A certificate of organization has been filed at the office of the Secretary of State for the Norwich Amusement Company, Inc., of Norwich. The officers are: President, Edward L. McEvoy of Leominster, Mass.; vice-president, H. M. Leron of Norwich; secretary and treasurer, Edwin W. Higgins; assistant treasurer, James Graham, Norwich. The officers comprise the board of directors.

Iowa

Morris Smith, who operates the World and Hipp theatres at Sioux City, Ia., expects soon to complete the construction of his new picture theatre on Fourth street just north of the Orpheum Theatre. The house will cost $30,000 and will seat 500.

Dr. B. J. Palmer, Davenport, Ia., head of the Davenport School of Chiropractics, is sponsoring a new theatre building at Davenport. He expects to have a new half million dollar theatre building finished in that city by the middle of 1925. Motion pictures, road shows, lectures, etc., are to be given. According to reports, the plans contemplate one of the finest and best equipped theatre buildings in the United States.

Schenectady Theatre Plans Special Bills for Students

With an eye open for business, knowing the fondness of the ordinary college student for the movies and realizing that every student generally brings a fair companion, William Shirley, handling the affairs of the State, Strand and Albany theatres in Schenectady, is staging a couple of College Nights at the State Theatre this month. The first of the so-called College Nights will be known as "Union Pep Night." Mr. Shirley will give the usual picture program and will also allow some of the talented boys to give an entertainment of their own. The whole idea is to stimulate interest in one of the big football games at Union, and at the same time interest is also being developed in Mr. Shirley's three theatres. The second of the College Nights will be one in which the entire city will take an interest. It will start with a parade headed by a band, the students marching from the college grounds to the State Theatre, where, among other things, a reel will be shown of the game in progress as well as other activities around the campus. For Armistice Day Mr. Shirley will show "The Death Ray" in one of his theatres, attracting American Legion men as well as employes of the General Electric Company.

There will be four weeks of Junior Movies each Saturday at the Mark Strand Theatre in Albany, starting on November 15. As in the past, these movies will be under the direction of the Albany Mothers' Club, with Boy and Girl Scouts assisting in handling the crowds as well as ushering. "The Cricket on the Hearth" will be the first picture shown. The Parent-Teacher Association in Troy is planning for similar Saturday morning movies for the children in that city.

Charles V. Dery, managing the Empire Theatre at Port Henry, was along Film Row last week with the owner of the house, Lew Fisher. The two men stopped over for a time on their way to Chatham to look over the house which Mr. Fisher recently purchased there.

William Benton is planning to open his new theatre in Plattsburgh on December 29. The house will seat about 1,400 and the opening will be attended by many from along Film Row, as Mr. Benton is a prime favorite in Albany. William Smalley opened his theatre in Hamilton last week, playing to capacity crowds and receiving many expressions of congratulation.

The doormen and others at the Leland Theatre in Albany blossomed forth last week in brand new uniforms of maroon trimmed with gold. Manager Perrin intends to take no chances on sickness among his doormen this winter, for in addition to the uniforms he has also provided top coats in order to protect them from any draught.

W. W. Farley, head of Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, is as smiling as the proverbial "basket of chips" these days over the victory of Governor Alfred E. Smith. Mr. Farley backed his convictions with the "long green" and is several hundred dollars to the good as the result of Governor Smith's splendid run.

A theatre seating 1,250 will be built this winter in East Syracuse. The new house will be of steel and brick construction and will cost $75,000. It will also include four stores.

Hilda Angel, who runs the Park Theatre in Wappingers Falls, paid a visit to Film Row last week, booking up pictures for the weeks to come. The well known exhibitor has been rather under the weather but has recovered and is once more looking after business.

Friday is pay day in Schenectady and the Strand and Albany theatres of that city are opening their week's program that night, playing to big houses as the money circulates. The State Theatre opens its week on Saturday. The Strand is supporting an orchestra at the present time, but the musicians may be dispensed with after the organ has been installed. The massive State Theatre is depending entirely on an organ these days for its music.

Somehow or other, Nate Robbins of Utica, one of the best known exhibitors in all Central New York, doesn't seem to have his shooting eye with him this fall. Perhaps his inability to hit the mark in the field has resulted from seeing too many pictures screened during the past few months. At any rate, Mr. Robbins goes hunting each week end and thus far has failed to bring back anything that looks like venison.

Southern Tier Co. Heads Named

OFFICERS and directors of the Southern Tier Theatre Company, Inc., have been named. Francis G. Maloney is president of the corporation which will build the new State Theatre in Elmira, N. Y., construction of which will start late this month or early in December. Mr. Maloney is one of the most prominent and experienced men in Elmira theatre circles. He was manager of the old Madison Avenue Theatre early in his career and for nineteen years successfully conducted the Roricks Glen Theatre. George H. Ven Denmark has been elected vice-president; Malcolm D. Gibson, secretary; Stafford D. Noble, treasurer. The board of directors consists of Mr. Maloney, Mayor J. Norton Wood, Isaac Allison, Louis H. Watkins of Watkins, N. Y., J. John Hassett, Stafford D. Noble, Dr. Woodford J. Copeland, Malcolm D. Gibson and George H. Ven Demark.

Mr. Ven Demark was owner of the old Happy Hour Theatre in State street, Elmira. In 1912, Mr. Ven Demark sold the Majestic Theatre, Mr. Gibson becoming owner. Mr. Ven Demark took over two theatres in Amsterdam and conducted them for three years. Later he conducted the Lyceum Theatre in Elmira for one year. Mr. Ven Demark's next venture was thepurchase of the Mozart Theatre, which he later sold to the Happy Hour Amusement Company, which then owned the Majestic.

Mr. Gibson at one time conducted the Majestic Theatre, which was built by Mr. Gibson and Mr. Ven Demark in conjunction in 1909. After Mr. Ven Demark undertook interests elsewhere, the theatre was conducted by Mr. Gibson until 1920. It is now owned by the Berinstein interests. Plans for the new theatre in a revised form to permit a larger seating capacity are being completed by Leon H. Lampert of Rochester. The plans will be submitted to Charles Sterling, inspector of buildings, within a short time and the construction of the theatre started soon thereafter.

Janet Noon, who formerly owned the Crescent in Schenectady, and who went to California after disposing of the house, is once more back in the Electric City and is said to be on the lookout for another theatre.

Earl Kelly is in the wrong sort of a business. Not that he is not making money as the manager of the Strand Theatre in Millbrook, but when any man can drive from Millbrook to Albany, some ninety-odd miles, in the record-breaking time made by Mr. Kelly last week, he should be competing with Barney Oldfield, Earl Cooper, Ralph DePalma and other racing drivers. Mr. Kelly was former manager of Grange Hall in Millbrook.

Dr. J. Victor Wilson of Watertown, who looks after the affairs of the Robbins theatres in that city, was in Albany last week, stopping for a visit with Uly S. Hill, manager of the Strand group of houses. Although the industries in Watertown are not running full blast these days, the theatres, according to Dr. Wilson, are doing well and there is every prospect of a successful winter.

Harry Edick of Bisbee Hall in West Winfield certainly hit it right when he played "The Spirit of the U. S. A." on Election Night and cleaned up a matter of $113, which is mighty good money in that village. Mr. Edick was in Albany a day or so after election on a cattle selling trip.

Jack Matthews of Plattsburgh was a red hot "Al Smith man" during the recent campaign. In fact, it was all Mr. Matthews could do just before election to remain at his theatre. Following Governor Smith's election, Mr. Matthews telephoned to Albany, inquiring if there would be a public reception tendered Governor Smith and announcing his intention of attending in case one was held.

Lawrence J. Carkey, manager of the Strand Theatre in Carthage, has announced that beginning November 14 vaudeville will be shown at his house on Friday and Saturday evenings each week in connection with the feature picture.

Ben Apple of the American in Troy is certainly going after business in a big way these days, reminding his friends of times in the past when the American led them all in the Collar City. Mr. Apple is not only using more newspaper space but heralds and other methods of attracting city-wide attention to his pictures.

Theatres in the Catskill mountain towns are emulating Rip Van Winkle these days and are now down to one night a week and awaiting another summer.

Among visitors along Film Row last week were George Loomis of Frankfort, S. W. Hatch of New York, Charles Sesonske and his manager, Mr. Russell, of Johnstown, and Arthur Whyte of the Peerless Booking Agency.

Now that the Barcli is not running in Schenectady, and there is no longer stiff opposition to the theatres operated by Farash Theatres, Inc., the latter is cutting down on its newspaper space. A year ago, when the Barcli was competing with the Strand, State and Albany theatres, it frequently used quarter and half-page newspaper advertisements.

"The Sea Hawk" will open in Schenectady on Thanksgiving Day. The State Theatre will be given over on November 21 to Mischa Elman for a night. The Hudson Theatre in Schenectady, which has been closed for some time, reopened this week with stock. Fresh flowers, generally chrysanthemums, are being used these days to adorn the lobby and interior of the State and Strand theatres.

A painter is being employed the year round on the Clinton Square and Leland theatres in Albany. The interior of the Clinton Square Theatre is to be repainted at once, work having been completed on the front.

Nathan Robbins was in New York the past week in conference with a corporation operating a chain of department stores in the country. Mr. Robbins was offered approximately $500,000 for the Colonial Theatre Building in Utica but the offer was rejected. It is understood that the New York concern was anxious for the Colonial as a site for an eight-story department store.

The first annual dance, midnight supper and frolic to be given by the Albany Film Board of Trade, and which took place last Monday night at the Hotel Ten Eyck, proved to be one of the most successful and enjoyable affairs of the early fall social season. About 100 couples attended. The ballroom was handsomely decorated for the dance. Many novel effects were introduced during the evening, while clever souvenirs were given to all present. There were many exhibitors and others from out of town. Among those who attended were William Smalley of Cooperstown, Robert Block of Utica, Louis and Meyer Schine, Peter Dana and Benjamin Davis of Gloversville, Benjamin Apple of Troy, William Benton of Saratoga Springs, Mr. and Mrs. William Shirley and Meyer Friedman of Schenectady, Arthur Whyte of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Perrin, Jack Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Singer, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Herman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stombaugh, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. MacIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Knorr, Miss Jane Halloran, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bendell, Miss Rene Craven, Miss Marie Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stern of Albany; Lew Fisher, Port Henry; Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burns and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent McCabe of Albany.

Theatre owners in Albany have always been against exploitation. As a result, the present-day efforts of Samuel Suckno at the Albany Theatre are being watched with much interest by other exhibitors in the city. Mr. Suckno converted his theatre into a first-run house the fore part of September and started in to do considerable in the way of exploitation. The results appear to have been satisfactory from a box office standpoint. Exploitation was done the past week in connection with a run of "Wine" and a ballyhoo is being used this week along with the showing of "Reckless Age." If Mr. Suckno finds exploitation an aid, other houses in the city will undoubtedly fall in line.

R. L. Shaul of Richfield Springs booked the Jack Dempsey series last week.

Minnesota

A three-cornered fight for theatrical supremacy in St. Cloud, Minn., a town of 15,000 population, is on with Finkelstein & Ruben of Minneapolis, the latest to enter the fray. "F-R" has taken over the People's Theatre, a 700-seat house. The Sherman, a 1,700-seat house, is operated by Billy B. Watson and George E. Miner operates the Miner, a 750-seat theatre.

Finkelstein & Ruben have added another house to their chain in Northern Minnesota, the Philo Theatre at Chisholm. Phil Ploof, who has operated the house for 12 years, plans to retire. The Minneapolis firm takes possession December 15.

Fenway Surprises Boston By Reduction of Prices

Laurence Stuart, managing director, celebrated the first anniversary of the Fenway Theatre in Boston as a Famous players theatre the week of November 9. The occasion also marked the start of a new price scale, a reduction billed as the Fenway's "anniversary gift to you." The new prices are as follows: Matinee, children 15 cents, balcony 30 cents, main floor 40 cents; evenings, daily, children 25 cents, balcony 40 cents, main floor 60 cents; Saturday evening and Sunday and holidays, balcony 50 cents, main floor 75 cents. The announcement of the cut in the Fenway's prices was a great surprise to other Boston exhibitors. The Fenway always gives a first-class program, the bill for the anniversary week being as follows: "The Border Legion," Fenway orchestra, Del Castillo, organist; news reel, "Felix the Cat," prologue with Constance Barker, soprano; Raymond Simonds, tenor; Russakoff's Ballet.

The following story is being recounted about Harry Campbell, manager of the Fox exchange in Boston: The yarn starts with the return of Harry from a fishing trip into New Hampshire. He was trolling for pickerel and he caught a fish-hawk. The bird saw the glittering spoon, thought it was a fish and plunged into the water after it. The hooks caught the hawk's claws and Harry hauled in his prize. He is having it mounted to add to his collection of trophies.

Dennis Shea, newly appointed manager of the Park Theatre in Boston, announces that the opening will take place on November 24. The Park now is being remodeled and otherwise improved. It recently was acquired from the late Lotta Crabtree by A. L. Erlanger.

Patrons in four Lawrence theatres on election night were dismissed when fire damaged a four-story building in the same vicinity. Water seeped into the Modern Theatre and caused a great deal of damage.

The Union Square Theatre in Pittsfield, which has housed a stock company for a number of months, closed on November 8. The future policy is undecided.

Jacob Fracht, violinist, was an added attraction at the Capitol Theatre in Springfield the week of November 3. "Three Women" was the feature. Abraham Goodside, operator of the Capitol and Bijou, is giving his Springfield patrons all of the big ones this season. For instance, at the Bijou the week of November 9 was "Abraham Lincoln."

We've promised a visit in the near future to George R. Warren, manager of the Broadway Theatre in Chelsea. He very courteously obliged ye scribe with some information and we are deeply indebted to him for the same.

Show business fell off sharply around Massachusetts the week before election, but a good gain generally occurred throughout the week of November 3.

Cincinnati

Louis F. Leslie, district manager and treasurer of the Levy circuit of picture houses in Cincinnati, died at the Good Samaritan Hospital following an operation. Leslie, who was 64 years of age, leaves a widow and two brothers.

The Play-Reviewing Committee of the Cincinnati Better Motion Picture Council has publicly endorsed the following pictures, all of which were recently shown in first-run houses here: "The Silent Watcher," "Hot Water," "Welcome Stranger," "The Bandolero" and "Dangerous Money."

In honor of the 70th birthday of John Philip Sousa, Manager J. L. Weed of Keith's Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, had the picture of the eminent band leader thrown on the screen, while the orchestra played his famous composition, "Stars and Stripes Forever."

General Manager I. Libson of the Capitol Theatre, Cincinnati, announces that he has engaged Virgino Marucci, formerly violinist with Hugo Rosenfeld's Strand Theatre orchestra in New York City.

George Pador, Cleveland, Ohio, is erecting a picture theatre and office building on Lorain avenue to cost $75,000.

Six Western Pennsylvania Houses Opened November 10

Monday, November 10, evidently was "Theatre Opening Day" in the Western Pennsylvania territory, as no less than six picture theatres in this section were opened to the public on that day. The Majestic at Butler, recently taken over by the Harris Amusement Company of Pittsburgh and entirely redecorated, was reopened on this day with "The Covered Wagon." M. M. Weir, formerly of the Rialto at Charleston, is manager.

Ben Burke opened the old Opera House at New Castle and rechristened it the Capitol. The house has also been extensively remodeled, and $20,000 was spent in building the lobby alone. J. George Schradel, at one time editor of Rowland and Clark's "Film Forecast," is publicity director.

Arthur Gottesman, who purchased the old Capitol at Washington, reopened the house on November 10 and has renamed it the State. This house also has been considerably improved and is one of the finest picture palaces in the local territory.

Another remodeled picture theatre, the Grand at Springdale, was reopened on this day.

Two new theatres that opened their doors on November 10 were the Main Theatre at Meyersdale and the Pastime Theatre at Ramey.

Mark Browar, who is enlarging and remodeling his Kenyon Theatre on the North Side, states that he had hoped to have the house ready for opening by Thanksgiving, but according to the present looks of things it is hardly likely that the workmen will have completed their jobs before the middle of December. The Kenyon will seat 2,000 when completed.

Harry Meyers, who has been active in the local film field, both as exchangeman and exhibitor, the past few years, is back again after a long vacation trip to California, and is now managing Pete Antonoplos' recently-acquired Strand Theatre on the South Side.

Harry H. Petz, for seventeen years an exhibitor in the local territory, will shortly reopen his theatre at Youngwood which has been closed for alterations since August 15.

William W. Clark has resigned as manager of the Rivoli in East Pittsburgh. Mr. Clark took hold of the house three years ago when it was considered the sourest kind of a lemon. The house is now one of the best payers in the territory. He has made no future plans, but says that no doubt he'll be back on the job sooner or later at the helm of a good-sized picture theatre in Western Pennsylvania. I. Golden, owner of the Rivoli, will take care of the management of the house himself, for the present at least.

Ike Browarsky of the Browarsky Brothers, owners of the Associated Theatres, is back again at his duties after having been confined to his home for several days suffering from a severe attack of lumbago.

S. Chamberlain is building a new picture theatre in Johnstown, which he expects to open about the first of the year. The house will seat 600. The newcomer to this territory is a brother of Boyd Chamberlain, who controls a chain of theatres in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

St. Louis

Residents of Gillespie, Ill., are expecting some great things of Joseph J. Greene, new manager of the Pert Theatre in that city. Greene is an experienced showman and knows the picture game from all angles. He has purchased a half interest in the theatre. Prior to coming to Gillespie he was manager for years of the New Douglas Theatre on 142nd street in New York. At other times he served as manager and sales director of the Philadelphia office of Triangle Pictures, salesman for Vitagraph at Washington and special representative for Wid Gunning Pictures Corporation. At one time he managed the Chestnut Street Opera House in Sunbury, Pa.

Fire destroyed the Yale Theatre in Shelbyville, Ill., according to advices from that city. It is stated that the house was burned to the ground. Details are lacking.

Yazoo City, Miss., is to have a new $65,000 picture house. Bids were taken on the project November 6 by the owner, Mrs. J. B. Devota. The plans were prepared by T. C. Harvey, architect, Greenville, Ill.

A. H. Blank plans to build a new theatre in Marshalltown, Ia. The plans are in charge of Vorse, Kraetsch & Kraetsche, Des Moines, Ia.

The new board of arbitration of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade assumed its duties the past week. The members are: A. E. Alperson, Universal; J. Banke, Vitagraph, and Bill Barron, United Artists, for the exchanges, and Joe Mogler, Oscar Lehr and W. O. Reeves for the exhibitors. The board will serve for three months.

The American Theatre at Charleston, Mo., is once more under the management of O. W. McCutcheon.

Visitors of the week were: Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; S. E. Pertle, Jerseyville, Ill.; O. W. McCutcheon, Charleston, Mo., and Mrs. C. E. Killy, Hannibal, Mo.

Detroit

George W. Trendle, general manager of the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, has returned from Chicago where he was conferring several days with Messrs. Balaban & Katz, the Chicago firm that recently bought into the Kunsky theatres here.

Charles H. Miles announces that while the policies of his Ferry Field and Orpheum theatres have been changed to "split weeks," his Regent and Miles will continue on their full week stands as usual.

Detroit motion picture interests are taking a pardonable pride in the influence they brought to bear in electing John W. Smith mayor of Detroit at the election last week. A friend of the industry in censorship moves, Smith found the theatre owners solidly back of his throughout his campaign.

New Chicago Capitol Opens in January, Cooney Reports

B. J. Cooney, secretary of the National Theatres Corporation, reports that the new Capitol Theatre being erected by the new pany on Halsted near 79 street, Chicago, will be ready for opening about the first of the year. The new house will seat 3,000 and will show pictures and presentations. An orchestra of thirty is planned by the management.

Recently the company bought a plot 175 by 125 on 79th street, between Stony Island and East End avenue, and it is planned to build a 2,500-seat movie theatre there. The work will begin about February 1 and will be pushed to completion by fall of next year. The National Theatres Corporation is confining its activities to the South Side and at present operates the Stratford, Chatham and Hamilton. J. J. Cooney is president of the company and his brother, B. J. Cooney, is secretary and treasurer. When the new houses are completed they will have five theatres in their group in some of the best locations on the South Side.

The management of the State Lake Theatre, Chicago, is erecting one of the largest electric signs in the country in front of the house on State street. The sign will be 92 feet high, 17 feet broad and cost $30,000. Prizes are being offered to the patrons who guess the correct number of electric bulbs that will be used.

Ferdinand W. Peck, pioneer citizen, died last week after an extended illness. He was the head of the original company that built the Auditorium Theatre and other amusement places in Chicago, and was 76 years of age.

Managing Director Joseph Hopp reports the following new members secured for the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners during last week: Mike Gerib, Orpheum Theatre, Westville; Walter Gerib, Eagle Theatre, Westville; Gus. T. Freeman, Princess Theatre, Urbana; Dr. A. B. Simpkins, Bijou Theatre, Abingdon; W. J. Fluegel, Capital and Empire theatres, Pekin, and James A. Merrill, Princess Theatre, Rock Island.

Dr. Herman N. Bundeson, Chicago health commissioner, in addressing more than 100 managers and theatre owners at Ridge Hall, told his auditors they would have his fullest co-operation in placing their houses in an absolutely sanitary condition. He further said that when any of his ten plain-clothes officers found that his rules on sanitation were being ignored in any theatre it would be summarily closed. Dr. Bundeson also assured his hearers that he would fight any movement to close the picture theatre because of light disease epidemics.

"The Iron Horse" opened last week at the Woods Theatre to a capacity house and Clyde Eckhart came out from New York to witness the premiere here. H. Elliott Stuckel is general manager for the company and J. L. McCurdy, formerly manager of the Randolph Theatre, has been named as business manager. Howard Herrick is general representative and Erno Rapee has charge of the musical program.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer report that their palatial new Diversey Theatre is now under roof and will be ready to open some time in March. It will be one of the finest film palaces on the entire North Side.

Manager Abe Kohn of the Monroe Theatre held "Dante's Inferno" over for a second week's run and reports a banner business during Election Week.

John H. Ferris, pioneer business man and exhibitor of Chicago, died at his home here after an extended illness. He was 76 years old and operated the Boston Theatre at Madison near Dearborn for many years, recently selling out and retiring from the business.

Edward M. Duffey has bought the Edinburg Theatre at Edinburg, Ill., and will improve the house, which will show pictures exclusively.

The Cameo Theatre at Milwaukee avenue and Ogden is under new management and featuring first-run pictures.

C. H. Miller has been made president of the Sterling Theatre Company, recently organized at Sterling, Ill. The same firm owns the Park Theatre at Evanston, Ill.

Walter D. Nealand has resigned as manager of the Fischer theatres at Madison and is back in Chicago to make new connections.

The Kozy Theatre, the last house of the John R. Thompson chain of theatres, and for years a landmark in the Loop, has been sold to the Selig circuit, who will continue the picture policy of the house. George Madison, manager for Thompson for fifteen years, will take up other duties in the near future.

Lubliner & Trinz has a syncopation week billed for their leading North Side house, the Pantheon, and a carnival week for their big West Side house, the Senate, where they recently spent many thousands of dollars installing a new stage to handle the largest musical acts and presentations.

Texas

A new $25,000 theatre will be built by Mrs. V. A. King at Greenville, Texas., to replace the old Colonial, destroyed by fire recently.

The San Angelo Amusement Company has purchased a lot in San Angelo, Texas, and will build an up-to-date theatre on the site in the near future. This will seat 1,000 and cost about $40,000.

P. V. Williams has placed a new organ in his theatre at Munday, Texas.

J. R. Kersey has reopened the Majestic Theatre at Ozona, Texas.

S. Bertram and J. H. Thiesen have opened their new theatre at Cainesville, Texas. The new house seats 350.

The Wallace Theatre at Ropesville, Texas, has changed from a one-day stand to three times a week.

Grover Campbell has purchased the Liberty Theatre at Sanger, Texas.

Morris Clemmens, new manager of the Tivoli Theatre at Beaumont, Texas, is renovating the house.

The Kozy Theatre at Downing has been opened under the management of Julius St. Clair. Barbee and Gamble own the house.

The Irving Theatre Company on Irving Park boulevard has reduced the number of directors of the house from five to three.

The many friends of William Stewart of the State Lake Theatre will be sorry to hear of his sudden death during a performance at the house.

C. W. McDaniel, formerly business manager of the Grand Theatre, has gone to South Bend to take over the management of the Oliver Theatre in that city. He will succeed C. F. Lawrence, who has gone to Milwaukee to take over the direction of the Modjeska Theatre.

Many Changes in Personnel of Tacoma Theatre Company

Numerous changes in the personnel of the Moore Amusement Company, Tacoma, have taken place during the month. G. C. Greenlund, formerly with John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, is manager of the Rialto, succeeding Al Raleigh, resigned. W. H. Storey, formerly with Dolan & Ripley in Hoquiam, Wash., is manager of the Colonial. J. W. Houck, former manager of the Colonial, has gone to Minneapolis to manage Finkelstein & Ruben's Lagoon Theatre. Miss Jacobson, former auditor, has moved to California. J. W. Webster, formerly of Billings, Mont., has succeeded her. Miss Hester Stayner, formerly organist at the Clemmer, Spokane, where she has been solo organist for three years, took up her duties as head organist at the Tacoma Rialto on November 1, replacing Miss Piercy, who has accepted a position in California.

Manager Storey had an excellent lobby on "The Alaskan" at the Colonial, Tacoma, for a week's engagement. A solid border the depth of a 24-sheet formed a frieze over the marque, out to the curbing. On this were painted scenes from the picture. Lobby doors were covered with more scenes, imparting to the entire display a real outdoor flavor.

Tacoma is preparing to invade Seattle over 100 strong on November 11 for the "The Theatrical Pot Pourri of 1924," staged in honor of the Washington M. P. T. O. convention. Bob McKinnell of the Rose and Paramount and E. Smitzer of the Palace are in charge or arrangements to charter a special interurban electric train to take the Tacoma crowd over. The car will leave Tacoma at 10 o'clock, returning in the wee sma' hours of Wednesday morning. Ned Edris is preparing to take his entire staff from the Blue Mouse over for the show.

Suburban Portland continues its building activities. Mr. McCurtain has a new house in the Irvington district on the East Side, opened within the past thirty days. It seats 650. Mr. McCurtain was formerly secretary of the Film Board of Trade. Mr. Uptegraph also has a 650-seat house on the East Side. He has named it the Roseway. Robert Marsden's new ideal on Nob Hill will be ready to open about January 1. The Multnomah Theatres Company has started construction of a new type theatre to be called the Venitian. It will follow its type as closely as the Granada, Egyptian and Bob White, all erected for this company in less than two years. The Venitian will be owned by Mr. McCredie. It will open Christmas day.

George Hunt's new Craterian in Medford, Ore., opened late in October. It is a 1,200-seat house, beautiful in its appointments. It gets its name from Crater Lake.

Construction is well under way on Dodge & Baker's new house in Myrtle Point, Ore. It will seat 750 and be ready for its opening in about six weeks.

Fred Walton of the Bellingham Theatres Company, Inc., is on his way to Los Angeles. While there he will get a few ideas for the company's contemplated theatre, plans on which are expected to shape up nicely by the first of the year. Fred says it will be the "Last Word." Better give it a feminine name, then, Fred.

Frank Edwards and George Herpick are rapidly forging to the front as theatre owners in Seattle. First it was the Winter Garden, a high-class, 10-cent, first-run house in the downtown district, whose standards they have maintained and whose success is conceded even by those who jeered when the undertaking was begun. They next purchased the Portola in West Seattle, placing it in charge of Billy Hartford, a live-wire manager. The house was thoroughly renovated and a big pipe organ installed. Last week this company assumed the management of the New Mission Theatre, Georgetown, and this week "everybody is saying" they have taken over a new theatre now under construction at 23rd and Madison in the suburban field. In addition, a crew of workmen is busy remodeling the building front of the Winter Garden.

C. E. Connell's new house in Aberdeen, Wash., will be open by the middle of November.

Thomas G. Bligh, hotel and theatre owner of Salem, Ore., and J. C. Davis, a carpenter in his employ, were killed on the highway near New Grange Ronde, seventeen miles west of McMinville, when the automobile in which they were riding skidded off the road and overturned. Mr. Bligh was one of the oldest exhibitors in the state of Oregon. He owned the Liberty and Bligh, and the Bligh Hotel. His son, Frank, manager of the Liberty, will be able to carry on the management of the houses. Mr. Bligh was a well known and well beloved character. His death is mourned by hosts of friends throughout the state.

Le Roy Johnson of the Seattle Liberty held a midnight matinee on November 4 to a capacity audience who heard the election returns as fast as they came in and were entertained during the process of waiting.

John Danz will soon be able to announce a definite opening date, judging from the manner in which the new Capitol is shaping up during the past two weeks.

San Francisco

The seventh anniversary celebration of the California Theatre went over with a bang and the program arranged by Manager Nat Holt will be talked about for many a day. Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams were received from exhibitors, producers and stars from all parts of the country, attesting the high regard with which this house is held, and these were displayed in the lobby during the week on two great bulletin boards. Local film exchanges sent floral offerings, so that the house took on the aspect of a formal opening. A feature of the program was the flashing of a few scenes from "The Woman God Forgot," the feature with which the house was opened seven years ago, a production considered a masterpiece of art at that time. Charles Kurtzmann, director of publicity for the California, worked for weeks in advance on special publicity stunts for the anniversary week and brought out a souvenir program that was greatly admired.

Fred Dahnken, Jr., formerly president of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, whose holdings were taken over last year by West Coast Theatres, Inc., returned recently from New York, where he spent the summer.

The San Francisco and San Mateo Amusement Company has been launched with a capital of $1,000,000, for the building and purchase of picture theatres in the Greater San Francisco field. Theatres are now in course of construction in Oakland and San Mateo and a large house will be erected in San Francisco. Those interested in the concern are Max Blumenfeld, S. K. Herzog, E. S. Rake, Samuel Raphael and Ben Anixter.

The Casino Theatre will be opened December 5 as a combination vaudeville and picture theatre under the direction of James Beatty.

The Victoria Theatre on Sutter street has been taken over by Mrs. Muir, who conducts the Class A Theatre, and is being remodeled before being reopened as a picture house.

Frank Cassidy, general manager for George Mann, returned to his San Francisco headquarters recently from a tour of inspection of the houses conducted at Eureka, Ukiah and Klamath Falls.

Robert Wood, who operates the Empress Theatre on Church street, has taken over the Crown Theatre at Union and Fillmore streets.

Robert Harvey has been placed in temporary charge of the U. C. Theatre, Berkeley, Cal., pending the appointment of a permanent manager. This theatre is to be closed at an early date for remodeling, redecorating and the installation of a new ventilating system. It is planned to transfer Mr. Harvey to the San Francisco headquarters of West Coast Theatres, Inc., of Northern California, to assist Frank Whitbeck in publicity work, as soon as a manager is selected for the U. C. Theatre.

The State Theatre, Oakland, Cal., has been remodeled and redecorated and a new ventilating system installed.

Work has been commenced on the construction of a picture house at Burlingame, Cal., seating 2,000. It is being built for Ellis J. Arkush, owner of a string of theatres on the peninsula, and will be managed by Ray Kelsall, manager of the Garden Theatre.

Work is well under way on the new theatre of Leslie Hables at King City, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Hables were recent visitors at San Francisco to make purchases of equipment for the new house.

Lawrence Borg, manager of the Varsity Theatre, Berkeley, Cal., has sold his realty holdings at Allston Way and San Pablo avenue to Oakland interests. He built upon the property a year ago, reserving space at the rear for a large theatre, but with the sale by him of a half interest in the Varsity Theatre to the Golden State Realty Company he has given up plans for the building of a theatre in the block.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

Send tips to help others. This is your department, run for you and maintained by your good-will.

Associated Exhibitors

NEVER SAY DIE. (5,891 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. Fairly good picture, but not as good as some of his others. However, he is always good, so don't worry if you have it bought. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Middle class, city of 23,125. Admission 10-30. W. G. Enloe, Bijou Theatre (450 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

YANKEE CONSUL. (6,148 feet). Star, Douglas MacLean. Pretty good entertainment. Starts rather slow, but finishes with a bang. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

F. B. O.

AMERICAN MANNERS. (5,200 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. This is a whiz for action, and that is what the majority seem to crave. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, yes. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25, special, 25-50. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN. (6,315 feet). Star cast. Very good picture. Had several say so and I believe they meant it. It was something different, so I would say run it. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Small town and farmer class, town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

DANGEROUS COWARD. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. Although a rodeo and a prize fight are featured in this one, the suspense was not as keen as in "The Silent Stranger" or "North of Nevada." Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 15-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

DANGEROUS COWARD. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. A real picture with plenty of action. Thomson sure cuts loose in this one. Good attendance. Tone okay. Sunday, no. General class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

DANGEROUS COWARD. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thompson. No use to report on this star. I will agree with all reports sent in by any other exhibitor. Print new. Tone, none. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST. (6,500 feet). Star cast. The best picture I have seen this year. Will do for anybody's house, and a real cast. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Working class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-20. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (178 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

HIS FORGOTTEN WIFE. (6,500 feet). Star, Madge Bellamy. A real picture, sold at a real price. What more can you ask? Print new. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

ON TIME. Star, Richard Talmadge. A pleasing comedy drama with thrills and action galore. Should please any type of patronage. Film in perfect condition as usual from this exchange. Tone, none. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre (298 seats), Baltimore, Maryland.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (8,312 feet). Star, Johnny Walker. This is a whiz. Will please as near one hundred per cent as any picture. Buy it. Step on the gas; get your lobby decorated with red, white and blue bunting and prepare to collect the coin. Tone fine. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Small town class, town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

THERE'S MILLIONS IN IT. (6 reels). Star cast. Title does not draw, although is a pair picture. If you have not bought this one leave it alone. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, none. Small town class, town of 300. Admission, 10-25, specials 25-50. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

UNKNOWN PURPLE. (6,950 feet). Star cast. This was run against strong counter attraction and perhaps for this reason didn't show up so well at the box office, but the consensus of opinion of patrons was that it was a very good picture. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

WEST BOUND LIMITED. Star, Ralph Lewis. A little late in showing this feature, but it's a picture from every standpoint. Lewis does good work. Big crowd. Pleased 100 per cent. All classes, town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

WHEN LOVE COMES. Star cast. This picture is a good program picture. Ninety per cent of the audience said it was good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

WOMAN WHO SINNED. (6,500 feet). Star, Mae Busch. Truly a sermon in pictures and the best one ever given. This picture should be shown everywhere. It will convince the doubting Thomases that some good can come of the screen. It will please. It will simply knock them for a home run. Get it, boost it. You will never regret it. Tone, best ever. Sunday, indeed. Fine audience appeal. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

First National

BRASS BOTTLE. (5,290 feet). Star cast. People went out wondering what it was all about. Very disappointing picture both for exhibitor and patron. Should never have been released. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

BRAWN OF THE NORTH. (7,650 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). This is a wonderful story of the north, and that dog, O boy! he is sure good. Tone, okay. Sunday, fair. Good audience appeal. Farmers and small town class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

DADDY. (5,738 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Think this is the best one yet of Jackie's. Gets the crowds all right, young and old. They all like him here. Pleased everybody. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Great audience appeal. All classes, town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

DANGEROUS MAID. 7,337 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. Oh, how they did pan this one. I shall not quote any opinions. I simply want to forget it all; the losses and everything. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE. (7,120 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A good picture, but a little slow in action. Pleased about 60 per cent. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. General class, town of 3,480. Admission 10-15-25. L. Miller, Grand Theatre (450 seats), Bay City, Texas.

FLAMING YOUTH. (8,474 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. A good picture, but too much sex stuff for older people. Young people like it very much. Tone, good. Sunday, no. General class, town of 2,000. Admission 5-10-20. A. S. Carlos, Bijou Theatre (300 seats), Jeanerette, Louisiana.

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

FLIRTING WITH LOVE. (7 reels). Star, Colleen Moore. This is a very good picture, above the average, and seemed to please my patrons. It is worth boosting. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, 90 per cent. Mixed class, city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Interesting and fairly well done story. Nothing about it much to attract a great deal of business. Anna Q. Nilsson, always a finished actress, did not register as an unsophisticated girl of the West. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. General class, city of 15,000. Admission 10-40. Ben. L. Morris, Temple and Olympic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

GALLOPING FISH. (6 reels). Star cast. This was sold to me as a comedy drama, but there is nothing in it that strikes me as funny. To my way of thinking it is nothing but a lot of silly slap-stick that one finds in cheap one-reel comedies. Look before you book, my advice. Moral tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal here. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

HER REPUTATION. (7 reels). Star, May McAvoy. I knew this picture was good from reports on same, but title held back lots of people. Tone good. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. General class, town of 2,000. Admission 5-10-20. A. S. Carlos, Bijou Theatre (300 seats), Jeanerette, Louisiana.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (6,723 feet). Star cast. Another good comedy drama from First National. A good picture to book. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre, Mayfield, California.

HUNTRESS. (6,236 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. An old one. All said they liked it better than "Wanderer of Wasteland," played following this. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class, town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

IN HOLLYWOOD WITH POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (6,700 feet). Star cast. Boys, this is a real comedy. My patrons went wild. It was a riot here and will be a riot everywhere. If you want my tip grab this one. The fifty-fifty partners will even make you laugh. A great Sunday picture. Robert Elliane, Palace Theatre (1307 seats), Norwich, Connecticut.

LILIES OF THE FIELD. (8,000 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Certainly a mighty fine picture that pleased my people to a nicety. Darn hard to beat First National for real pictures, and they are real folks to deal with in the Oklahoma City Exchange. They give it to you and make you feel welcome. Strain a point to accommodate you. Sunday, yes. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

LILIES OF THE FIELD. (8,000 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. An excellent picture that was played in the face of the "Covered Wagon" and netted us a profit. This is the best work of Miss Griffith's career and she deserves credit for such perfect acting. The picture carries a good lesson without losing interest, and although the production is nine reels long some of the patrons complained at it being "too short." Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, 100 percent. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

So far, nothing has come in on Trailers, in answer to friend Martin.

But it takes time for the magazine to get to the exhibitors, and more time for letters to come back to me, so I haven't got scared for fear you won't answer Mr. Martin.

Come in with your ideas, fellows, and let's have your ideas on the queries concerning Trailers.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). Would rate this the best of the Strongheart pictures, although the story is somewhat improbable, especially where the hero, after being knocked cold, wins the dog race with three dogs against a field with six dogs to the sled and a big start. Nevertheless the kids enjoyed it greatly and the grownups seemed real excited about it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. General audience appeal. Rural class, town of 300. Admission 10-30. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). Our patrons liked it, but business was light. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, high. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grant Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

LORNA DOONE. (6,083 feet). Star, Madge Bellamy. One of the old, old stories, but very, very good. Tone, very good. Sunday, fine. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and small town class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,507 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Fine picture with superb acting by Sills and his supporting cast. Business was good and picture pleased. Fine for Sunday. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD. (6,500 feet). Star, Bert Lytell. This print was in bad condition. The stars are not at their best in this picture. Fair attendance. General class, town of 3,480. Admission 10-15-25. L. Miller, Grant Theatre (450 seats), Bay City, Texas.

PENROD AND SAM. (6,275 feet). Star, Ben Alexander. Pleased 'em all, as no kicks were heard and they all went out smiling. What more can we ask for? Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 15-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Business good. Picture good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal unusually good. All classes, city of 91,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O. Kimmer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7,000 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Listen, this "Perfect Flapper" was a perfect picture also. Colleen is without a doubt the big it in this burg, we believe. This is the best picture she has ever appeared in. Grab it. It has a wallop in it. Just lots of common sense. It is the kind that is doing the good. Tone, extra good. Sunday, yes. Best audience appeal.. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission, 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

ROSE OF THE SEA. Star, Anita Stewart. A good Anita Stewart production. A dandy where she is as popular as with us. Tone, okay. Sunday, fine. Fair audience appeal. Farmers and small town class, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

SEA HAWK. (12,045 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Certainly a wonderful picture, with everything in it to please. You can knock 'em over at advanced prices. It is as big as anything ever produced and is bound to please. Milton Sills does wonderful acting, as do all the others. It is a story that means something. Not just another picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, extra good. Best class, city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

SELF MADE FAILURE. (7,345 feet). Star cast. Supposed to contain lots of comedy, but my audience failed to see it. Just an ordinary comedy drama with a few amusing incidents. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, 60 per cent. Mixed class, city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SINGLE WIVES. (7,626 feet). Star, Corrinne Griffith. A fair picture of society. Story of a neglected wife. Good attendance. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. General class, town of 3,700. Admission, 10-25. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (797 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

SONG OF LOVE. (8,000 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. Proved generally satisfactory as far as those who came were concerned, but registered lightly at box office. For some reason Norma seems to be slipping here. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. Better class, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SONNY. (6,900 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A dandy picture that received many good comments. Tone, okay. Sunday, good. Fine audience appeal. Farmers, town of 800. Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

THUNDERGATE. (6,505 feet). Star cast. This was considered a poor picture by those who saw it and those that stayed away must have known what was in store for them. That type of story was long since overdone. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

TROUBLE. (4,800 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. This one sure hit them all square. They all thought that Jackie was all right. Tone, okay. Sunday, fair. Good audience appeal. Farmers and small town class, town of 800.

Season 1924-1925—Thirty First-Run Pictures

Admission 10-25. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

TWENTY-ONE. (6,560 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Although this picture pleased, still I think they would rather see him in such roles as he took in "Tolable David." However, this picture is very good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. This is a delightful comedy drama. Should please adults especially well, as it deals with home life. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

Fox

BIG DAN. (5,834 feet). Star, Charles Buck Jones. Jones fans liked this one. So did every other fan. A good program picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DOES IT PAY? (6,652 feet). Star, Hope Hampton. To the question asked by the title I must unhesitatingly answer no. It doesn't pay to run such stuff. The public just pronounced it junk. Now, if such a picture is a special, then what is a program picture? Less than half a dozen of such shows at such prices would close any house. Why, oh, why release them? City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

KENTUCKY DAYS. (5 reels). Star cast. A good Farnum offering. No complaints. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LAST OF THE DUANES. Star, Tom Mix. This is the best thing Mix has been in this season so far. This is an exceedingly good western story by Zane Grey and should be a good bet where Mix is liked. Tone, okey. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal 100 per cent. May warrant extra advertising in some localities. Suburban class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

ST. ELMO. (6 reels). Star, John Gilbert. A program picture sold as a special. Could have picked a score of program shows for a third of the price of this one and done better. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

SHEPHERD KING. (8,500 feet). Star cast. A good Sunday picture for church tie-up. Big stuff, but slow and too long for average crowd. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

TROUBLE SHOOTER. (5,702 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Very good picture, with Tom Mix at his old stunts. About all the action is based on a land grabbing race to a recorder's office. Has lots of action and some big laughs. Pleased all. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. General class, city of 15,000. Admission 10-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

WARRENS OF VIRGINIA. Star, Martha Mansfield. A romance of Civil War days, pretty well done, with some excellent scenes. This is the picture in which Martha Mansfield lost her life. She is not mentioned in the advertising or the cast. Sunday, good. Good audience appeal. General class, city of 15,000. Admission 10-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

Metro-Goldwyn

ALONG CAME RUTH. (5,000 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Only medium. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes, city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

BROKEN BARRIERS. (5,717 feet). Star cast. These Metro-Goldwyn pictures are sure pleasing and our patrons are telling us that they like Metro-Goldwyn and so do we. This company did not hold us up. "Broken Barriers" is a knockout. All classes, Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

BROKEN CHAINS. (6,190 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. This is what I call a good picture. Lots of action and good acting, and the star takes well here. Big house. Pleased 95 per cent. Tone, good Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes, town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

DON'T DOUBT YOUR HUSBAND. (5,510 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Very good, indeed. Lots of real cute comedy in this one. Miss Dana does some splendid acting as a jealous wife. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

EAGLE'S FEATHER. (6,500 feet.) Star, James Kirkwood. A pretty good picture, but advertising leads one to believe it is western or Indian story and disappoints those who like that kind and keeps out those who would like it if they had known. Sunday, yes. Poor audience appeal. General class, city of 15,000. Admission 10-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olympic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

ENEMIES OF WOMEN. (10,901 feet). Star cast. Better than the average feature. Everyone well satisfied. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10,000 feet). Star cast. Another good one from Goldwyn. We were a little late playing it, but did fair business. Middle class, city of 23,125. Admission 10-30. W. G. Enloe, Bijou Theatre (450 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

HEARTS AFLAME. (8.110 feet). Star, Anna Q. Nilsson. A good picture that pleased all around. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennslyvania.

IN THE PALACE OF THE KING. (9,000 feet). Star cast. A 95 per cent. picture here, although it was not all included (it calls for nine reels, but came on eight and made only about seven). Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK. (10,000 feet). Star, Marion Davies. Here is a worth while production that, bought reasonably, should help to keep us open. The comments were very favorable and everybody was pleased. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,210 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A very good feature. Many humorous situations. The rental too high for this small town. No more bookings for me unless I can get pictures at prices suitable for the size of this town. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

ONE NIGHT IN ROME. (5,883 feet). Star cast. Fair. The name Rome kept a few away. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. All classes, city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

ONE NIGHT IN ROME. (5,883 feet). Star, Laurette Taylor. Very good indeed. We received lots of nice compliments, but what good are these when the picture failed to draw. Business has fallen terribly since first of October. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

PLEASURE MAD. (7,547 feet). Star cast. Good; just a little spicy, but seems to be what the people want. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, good. All classes, city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

REJECTED WOMEN. (7,761 feet). Star, Alma Rubens. This one is altogether too long and dragged out. The action in some places is so slow that it becomes boresome. Should be cut down a couple of reels. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

RENDEZVOUS. (7 reels). Star, Conway Tearle. A very good picture for any house except feature houses. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

RENO. (7 reels). Star cast. This picture is unconvincing and it's artificiality prevents it from striking home. While it is interesting in spots its ending is unreal and farfetched. This artificiality defeats all claim of sincerity and logic. This is very regretable, as the first reels of picture are full of glorious promise. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

RENO. (7 reels). Star, Helen Chatwick. Held the interest of the audience throughout but cannot be classed as a really good picture, but only fair. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

REVELATION. (8,732 feet). Star, Viola Dana. This is a beautiful picture and went over fine. Viola is better than Nazimova was in the other "Revelation," I think. Maybe it's because I'm like Pop Jenkins. Viola is my woman, too. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

SECOND YOUTH. (6,169 feet). Star cast. Terrible. Lay off it. Middle class, city of 23,125. Admission 10-30. W. G. Enloe, Bijou Theatre (450 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

SHERLOCK, JR. (8,000 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. A scream. A record breaker. Don't miss this picture if you want a good comedy. Good attendance. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. General class, town of 3,700. Admission 10-25. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (797 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

First National's "So Big."

SINNERS IN SILK. (5,750 feet). Star, Conrad Nagel. Here is a picture that has punch, pep and thrills. Elinor Boardman and Adolphe Menjou, who support Nagle, are sure there with the goods and did good business against "Covered Wagon." All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

SOCIAL CODE. (5 reels). Star, Viola Dana. Good picture. Clever, very entertaining. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. General class, town of 2,000. Admission 5-10-20. A. S. Carlos, Bijou Theatre (300 seats), Jeanerette, Louisiana.

SOULS FOR SALE. (7,864 feet). Star cast. Better than "Hollywood" is all that can be said about this one. Fine print. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. All classes, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25, 20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

THREE WEEKS. (7,000 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. I can't account for this picture not drawing unless it was due to a revival going on. We absolutely did nothing in two nights, but no fault of the picture, as it was wonderful and the acting perfect. Possibly they thought the story too bad and stayed away. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

THREE WISE FOOLS. (6,946 feet). Star cast. A fair program picture. Nothing more. No one raved over it. Some said fair, some said no good. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Factory class, town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

TRILBY. (7,321 feet). Star, Andree Lafayette. A number of people had read the book and thought it a very good picture. The rest didn't know what it was all about and would have been much more interested in a good fist fight. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

WINE OF YOUTH. (6,600 feet). Star cast. This picture pleases 100 per cent. and did a good business. Price was right and we made a little money. These jazz pictures are just the thing at this time. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

Paramount

ADAM'S RIB. (9,526 feet). Star cast. Played this very late and the result was that in some of the houses it did fairly well, in others it flopped badly. The opinions naturally were divided, some calling it fair, others calling it tedious. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

ALASKAN. (6,736 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. This one opened to a record business and held up well for the entire week with gratifying reports. Special lobby display, distribution of book marks in public schools and through public library. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. All classes, city of 91,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O. Kimmer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

BEDROOM WINDOW. (4,500 feet). Star, May McAvoy. Very good program picture, full of deep mystery. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Tom Moore. A good, strong picture should appeal to any audience. Did not do so well on account of opposition. Not fault of picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. General class, town of 2,000. Admission 5-10-20. A. S. Carlos, Bijou Theatre (300 seats), Jeanerette, Louisiana.

BLUFF. (5,422 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. This is a picture which will appeal to the women, the last word of display of fashionable gowns and beautiful interiors. A Sam Wood production. It is the story of the struggle of a poor girl to obtain her ambition of success in life and to do so bluffs dear old New York in the most improved movie style. Antonio Moreno is splendid in support and Clarence Burton always good knave. Better than the average picture and will please. City and country class, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

ENEMY SEX. (7,861 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Sold to me at a cheap price. This picture proved better in every way than most of the specials I have used this year. It is the most entertaining little comedy drama I have seen in a long time. The star is good and the picture fits her. The advertising accessories are good. The title has pulling power. It is just the sort of picture that my patrons like. It proved a welcome relief from costume pictures and heavy dramas. Tone jazzy. Sunday, questionable. Good audience appeal. All classes in town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (425 seats), Graham, Texas.

EXCITERS. (5,939 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Lots of excitement in this one. A picture that went over well in our house. Agricultural class, town of 1,255. Admission 10-20. Cannon & Trescott, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Elsberry, Missouri.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star, Walter Hiers. It was a Paramount picture but it failed to bring them in. People here have found out that the word Paramount may not mean the best pictures. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

FAIR WEEK. (5 reels). Star cast. This is the kind of picture for the small town. They raved over it. Bought it without a split and a mortgage on the house. Tone fair. Sunday, no. Great audience appeal. All classes, town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. L. Lloyd, Colonial Theatre (400 seats), Post, Texas.

FAST SET. Star, Betty Compson. In "The Fast Set" a wife is seen cluttering up her home with all sorts of strange characters. In trying to clean his domestic hearth of such rubbish, especially of a notorious "great lover," the husband introduces at his wife's dinner party a strange woman. The point he makes in this startling manner produces the desired results. The wife's eyes are opened, the house is cleaned. "The Fast Set" is a William DeMille production, with Betty Compson, Rod LaRocque and Adolphe Menjou featured. William Noble, Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Picture pleased majority. Mixed class, town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House Theatre (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

LIGHT THAT FAILED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Another Swanson. As good as she ever made. Will please any audience. Name will draw considerably. Gloria is a good bet here. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is a good picture. The comedy part is very well done by Gloria and the picture entertains more universally than most of her pictures. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE. (6,337 feet). Star cast. Good program picture. Farnum and Wilson good. They sure made William Farnum over. Will please fairly well. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

MONTMARTRE. (7 reels). Star, Pola Negri. Another fine flop and one that Mr. Zukor should have left over in Germany where he found the thing. A crime to force this junk on exhibitors. Pola Negri always flops here, so why try and get the worst pictures she ever made only to make the flop a little floppier? L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

MORAL SINNER. (5,455 feet). Star, Dorothy Dalton. A very poor offering of a picture. Business poor. Tone poor. Sunday, no. Poor audience appeal. Mixed class, town of 2,000. Admission 10-25. J. W. Griffin, Scotland Theatre (500 seats), Laurinburg, North Carolina.

NOBODY'S MONEY. (5,587 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A very good picture that seemed to go over nicely. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Neighborhood class, town of 4,200. Admission 10-20. W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre (500 seats), Aberdeen, Mississippi.

OPEN ALL NIGHT. (5,671 feet). Star, Viola Dana. This is a fair picture. Viola Dana is good and is always popular here. Menjou is also good, but his name don't amount to much here. The bicycle race, which is a goid part of the story, was considered rather tame. It is a good comedy but lots of people failed to get the comedy touches. I wonder why some enterprising director don't make something besides a Parisian or a costume picture for a change, and get his name inscribed in the Hall of Fame. Advertising accessories are okay. Tone okay. Sunday, okay. Fair audience appeal. All classes, town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (425 seats), Graham, Texas.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,261 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Thomas Meighan is a favorite in our town and this picture as usual pleased everyone. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Mixed class, town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House Theatre (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

PIED PIPER MALONE. (7,264 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Like all of Meighan's. Draws a house and pleases them all. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andrews Theatre, San Andrews, California.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Just as Meighan is losing in popularity so Swanson is gaining, and her pictures are good, one after the other. This picture pleased my people and I had many nice compliments on it. It's just made for the box office, and just as Miss Swanson said to Rod LaRoque in the last reel, "Let's give the public what they want," so they did in this one, and I hope she makes plenty more just like it. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Negri was good in this show, but it did not draw at all well in the face of a cheap western picture being played at the other house at ten cents. It is a mighty good program show. Tone fair. Fair audience appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

SPANISH DANCER. (8,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Very good. Has all that producer claims. Tone okay. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. Rural class, town of 250. J. J. Halley, San Andrews Theatre, San Andrews, California.

SALOMY JANE. (6,270 feet). Star cast. A very good western drama entertaining all way through. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Tourists town of 2,440. Admission 15-25. S. L. Taylor, Kozy Theatre (250 seats), Pass Christian, Mississippi.

SALOMY JANE. (6,270 feet). Star cast. From Bret Harte's story. A very good western picture. Should please the average fan, who loves the out-of-door drama. Tone, good. Fair audience appeal. General class town of 2,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Theatre (700 seats), Union, Maine.

SPANISH DANCER. (6,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. A well made picture, but my patrons don't like costume pictures, and they don't like Pola, so business way off. Tone, all right. Sunday, yes. Poor attendance. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

SPANISH DANCER. (6,434 feet). Star, Pola Negri. The picture is okay, but it did not draw for me. Paramount too high on Negri's for this town. The picture is wonderful, but a small town can't make money on it. Town and rural class town of 2,500. Admission 10-25. S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre (450 seats), Montpelier, Idaho.

STRANGER. (6,660 feet). Star Betty Compson. A very interesting feature to me, but it is rather slow moving. It is not a show for the jazz lovers. It is well acted and cast and is made up in the usual Paramount class. Tone, okay. Fair audience appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. For some unknown reason this picture failed to draw here. I personally think it is one fine picture, but I think the name helps to kill it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Average audience appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-25. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

UNGUARDED WOMEN. (6,051 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A good picture that pleased about seventy per cent of audience. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good attendance. General class town of 3,480. Admission 10-15-25. L. Miller, Grand Theatre (450 seats), Bay City, Texas.

UNGUARDED WOMEN. (6,051 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Will go big any house anywhere. Good plot, good acting and good scenes. Story centers about World War with one reel of battle scenes. They will like it if you get them in. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Mixed class, city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Sillman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star cast. A very poor Zane Grey story saved to some extent by coloring, which in spots is very good. Had very few favorable comments. Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

ZAZA. (7,076 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Very good feature. Splendid acting. Interesting story. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

by our High School. Tone, very good. Sunday, fine. Audience appeal, very good. Farmers and small town class town of 800. Admission 10-35. Helen Drexler, Star Theatre (195 seats), Grafton, Nebraska.

DANIEL BOONE. (Pathe). Star cast. This one is the best of the history series that I have run yet. There is little action in it and that is more than I can say for the others that I have run yet. These pictures are good fillers, but don't depend on them for your main feature. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Student and family class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettengil, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. This one is a record breaker. It plased one hundred per cent. Buy it if you can get it right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. A wonderful eight-reel entertainment spoiled by being an eight-reel ad for "crackerjack." It's a wonder no one has mentioned this. All ad, so can't cut it out. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. First one of Lloyd features, and it's proved to be a winner. Drew a good house and pleased one hundred per cent. What more could we ask? Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

WOLF AND MONTCALM. (Pathe). This is one of the Chronicles of American history, and like most of the series is rather dry and without much action. It follows the exact history very closely, but there is not attempt at a story. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, not much. Student and family class, town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. Geo. W. Pettingill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

Preferred

ARE YOU A FAILURE? (5,700 feet). Star cast. A fair program picture, that's all. Will get by as such. Not as a special. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

SHADOWS. (7,040 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. I personally think that this show was vastly overrated by the reviews and reports. It seemed cheaply melodramatic and unconvincing. Didn't pull excepting where Lon Chaney is a favorite. Total result for me disappointing. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

THORNS AND ORANGE BLOSSOMS. (6,971 feet). Star cast. Very hard to give any opinion about this one, as there wasn't enough left of it to judge intelligently. May have been passable where the print was in fair condition. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

VIRGINIAN. (8,010 feet). Star Kenneth Harlan. A western picture this is well acted. It is in eight reels with plenty of pep all the way. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica New York.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

ANOTHER SCANDAL. (8 reels). Star cast. Fine. Spicy, yes, but my patrons ate it up. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Great audience appeal. All classes city of 15,000. Admission 10-30. S. A. Hayman, Lyda Theatre (360 seats), Grand Island, Nebraska.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND. (5,000 feet). Star, Carlyle Blackwell. It may have been good when it was first made, but not much in it now. It came on six reels, but it only amounted to four. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Fair attendance. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25, 20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

CHALK MARKS. Star cast. Poorest picture and business getter we have had in five years. Donald Kick, Arcade Theatre, Morgantown, West Virginia.

HER OWN FREE WILL. Star cast. Not real good nor real bad. Just fair production. N. J. Dax, World Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa.

HOLD YOUR BREATH. (5 reels). Star cast. Very good picture. Better than "Safety Last." Pleasing to a good sized audience. F. B. Saly, Capital Theatre, Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER. (5,536 feet). Star cast. Good picture. Broke Wednesday house. record for program pictures in tie-up with schools. Local appeal. Good attendance. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. General class town of 3,700. Admisison 10-25. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (797 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

LIGHTNING RIDER. (6 reels). Star cast. Hope they keep on making them as good as this. Davis Walsh, Little Hippodrome Theatre, Buffalo, New York.

LOVE'S WHIRLPOOL. (6,028 feet). Star cast. Business poor, but picture good. M. Slotkin, Olympic Theatre, Erie, Pennsylvania.

MAN FROM GLENGARRY. (5,800 feet). Star cast. Very good. Well played. Pleased most the people. Film in fair condition. This is the first of a contract with these people. If following films are as good will be well satisfied. Dad Emmert, Emmert Theatre, Alcaster, South Dakota.

MIAMI. (6,317 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Not a big picture but the majority seemed pleased. Drew fairly well in some houses. Less so in others. Bought reasonably, should net a profit. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star, Harry Carey. These new Carey's are sure great. Best Saturday business for a long time. Theo. Coleman, American Theatre, Mt. Carmel, Illinois.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Take it from me, if you haven't bought this series, grab them quick. This is my third one, and they can't be beat I know. Dave Walsh, Little Hippodrome Theatre, Buffalo, New York.

TIGER THOMPSON. (5,700 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Good picture, but did not draw as it should. Harry Carey is too old to compete with younger stars. The women laugh at his love making pictures mostly. Yale Theatre, Muskogee, Oklahoma.

WANDERING HUSBANDS. (6 reels). Star cast. Very good picture. Pleased all my patrons. M. Slotkin, Olympic Theatre, Erie, Pennsylvania.

WANDERING HUSBANDS. (7 reels). Star, Milton Sills. A good domestic drama of a husband who, when the test came, proved his love for his wife. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, seventy per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Sillman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

WELCOME STRANGER. (6,618 feet). Star cast. Here is something different and as clean as a hound's tooth. Wonderful entertainment for all. Play it up big. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fine. Middle class city of 23,125. Admission 10-30. W. G. Enloe, Bijou Theatre (450 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

Selznick

FLAPPER WIVES. (7,000 feet). Star, Alice Lake. Better story than the title sounds. A drama of the north in which a girl finds herself. The dog "Strongheart" is as good in this as some of the pictures in which he is starred, though he is not mentioned in the cast or advertising. Sunday, okay. Audience appeal, good. General class city of 15,000. Admission 10-40. Ben L. Morris, Temple and Olmpic Theatres, Bellaire, Ohio.

LOVE IS AN AWFUL THING. (6,500 feet). Star, Owen Moore. Here is an old one but it semed to please better than some special and drew a good crowd, and the price was right. Tone, good. Sunday, good. Audience appeal, good. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

MISSING DAUGHTERS. Star cast. Another mighty fine picture. Thrills galore and action plenty. Good story, big scenes. Will stand exploiting. We liked it very much and so did the congregation, and they said so. Sunday, yes. Best audience appeal. Best class city of 10,000. Admission 10-20. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

RIGHT OF THE STRONGEST. Star, Elmo K. Lincoln. For a program picture this will surprise you the way it holds one to the edge of their seats. Much better fight than in new "Spoilers." Tone, good. Sunday, no. Good audience appeal. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

QUICKSANDS. (6,541 feet). Star cast. Fine western dandy picture. Cast good. Settings fine. One which took here and pleased ninety per cent. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, very good. All classes town of 1,000. A. E. Rogers, Temple Thtatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

RUPERT OF HENTZAU. (9,400 feet). Star cast. The acting, directing and settings for this picture was good, but our patrons didn't seem to like it. Pleased only twenty per cent. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, poor. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

United Artists

BIRTH OF A NATION. Star cast. Old, but brings them in just the same. Too much film rental for the small town exhibitor to get out with a whole skin, although I cover the country like a circus. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety-eight per cent. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25, specials 25-50. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

GARRISON'S FINISH. (8 reels). Star, Jack Pickford. A race track story in eight reels. A picture for the young, especially boys. Has a strong finish. Tone, good. Audience appeal, good for young folks. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

IRON TRAIL. (7 reels). Star cast. To those who like beautiful scenes this picture is full of them. It is a story of Alaska and contains a good story as well as many scenic wonders. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good audience appeal. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

MARK OF ZORRO. (7 reels). Star Douglas Fairbanks. A good story in eight reels. It will hold your audience to the last reel. Plenty of action all the way through. Enough outdoor scenes for those who like this style of picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Strong audience appeal. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING. (6 reels). Star, Mae Busch. Just seven reels of film wasted. Not suitable to show any time. Attendance no good. General class town of 3,480. Admission 10-15-25. L. Miller, Grand Theatre (450 seats), Bay City, Texas.

WAY DOWN EAST. (11 reels). Star cast. Real picture. Pleased one hundred per cent. Great picture. Went over big and couldn't handle crowds. United Artist has some real ones, and I have made money on them all. Tone, excellent. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. City and country class town of 2,000. Admission 10-25-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy Theatre (400 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

Universal

BACK TRAIL. (4,615 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A fairly good picture and went over pretty well. People here don't seem to like Hoxie because he is not an actor. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

BIG TIMBER. (4,650 feet). Star, William Desmond. Here is a good little picture that will please ninety per cent. of your patrons. Had good business against last day's showing on "Covered Wagon." All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

BROADWAY OR BUST. (5,272 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Hoot is sure dying here, and it's Universal's own fault. This popular western star would have been Tom Mix's only rival if Carle had put him in good western pictures and not boob stuff. Any other company would make a big star out of Hoot. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

JIMMY ADAMS
In the Educational-Christie comedy, "Why Worry?"

CLEAN UP. (5,051 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. This is a good clean picture. It pleased all who saw it, and prices are right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

GALLOPING ACE. (4,561 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. Just an ordinary western picture that in on respect was above loads of State Right stuff that could be bought for considerably less money. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

HIGH SPEED. (4,927 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. This one went over pretty well and the people were evidently satisfied. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

KENTUCKY DERBY. (5,388 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. I ran this picture before I booked it, and the prints I got some parts gone, but it pleased a good sized house, and got by all right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Very good audience appeal. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-20. A. E. Rogers, Temple Theatre (250 seats), Dexter, New York.

RIDERS UP. (4,914 feet). Star, Creighton Hale. Got by with this one. Was rated a fair picture of the program variety. Admissiin 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,509 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. I believe this is Hoot's best production. Plenty of action from beginning to end. Hoot does very clever acting, which got considerable applause from the audience. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, ninety per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SIGNAL TOWER. (6,714 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. This is a good picture, but is not the big super special that Universal claims for it. A good picture if you don't pay too much for it. We did. All classes. Paul L. Shew, Rivoli Theatre, Clinton, Indiana.

Warner Bros.

BEING RESPECTABLE. (7,500 feet). Star, Monte Blue. A good picture. An old love bobs up and disturbs a married man's happiness. Good attendance. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. General class town of 3,700. Admission 10-25. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (797 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

CONDUCTOR 1492. (6,500 feet). Star, Johnny Hines. This one brought them in old and young, and surely made them howl. While full of hokum the crowd here just ate it up. City 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

CONDUCTOR 1492. (6,500 feet). Star, Johnny Hines. Lay off this one, boys, if you want the roof to stay on your house. Positively the best comedy drama we have ever played, and it kept the house in an uproar from beginning to end. This picture ought to take anywhere, and the audience that won't enjoy it, well, such an audience can't be found. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, one hundred per cent. General class town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

CORNERED. Star, Marie Prevost. To our estimation, this is a picture that you can book, with a return date guarantee, and no mistake will be made in a return date proposition. Pleased one hundred per cent. Cast excellent. William Noble, Rialto Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

CORNERED. (7 reels). Star, Marie Prevost. A fair crook stork, with Marie Prevost in dual role. Raymond Hatton as the dope fiend and Cissy Fitzgerald did credit to their parts. Tone, not so good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. Mixed class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, JR. (6 reels). Star, Wesley Barry. People thought this an ordinary program picture with quite a literal admixture of hokum. It pleased the children and less discriminating elements, but the knowing ones just sat through it. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

YOUR BEST FRIEND. (5 reels). Star,

Vera Gordon. People here thought this picture rather mediocre, and attendance was below the average. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Comedies

AMONG THE MISSING. (Pathe). Ran this to close first show after "Girl Shy" feature, and worst one-reeler I ever saw. Spoiled the whole show for all. It's a "William Night minature." Tone, poor. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, terrible. Family and student class town of 4,000. Admision 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH. (Pathe). Star, Ben Turpin. A whale of a slapstick comedy with a couple of dogs that perform almost human. Action fast and furious that will keep the mlaughing. A fine comedy. Play it. Tone, good. Audience appeal, good. General class town of 1,200. Admisison, regular 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

COMMENCEMENT DAY. (Pathe). "Our Gang." All the "Gang" comedies are fine, and this one is well up to the standard. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Student and family class town of 7,500. Admission 10-20. George W. Pettingill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1,000 seats), St. Petersburg, Florida.

CRADLE ROBBERS. (Pathe). "Our Gang." The kids pull some clever stuff in this one. If the price you had to pay for these comedies depended on the laughs that they produce, you would be paying feature prices for these two-relers. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Fine audience appeal. Student and family class town of 7,500. Admisison 10-20. George W. Pettingill, Jr., Mirror Lake Theatre (800-1,000 seats), St. Peterburg, Florida.

DANDY LIONS. (Educational). Star, Neal Burns. This was a very poor Christie comedy in this house. It did not bring one genuine laugh during the showing of the two reels. A poor one. Tone, okay. Poor audience appeal. Better class town of 4,-500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

DETECTIVE. (F. B. O.). A little better than the average Pop Tuttle. Sunday, yes. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25, 20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DON'T HESITATE. (Educational). A fine single-reel comedy. Lots of action. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Serials

ADVENTURES OF TARZAN. (Midwest). Star, Elmo Lincoln. Attendance is good and is holding up. All who saw the first are still coming, and all seem to like it fine. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, good.

All classes town of 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valliant, Oklahoma.

IN THE DAYS OF '49. (Arrow). Star, Neva Gerber. This serial no better than the rest for us, as it did not draw any extra business during its entire run. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Fair audience appeal. Factory class town of 2,800. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LEATHERSTOCKING SERIES. (Pathe). Rather slow moving, and have so far having played three, aroused no appreciable interest. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Short Subjects

AS A MAN DREAMS. (Educational). This was a good scenic with some very beautiful shots in it. The print we had must have received some awful treatment from some ham operation. Tone, okay. Audience appeal, good for highbrows. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-15. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

Miscellaneous

AFTER SIX DAYS. (Weiss Brothers). Star cast. This is a massive production and attempts almost the impossible. It brought in a lot of new faces and pleased the church element immensely. Properly exploited it should have a good box office bet. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

CUPID'S BRAND. (State Right). Star, Jack Hoxie. This is a fair Hoxie, but not up to the standard of what the fans expect from this star. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, not much. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25, special 25-50. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

FIRE PATROL. (Chadwick Pictures). Star cast. A very good melodrama. Should please especially well where people like action. In fact, the picture opens with a thrilling incident. Story holds up well all the way through. Would advise all exhibitors to express the fact that it is not a story about city fire departments, but, on the contrary, a story dealing with the methods used at sea. Tone, is rather bad in a couple of places. Not suitable for Sunday. Suburban class town of 2,000. Admission 10-30. H. Warren Rible, Mayfield Theatre (210 seats), Mayfield, California.

HEART OF THE DESERT. (Rialto). Star cast. Fair program picture, nothing else. Tone is bad, as it shows the uniting of an Indian and a white girl. Sunday, yes. Fair attendance. All classes town of 2,800. Admission 15-25-20-30. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre (250 seats), Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LET'S GO. (Truart). Star cast. Just an ordinary program picture. Not bad. Just fair. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Fair audience appeal. Farmers, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

LET'S GO. (Truart). Star, Richard Talmadge. The crowd that likes this kind of stuff just went wild over it while the more discriminating ones either stayed away or dismissed it with a shrug. Very thin story. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

MIDNIGHT SHADOWS. (Progress) Star, Edmund Cobb. Book this picture, boys, and cut out your lights for one hour. Just give them a dark house. They will like that better than the picture. (Terrible.) Tone, saw none. Sunday, no. Audience appeal, none. Middle class city of 23,125. Admission 10-35. W. G. Enloe, Bijou Theatre (450 seats), Greenville, South Carolina.

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR. (Principal). Star, Dorothy Mackaill. A lost gold mine and a girl in love with a man of mystery. A superb picture with a superb girl. Dorothy Mackaill as the star, and a picture well worth seeing. Use this picture and you will make no mistake. William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

NONE SO BLIND. (Arrow). Star cast. (7,000 feet). Not a bad picture but of limited appeal here. Went rather poorly. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

PARTNERS OF THE SUNSET. (State Right). Star, Allene Ray. This is an old one that the exchange palmed off on me. Will get by if you happen to be lucky enough to get all of the film, which I did not. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Audience appeal, fifty per cent. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

PAYABLE ON DEMAND. (State Right). Star, Leo Maloney. This little show went over fairly well. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

RIP TIDE. (Arrow). Star, Stuart Holmes. (6 reels). I must have some very good natured patrons or they surely would have hung me for showing this abomination of a picture. Possibly the thing that saved me was the fact that most of the people fell asleep during the showing and thus missed one of the poorest pictures I have ever shown. City of 110,000. Admission 10-20. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

WESTERN VENGEANCE. (State Right). Star, Franklyn Farnum. Franklyn Farnum is one of the western stars who will always please. This story is in five reels and is full of action all the time. Tone, good. Good audience appeal. City of 100,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

WHAT LOVE WILL DO. (Pioneer). Star, Kenneth McDonald. Fine. Thousand feet of thrilling entertainment. A splendid action picture that should plase most any audience. General class town of 1,200. Admission, regular, 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

WRONG WOMAN. (State Right). Star cast. This went over fairly well and seemed to give satisfaction. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Footprints Led to Feet of Clay

Adapting a stunt originally worked by the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Guy V. Kenimer used the footprint sticker for Feet of Clay at the Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville. It got him the best first day business any picture ever drew regardless of prices, and did it at regular admissions.

A Paramount Release

THE FOOTPRINT STICKER

These are printed on very tough paper about 4½ by 10½ inches, are sufficiently enduring to be legible for several days save in the most crowded streets, and even here they will last for a day. They should be headed toward the theatre, and the photograph will show how they were used, though you will have to turn the paper upside down unless the printer has thoughtfully corrected our intentionally incorrect placement. Hold the paper on its side and you can see how it would work on a wall. The idea can be used for a variety of effects.

Lem Stewart's department of Famous Players Theatres Department broadcasted the idea and it made money for Kenimer.

NO. THE MAN IS NOT WALKING THE CEILING

Turn the paper upside down and you will see how Guy Kenimer adapted the Footprints for Feet of Clay for the Howard Theatre, Atlanta. They were on tough paper and lasted several days. It got the biggest opening day the Arcade ever had, bar nothing.

Many Fine Ideas for The Sea Hawk

Three stunts were used by C. R. Sullivan, of the Fair Theatre, Amarillo, Texas, to impress his patrons with the fact that The Sea Hawk was something else again.

In the first place he booked it for a full week, announcing that as they would give but one show each afternoon and evening an extension of the run would be necessary to accommodate all who would wish to see the big feature.

And this naturally changed the show from continuous to straight showings, which was emphasized by the prominent announcement that no one would be admitted after the title had been flashed.

And this was a hard reality. The first night a number of persons were turned away, politely but firmly. Some were only a few minutes late, but they were told that their entrance would spoil the enjoyment of those already in and their own, as well, since the play should be shown in its entirety.

Most of them were half an hour early the next night and meanwhile several hundred people were telling their friends how they were turned away, and this proved a real selling slant.

His last big appeal was with a painting 40 by 20 feet, done in colors and forming an enclosure over the sidewalk.

It all served to give Mr. Sullivan important money on a run that got as much money as the average two-change policy.

A HAND-PAINTED POSTER FOR A THEATRE FRONT

One of the stunts used by C. R. Sullivan, of the Fair Theatre, Amarillo, Texas. This is 20 by 40 feet, done in oil and did more than any other stunt to impress the public with the bigness of the production. But there were other good ideas.

Banner of Planks Was White's Idea

Sand was literally the basis of Oscar White's display on The Wanderer of the Wasteland when that came to the Rex Theatre, Sumter, S. C. Mr. White laid down a foundation of sand and in this he stuck cut-outs from the paper. He added shrubbery as much like that of the western plains as his locality afforded and for a final touch he added the skull of a horse, buffalo not being prevalent in his section. This was rather a daring touch, but it added to the realism immensely.

Colored lights were placed in the shrubbery and the regular lobby lights were dipped in all the colors he had in stock, to suggest the all-color picture.

His banner was made to match the rest of the display, the title being painted on two rough pine planks supported on 2x4 uprights. It was better than the most ornate pictorial banner—and cost a lot less. Mr. White looks both sides of the decimal point.

But he did not wait for his lobby to get interest. He knew that he had something out of the ordinary run and long before the picture came his customers were all on tiptoe. He could have dispensed with a special lobby had it not been for his country patrons who work on the "No lobby, no ticket" platform.

A BALLYHOO THAT COVERED AN ENTIRE COUNTY

This seagoing hack, a Ford car in private life, was sent all through Santa Clara county, Calif., in the interest of The Sea Hawk at the California Theatre, San Jose. The driver threw out heralds and brought in the country patrons.

Sent a Pram Over an Entire County

Putting a pair of paintings of a galley on either side of a Ford chassis, Harry E. Brown, of the California Theatre, San Jose, sent the perambulator all over Santa Clara county to advertise the coming of The Sea Hawk, and the response from the rural districts was unusually large. The driver was plentifully supplied with heralds, and he was a regular little missionary. The idea of perambulating an entire county was new in that vicinity and people figured that it must be good to be worth so much trouble, so they cranked up their lizzies and flivved into town.

A good tie-up was made through a display of the orginal costumes, which were rented from the producers. This is not as simple unless you happen to be reasonably near the studio.

A good seller was a special screening for the principals of the various schools. They passed word along to their teaching staffs and the play was commended to all pupils. This was backed by an appeal to the Parent-Teachers association.

On real help was the fact that it was Fall Fair Week with all the merchants making special displays, and they welcomed the loan of the Spanish costumes.

Runs Tandem

E. E. Meredith, of Charleston and Fairmount, W. Va., is doing work for theatres in both cities, getting out a four page house organ for each.

These are not repeat issues, but each is specially written, and carries enough local matter and general stuff to make it looked for. We particularly like one item for the Kearse Theatre, in Charleston, in which Mr. Meredith points out that the management brings into town about 50 players a week, all of whom contribute to the coffers of the local merchants. This line of argument is convincing and beneficial. He also does the newspaper work for the two houses, some of which we hope to reproduce presently.

A Broken Heart Her Love Story

Between Howard Price Kingsmore and Perry Spencer, his publicity man, a very intelligent campaign on Her Love Story was mapped out by the Howard Theatre, Atlanta.

The cut shows the decorations of the spacious foyer the week before the showing, but it does not include an enlargement from the 11 x 14 of Miss Swanson in her wedding gown. This was to tie in to a reproduction of the same still in the society section of one of the papers, where it was featured as Gloria's $100,000 wedding gown. This frame was set in the foyer for a week and then taken into the outer lobby. They had fairly to shove the women away.

The material shown in the foyer was used for the house front on the playing dates with blue and gold drapes.

A New Auto Card

A new style of auto card was used for this play. It is a white sheet about 8 by 18 inches, punched at either end for a cord and printed in red the wide way with an arrow piercing a heart. The shaft of the arrow carries the title. These can be tied to various parts of the car and also serve as direction arrows when used as tack cards.

For a novelty there was a red heart printed with the star, title, house and show date and cut into eight pieces. These were enclosed in manila pay envelopes and handed the patrons the week before.

One of the booths on the fair grounds carried a 15 foot banner during a local fair, and the rotos were handed out at a football game and at the theatre.

These stunts, backed by the popularity of the star, made for exceptional business.

THE FOYER ADVANCE FOR HER LOVE STORY IN ATLANTA

Part of the exploitation done by Howard Price Kingsmore and Perry Spencer for the Howard Theatre. There was also an enlargement of Gloria in her wedding gown and a new form of automobile tie-card, not to mention a sectional puzzle and other things.

Second Week Ad Is Sold on a Sample

One of the best second week ideas we have seen comes from the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, where Ace Berry shows one of his first week crowds to explain why The Sea Hawk is retained for a second week. The crowd and the press comments form all the selling, but this is more than ample. It is a capital idea and we are surprised that no one thought of this angle before.

A CLEVER IDEA

It tells the story better than a bookful of words. That hand lettering above the cut is pretty poor. Type and upper and lower case would be better and easier and cheaper, and yet the expense of drawing and engraving is incurred to lessen the value of the display. It's something we have been trying to figure out for more than thirty years and we have not found an answer yet. The same fault of all capitals is repeated in the type. There are two sets of two line all caps, and then the showing times are neatly centered. Had these been "staggered" so that the dashes on the daily time came under the hours on the Sunday showings, it would have been twice as easy to read, but the compositor even goes to the trouble of letter spacing the "daily" to make it exactly equal the "Sunday" in width. He goes out of his way to be neat and orderly—and useless. Something has gone sour out in Indianapolis. The composition did not always show such blunders, though the Circle spaces have seldom been noted for their typography. They let poor composition go by every week. No one out there seems to have studied display values.

For Resemblance

Working the old resemblance stunt, Chris Deibel, of the Liberty Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, offered a prize for the girl who most closely resembled Clara Bow in Wine. The local paper was coaxed to back the idea, and published daily a cut of the star. All contestants were judged on photographs in precisely the same pose. This made business good for the local photographers, and some 200 entries were received.

Sundown Is Bigger Than Cut Suggests

Here is a display on Sundown that we like better than that for the same attraction at the Circle, Indianapolis, except that we feel that the cut belittles the picture. The bucking bronk might work as well for a program western. It does not suggest the immensity of this production, nor does it back up the copy to the left. Typographically this is well displayed with the single all-cup bank small enough to be read without eyestrain, and in a three fives the same suggestion of importance is given that is conveyed in a much larger space in other ads. Keeping the display down so that the title comes up in spite of the fact that it is only a 30 point gives almost the same importance to this three fives that would be gained with a six tens and a lot of black type fighting the title. This sample is clipped from the Toledo Blade and not taken from the press files, and the space stands out on the page in spite of the fact that it is in competition with spaces several times its area. It is a fine example of how to make a small space look large through not clogging it up with a mess of boldface. Of course if all of the other spaces on the page employed the same device this would go back to its real value, but with the others using larger but less emphatic space, this has a display value of more than double the space paid for. That's why we reproduce this double column. We want you to get the idea better, but remember that the original is a little larger; six and a half inches wide against the five as shown here.

four times what it is paying for in attraction value. Put that same copy in the same space with the conventional composition and it would look like nothing at all. As it stands you get the first impression that this must be good. It looks like something. It has distinction and the type form transfers its importance to the play. Of course that does not help much unless the play makes good, but it's a safe bet with Never Say Die. We note that the Strand has been having its fall fashion show. That's another example of their hustle. They don't let a good bet like that get past them, either. If you never have experimented with rule work for small spaces, try it some week when you want to keep expenses down. There will be such times between now and Christmas. You can save enough to buy your Christmas presents with if you design your rule outlines carefully, remembering that the further away you get from the conventional square or oblong the more attention you will command.

Selling Is Done on Simple Lines

In this three tens from the Princess Theatre, Toledo, the best line is that "Too fast for safety" which leads off the talk. This runs into a seven line bank that is not exactly true to the picture, but it gets the interest and we think that no husband is going to go out to the manager and make a complaint that the picture does not keep its promise to show him how to keep Mrs. Patron in line. The picture will make good whether it lives up to these specifications or not, and that is the main point. It is good selling, but in most places we think more of a hint of the story would put the picture over better. It will be recalled that this is taken from the stage play in which the husband brings a woman of the streets to be his guest at a party as a polite intimation that she is no worse than the crowd with which his pleasure-seeking wife has surrounded herself. This is a stronger appeal than that offered here, which follows along too conventional lines. This can be tied to a dozen or more plays. The major situation is peculiar to The Fast Set. The display is well done and there is not too much hand lettering. Toledo runs a very good average on display, and while this space is not up to the highest mark, it is a good example.

Sameness of Type Hurts Sales Lines

In announcing The Arab, the Century Theatre, Baltimore, uses two good lines at the top of the three tens. "One of the biggest pictures of the year" and "A real sheik story, filmed in the desert" will sell the production, though "Sahara" might have been substituted for "desert" with good results. The trouble here, however, is that these two lines are lettered in by hand and with a third line, reading: "One year in the making" are so similar that they get no real display. White space would have been almost as good as good copy where the copy is so poorly displayed. The cut selections are well made and the title and stars are given a good play-up. The space is somewhat full, though not unattractive, but the top lines are wasted simply because the eye has to pause and puzzle out the text, and most chance readers will not wait that long. The fan does not need this extra appeal. The sales lines are supposedly put in to catch the person who is not yet sold, and they will not perform this service if they cannot easily be read. Probably the rest of the space sold plenty of tickets, but the point is that the display falls below its possible capacity through the use of poor lettering where type would have set in as well.

Neat Cards

Buddy Stuart, manager of the Fenway Theatre, Boston, is one of those who realize that even the little things are well worth while. He does not lose his interest when things fall below the 24-sheet size. As a result Buddy has evolved a good idea for spotting his lobby lithos.

He uses 4x4-inch cards with the Paramount trademark in tint. Across this he has printed the name of the theatre and "Now," "Next week" and "Coming."

It is a simple matter to change the cards, just as simple to take a new one should the old one become soiled, and infinitely more attractive than the usual gaudy strips.

It's not much, but scores of these little refinements serve to make the Fenway a house of distinction.

Unusual Layout Is of Double Value

Horator's Temple Theatre, Toledo, seems to have come close to the problem of having your cake and eating it, too. It combines a display and a reading ad in a single space of three eights. The basis of the space is a two column stock cut from the Universal exchange. This has been notched to let in two rather extensive readers in six point italic. One is a general sales talk on the production and the other deals with the plot of the story. Being in a six point, the type does not interfere with the display value of the cut, and yet if you are interested, you read some very convincing talk. And you are apt to read it because it is set twelve ems; the measure with which the eye is most familiar. Set this same matter in 24-em measure and not one-tenth as many persons would read, because then it would involve fatiguing effort. In using a two column cut in a three column space a white-space effect is gained at small cost, and the display is decidedly better than would come from a cut of the same depth which ran out to the side rules. The three lines at the bottom add the information that there are also "two splendid comedies, news reel and special music," which covers the remainder of the program. The layout is ingenious, effective, and far from costly.

A TWO-IN-ONE

Jackie Coogan's Signature to Contract Sought by English and German Film Men

By SUMNER SMITH

WILL a foreign motion picture company outbid Americans for Jackie Coogan's signature to his new contract? That seems hardly likely, and yet Jack Coogan, Sr., just returned with Mrs. Coogan and Jackie from Europe, displays much interest in offers made by English and German film men for a contract with the boy star, now that "The Ragman," his last picture under the present Metro-Goldwyn contract, is practically completed. Incidentally, Mr. Coogan said that negotiations also are under way with several American motion picture companies, but that no decision will be reached in the immediate future.

Mr. and Mrs. Coogan and little Jackie arrived in New York on November 10 after a ten weeks' trip abroad in the interests of the Near East Relief Fund which won Jack Junior several decorations, including the famous Greek Order of George and the Golden Cross, Order of Jerusalem, which is given by the Greek Orthodox Church and is one of the most highly prized decorations in the world. All members of the Coogan family were delighted at being again on American soil and enthusiastic about their trip.

Larry Weingarten, who is responsible for the remarkable scope and attractiveness of the publicity attending the movements of the Coogans, escorted the writer to the Coogan suite in the Hotel Roosevelt, we having met Jack Coogan, Sr., on Fifth avenue and managed to pry him loose from a multitude of friends. Mr. Coogan's stroll through the neighborhood had been attended by many, many meetings of old-time friends—he is about as universally well liked a man as we know and his friends are legion—so that we breathed a sigh of relief when the opportunity at last came for a chat. Even after arrival at the hotel friends kept dropping in, but Mr. Coogan never for a moment forgot that we had a first lien on his attentions, if not his affections.

The Coogans' trip abroad is so well known to the American public through the newspapers that it is hardly necessary to review it here. Suffice to say that it was more like a triumphal tour of crowned heads than a simple expedition in the interests of worthy relief work. The people simply would not let the Coogans alone. Jackie's fame had spread far and wide, and from the occasion of his remarkable entry into England, when thousands cheered him, to his return to the shores of the homeland, the Coogans had hardly a moment to themselves. Among the highlights of the trip were the audience with the Pope at Rome and the interview with Mussolini. Mrs. Coogan expressed the sentiment of husband and son when she voiced a gladness at being home again. Jackie and she go to visit friends at Syracuse within a few days, and then all will entrain for the West.

On his arrival at Hollywood Mr. Coogan will begin editing "The Ragman," the picture with which Jackie ends his Metro-Goldwyn contract. Already various companies are angling for Mr. Coogan's signature to a new contract, but a decision isn't expected soon. And therein lies a story.

"Europe," said Mr. Coogan, "is up and going. There are piles of money over there and a new spirit of industry and optimism. The amount of money on tap astounded me, as I had been led to believe otherwise. Why, in Berlin a manufacturing company paid us $1,000 for a picture of Jackie operating their machine, and paid it in American dollars in the form of a check on a New York bank.

"But what astonished me most of all were two offers, one by a British and one by a German motion picture company, for my signature to a contract for Jackie's services. I hadn't expected them to attempt to compete with Americans, and the liberality of their offers set me to thinking. The plan of one company was to produce some of the pictures in America and some abroad. Jackie, you know, is the biggest screen attraction in Europe by all odds."

We asked Mr. Coogan to say something about his future plans.

"Can't tell you a thing," he assured. "We are considering several interesting offers and only time will tell which will prove most attractive."

The conversation switched abruptly to a certain small motion picture camera which Mr. Coogan discovered in Geneva. In fact, "camera" is hardly the name for it because this wonderful bit of mechanism photographs, projects, prints and enlarges through the juggling of interchangeable parts. Mr. Coogan obtained the American rights to it, and certainly it seems to have remarkable possibilities for success here. The writer wishes that he had F. H. Richardson's knowledge of cameras and could describe it. Mr. Coogan and Jackie gave him a demonstration of its operation. It is smaller than a portable typewriter and, made by a Swiss watch-maker, a beautiful piece of work.

Mr. Coogan's opinion of conditions abroad may be summed up in a couple of words—"everything is going ahead fast." European producers are vieing with each other in plans for an invasion of the American market, and Mr. Coogan believes that their earnestness will ultimately result in many good foreign-made pictures. He found American pictures by far the most popular in all countries, despite a sometimes strong anti-American feeling. Austria and Germany are the most friendly nations on the Continent, according to his survey; they are making remarkable progress in motion picture work, and they have the funds to produce the highest class attractions.

All members of the Coogan family look well. Jackie is in the pink of condition despite occasional rumors that he has been suffering from everything from chicken pox to mosquito bites. The mosquito reports were true, take it from Jack Senior, who advises tourists to take a complete assortment of netting with them when they visit Belgrade.

The Near East Relief has issued a statement in which the organization says that Jackie Coogan's visit to the Near East has "typified the heart of America to these governments and to their churches, schools and general public," and that his decorations are not intended solely for him but for the children of America he represented and who made his crusade possible.

New Jones Feature

"The Man Who Played Square" Is Scheduled for Release November 23

Fox announces that the latest Buck Jones feature, an Imperial Comedy, an Educational Entertainment and Nos. 14 and 15, Volume 6, of Fox News will be released the week of November 23.

The latest of the William Fox series in which Buck Jones is starred is "The Man Who Played Square." Al Santell directed this production, which is adapted from an original story by William Wallace Cook. John Stone prepared the scenario. Wanda Hawley has the feminine lead in the cast, which includes the following players: Ben Hendricks, Jr., David Kirby, Hank Mann, Howard Foster and William Scott.

"Roaring Lions at Home" is the title of the Imperial Comedy scheduled for release November 23. The Fox Educational Entertainment will be "Salt of the Earth."

More Metro Scenario Writers

Two more writers have joined the large scenario staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at its Culver City studios. Lew Lipton and Leete Renick Brown are the new additions. Both of them were formerly with Universal.

Recent additions to the scenario staff at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studios are Kenneth Clark, Albert Shelby Le Vino, Agnes Christine Johnston, Charlton Andrews and Ballard Macdonald.

Scene from "So Big," a First National production

New Pictures Started at Fox West Coast Studios

THREE new productions were started this week at the William Fox West Coast studios. These new pictures include "Riders of the Purple Sage" with Tom Mix featured; "The Trail Rider," a Buck Jones' star series and "Van Bibber and the Navy," a Van Bibber Comedy.

Tom Mix has laid aside his valet cloak and swasbuckling bravada of "Dick Turpin" for the "chaps" and modern costumes of a twentieth century hero in "Riders of the Purple Sage," an adaptation of the Zane Grey novel of the same name. This is the second of three productions to be made this season by William Fox from western stories by this popular writer.

Lynn Reynolds, who directed Tom Mix in many of his best-known westerns, is making this production.

The players in the prologue include Tom Mix, Beatrice Burnham, Arthur Morrison, Cecille Ann Johnson, Warner Oland, Fred Kohler, Charles Newton and Joe Ricksen. The players in the main part of the photoplay in addition to the star are Mabel Ballin, Charles LeMoyne, Harold Goodwin, Miriam Nixon, Warner Oland, Dawn O'Day, Fred Kohler, Charles Newton and Joe Ricksen.

"Riders of the Purple Sage," which is one of the best of the Western stories written by Zane Grey, is a picturesque romance of Utah of some forty years ago. It is a tale of the cattle country that offers exceptional motion picture possibilities. Tom Mix has been featured in "The Lone Star Ranger" and "The Last of the Duanes," both pictures adapted from Zane Grey stories and which were strong box-office attractions.

Buck Jones and his company have left the William Fox West Coast studios for Sonora, California, where a number of scenes will be taken for "The Trail Rider," with W. S. Van Dyke directing. This is a story of the cattle country and concerns the activities of a trail rider hired by a cattle ranchers' association to break up a band of thieves.

The story by George Washington Ogden is one of the best Western stories of the year, and was adapted for the use of Buck Jones by Thomas Dixon, Jr. Nancy Beaver has the leading feminine role. The other principals include such well-known players as Lucy Fox, Carl Stockdale, Jack MacDonald, George Berrell, Jacques Rollens and Will Walling.

"Van Bibber and the Navy," which also was started this week at the William Fox West Coast studios, is the sixth of the series of two-reel comedies to be made from the famous Van Bibber stories of Richard Harding Davis. George Marshall is directing this series and R. P. Kerr adapted the stories to the screen. Earle Foxe has the lead with Florence Gilbert playing opposite him in the chief feminine role. The other principals are Frank Beal, Lynn Cowan, Jules Cowles and William Lawrence.

"Night Ship" in Production

Samuel Sax, president and general manager of Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of Gotham Productions, announces that "The Night Ship," the fourth picture of the series of six specials, is now in production with an all-star cast, including Robert Gordon, Mary Carr, Claire Adams, Walter Long, Charles Sellon, Charlie Mack and Willis Marks.

Praise "Death Ray" Film

New York Critics Give High Comment on Matthews' Two-Reel Picture

H. Grindell-Matthews' two-reel film for Pathe, which is based on his famous discovery of the "Death Ray," played one week at the Rialto Theatre, and as a two-reel production came in for unusual praise from the daily press.

The New York Times published a special story on the short-subject, which read as follows: "This short film is unusually interesting as it gives some idea of what possibly might be accomplished by this newly discovered ray, which the inventor is able to direct from a special apparatus."

The review then goes on to describe the action of the film in the killing of a rodent and the blowing up of gunpowder on a pan which is held by an attendant.

Harriette Underhill in the Tribune-Herald said: "There is an intensely interesting picture called 'The Death Ray,' which shows H. Grindell-Matthews' famous ray and gives samples of how it works. It was shown lighting a detached electric bulb, stopping a motorcycle and killing a rat. With all our love of animals we watched them deal the death ray to the rodent with no pity in our heart. Funny what unlovable things they are!"

Has Double Run

Vitagraph's "Clean Heart" Has Remarkable Record in Yonkers

"The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life," produced and directed by J. Stuart Blackton for Vitagraph, has just finished a remarkable double run in Yonkers, N. Y. The Terrace City Amusement Company procured the special and ran it at the Hamilton Theatre Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and at the Broadway Theatre the same Friday, Saturday and Sunday. In both houses it played to packed audiences at all performances.

The Yonkers Herald said in its review: "It is full of the human interest element. It depicts life as it is, delineating eccentric characters with all their eccentricities."

To Star in "Awful Truth"

Agnes Ayres Cast in First Producers Distributing Corporation Release

It was officially announced this week that the first starring vehicle for Agnes Ayres on the Producers Distributing Corporation program next season will be "The Awful Truth," the Arthur Richman stage play in which Ina Claire was starred last season by Charles Frohman.

"The Awful Truth" will be produced by Peninsula Studios at San Mateo, Cal., under the personal supervision of Elmer Harris, with Paul Powell directing.

The story is a society drama that deals in a novel way with a matrimonial tangle and an entirely new phase of the eternal triangle.

Russell to Play Villain

William Russell is to play his first villain in "The Summons," the story by Katherine Newlin Burt which Robert G. Vignola is producing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Eleanor Boardman has the leading role. Matt Moore plays opposite her. Pauline Frederick, Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch and Huntly Gordon are the featured players.

Margaret Livingston in Producers Distributing's "The Chorus Lady."

Schoefield Picture Listed

Associated Exhibitors Schedules "East of Broadway" for Release

Associated Exhibitors announces the release on its program for November 23 of the latest of its big feature productions entitled "East of Broadway," a thrilling police melodrama produced by Paul Schoefield.

"East of Broadway" is based on the gripping Saturday Evening Post story, "Where Is the Tropic of Capricorn?" by Richard Connell, and was adapted to the screen by Paul Schoefield. William K. Howard was entrusted with the direction.

Owen Moore appears in the role of a youth who struggles to realize a boyhood ambition to become a policeman, overcoming obstacles to get on the force and meeting with exciting experiences afterward. Marguerite de la Motte gives a sincere characterization of a pathetic little waif cast upon a world none too kind to the helpless. Other highlights in the production's unusual array of screen talent are Eddie Gribbon, Mary Carr, George Nichols, Francis McDonald and Ralph Lewis.

"Rose of Paris" Released

Universal-Jewel Starring Mary Philbin Is Adapted from Famous French Novel

Universal announces the release this week of "The Rose of Paris," a new Mary Philbin picture. It is a Universal-Jewel production and was directed by Irving Cummings.

This is the long heralded adaptation of the famous French novel, "Mitzi," written by the French brother and sister whose pen name is Delly. This novel won high honors at the hands of French literary judges last year. The story was adapted by Bernard McConville, with the assistance of Lenore Coffee, and the scenario prepared by Melville Brown and Edward T. Lowe, Jr.

The Universal studio executives gave Cummings free rein in selecting a cast for Miss Philbin. He selected Robert Cain, John Sainpolis, Rose Dione, Dorothy Revier, Gino Corrado, Doreen Turner, Edwin J. Brady, Charles H. Puffy, Carrie Daumery, Alice H. Smith, Frank Currier, D. J. Mitsoras and Cesare Gravina.

Preparing "The Coast of Folly"

John Russell is engaged in adapting "The Coast of Folly," by Coningsby Dawson, for Gloria Swanson's next Paramount Picture, to be directed by Allan Dwan.

Strong Numbers Mark Pathe's List for Week of Nov. 23d

AN Arthur Stone comedy, the second subject of the "True Detective Stories" series, and one of the most thrilling chapters in the Patheserial, "Ten Scars Make a Man," leads the Pathe program of releases for the week of November 23rd.

The Arthur Stone comedy is the third release of the first series and is titled "Are Blond Men Bashful?" The picture is a Hal Roach presentation. The production was co-directed by James Davis and Nick Barrows. In it Stone is strongly supported by a cast consisting of James Finlayson, Katherine Grant, Robert McKenzie and Jack Cooper.

"Out of the Storm" is the third of the series of "True Detective Stories." This series consists of four two-reel productions, based on personal experiences and data gathered by Major Ross D. Whytock, war correspondent and police reporter. The pictures were directed by William P. Burt and adapted to the screen by George Arthur Gray. The cast consists of Leslie Austin, Ed Roseman, Nellie Burt and a strong supporting cast.

Chapter No. 7 of the Patheserial, "Ten Scars Make a Man," is also scheduled for release for the week of November 23rd. The title of this chapter is "Unmasked," and it is the most thrilling installment of the entire serial. Allene Ray is the featured player, supported by a well-known cast of players, including Jack Mower, Harry Woods, Larry Steers, Frank Lanning, Rose Burdick and Leon de la Mothe.

Hal Roach has two productions for the week. The second is a one-reel comedy featuring Charley Chase, entitled "All Wet."

Three very interesting subjects are used to make up the Pathe Review No. 47. The first embodies scenes made by a Pathe cameraman while flying over Hawaii with a squadron of U. S. Navy seaplanes. Part II of the series of "Keeping Fit" series makes up the second subject of the Pathe Review. This is the second of this series and discloses some interesting information on how to keep "the body engines running right." The series is based on a book titled, "Physical Exercises for Daily Use," by Dr. C. Ward Crampton, former Physical Director of the New York City schools. The third subject is a Pathecolor of the "Birds of America." "Good Old Circus Days," an animated cartoon-comedy of the Aesop's Film Fables, and Pathe News No. 96 and No. 97 complete the Pathe program for the week.

Reed Howes' First

"Lightning Romance," first of a series of six productions starring Reed Howes, was received at the Rayart New York offices last week and passed the reviewing staff without a cut. Harry Thomas, vice-president of Merit Exchanges, Rayart's New York City distributors; David Mountan, president of Richmont Pictures, who distribute Rayart's productions abroad, and W. Ray Johnston, the head of Rayart, all were unanimous in their praise of the first Reed Howes- Harry J. Brown production.

Additions to Olcott Picture

Sidney Olcott has added Louisa Mackintosh and Beatrice Gaines to the cast of "Salome of the Tenements," which he is directing at the Paramount Long Island studio.

"Big Casts for Big Pictures" Is Dictum of B. P. Schulberg

FOR the exhibitor, the cast is the thing," says B. F. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, who says that the players are the most important single feature of any picture to be sold to film goers.

"I base this assertion," continues Mr. Schulberg, "on the fact that the average entertainment seeker invariably chooses his picture according to his liking for the featured players. The title of the film is usually secondary.

"Production values and a sound story are necessary to send patrons away satisfied, but the essential thing to draw them in is names.

"I have attempted to put this pet theory of mine into practice in making Preferred Pictures. 'Rich Men's Wives,' 'The Virginian,' 'Maytime' and other Preferred releases in the past have been notable for their casts, but we are outdoing ourselves this year in securing the biggest box-office names available.

"'The Breath of Scandal,' our first release this season, is drawing big crowds with this line-up—Lou Tellegen, Patsy Ruth Miller, Betty Blythe, Forrest Stanley, Jack Mulhall, Myrtle Stedman, Phyllis Haver and Charles Clary.

"'White Man,' just completed by Gasnier, brings Alice Joyce back to the screen—and there never has been a bigger name than hers. Supporting her are Kenneth Harlan and Walter Long.

"We have just finished the selection of players for 'The Triflers.' It is one that no exhibitor can overlook—Mae Bush, Frank Mayo, Elliot Dexter, Walter Hiers, Eva Novak, Dorothy Revier and Lloyd Whitlock.

"Casting is now under way for 'Capital Punishment.'

"Exhibitors, advertise your cast. The motion picture has built its popularity on personalities and will continue to do so."

St. Regis Completes First Film

The actual photographing of the first St. Regis Picture, made under the working title, "The Ultimate Good," from the magazine story of that name by J. C. Brownell, has been completed. The picture, for Associated Exhibitors release, was made at the Tec Art Studios in New York, under the direction of E. H. Griffith, with Conway Tearle and Madge Kennedy as the stars and a number of well known players in the supporting roles, including Lucille Lee Stewart, Charles Emmett Mack, Bigelow Cooper and William Bechtel. The film, which is now being cut, will be released in January.

Los Angeles Critics Like "Code of the Wilderness"

VITAGRAPH'S "The Code of the Wilderness," a David Smith production, scored a hit in Los Angeles on its recent run at the Mission Theatre. Mable Brundige Horton said of it in the Los Angeles Express:

"Spectacular punch is the corner-stone of the picture. For those who enjoy thrills and caveman stuff we can recommend it without reserve. It's a 'he-man' melodrama. Photographically it is Class A. Its long shots of the desert and cavernous mountain passes present vistas of rare beauty. And organ cactus silhouetted against the setting sun brings out a chiaroscuro that remain long in memory.

"Acting honors go to Otis Harlan as Uncle Jepson. His rolling gait as he snoops around, listening behind doors, through stable windows and crouched in cactus beds, is a rare study of juvenile curiosity. John Bowers is a typical Western Lochinvar of magnetic personality and daring. Charlotte Merriam is prepossessing as Hagar. 'The Code of the Wilderness' is eminently satisfactory."

In the course of its review, the Los Angeles Express said:

"'The Code of the Wilderness' is' as you may suspect, a Western picture, and as such it is a considerably entertaining opus for those who like this species. There is not quite as much blood and thunder in it as there is in the usual run of the great-open-spaces pictures, but the exciting moments which do occur satisfactorily replace revolver barrages.

"John Bowers is the 'man's man,' of whom Aunty says, 'If I had a son I'd want him to be just like Rex.' Alice Calhoun admirably handles the feminine lead opposite the engaging Bowers. Otis Harlan furnishes the comedy relief, while Alan Hale does most of the 'dirty work!'"

"THE DARLING FAMILY" IN "PETER PAN"

Herbert Brenon (right), who produced Sir James M. Barrie's fantasy for Paramount, outlines a scene for the Darling family (sans Mr. Darling) in the nursery set. Left to right, Jack Murphy, who plays "John Darling," Esther Ralston as "Mrs. Darling," Philippe de Lacy as "Michael Darling," Mary Brian as "Wendy," "Nana, the dog nurse," played by George Ali, and Herbert Brenon

"Hot Water" Booking Fast

Harold Lloyd's Latest Makes Instantaneous Hit With Exhibitor

One of the most remarkable things that has happened in the film industry this year has been the instantaneous and universal success attending the release of Harold Lloyd's latest comedy, "Hot Water." This success has been achieved from all angles, including rapid distribution and favorable reception by both exhibitor and the public.

In less than two weeks following the release of the picture every big first run had been contracted for. These towns include Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Milwaukee, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Houston, Memphis, Little Rock, Atlanta, Birmingham, Savannah, Jacksonville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Louisville, Buffalo, Rochester, New York, Toledo and Charlotte.

Laemmle Directs Details of Five Million Schedule

WITH Carl Laemmle at the studio actively directing operations and in daily conferences with Julius Bernheim, general manager, and Ben Zeidman, his assistant, preparations for the new schedule of production at Universal City are actively under way. Preparatory work on seven big stories, just purchased, and production plans for a number of others mark the first step on the five million dollar schedule to be gotten under way at once. The signing of several new artists on long term contracts is another feature of the plans.

The first group of new stories on which production will start at an early date includes "The Plastic Age," Percy Marks' popular novel of college life, which will be presented with an all-star cast; "Siege," Samuel Hopkins Adams' celebrated story, chosen as the next starring vehicle for Virginia Valli, with Svend Gade directing; "Head Winds," A. M. Sinclair's romance of the high seas, purchased as the third starring vehicle for House Peters; "A Somnambulistic Scandal," original story by Beatrice Van, a Laura La Plante story which Herbert Blache will direct; Elmer J. Davis' lilting romance, "I'll Show You the Town," in which Erle Kenton will direct Reginald Denny; Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal," purchased for Laura La Plante; and "Folle-Farine," Ouida's Classic, in which Clarence Brown will direct Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry.

The recent signing of Marceline Day on a long term contract was followed by the signing of Georgie Grandee, the vaudeville comedian, "discovered" as a picture possibility by William Desmond, who knew him on the stage. Grandee's first appearance on the screen was in a Desmond Universal feature. Joe Bonomo, the famous strong man, has also been signed for a period of years for serials and "stunt" pictures.

The news of Svend Gade's engagement to direct Virginia Valli in "Siege" marks a new directorial discovery by Carl Laemmle. The famous Danish producer, known in Europe for his state spectacles, such as "Romeo and Juliet," was engaged to direct Mary Philbin in "Fifth Avenue Models" on advice from Mr. Laemmle during his recent European trip. Gade's handling of the story has created a furore. He is expected to be one of the outstanding figures among importations from the directorial field cross the Atlantic.

The work of Clarence Brown in "Butterfly" and "The Marrying Age" makes his assignment to direct Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in "Folle-Farine" a not unexpected development. Brown in a brief space of time has come to the front as one of the most notable directors in the picture field.

The literary staff at Universal City has been augmented by the engagement of Ben de Casseris, the New York author, and the engagement of Tom Geraghty to scenarize the new Reginald Denny picture. Will M. Ritchie, Harvey Thew, E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Beatrice Van are among the notable writers engaged on the forthcoming stories.

"Dangerous Odds" Cody's Fifth

Bill Cody's fifth picture in the series of eight which he is now making for Independent Pictures Corporation, under the personal supervision of Jesse J. Goldburg, is to be released shortly under the title "Dangerous Odds." The picture is directed by William Craft, the story being written by William Lester.

To Release Jack Boyle Story

M. H. Hoffman will shortly release his latest Truart feature, "Soiled," which Phil Goldstone made for him from Jack Boyle's Red Book story, "The Debt of Honor." In the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Robert Cain, Johnnie Walker, Mary Alden, Mildred Harris, Vivian Martin, Alec. Francis, Wyndham Standing and Maude George. The actual release date of "Soiled" will be announced as soon as the press book which is now being prepared is completed.

Additions to Cast

Mary Carr, Virginia Pearson and Charlie Murray have been added to the cast of "The Wizard of Oz," the screen version of the famous book and play which Larry Semon is making for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. The complete supporting cast reads: Charlie Murray, Josef Swickard, Mary Carr, Oliver Hardy, Dorothy Dwan, Bryant Washburn and Virginia Pearson.

Miss Bennett Signed by Paramount

In recognition of her splendid work in Zane Grey's "The Code of the West," now nearing completion, Constance Bennett has been signed on a long term contract by Paramount, according to an announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president, in charge of production.

Banner Officials Elated as "Shooting" Ends on "3 Keys"

TELEGRAPHIC advices received by George H. Davis and Samuel J. Briskin of Banner Productions, Inc., early this week from Ben Verschleiser, head of their Pacific Coast producing unit, announced the completion of "Three Keys" at the F. B. O. studios, where this unit has been at work for some weeks past, and further stated that at a preview of the picture, held without announcement at a neighborhood house in Los Angeles, on Wednesday, November 6th, the production received a veritable ovation.

Mr. Davis and Mr. Briskin were much elated over the reports received but stated that they had been led to expect that "Three Keys" would be an exceptional attraction by reason of the unusually high calibre of the cast engaged and the intensive dramatic possibilities of the story, which is based on the novel by Frederic Ormond, published by W. J. Watt & Co.

They were the more enthused over the confirmation of these hopes by the telegraphed reports, and gave full credit for the picture's promising reception to Producer Verschleiser and Edward Le Saint, who directed it.

"We knew that 'Three Keys' would be a first class attraction," said Mr. Briskin, "but hardly hoped it would be the 'knockout' that these reports would seem to indicate. Both Mr. Verschleiser and Director Le Saint are entitled to the fullest credit possible, even though they had a splendid mystery melodrama for a story.

The cast of "Three Keys," which is of stellar character throughout, includes Edith Roberts, Jack Mulhall, Virginia Lee Corbin, Gaston Glass, Miss Du Pont, Charles Clary, Stuart Holmes and Joseph Girard.

The picture will be released by Banner early in December, as the second of the Ben Verschleiser series, of which "Empty Hearts" is the first.

Reviewers unanimous in praise!

We have given you the reports of all the reviewers.

You have noted that they are unanimous in their praise. They agree that this picture is a first-class box-office attraction, with thrills, jazz and romance, lavishly produced, and with a stellar cast. Now see and believe!

"Only Woman" Going Big

Picture Grosses More Than "Secrets" in Cleveland—Big Receipts in New York

First National reports that its new Norma Talmadge picture, "The Only Woman," has exceeded the gross receipts of "Secrets" in the showings of the two pictures at the Stillman Theatre in Cleveland where "Secrets" did a tremendous business. "The Only Woman" has completed its second big week at the Stillman.

This Norma Talmadge picture is attracting big business at the Capitol Theatre, New York. It will have its first West Coast showing at the California Theatre in Los Angeles on November 29.

A. H. Blank has booked "The Only Woman" over his circuit of theatres; also the two new Constance Talmadge pictures, "Her Night of Romance" and "Learning to Love."

Jensen & Von Herberg have closed contracts for "The Only Woman" and "Her Night of Romance" over their circuit.

"Her Night of Romance" was recently shown at Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles where its gross was exceeded by only four productions in the history of the theatre.

"Pearl of Love" Coming

Coincident with the publication by the A. R. Burt Company of Harriet Beecher Stowe's famous novel, "The Pearl of Orr's Island," an announcement is made by the Lee-Bradford Corporation that the film version, enttiled "The Pearl of Love," will be ready for release very shortly.

The picture was made on the locations mentioned in Harriet Beecher Stowe's book. The final shots were made a short time ago, and the final cutting will be completed this week.

The cast includes Glady's Leslie, Burr McIntosh, Russel Griffin, Effie Shannon, Dorothy Allen, Ray Lowney, Charles Lane, Alice Chapin, Walter Gilbert, Paul Winchell and Aleta Doré.

"The Pearl of Love" is produced by Paul W. Whitcomb Productions.

Lee-Bradford Gets "Wolf Blood"

An announcement is made at the Lee-Bradford offices that a contract has been signed for the Ryan Bros. Productions' picture "Wolf Blood," which is said to be an out-of-doors picture of an unusual character, possessing a wealth of dramatic power. It is based on a powerful theme that is unique.

Marguerite Clayton and George Chesboro head an unusually strong cast.

Chadwick Contestants Now Number More Than 25,000

FIFTY newspapers and magazines are today carrying advertising and publicity for the popularity contest staged on a nation-wide scale in behalf of "The Romance of an Actress," the forthcoming picture to be made by the Chadwick Pictures Corporation for the independent market this season. Twenty-five thousand contestants are competing, according to figures compiled by officials of the Cloverleaf Weekly, conducting the campaign. On the basis of returns it is expected that the number of participants will be increased nearly two-fold before the contest ends.

A list of the papers engaged in disseminating news about the campaign gives some idea of its all-embracing scope and of the tremendous advance exploitation "The Romance of an Actress" is getting. The newspapers include the St. Louis Globe, St. Louis Post and the Chicago Herald-Examiner, all of national prominence. The magazines include the Cloverleaf American, Motion Picture Magazine, Picture Play, Cappers Weekly, Argosy All-Story, Woman's Weekly, St. Louis Globe Democrat, American Weekly, People's Popular, Sovereign Visitor, Household, Everyday Life, Eagle Magazine, Today's Housewife, Blue Book Magazine, True Confessions, True Story, Screenland, Film Fun, Pathfinder, Iowa Magazine, Moving Picture Stories, Boyce's Weeklies, Grit, Movie Weekly, Household Guest, Vickery & Hill, Gentlewoman, Mother's Home Life, Household Journal, Home Friend, Mooseheart, Royal Neighbor, Modern Woodman, True Romance, Triple X, Truth, Royal Arcanum, Photoplay, Mystic Worker, Dream World, Yeoman Shield, Pythian Guest, Chicago Herald & Examiner, Monthly Tidings and Comfort.

The winner of the contest will be given a guaranteed part in the production, including transportation to Hollywood and back with chaperon, also hotel expenses. The second, third and fourth winners will be given transportation and hotel expenses with chaperon to Hollywood and back again, and parts in the picture if they are found screenable.

New Talmadge Vehicle

Joseph M. Schenck has purchased "East of the Setting Sun" for Constance Talmadge. This is a tale of Graustark by George Barr McCutcheon, which has recently been running in the Saturday Evening Post and is now published in book form.

Clara Bow Leaves New York

Clara Bow has completed her role in the lead of Howard Estabrook's picture, "The Adventurous Sex," produced at Tec Art Studios in New York, and is now en route to Hollywood, where she will be featured by B. P. Schulberg in his big special production, "Capital Punishment."

"Capital Punishment," which is an original story by the producer himself, will offer Miss Bow the biggest role she has ever played, both from the standpoint of characterization and exploitation.

Prerelease of "White Man"

The first public showing of "White Man," Gasnier's latest Preferred Picture for B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc., began this week at the Boston Theatre, Boston, where the production has been booked for a three weeks' engagement.

Prints of the picture are now in Schulberg exchanges with the general release date set for November 15. In "White Man," Gasnier has departed from his usual society story to film a romance that transpires in the African jungles. Alice Joyce, Kenneth Harlan and Walter Long are the principal players.

Public Like Leonard Pictures

The first reports received from exhibitors who have given first run pre-release showings of "Flying Fists," the Benny Leonard two-reel series of features, shows that the public is hungry for superior fight films, well produced and well acted, according to Henry Ginsberg. From Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Chicago, where first runs have already taken place, exchange men state that the Leonard films have been accepted so eagerly that no difficulty is being met in obtaining full bookings.

Samuel Goldwyn Announces Bigger Production Plans

PLANS for greatly increased production activity and the acquisition of important story material were announced by Samuel Goldwyn upon his arrival in Hollywood. The success of "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter" and George Fitzmaurice's "Tarnish" are in a large measure responsible for Goldwyn's production expansion, he declared in announcing his plans for the immediate future. Mr. Goldwyn's productions are distributed by First National Pictures.

"World Without End," a new novel by May Edginton, who wrote "Secrets," "Triumph" and "Judgment," was obtained from the galley proofs by Mr. Goldwyn for production by George Fitzmaurice following the director's current picture, "A Thief in Paradise," which is nearing completion. "World Without End" will be published in book form simultaneously with the appearance of the picture.

Plans for a third "Potash and Perlmutter" are under way. "Partners Again," the stage success by Montague Glass which ran for eighteen months in New York, has been obtained by Goldwyn and a director and cast will be selected in the near future.

"Stella Dallas," the novel by Olive Higgins Prouty which appeared as a serial in the American Magazine, was rated as one of the best sellers of the season and has been syndicated in more than 70 newspapers. It will go into production in the near future with a star and director to be selected at once. To this novel will go the distinction of being broadcast for the first time by radio in weekly installments by broadcasting stations in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. These readings will start two months before the picture is released.

Scenes from the Jans Production, "Playthings of Desire" with Esteele Taylor, Mahlon Hamilton, Mary Thurman, Edmund Breese, Dagmar Godowsky, Lawford Davidson, Bradley Barker and Walter Miller.

Irene Rich in "A Lost Lady," a Warner Brothers' production.

Fox's "The Iron Horse" Makes a Hit in Chicago

CHICAGO welcomed the William Fox production, "The Iron Horse," at the Woods Theatre on Sunday night, November 2, and paid glowing tributes to this masterful romance of the East and West. It was not an invitation audience that witnessed the second American presentation of this picture but one that was eager to pay toll at the box-office. When the last notes of the symphonic orchestra, conducted by Erno Rapee, died away, there was a wave of tumultous applause that continued for five minutes.

All of the Chicago critics paid glowing tributes to the William Fox production and predicted that the picture would set a new long run record. The general opinion is summed up in the words of Mae Murray of the Chicago Tribune. She wrote:

"One great picture, everything about 'The Iron Horse' satisfies. It was three years in the making and worth it."

Genevieve Harris of the Post called it "a work of true motion picture art. It is a picture well worth the making and certainly well worth the seeing."

"A great show and a virile tribute to the old West as well as a glowing chapter of its romantic and glamorous history," was the way it appealed to Ashton Stevens of the Herald-Examiner, while Carl Sandburg of the Daily News held that "it rates high as an achievement of motion picture art."

Paul Martin of the staid Journal of Commerce enthused with the striking statement: "Gave me the most thrilling evening I have ever had as a motion picture spectator. I shall see it again."

"Every one should see it," asserts Virginia Dale of the Journal, adding, "it is a thrilling picture of the West, fascinating, dramatic," and Rob Reel in the Chicago Evening American holds it "a notable achievement, a thrilling adventure, alive with comedy. Every American surely will find the picture of tremendous interest."

The preliminary campaign was conducted on a high-class plane commensurate with the standing of the production. A dignified teaser newspaper campaign was used for a couple of days, then a series of large advertisements restricted to the dramatic section. A heavy showing of stands was obtained throughout the desirable boulevard section, backed up with a sniping campaign along the suburban entrances and auto highways. This was augmented by a full run on the Illinois Central Suburban lines and on the elevated platforms. High officials of the various railroads located in Chicago were personally seen and sold on the value of the picture.

Two hundred and fifty high-class window displays of the book, "The Iron Horse," were obtained in the choicest residential sections as well as eight Loop department store windows, such as Marshall Field, Carson, Piere Scott and an especially attractive display in the windows of the Union Trust Company.

"Roaring Rails" Booked

Producers Distributing Corporation Releases Hold Los Angeles First Runs

The releases of Producers Distributing Corporation are continuing to hold a prominent place in the first-run offerings in Los Angeles and an especially high compliment has been paid to the Hunt Stromberg series of Westerns starring Harry Carey in the booking of "Roaring Rails" for the full week's run at the Forum Theatre following the presentation of Al. Christie's big feature, "Reckless Romance," this week.

"Roaring Rails" is the first big western subject that has had a full week's first-run showing in Los Angeles since the presentation of "The Covered Wagon."

Within the past six weeks, five Producers Distributing Corporation releases, including "Barbara Frietchie," "Welcome Stranger," "The Siren of Seville" and "Reckless Romance," have been given big first-run presention in Los Angeles.

"Romola" Editing Completed

Lillian Gish, star of Henry King's "Romola," and Dorothy Gish, featured player, are ready to be seen by the public in their newest and greatest roles. The editing and titling has been completed and the production was reviewed in its final form by Metro-Goldwyn executives last week. Metro-Goldwyn will distribute the big Inspiration Picture special, which was over a year in production at Florence, Italy. The verdict of those who saw "Romola" as it will be presented to the public is that Henry King's production is unquestionably one of the greatest screen achievements brought to the films.

It is claimed that the spectacular scenes in the film have never been surpassed. The story is of the time of Columbus's discovery of America and is laid in Florence. Lillian Gish is seen as a Florentine maid and Dorothy Gish as a peasant girl Tessa. William Powell and Ronald Colman have important roles.

Independent Signs Eileen Sedgwick

Eileen Sedgwick, daring serial star of Universal's "Terror Trail," has been signed by Independent to play the lead opposite Bill Cody in "Dangerous Odds," the fifth of a series of eight startling action westerns.

Pathe's "The Girl and the Gangster," a two-reel detective film.

Fox Starts New Pictures at Studio on West Coast

THREE new productions were started this week at the William Fox West Coast Studios. These new pictures include "Riders of the Purple Sage," with Tom Mix; "The Trail Rider," one of the Buck Jones star series, and "Van Bibber and the Navy," a Van Bibber Comedy.

Tom Mix has laid aside his valet cloak and swashbuckling bravado of "Dick Turpin" for the "chaps" and modern costume of a twentieth century hero in "Riders of the Purple Sage," an adaptation of the Zane Grey novel of the same name. This is the second of three productions to be made this season by William Fox from western stories by this popular writer.

Reynolds Directing

Lynn Reynolds, who directed Tom Mix in many of his best known westerns, is making this production. Edfrid Bingham made the screen adaptation. The cast, which is not complete, includes many well known screen players.

The players in the prologue include Tom Mix, Beatrice Burnham, Arthur Morrison, Cecille Ann Johnson, Warner Oland, Fred Kohler, Charles Newton and Joe Ricksen. The players in the main part of the photoplay in addition to the star are Mabel Ballin, Charles LeMoyne, Harold Goodwin, Miriam Nixon, Warner Oland, Dawn O'Day, Fred Kohler, Charles Newton and Joe Ricksen.

In Cattle Country

Buck Jones and his company have left the studios for Sonora, Cal., where a number of scenes will be taken for "The Trail Rider," with W. S. Van Dyke directing. This is a story of the cattle country and concerns the activities of a trail rider hired by a Cattle Ranchers Association to break up a band of thieves.

The story by George Washington Ogden is one of the best western stories of the year and was adapted for the use of Buck Jones by Thomas Dixon, Jr. Nancy Beaver has the leading feminine role. The other principals include such well known players as Lucy Fox, Carl Stockdale, Jack MacDonald, George Berrell, Jacques Rollens and Will Walling.

"Van Bibber and the Navy," which also was started this week, is the sixth of the series of two-reel comedies to be made from the famous Van Bibber stories of Richard Harding Davis. George Marshall is directing and R. P. Kerr adapted the stories to the screen. Earle Foxe has the lead, with Florence Gilbert playing opposite him in the chief feminine role. The other principals are Frank Beal, Lynn Cowan, Jules Cowles and William Lawrence.

Two Gerson Pictures Ready

"Too Much Youth" Is Well Received in Big New York Picture House

B. Berger, general manager of Gerson Pictures Corporation, has arrived in New York with prints of the first two of the series of Richard Holt productions being made by his organization.

These pictures are "Ten Days," written by Arthur Hoerl, and "Too Much Youth." During the week a special screening was arranged in one of New York's big uptown houses, where the picture was put on for the audience without announcement and took the house by storm. The picture screened was "Too Much Youth" and present in the audience, by invitation, were a number of representatives of national and state right distributors, as well as a number of bigger independent exchangemen of the metropolitan territory. After the showing a number of offers were made Mr. Berger for the distribution of this series of unusual comedy dramas and it is expected announcement of an affiliation will be made within the next week.

It is Mr. Berger's plan to co-operate with whatever distributor handles this product with a series of special trade advertisements over the period of the entire year, in which exhibition and exploitation features of these Richard Holt productions will be definitely pointed out to exhibitors.

"Lighthouse by the Sea" Finished

Word has been received by Warner Brothers from their West Coast studio that "The Lighthouse by the Sea," adapted from Owen Davis' famous old-time melodrama which entertained theatregoers of two decades ago, has been completed and a print will soon be ready for viewing at the New York office.

This story was adapted especially for Rin-Tin-Tin. The adaptation was made by Darryl Francis Zanuck and the direction by Mal St. Clair.

In addition to the famous dog and the featured players, Louise Fazenda and William Collier, the cast contains Matthew Bentz, Douglas Gerrard and Charles Hill Mailes.

"Should attract attention" (M. P. News)

Capacity Seattle Crowds Witness "Clean Heart"

DESPITE terrific storms and in the face of unusual competition, Vitagraph's "The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life," from A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, showed to capacity houses at the Blue Mouse Theatre, Seattle, during the whole of last week.

In the following telegram to John B. Rock, Vitagraph's general manager, John Hamrick, owner of the Blue Mouse and one of the biggest exhibitors in the Northwest, tells us what he thinks of this J. Stuart Blackton production:

"'The Clean Heart,' in spite of terrible storms all week and against strong opposition, has 'stood 'em out' every night. Audiences exceptionally enthusiastic. We are sincere in saying pictures like 'The Clean Heart' will build real patron friends for any theatre on earth, for it is one of the season's very finest pictures."

Meanwhile, just after the opening of the run at the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, newspapers in that city described this Vitagraph special as "close to the perfect photoplay."

In his writeup in the Record, Ted Taylor also praised another Vitagraph special, the David Smith production of "Captain Blood." Thus, in a list of five offerings of special merit, places were given to two Vitagraph pictures. In his review, Mr. Taylor said, in part:

"I don't know what I can say about 'The Clean Heart' to do justice to its beauty, its simplicity and its humanity. It is a great photodrama, one that (bestowed we such honors) should earn J. Stuart Blackton a knighthood with Chaplin and Lubitsch. In lights and shadows of drama, in even strength of direction, in spontaneous sincerity of acting, it is close to the perfect photoplay."

Producers Corp. Season's Program Nearly Completed

THE last three productions on the Producers Distributing Corporation program for this season are now in their final stages of production and the finished negatives will be shipped east well ahead of schedule.

"Soft Shoes," the last of the Harry Carey pictures in the current series, will be finished this week; ten days earlier than the date set for its completion and two months in advance of its release date.

"Off the Highway," the second starring vehicle for Jacqueline Logan, is being given its finishing touches by Director Ralph Ince and the negative is expected to be in the hands of the film editors within the next few days. This production is scheduled for release on January 25.

The Frank Woods production, "On the Shelf," is more than half completed at the Peninsula Studios under Paul Powell's direction and both Woods and Harris are already making preparations for the starring of the pictures on the coming season's program.

Book First National Film

Blank and Libson Circuits Close Contracts on "Sundown"

A. H. Blank and Ike Libson have closed contracts with First National for the showing of its epic of the western cattle ranges, "Sundown," over their circuits.

It will be shown in all of A. H. Blank's Omaha and Des Moines theatres and in the Lisbon theatres in Cincinnati, Louisville, Columbus and Dayton.

Jensen & Von Herberg have also contracted to show "Sundown" in their theatres in Seattle and Portland and the surrounding territory.

Lee A. Ochs, managing director of the new Piccadilly Theatre, New York, has selected Saturday, November 29, as the date of the first screening of "Sundown." The picture has been booked for two weeks.

Adds to Sales Staff

J. Wallace Jackson, formerly of the Arrow staff, has been added to the sales force of Rayart Pictures, according to an announcement. Mr. Jackson will be a special representative in the eastern territory, covering the zone from Cleveland east. Tom Curran will cover the western territory with headquarters in Kansas City while George Blaisdell, west coast producing representative for Rayart, will handle the sales as well for the west coast territory.

Titles Three Leonard Pictures

Sam Hellman's titles for the concluding three bouts of the Benny Leonard series of two-reel features produced by Henry Ginsberg are "The Jazz Bout," "His Sur-Prize Fight," and "The Come-Back."

In order to give Leonard a chance to demonstrate his versatility, Hellman wrote three widely different stories for these episodes. "The Jazz Fight" is comedy with not a little slap-stick in it. "His Sur-Prize Fight" is straight drama. "The Come-Back" is a smashing meldorama with not only a prize fight in it but a rough and tumble battle between Leonard and Jack Perry, the Pittsburgh welterweight, which is said to be as thrilling as the famous struggle in "The Spoilers."

"Nip O'Scotch," a Fox comedy.

"Galloping Bungalows," Sennett's Pathe comedy.

Three Thousand Players Making "Phantom" Scenes

WITHIN a few days Universal City will be teeming with talent—for filming start on the big grand opera scenes in "The Phantom of the Opera" this week. More than three thousand persons will appear in the huge reproduction of the Paris Opera, with a ballet of two hundred on the big stage, and the boxes and auditorium crammed with fashionable Paris types.

The interior of the Opera House, its boxes auditorium, stage, promenades, foyer and grand staircase are housed in a huge steel and concrete structure. A complete grand opera orchestra, and an entire cast for the opera "Faust" will be employed on stage and in the pit, with an audience watching. More than a thousand people will also take part in the scenes representing the brilliant Opera Ball, on the Grand Staircase, where Lon Chaney as "The Phantom," appears in scarlet robes representing "red death" to spread terror among the revelers. The Opera Ball is the big event of the Parisian social season.

The new super-production, to be Lon Chaney's successor to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is adapted from the famous mystery novel by Gaston Leroux. Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Gibson Gowland, Snitz Edwards and Anton Vaverka are among the principals. Rupert Julian is directing.

Much of the acting in the Paris catacombs and cellars has already been filmed, and from now on the mob scenes and opera sequences will be the bulk of the work. But there is one of the seventy settings which is almost completed which will be of interest to all lovers of magic. That is the famous mirrored torture chamber in which the Phantom teased his victims as a cat would tease a mouse.

The torture scene in the Paris catacombs is one of the weirdest episodes in the strange story, in which the sinister activities of "The Phantom" are contrasted with the brilliancy of the opera at the height of its season.

Cruze Begins on New Play

"The Goose Hangs High," James Cruze's next production for Paramount, has gone into production, according to an announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Among the players cast in the screen version of this successful Lewis Beach stage play are Constance Bennett, Esther Ralston, Myrtle Stedman, William Otis, Eddy Peel, Jr., Gertrude Claire and James H. Marcus. The leading male role has not yet been cast.

Ince Film a Big Hit

"Barbara Frietchie" Scores Another Success in St. Louis

Following its successful presentations in New York, Boston and the other Eastern cities already reported, the Thomas H. Ince feature, "Barbara Frietchie" scored another hit in St. Louis last week when presented at The Kings and Rivoli theatres and again the critics praised the work of Florence Vidor, Edmund Lowe and the production in its entirety.

In a three-column review of the production the St. Louis Globe said: "A whimsical love story as fragrant as a rosemary sprig. Romance, however, vies with war scenes, bits of history, historical characters and human passions and patriotism. . . . Florence Vidor makes a perfect Barbara, Edmund Lowe a handsome and tender sweetheart and the Stonewall Jackson character could not be improved upon."

The St. Louis Star said: "It is a brief course in United States history as well as a love story. It is nicely filmed in sets which look authentic."

Sixth of Series

Weiss Brothers' Latest Buddy Roosevelt Feature Ready

"Cyclone Buddy,' 'the sixth and latest of the series of eight Buddy Roosevelt action-melodramas, distributed by Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, has been completed on the Coast, according to telegraphic advices received at the Weiss Brothers' offices early this week from the Approved Pictures Corporation, producers of this popular series.

A full line of paper and exploitation accessories is being prepared on the picture, which, it is said, sets a new high mark for novelty situations and thrills in the fine record already established by this popular young star.

Hogan Selects Cast

Director James P. Hogan, of Lumas Pictures, has already selected the cast for "Women and God," on which the shooting has already been started. Prominent in the cast will be Frank Mayo and Sylvia Breamer.

"Good Amount of Audience Appeal" (Film Daily)

Indians Gave "Iron Horse" Great Box-Office Title

THE strong box-office value of the title of "The Iron Horse," the Fox Film Corporation masterpiece directed by John Ford and now in its third month at the Lyric Theatre, New York, may be directly attributed to the Indians of the western United States whose opposition to the white man and his steam engine is depicted in the screen story.

By presenting to the New York public the great influence of the Indians in not only enacting many scenes in the picture, but also in providing the original theme for the story, the producer has obtained wide interest and a general discussion of his product.

That the early American Indian mind was not so dull or inept seems to be proved in the revelation that an Indian Chief, Sitting Bull, originated the nickname, Iron Horse, for the locomotive engine. This happened back in the days of those '60's when pursuant to President Lincoln's far-sightedness, thousands of men were working to link the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans with a transcontinental railroad line.

These activities caused dire consternation and resentment in the hearts of all the Indians and when they heard wild tales of the queer, demon-like implements of motive power the pale faces were bringing into their lands, they travelled from far and near to get their eyes on the sight. Naturally, they felt the encroachment of the whites and accordingly made trouble with their crafty hostilities, Sitting Bull taking a leading part in these obstructive tactics.

A document written by Buffalo Bill (Col. William F. Cody), and which had been mislaid for years, is given the credit for revealing the truth about the origin of the compelling box-office title.

Putting Exploitation Value Into St. Regis Pictures

THE value of an exploitation manager directly on the set during the actual production of a picture, arranging at such time for exploitation tie-ups to help the exhibitors put over the picture after it its released to them, will be exemplified with the release of the first St. Regis picture, being made under the working title, "The Ultimate Good," under the direction of E. H. Griffith for Associated Exhibitors' release.

During the making of the picture, Arthur Hoerl, under whose direction the picture will be exploited, arranged for over twenty exploitation tieups with well-known natonal products of every character. Each of these tieups was carried on with the home office of the manufacturer with the result that over twenty-five hundred retail distributors, in every section of the country, in every city of any size, are not only potential co-operators for their local exhibitors, but are practically assured as boosters of "The Ultimate Good" when it is played in their locality.

Another feature which enters into method of arranging picture exploitation, is that, with the definite information available immediately upon the completion of the actual shooting of the production, it is possible to incorporate it in the campaign book for exhibitors prepared for the picture. In many cases tieups must be arranged after the completion and release of a picture, making it too often of little value to first-run bookings. The method of handling the tieups for "The Ultimate Good" makes every tieup available for every run of the picture because the tieups are ready even before the picture is completed.

Record Business Reported on Weiss' Big "After Six Days"

JULES BURNSTEIN, one of the veterans of the industry, who is traveling representative for Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures, handling special presentations of "After Six Days," the elaborate picturization of the Old Testament, returned to New York this week with glowing accounts of the box office records made by this film classic during its recent runs in various upstate cities.

Records for both attendance and receipts were smashed in Rochester, Buffalo and Syracuse, in week stands at the Family, Broadway and Crescent Theatres, respectively.

Mr. Burnstein stated that in the Family Theatre in Rochester, a house usually charging ten and twenty cents admissions, it was kept filled to overflowing at both afternoon and evening performances at a fifty-cent top for the entire run, breaking records hitherto made by this theatre. For exploitation, Mr. Burnstein was enabled only to use the regular newspaper advertising and heralds.

In Buffalo and Syracuse people were turned away at every performance in both cities.

Starts New Western

"Red Clay" to be on the White List; Marcelaine Day as Leading Woman

Word has just come from Universal City that William Desmond is starting on a new big western picture for Universal. It is entitled "Red Clay," and is being directed by Ernst Laemmle, a newcomer among the directorial ranks of Universal features.

"Red Clay" is from the pen of Sarah Saddoris and tells a strong story of a modern Indian chief, who is educated and who becomes a hero during the war.

Casting for "Red Clay" has been completed. Universal has taken pains to give Desmond strong supporting players. His leading woman will be Marcelaine Day, a Mack Sennett favorite, recently signed up by Universal on a long term contract. George Grandee also has been signed for this picture. Others in the cast will be Lola Todd, Billy Sullivan and Albert J. Smith.

Metro Signs Goldstein

Massachusetts Circuit Is Latest in East to Take Product

Arrangements have been recently concluded whereby the Goldstein Brothers Circuit in Pittsfield, Holyoke, Springfield, North Hampton, Westfield, Palmer and Ware, all in Massachusetts, will exhibit Metro-Goldwyn pictures in their various theatres. The Goldstein is one of the large number eastern circuits which have recently contracted for the exhibition of Metro-Goldwyn pictures, many such organizations throughout the country having signed with Metro-Goldwyn during the intensive sales campaign waged during October in connection with the celebration of Metro-Goldwyn weeks.

Edward M. Saunders, western general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn, recently reported on this drive as follows: "The theatres are doing better business, not only with our pictures but pictures in general. Good crops, $1.75 wheat and general increasing prosperity has helped. Exhibitors are optimistic and rightfully so. Then, too, exhibitors knew that the Metro-Goldwyn merger meant a producing organization with the greatest collection of directors and producers imaginable. They expected good product. They got it."

"Curlytop" Being Edited

Director Maurice Elvey is busy cutting and titling "Curlytop," the fifth of the William Fox program features starring Shirley Mason, which has been completed at the William Fox West Coast studios.

This is one of the well known "Limehouse Nights" short stories by Thomas Burke and the screen adaptation was done by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. Wallace MacDonald plays opposite the star and the balance of the cast includes Warner Oland, Diana Miller, George Kuwa and Ernest Adams.

Change in Title

Pathe announces this week that the title of the Hal Roach comedy, "Meet the Wife," scheduled for release December 7th, has been changed to "Meet the Missus." The picture features Glenn Tryon supported by Blanche Mehaffey and a strong comedy cast consisting of Al Hallett, William Gillespie, Joseph Morrison and Helen Gilmore. Fred L. Guiol and Roy Clements co-directed.

Principal Receives Enthusiastic Comment on "Iron Door" Film

ENTHUSIASTIC comment on Harold Bell Wright's "The Mine With the Iron Door," a Sol Lesser presentation, produced by Principal Pictures Corporation, is pouring into the offices of Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal, from all parts of the world. Wardour Films, Ltd., which is handling the European rights, has cabled that it has big bookings which were obtained solely on the popularity of Harold Bell Wright, known as "the greatest living author, and whose books have been read by 50,000,000 people. President Cohen, of the Inter-Globe Export Corporation, handling all of the European rights to Wright's works, reports to Mr. Lesser that never before has his organization known such a big box-office attraction for England, France, Germany and Australia.

"The Mine With the Iron Door" has had test runs on twenty-six of the principal cities of the United States, and every run has proved highly successful. The Modern and Beacon, Boston, in which houses it was played day and date, came close to the house records. The Warfield, San Francisco, and the Criterion, Los Angeles, reported big runs. The picture opens at the Madison, Detroit, on November 23 and at the Strand, Minneapolis, the following week. It has been booked for the entire Southern Enterprises Circuit; for the A. H. Blank Circuit and other prominent circuits.

Principal Pictures is conducting an elaborate exploitation campaign in connection with "The Mine With the Iron Door." Ted Malone, who handled the exploitation in large cities of Harold Bell Wright's "When a Man's a Man," working under the supervision of J. M. Loughborough, exploitation and advertising manager for Principal, is handling the second Harold Bell Wright picture. He had charge of the Boston showings and then went to Wheeling, West Virginia. From there he went to Detroit.

Other exploitation men out are Frank Deuprey, Texas and Oklahoma; George Eckstrom, the Northwest; Elmore Boltwood, Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio; Charles Lackland, the South; Edward Brodsky, Southwest.

Up to the present time the box-office records of "The Mine With the Iron Door" exceed those of "When a Man's a Man."

Work now is proceeding on the next Harold Bell Wright story to be produced by Principal, "The Re-Creation of Bryan Kent." In the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Mary Carr, Zasu Pitts and others equally distinguished.

Wall Street Setting

Buster Keaton to Cavort in Region of High Finance

Wall Street is the setting of Buster Keaton's "Seven Chances." This play originally produced by David Belasco, is Rio Cooper Megrue's play that has had one of the most successful careers of any stage comedy in years. The play has been adapted by Jean Havez, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman, and the comedian himself is directing. The cast selected by Lou Anger, general manager of the Keaton studios, consists of T. Roy Barnes, Snitz Edwards, Marion Harlan, Loro Bara, Doris Dean, Peggy Pearce and Alma Bramley.

Reviewers Bestow Praise on Vitagraph's Sabatini Super

CAPTAIN BLOOD," the Vitagraph special, produced under the direction of David Smith, is scoring a hit in its run, at the Globe Theatre, Philadephia. The Philadelphia Public Ledger said in its review:

At last an altogether satisfactory picture is to be seen, to be lived through and to take you far away from any daily annoyance."

The North American said:

"The picture possesses all the elements of a crack tale of adventure. Unlike most films, the continuity follows almost exactly the action of the book."

Said the Inquirer:

"'Captain Blood' is a good picture, measuring well up to the standard of shows of its type, with splendid scenes and a strong plot. There are magnificent sea scenes."

Following the opening of the run in Dayton, O., Murry Powers wrote in the Herald of that city: "If you would see a picture that is out of the ordinary, a picture that forgets about sex and the eternal triangle, and if you are tired of seeing the frothy screen bills that are given us these days, you will enjoy this Sabatini story with its competent players."

Norman Clark wrote in the Baltimore News: "A good pirate yarn—that's the stuff! 'Captain Blood,' the photoplay at the Metropolitan, is a good pirate yarn."

Leonard Taking Vacation

Benny Leonard, film actor and lightweight champion, is taking a brief vacation before returning to his two professions. In addition to preparing for the boxing bout with the victor in the lightweight elimination tournament being held by the New York State Boxing Commission, Leonard will make a number of personal appearances in motion picture and vaudeville theatres in connection with his new film, "Flying Fists."

"Flattery" Available

Chadwick Obtains It Because of Exhibitors' Tribute to Chadwick Nine

Inspired by the stream of letters and wires that keep pouring into his offices from exhibitors all over the country commending him for the great box office merits of the Chadwick Nine, I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has completed arrangements to distribute another big feature to independents this season, "Flattery," produced by the Mission Film Corporation under the direction of Tom Forman.

"Flattery" is not included in the Chadwick Nine but is an added picture to his program this season. It has a real all-star cast, John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, Alan Hale, Grace Darmond, Larry Steers, Edwards Davis and Lewis Morrison.

Survey Shows Short Subjects Popular, News Reels Leading

PATHE has conducted a thorough survey lasting over several months to determine the popularity of its product and the reasons therefor. The investigation disclosed the fact that the most popular screen product today among the foreign show-going public of America is the news reel. Theatres having a strong patronage of foreign element reported that this interest was due principally to the fact that persons of foreign birth unfamiliar with the English language, needed no titles to let them know what was going on in a news reel.

Exhibitors throughout the country are gradually coming to the realization of the importance of the news reel to their program from an exploitation standpoint. As an example, a certain exhibitor, located in a French neighborhood settlement in Chicago, bannered the front of his theatre for the Pathe News that carried the scenes of the funeral of Anatole France, the famous French author. This is only one instance. There have been hundreds reported to the Pathe Home Office in the past few months. Possibilities for proper presentation of these subjects have shown themselves to the exhibitor.

News reels, screen magazines, Reviews and one reel comedies have become a standard product with a mass appeal that makes them a necessity to almost every kind of program.

As an example, twelve years ago, or thereabouts, the Pathe Weekly was established. Since then it has developed into what is known as the Pathe News and is issued twice weekly, but so deeply has the term "Pathe Weekly" imbedded itself in the minds of the public that the name Pathe News never occurs to them.

Metro-Goldwyn Promotes Alice Joyce to Stardom

ALICE JOYCE becomes a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star with her engagement to enact the leading role in Frank Borzage's first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "A Man's World." Percy Marmont has been signed to appear opposite her. In the screen version of Zoe Akins' play, "Daddy-Goes-a-Hunting," retitled for picture purposes, Miss Joyce will have the role that Marjorie Rambeau created with great success on the stage in Arthur Hopkins' production. The story, a dramatic one, is that of a wife who turns elsewhere for love and happiness when her husband "goes-a-hunting" amorous adventures away from home. It offers Miss Joyce one of the finest roles she has had the opportunity to play.

In "The Green Goddess," a Distinctive picture starring George Arliss and released by Metro-Goldwyn, Miss Joyce returned to the screen and established herself as big a favorite as ever in her career. "A Man's World" is expected to be one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's biggest hits of the screen. It will be Frank Borzage's first production for the company, and this in itself assures a greatly successful picture. Borzage was signed by Marcus Loew last spring, but until the present he has not taken up the megaphone for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He is now collaborating with Kenneth Clark on the adaptation of the play.

Following Completion of Editing Laboratories Will Forward Copies to Exchanges

Exchangemen throughout the country who have contracted to distribute "The Early Bird" along with "The Speed Spook" and "The Crackerjack," featuring Johnny Hines, received heartening news this week when Producer C. C. Burr announced that in order to meet the demands of the states-right distributors on this production for early issue, he has arranged with Lyman-Howe Laboratories to put in special overtime service in order to get the prints out as speedily as possible.

Final shots of "The Early Bird" were completed at the Jackson Studio last week, and as soon as the continuity and cutting of the picture are completed the negative will be shipped to the laboratories, which in turn will facilitate shipments to the exchanges.

Producer Picks Next Film

Renaud Hoffman to Produce "The Unknown Soldier"

Renaud Hoffman, who is now working on "On the Threshold," the first of his new pictures for release by Producers Distributing Corporation, has selected "The Unknown Soldier" as the second production in the series.

"The Unknown Soldier" will be an adaptation from the French story that is creating a sensation abroad and in all probability the leading feminine role in the film version will be played by Gladys Hulette, who is now playing opposite Henry B. Walthall in "On the Threshold."

Dorothy Farnum is now preparing the script for "The Unknown Soldier" and Hoff man will start the picture immediately upon the completion of the current production.

Sign With Warner Bros.

The policy of Warner Brothers recognizing talent and holding on to it was exemplified this week by the signing of Hope Loring and Louis Leighton, talented scenarists, for another year in recognition of the good work they have done since going with the firm about six months ago.

Report Big Bookings for Fox's "Dante's Inferno"

THE big success of the William Fox production of "Dante's Inferno" in New York and Chicago is being duplicated in the leading key cities throughout the country. This screen version of Dante's classic of literature is finishing the seventh week of a big run at the Central Theatre in New York and has entered the third week of an unlimited engagement at the Munroe Theatre, Chicago.

In Philadelphia it was necessary to hold "Dante's Inferno" over for a second week. In Washington, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Denver and Oakland, Cal., this picture scored a tremendous success.

Contracts have been closed recently for "Dante's Inferno" to be shown at the Fenway Theatre, in Boston, a Famous Players-Lasky house, and also at Poli's Lyric Theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., and at the Strand Theatre in Hartford, Conn. Recent bookings in the Middle West for this picture which have been approved by the home office of Fox Film Corporation include the Circle Theatre, Cleveland, Temple Theatre, Toledo and a day and date engagement at the Kings and Rivoli Theatres in St. Louis, Mo. Some of the big engagements on the West Coast will be at the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco; Heilig Theatre, Seattle; the leading theatre in Portland, Ore., of the Jensen and Von Herberg Circuit and the Criterion Theatre, Los Angeles.

"Fear-Bound" Finished

Will Nigh's Vitagraph Picture Made in Ramapo Mountains

Will Nigh finished work this week on the Nigh-Smith production, "Fear-Bound," and the first prints will soon be ready to show to the executives of Vitagraph, which will distribute the special. The company spent some time on location near Tuxedo, in the Ramapo Mountains of New York, and the interiors were "shot" at the Tec-Art studios in New York City.

Besides being the producer, the director and playing an important role, Will Nigh is also the author of the story.

Marjorie Daw plays opposite Mr. Nigh. Others in the cast are Niles Welch, Louise Mackintosh, Ed F. Roseman, James Bradbury, Jr., Warner Richmond, Dexter MacReynolds, Jean Jarvis, Frank Conlan and Bill Gudgeon.

Conrad Nagel to Have Lead

With the announcement from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio executives that Conrad Nagel, Claude Dillingwater and Dale Fuller have been signed for leading roles in Robert Z. Leonard's production of "Cheaper to Marry," production is expected to get under way at once. Three other important roles remain to be filled and prominent players are now under consideration. "Cheaper to Marry" was one of the biggest Broadway successes of last season, written by Samuel Shipman.

Adds to "Judgment" Cast

Entering the third week of production on his latest First National picture, "Judgment," by May Edginton, Frank Lloyd has added three more well known names to the roster of the picture—Phyllis Haver, Joseph Girard and Robert Bolder.

Antonio Moreno, Patsy Ruth Miller, Ruth Clifford and David Torrence are featured in "Judgment."

"Lover of Camille" Hailed at Its Broadway Opening

BIG business and generally satisfactory newspaper notices greeted "The Lover of Camille," which opened its Broadway, New York City run, at the Piccadilly Theatre, Broadway and 51st Street, on Saturday, November 8.

This is a Warner Bros. Screen Classic adapted from the famous stage play, "Deburau," by Sacha Guitry, through arrangement with David Belasco, which ran for so long in New York, London and Paris.

The reviews of the picture by the New York press were generally good, particular stress being laid upon the strong love interest; the general tone of the comments being that it is surely a love-interest production with a special appeal to audiences who like a blend of love and humor.

Monte Blue and Marie Prevost are featured, and the New York newspapers made special mention of the fine emotional work of Miss Prevost, who in this picture, according to the papers, rids herself forever of the last vistage of her Sennett bathing girl reputation, and establishes herself firmly as an emotional actress, as well as the comedienne of talent, which she has demonstrated in recent Warner Bros.' productions.

The audience, says the press, liked the picture, which was given intelligent interpretation by Willard Louis, Pierre Gendron, Rose Dione and Winifred Bryson in addition to the featured players.

Ince Completes Cast

With the addition of Jacqueline Logan and "Buster" Collier, the cast has been completed for "Playing With Souls," a Thomas H. Ince production for First National release.

Scenes from Banner's "Those Who Judge," featuring Patsy Ruth Miller. The production was directed by Burton King.

"The Best Are Yet to Come," Paramount Officials Declare in Announcement

ALTHOUGH the Second Famous Forty have been announced, Paramount reminds exhibitors and bookers in an announcement not to overlook the fact that there are still pictures in the First Famous Forty scheduled for release.

In re-announcing the unreleased pictures in the first group, Paramount officials say:

"The best of the First Famous Forty are yet to come. Gloria Swanson in 'Manhandled' will have a profitable successor in 'Wages of Virtue'; Rudolph Valentino is scheduled to appear during the middle of this month in 'A Sainted Devil'; Pola Negri has completed 'Wages of Virtue' under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch and advance criticisms are wildly enthusiastic; Thomas Meighan in 'Tongues of Flame' is nearing completion; Cecil B. DeMille is producing Wallace Irwin's great novel, 'The Golden Bed'; Herbert Brenon is painstakingly proceeding with 'Peter Pan,' Sir James M. Barrie's classic, which Director Brenon hopes to make the classic of his career; 'The Garden of Weeds' with Betty Compson which James Cruze is bringing to completion, and 'Argentine Love' with Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez, produced by Allan Dwan, are all further assurances that the high figures established by the earlier productions in this group will be continued by these later pictures.

"Prior to the First Famous Forty no other single group of pictures ever showed so many gold medal winners, speaking in terms of box office figures, as the first pictures in the First Famous Forty line-up."

"It is no more than likely that if exhibitors were awarding gold medals, 'The Covered Wagon' would have won one, and so would have Gloria Swanson in 'Manhandled,' Rudolph Valentino in 'Monsieur Beaucaire'; those marvelous Zane Grey productions, 'Wanderer of the Wasteland' and 'The Border Legion,' and Betty Compson in 'The Enemy Sex.'

"This enthusiasm isn't merely Paramount's pride of possession, but a reflection of what has been said day after day by the exhibitors, the press and the public.

"Paramount made a promise for the First Famous Forty, and those pictures in this group which have already been released more than vindicate the promise.

"The pictures already released have repaid exhibitors handsomely in business and prestige for their confidence in Paramount, and now they are to be followed by others of equal or greater box office strength.

"The same factors in their success, publicity, advertising and exploitation, will be carried on even more vigorously so that nothing shall be left undone which might mean bigger business for these later pictures in the First Famous Forty group.

"This is the order of their release, beginning with 'Merton of the Movies,' which has been pre-released in Chicago and New York, and which will be followed by Richard Dix in his first starring picture for Paramount, 'Manhattan.'"

"MERTON OF THE MOVIES"

Not since "The Covered Wagon" have critics been so unanimously in accord on a picture! Without a single dissenting voice they have acclaimed "Merton of the Movies" as a "cinema gem" and "one of the greatest comedies of the year." And the public has backed up the judgment of the critics by flocking to those theatres where pre-release showings have been held.

As a picture, "Merton" is a delightful mixture of wistful drama, magnificent burlesque and keen satire. Walter Woods, who is responsible for the adaptation, and James Cruze, the director, have taken full advantage of the many opportunities the screen affords. They have incorporated comedy situations and bits of "business" that add immeasurably to the entertainment value of the story.

Glenn Hunter, who created the title role on the stage, is also the star of the picture. Viola Dana has the featured feminine role. The other members of the exceptional cast include De Witt Jennings, Charles Ogle, Ethel Wales and Gale Henry.

"WAGES OF VIRTUE"

"Wages of Virtue" is another ideal screen vehicle for Gloria Swanson. It offers her an opportunity not only to display her flashing dramatic ability but to exhibit her versatility as a comedienne. The story, a thrilling, romantic drama of the French Foreign Legion, was adapted by Forrest Halsey from the popular novel of the same name by Capt. Percival Wren.

Allan Dwan, who produced the picture, has surrounded Miss Swanson with a strong supporting cast. Ben Lyon (courtesy of First National) has the leading male role; Norman Trevor, a prominent stage star, is also well cast, and Ivan Linow, the famous wrestler, plays the villain.

"MANHATTAN"

As this is being written, the newspapers are singing the praises of Richard Dix's first starring vehicle, "Manhattan," pre-released at the Rivoli Theatre, New York. The public's enthusiasm over Dix's work in this picture is looked upon as proof that Paramount was fully justified in elevating him to stardom.

The success of this production is due, in no small measure, to the skilful adaptation of Frank Tuttle and Paul Sloane, both of whom were recently promoted to the directorial ranks. R. H. Burnside directed the picture.

"Manhattan" is based on Jeffery Farnol's novel, "The Definite Object." Jacqueline Logan is the girl for whom Dix braves all the dangers. Gregory Kelly, the well known stage star; Gunboat Smith, the famous professional fighter, and George Seigmann are among those present in the supporting cast.

"A SAINTED DEVIL"

After an absence of two years from the screen "Rudolph Valentino staged a "come back" in "Monsieur Beaucaire" that is still making motion picture history in box office receipts and in the record-breaking crowds it is drawing wherever it is being shown. "A Sainted Devil," his second Famous Forty picture, is awaited with keen expectations because it is recognized that in this production he has a role similar to that which won him fame in "The Four Horsemen" and "Blood and Sand." The story, which Forrest Halsey adapted from Rex Beach's novel, "Rope's End," is a vivid romance of Latin-America.

The supporting cast includes Helen D'Algy, a newcomer in Paramount pictures. Nita Naldi does some high-powered vamping and Louise Lagrange has a sympathetic role. Dagmar Godowsky also has a prominent role, and the rest of the cast, with George Siegman, Raphael Bonginl, etc., is of equally high calibre.

"WORLDLY GOODS"

Everybody is familiar with the "show-off" type of man who promises much but never delivers; who is always on the verge of making a million; who glibly speaks of "putting over a big deal" and breezily informs you that the captains of industry are forever pestering him to advise them.

"Worldly Goods," in a series of comedy-dramatic situations, shows you the tragedy and humor of such a marriage between a clever and charming young girl, able to earn her own living, and an easy-going, bluffing sort of man.

Agnes Ayres, who stars in the picture, and Pat O'Malley, who plays opposite her, make their respective characterizations stand out as real flesh-and-blood human beings. Victor Varconi, Edythe Chapman, Bert Woodruff and Maud George are some of the other members of the cast.

"FORBIDDEN PARADISE"

Hailed as "the greatest Pola Negri triumph to date" and showered with the most extravagant praise by the critics who viewed it at Graumann's Million Dollar Theatre in Los Angeles, "Forbidden Paradise," Ernst Lubitsch's Paramount production, starring Pola Negri, is destined to be one of the greatest box office attractions of the year.

This special production is an adaptation by Agnes Christine Johnson and Hans Kraly of the stage success, "The Czarina," by Lajos Biro and Menyhert Lengyel, in which Doris Keane starred last year in New York. In the screen version Pola has the role of the able, beautiful and brilliant queen of a mythical Balkan kingdom.

Rod La Rocque, Adolphe Menjou and Pauline Starke are the featured members of the notable supporting cast.

"THE CITY THAT NEVER SLEEPS"

All the vitality and humanness of Leroy Scott's story which electrified the literary world when it first was published in McCall's magazine under the title "Mother O'Day," has been preserved by the scenarists, Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway in this James Cruze Production. The result is a picture play loaded with all those sure-fire elements that delight the heart of the average film fan—jazz, pathos, comedy, lavish settings and gorgerous clothes.

Throughout the picture is lightened with those subtle touches of humor that characterized his former successes. The cast is a hand-picked one and includes among others Louise Dresser, Virginia Lee Corbin, Kathlyn Williams and Ricardo Cortez.

"THE GARDEN OF WEEDS"

James Cruze and Betty Compson, the same winning team responsible for the success of "The Enemy Sex," have again pooled their talents in the Paramount production, "The Garden of Weeds." The picture was adapted by Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway from the play of the same name by Leon Gordon and Doris Marquette.

Briefly the story concerns a triangular love drama in which is involved Philip Flagg, a wealthy but unscrupulous New York broker, Dorothy Delbridge, a beautiful, refined show girl and Douglas Crawford, a capitalist of very fine character.

The supporting cast is thoroughly up to the fine work of Miss Compson. Warner Baxter, Rockliffe Fellowes, Charles Ogle and Al St. John are the featured members of a strong cast.

"TONGUES OF FLAME"

The more sympathy it gets—the bigger the role, any actor will tell you. Then Thomas Meighan has one of the biggest roles of his career in "Tongues of Flame."

This is the last novel written by Peter Clark Macfarlane before his untimely death, and describes how thirty years ago a certain Boland and his partner, Conlon, stole a large tract of land from the Indians. Today, the story shows, three towns have been built upon the property and Boland is the big man of his community.

Joseph Henaberry is the director. In the supporting cast Mr. Meighan has Bessie Love, Eileen Percy, Burton Churchill, John Miltern, Leslie Stowe, Nick Thompson, Jerry Devine and Kate Mayhew.

"NORTH OF '36"

Written by Emerson Hough, author of "The Covered Wagon," produced by Irvin Willat, there is every good reason for expecting "North of 36" to be one of the big pictures of the later productions in the First Famous Forty. Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Jack Holt have the leading roles.

The story deals with the settling of Texas by pioneers who were forced to endure and overcome handicaps as severe or worse than those who followed the trails of the covered wagons in '49.

"ARGENTINE LOVE"

Vicente Blasco Ibanez has never failed to write a successful screen story. That alone would be assurance that "Argentine Love" is headed right for the special memorandum book of pictures that played to big figures. Featured in the cast are Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez. Allan Dwan has just finished the production.

"LOCKED DOORS"

One of the strongest casts of recent film productions has been assembled and is now at work in William De Mille's production "Locked Doors," written by Clara Beranger expressly for production by William De Mille. Betty Compson, Theodor von Eltz, Robert Edeson, Theodore Roberts and Kathlyn Williams are the principal players.

"TOMORROW'S LOVE"

Not so long ago, "Tomorrow's Love" was published in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Interlocutory," written by Charles William Brackett. It was immediately recognized as first-rate motion picture material. The story deals with a young couple who have been divorced but must wait one year, according to the interlocutory decree, before the divorce becomes final.

Agnes Ayres, as the almost grass widow, and Pat O'Malley, as the innocent husband who finds himself in love with the woman he thought he had been divorced by, are the featured players. Paul Bern directed.

"EAST OF SUEZ"

Pola Negri has an entirely new type of girl to portray in this colorful drama of the East which Raoul Walsh has just put into production for Paramount.

Miss Negri goes into this exacting part with the buoyant confidence inspired by the advance reports on "Forbidden Paradise." Raoul Walsh undertakes the production better equipped than ever by his direction of "The Thief of Bagdad." This combination of ability, reinforced by the fact that both artists have scored tremendous hits, argues for great results from this production which Sade Cowan has adapted from W. Somerset Maughan's famous novel.

"MISS BLUEBEARD"

Bebe Daniels should be perfection in the role of "Miss Bluebeard." It is fast wholesome and extremely rich comedy based on the wager of a young French girl that she can win a proposal from a bachelor who has vowed never to marry.

Avery Hopwood in collaboration with Gabriel Dregely, is responsible for the stage success.

Frank Tuttle, who will direct, prepared the script. Raymond Griffith and Robert Frazer will be features of the cast.

"THE GOLDEN BED"

Exhibitors need only be told that "The Golden Bed" is a Cecil B. DeMille production to know that audiences who have come to expect certain things of this producer will find them all in overflowing measure in this picture.

Jeanie Macpherson adapted the story from Wallace Irwin's fast selling novel of the same name, which appeared first in serial form in Pictorial Review.

The plot revolves around a boy who is born in the slums but rises above his environment.

An imposing cast has been assembled, the featured players of which include Rod LaRocque, Vera Reynolds, Lillian Rich, Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff, Julia Faye, Henry Walthall, Robert Edeson and Robert Cain.

"A MAN MUST LIVE"

Richard Dix has in "A Man Must Live" some of the features that counted so heavily in the success of his first starring vehicle, "Manhattan."

The story is based on the theory of "the jungle law"; the law of self preservation. Jacqueline Logan is again leading woman.

"COMING THROUGH"

Here is a story that has its foundations on the bed-rock of what it takes to make a box-office picture.

Thomas Meighan will have a strong successor to "Tongues of Flame" in this production which will be the first to be directed by Eddie Sutherland.

The story was written especially for Mr. Meighan by Booth Tarkington and describes how Irving Blackford, an almost obscure employee marries the daughter of the president of the Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Company.

Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez in "Argentine Love," which has been produced by Allan Dwan.

"Paul Jones, Jr.," another of William Fox's Van Bibber series.

Greatest Showman Theme Ever Used, In "Capital Punishment"

THE biggest exploitation and advertising campaign of the year will be put behind the release of B. P. Schulberg's special production, "Capital Punishment," according to J. G. Bachmann, who will handle the distribution details for this picture.

"'Capital Punishment,'" says Mr. Bachmann, "has the most tremendous box-office theme ever attempted. It is not propaganda in any sense but a great dramatic story revolving around a question that is engaging public interest not only in this country but throughout the entire civilized world.

"It is only necessary to pick up any newspaper to discover the scope of its importance. 'Capital Punishment' has received millions of dollars worth of free advertising during the past three months. Thousands of editorials have been written around it during the past three months, and debates such as the one recently held in New York between Clarence Darrow and Judge Talley are taking place in every large city.

"Every person who reads the papers or is interested in the problems of the day is a prospective admission to 'Capital Punishment.'

"Special advertising to the public will be launched in various distribution centres, and careful attention will be given to furnishing exploitation aids to exhibitors who show this picture."

"Greed" World Premiere in New York in December

"GREED," Erich von Stroheim's masterpiece, nearly two years in production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will have its world premiere in December at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York. This information was wired east today by William Randolph Hearst, president of Cosmopolitan Corporation, which operates the Cosmopolitan Theatre. Mr. Hearst reviewed "Greed" on the West Coast, where he is at present, and was so impressed by the big special that he offered his Cosmopolitan Theatre to Marcus Loew for the New York run of "Greed." It will be the first time that any motion picture other than a Cosmopolitan production will have been presented in the Cosmopolitan Theatre.

The presentation of "Greed" at the Cosmopolitan will be in the hands of S. L. ("Roxy") Rothafel and his staff of the Capitol Theatre. As the Capitol presentations are famous throughout the country for their artistry and entertainment qualities, which have placed them in a class by themselves, the Rothafel presentation of "Greed" promises to be one of the unusual features of the engagement.

In announcing the world premiere of "Greed," Mr. Hearst stated unqualifiedly that this von Stroheim production is "absolutely the most powerful motion picture" he has seen.

"Greed" is now in the completed form in which the public will see it, and those who have previewed the picture, including film critics as well as leading executives in the industry, declare, like Mr. Hearst, that Erich von Stroheim has created a production which will astonish the screen world and mark a milestone in the progress of motion picture art. Based on the Frank Norris novel, "McTeague," and adapted to the screen by von Stroheim and June Mathis, the picture is a powerful drama. The desert scenes actually filmed in Death Valley, where von Stroheim took the company, are the most gripping and unusual motion pictures have seen.

The stellar cast includes Gibson Gowland, ZaSu Pitts, Jean Hersholt, Cesare Gravina, Chester Conklin, Sylvia Ashton, Austin Jewell, August Sieppe, Oscar Gottell, Otto Gottell, Dale Fuller, Frank Hayes, Fanny Midgley, Hughie Mack, Joan Standing, Jack Curtis, Tempe Pigott, James Fulton, Jack McDonald, Lon Poff, Max Tryon, Erich von Ritzau, William Mollenhauser, Hugh J. McCauley, S. S. Simon, William Barlow, Mrs. E. Jones, Mrs. Reta Rebla, J. Libbey, Florence Gibson, James Wang and James Gubson. Cedric Gibbons is art director.

New Pathe Review Feature

"Prettiest Girl" Feature Being Produced; to Run in Chapter Form

Pathe announces the production of a feature for Pathe Review to be known as "The Prettiest Girl I Know" series.

This series of pictures will be run in chapter form in the screen magazine in keeping with the new policy established. The first story of "The Prettiest Girl" series was made with the aid of Coles Phillips, the illustrator, who even the sourest cynic must admit has a fairly good idea of a good-looking girl. The second of the series will be "Beauty on the Beach."

Later sections of the feature will show Ned Weyburn, the celebrated Broadway stage director, with members of the fair sex whom he considers pretty.

In their entire form these subjects average about five hundred feet but are not run in that length at one time. Sections of the film run serially in the Pathe Review, much the same as a story in a magazine is carried over to the following issue.

Park Books Rayart Film

The Park Theatre, in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, New York, had the unique distinction of being the first theatre in the world to show a picture bearing the Rayart trademark.

The first Rayart Pictures were scheduled for release on the third of November, but several days before that date the management of the Park got in touch with Harry Thomas manager of Merit's New York exchange and arranged for an immediate showing starting the first of November of the Rayart Special "The Pell Street Mystery" one of a series of six Metropolitan Melodramas featuring George Larkin, and advertising was rushed though in order to accommodate the Park management.

A High Rating

A rating of 90 per cent., which means a valuation of "excellent," is given the David Smith production, "Captain Blood," Vitagraph's special, by Screen Opinions in its current issue. The same adjective, "excellent," is used in valuing each of the several qualities which contribute to the success or failure of every picture: photography, story, author, cast, direction, technique.

Nineteen features are analyzed in this number of Screen Opinions, the rating running all the way from 50 per cent. upward. The general average of the pictures considered is 72 per cent.

"East of Broadway"

Human Interest and Wholesome, Amusing Comedy Makes Associated Exhibitors Feature Pleasing

Reviewed By C. S. Sewell

Under the title, "East of Broadway," Associated Exhibitors are offering an entertaining picture based on Richard Connell's magazine story, "Where Is the Tropic of Capricorn?" The wide divergence in the two titles is due to the fact that one refers to the locale of the story and the other to one of the main incidents.

This picture deals with the efforts of a typical lad of the East Side of New York to "get on the cops," as he calls it, that is, to become a policeman, despite the fact that he is not only deficient in height but does not measure up to the mental qualifications laid down by the commissioner, as evidenceed by his reply to the above question that it is "In the Bronx." He lands the job, however, by proving his courage and mettle in subduing two crooks.

The hero and in fact most of the characters are Irish, and there is a strong thread of good light-hearted humor, with a lot of human interest and a nice balance of pathos, plus a pretty little romance. Though some of the situations are improbable and the director has taken liberties with police procedure, it is a picture that will bring a lot of smiles to the face, with an occasional tug at the heartstrings; the kind that should provide satisfactory enjoyment for the majority and cause them to say a pleasant word for it.

Owen Moore is well cast and thoroughly likeable as the chap who wants to "get on the cops." Marguerite de la Motte as the shy little runaway orphan, always afraid of being sent back, gives a good performance and gets full sympathy despite a lack of plausibility in some of the situations in which she is placed. Mary Carr, as always, shines in a lovable motherly type of role and Eddie Gribbon contributes effective comedy as the hero's pal. Ralph Lewis as the police commissioner whose high ideas as to the qualifications of a policeman are held up to ridicule gives a good performance and so does Francis McDonald as a villain. George Nichols contributes a strong note of human interest as an elderly policeman of the old regime.

Story

Peter Mullaney, a typical boy of the poor section of New York's East Side longs to become a policeman. He goes to the training school but is turned down because he is not up to the standard of height, until he demonstrates his prowess by knocking down a big bully. The Commissioner who has high ideas of the necessary mental equipment to improve the force, gives him a chance if he rates high in the written examination. The question that stumps him is "Where is the Tropic of Capricorn." He answers, in the Bronx. Turned, down, he begs permission to wear the uniform one night, in order not to disappoint his sweetheart Judy. His chance comes when burglars invade a house and shoot his friend Officer Gaffney. Peter knocks both out but lands in a hospital himself. When he recovers, the Commissioner pins a policeman's shield on him and he declares his love for Judy.

"Reckless Romance"

Hearty Laughs Abound in Producers Distributing Company's Diverting Comedy

Reviewed by Beatrice Barrett

Exhibitors seeking that hard-to-find attraction—a comedy which really makes the audience laugh and sends them home with a smile—should not overlook Producers Distributing Corporation's "Reckless Romance," for it will do both of these things.

The producers have not relied on the fun alone to put this picture across but start you out with a cast of characters which will make everyone stop and look over the paper outside your theatre. T. Roy Barnes, Sylvia Bremer, Tully Marshall, Harry Meyers and Wanda Hawley all in one picture is a cast to be reckoned with.

"Reckless Romance" will not tax anyone's brain nor make them think—but it will make them laugh and have a good time, and that really is what most people seek when they pay their money at the box office. The laughs are in the situations as well as the action, and the action moves along so swiftly and with such variety that it seems as if something funny was happening every minute. Some of the action borders on the slapstick but never quite goes over the line. This picture was reviewed in a theatre and in some places the audience simply shrieked and there was a steady ripple of laughter over the house all through.

Most of the comedy situations are entrusted to T. Roy Barnes and Wanda Hawley with Harry Meyers hovering around to contribute his bit of hilarity when desired. And these three have risen to the occasion with lots of pep and understanding.

The scenes in which the young bride is trying to frame a compromising scene with the husband's best friend so she can get a divorce and grandpa's money, with well intentioned friends interfering and insisting upon saving them, will send any audience into gales of laughter. Another scene sure to cause hilarity is the one in which the young lover to impress his sweetheart corrals a board of directors on the impulse of the moment by forcing all the waiters to sit at his table in the restaurant.

Jack Dulcy as the sporty old grandfather adds the near slapstick element which will afford additional mirth to those who like buffoonery with their comedy.

A number of new and different situations—just bits many of them—but every one good for a laugh—gives this comedy an atmosphere of freshness and getting away from the beaten path which is very diverting.

Story

Jerry Warner and Edith Somers are in love but Judge Somers will not allow them to marry because Jerry shows no signs of being a business man. Jerry's uncle sends him ten thousand dollars to set him up in business and Judge Somers tells him if he has that money at the end of six months he can marry Edith. Jerry invests half of it in oil stock which Judge Somers says is worthless. Chris and Beatrice Skinner, just married, receive word from Chris' grandfather that he will stop the allowance because he does not like the girl. They decide to get a divorce and remarry after Chris has Grandpa's money. For ten thousand dollars Jerry poses as the co-respondent and they frame a scene for Grandpa to see. But their plans go awry. Chester becomes jealous and says he will get a real divorce and Edith catches them in a compromising position. It all turns out all right with Grandpa approving of Beatrice, Jerry explaining to Beatrice and the oil stock proving to be valuable.

"The Beloved Brute"

J. Stuart Blackton's Newest for Vitagraph Has Forceful Story, With Splendid Action and Suspense

Reviewed By C. S. Sewell

J. Stuart Blackton invades the West for his locale in "The Beloved Brute," his newest production for Vitagraph, but in no sense is it a conventional western, for there are no cattle or cowboys, no rascally foreman, crooked sheriff or bandits. Except for its locale and vigorous action, it has little in common with the usual western, except the rescue scenes where the heroine rides for the sheriff's posse to save the hero and his brother from being lynched.

Not only is this picture quite different from Mr. Blackton's usual type of productions but is an unusual picture in many respects. At the same time, it does have characteristics of Mr. Blackton's work, a strong underlying note. First, it has a decidedly out-of-the-ordinary type of hero, a man who at the first has all the characteristics of a ruthless villain, an unshaven, rough-looking, powerful brute whose life has been spent in licentiousness and fighting, so much so that his own father on his deathbed upbraids him and prophecises his downfall at the hands of his own brother. How this man broods over this proprecy, how his better instincts are awakened by a woman, she does not reform him but gives him the incentive to find himself, and how he is redeemed through offering himself as a sacrifice for his brother, who does not recognize him, furnishes the outline for this story.

While the dominant idea is the delineation of the unfoldment of this man's character, the picture is in no sense lacking in punch and action. Mr. Blackton has finely directed this production, bringing out the tremendous force of the man and making the melodramatic situations strongly dramatic. The story gets your interest right at the start and holds it in a firm grip throughout. There is excellent suspense of the nerve-tingling variety. In a word, it is an unusually forceful and out-of-the-ordinary production that should be well liked by the majority of patrons, and prove a first-rate box office attraction.

Much of the hold that this picture has upon the interest and emotions is due to the truly excellent portrayal of Victor McLaglen in the title role. We do not recall having seen him before, but in a difficult role where he has to change a feeling almost of abhorrence to strong sympathy he is ideal and makes the character human, realistic and forceful.

A feature of this picture is an excellent wrestling match in which the father's prophecy is fulfilled by the vanquishing of the hero at the hands of his brother. William Russell appears in the other role and stripped down for action they appear pretty well matched and the bout looks like the real thing. Ring fights have proven their appeal and we believe the public is going to like this wrestling scene.

Stuart Holmes as a half-breed Chinese dive keeper and crook is just about as despicable a villain as one could imagine and his make-up is excellent. William Russell gives a satisfactory portrayal of the subordinate role of the brother and Mary Alden is excellent as the fortune-teller. Marguerite de la Motte is satisfactory as the girl; but, after all, it is the force of the story, Mr. Blackton's direction and Mr. McLaglen's fine performance of the title role that makes this picture one of strong audience appeal.

Story

Some unaccountable force causes Charles Hinges to return to his father, who upbraids him for riotous living and brutality and tells him a man with a soul, his brother David, whom he has not seen since childhood, will prove his master. Charles, brooding, returns to a dance hall where China Jones, a halfbreed is keeping Jacinta, a dancer, virtually a prisoner. She enlists Charles' aid by playing up his strength and in a fierce fight with China's aids he rescues her. The two and an old fortune-teller start out as a traveling troupe. In a small town, Charles is finally vanquished by his brother David in a wrestling match, and believing he has lost Jacinta's love sends her away. David persuades her to go with him. China is killed, and seeing a chance to get rid of David who is a reformer, the saloon-keeper prepares to lynch him as the murderer. Charles appears and tries to take the blame, so they decide to lynch both. Jacinta rides and gets the sheriff's possee after forcing the fortune-teller to confess and saves them. She rushes to David and he knows then that she loves him. David finally discloses his identity to Charles.

"My Husband's Wives"

Shirley Mason and Bryant Washburn in Fox Picture of Barbara La Marr Story

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Probably most of the men and women who will see Shirley Mason in "My Husband's Wives" can't boast of more than one marital adventure, but nevertheless they—the women especially—will find much of interest in this story of what happens when a chap's ex-wife competes with his present wife for his affections. Barbara La Marr's story provides food for serious thought and yet creates situations that would make excellent farce comedy. Maurice Elvey, who directed the picture for Fox, has seemed to have some difficulty in welding drama and comedy together. However, the picture does possess dramatic force and presents some good comedy.

But it does seem that more obvious comedy might have been injected for capable little Shirley Mason. This angle isn't always stressed as much as it might have been without injurious effect to the drama. The situations revolving about the ex-wife's visit with the new wife, who doesn't know her husband's past history, could have been made the opportunities for lively fun but Director Elvey chose to favor the dramatic angle.

To Shirley Mason belongs the credit for the best work of any player in the picture. She is a pretty and a convincing actress, and does more than her share of the work. Bryant Washburn, sporting a mustache, is just fair as the husband. He gives the impression of being hampered by over-direction. Evelyn Brent as the grass widow shows the modern vamping technique—clinging arms and appealing eyes.

In a word, "My Husband's Wives" will satisfy many audiences because it deals with a rather unusual situation in the life of a married couple and there is good comedy but it lacks virility.

Length, 4,509 feet.

Story

Vale Harvey did not care about knowing her husband's past, so she did not know he had been married before and that Marie Wynn, an old school chum of hers, had been his wife. She invited Marie to visit her and the ex-wife immediately began trying to regain William Harvey's affections. The truth finally dawns on Vale and William evicts Marie, who advises Vale to hereafter listen to her future husbands when they start to disclose their pasts.

"The Rip Snorter"

Arrow Western Starring Dick Hatton Has Snap and Action and Especially Good Broncho-Busting

Reviewed By C. S. Sewell

As the newest of the series of features starring Dick Hatton, Arrow Film Corporation is offering a Ben Wilson "Great-Western," "The Rip Snorter," in which the star is supported by Marilyn Mills and her two trained horses, "Star" and "Beverly."

This picture follows the outline of the vast majority of westerns with a hard-riding, hard-fighting hero, with a villainous foreman who is in league with bandits and a heroine who has just returned to the ranch from the East. There is the inevitable conflict between hero and villain, and the kidnapping of the heroine and her rescue by the hero.

This familiar material has been handled in a thoroughly acceptable manner and situations have been introduced which add to the interest. Notably, an especially thrilling punch scene in the early part of the film where the star rides a supposedly untamable horse. Hatton certainly gives a fine performance of horsemanship by the way he manages to stay on this animal as it bucks and plunges. He has an easy-going, likeable personality and a naturalness that fits in well with the atmosphere of the story, and he also shows to advantage in the snappy fight scenes.

The star's support is entirely satisfactory. Marilyn Mills is attractive as the girl and Robert Walker is a capable villain. Miss Mills' two trained horses add to the interest and an especially good, even if somewhat improbable, scene shows one of them coming to her rescue when she is imprisoned and carrying a note to the hero.

There is considerable comedy, centering largely around the efforts of a spinster to find romance and the manner in which all of the cowboys fight shy of her. Quite a few of these scenes are amusing, and there is even a touch of slapstick in some, but this angle is kept up until it appears forced and loses some of its humor.

Altogether, "The Rip Snorter" has all of the elements which have proven their appeal in this class of productions, plus a comedy element and extra good riding and "bronk" busting and it should prove a pleasing attraction for "western" fans.

Story

Willis, the foreman of the Saunders ranch taunts Dick about being a fourflusher and bets him he cannot ride a wild horse, the Killer. Dick succeeds and Saunders starts with him to take money to the bank. Randall a bandit hired by Willis waylays them but Dick routs him and captures Willis but keeps mum. Willis lures Betty Saunders to the bandits home and imprisons her while he goes for a minister. Betty manages to send a message to Dick by her trained horse. Dick comes to the rescue and thrashes Willis after Betty had felled the bandit with a chair. He whispers to the minister that he will probably need him later.

"The Silent Accuser"

"Peter the Great" Gives Marvelous Performance in This Thrilling Metro-Goldwyn Drama

Reviewed by Tom Waller

Success should be assured for box offices high and low when "The Silent Accuser" is their selling product. This Metro-Goldwyn picture is one of the finest dog starring vehicles that we have ever seen. The one or two violations of reasoning that the plot is allowed to commit would be glaringly obvious were it not that the uncanny acting of that wonderful canine, Peter the Great, furnishes such profound study and absorbing interest.

The narrative is centered around the dog and commands attention, with rapidity of movement and abundant thrills, from the very start to the finish. In view of this fact the sacrifice of some plausibilities may have proven necessary.

Were it not for Peter and his feats of prowess being consistently featured throughout the entire production we fear the sympathy of the average audience would be greatly lessened at the very opening, resultant in the body of the story weakening as to the interest angle. This is due to the commital for life imprisonment of a man whose innocence could, by circumstances leading up to the murder, have been easily proven. Failure to produce such evidence, however, makes the dog the sole witness of the crime. He aids his innocent master to escape from prison and captures the real criminal.

The scenes in the jail where Peter gains the confidence of the warden and acquires access to his master's cell, his delivery of messages between the prisoner and his sweetheart, and his fight with the guards in holding them off while his master makes an escape, are truly remarkable.

The canine's pursuit of the villain, across river and valley; his mighty leaps over canyons and attack upon the scoundrel are too vivid and absorbing for verbal description.

Eleanor Boardman gives a fine portrayal of the role of Barbara Jane, and Raymond McKee makes an excellent hero. As the villain Earl Metcalf encounters real peril. At times it seems that he is being torn to shreds by the teeth of the enraged dog.

"Easy Pickin's"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

There is a good farce comedy idea running through this Christie two-reeler distributed through Educational and it has been worked out so as to afford a lot of amusement for the majority of patrons. Two lovers visit a fortune teller who pictures the husband as a loafer and spendthrift refusing to even carry the hod and making his wife slave. The girl breaks off the engagement. Her father tries to prove the fortune-teller a fake, but through the aid of the hero most of the prophecies come true. The hero learns the truth, after he had paid a fighter to lay down in order to make the last prophecy come true. He puts the other fellow out of business and takes his place. Then follows one of the most laughable prize fights ever screened. It is a screaming burlesque, with each fellow laying down on the job and force the other fellow to knock him out, the hero tries to explain but the other fellow won't believe him. Finally the hero gets his opponent real mad and gets knocked out when he jumps out of the ring and kisses the other fellow's girl. After it is all over, of course he wins the girl who is convinced of her error. This is a crackerjack comedy that will cause the most hardened to laugh.—C. S. S.

"Love's Sweet Piffle"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Mack Sennett comedy featuring Ralph Graves, with Thelma Hill and other well known comedy players, possesses more than the average amount of entertainment, combining thrills with humor. It is the old story of the middle-aged bridegroom about to snatch off the young and beautiful maid. In this case the hero interrupts as a masked bandit in the real "Mark of Zorro" way and runs away with said bride. Would-be husband, wedding guests and parents pursue via automobile and aeroplane, contributing the thrills mentioned above. Then the comedy seems to go back to the days of the Red Man, for feathered Indians effect capture of pursued and pursuers, but the tried and trusty hero finally overcomes them. Thelma Hill's good looks are especially worthy of note in this subject, and Graves does some good acting.—S. S.

"Speed, Boys"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Century comedy distributed by Universal is one that will especially please the kiddies. The cast is composed of a bunch of youngsters, with little Arthur Trimble and a pickaninny called Bubbles as the featured players and Spec O'Donnell in an important role. Kid like, these urchins are continually getting into mischief. First, Spec tries to get rid of his freckles when taunted by his girl, and the others substitute ink for the lotion. Most of the footage deals with the adventures of the children while running a miniature train. Bubbles has his troubles with a little girl of his own color and Spec flirts with a little Miss. Arthur, to get even, dressing up as a girl and makes a hit with Spec, who pays so little attention to business that he wrecks the train. Arthur certainly makes an attractive little miss, as he is a pretty child. There is quite a bit of wholesome humor in this offering.—C. S. S.

(Red Seal—Cartoon—One Reel)

Here we see the energetic clown of Max Fleischer's Out of the Inkwell series departing on a vacation. The first locale sketched for him is too hot, so the artist provides another, with a mule the chief source of entertainment. Then a pleasure resort appears on the screen, with everything made of rubber. It is good comedy.—S. S.

Many personalities of national importance are seen in Issues J, O and T of these cartoons by Marcus, artist of the New York Times. Some of the transformations from one person to another are very clever. "Are Blond Men Bashful?"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This Arthur Stone comedy is Hal Roach's third Stone release through Pathe and was co-directed by James Davis and Nick Barrows. Stone is supported by James Finlayson, Katherine Grant, Robert McKenzie and Jack Cooper. The action revolves around a country farmhouse and the contest of two men for the hand of a fair maiden. Toward the end of the picture striking scenes are introduced, showing a water carnival and a multitude of merry mermaids. The humor averages fairly well, with moments of effectiveness and moments when it seems that the action is slowed up by the presentation of too much detail. Figuring largely in the early part of comedy is the familiar nose-gay that squirts water. Stone, who comes to the screen from vaudeville, does creditable work.—S. S.

"Paul Jones, Jr."

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

This is a merry comedy in the Van Bibber series with the action occurring on board a sailing vessel. The "hero" knows as much about sailing as a reformer about a drinking song, but a tricky fate decrees that he shall be skipper to his sweetheart and a bunch of girl friends. The crew turns out to be a crowd of bootleggers. They manhandle him severely until fate swings to his side and a series of fortunate coincidences gives him control of them. This subject has much good acrobatic stuff and is well acted. These two features, coupled with the fact that "Paul Jones, Jr.," has much more of a story than usually is found in a two-reel comedy, make it worthwhile entertainment on the average program. Earle Fox has the chief role.—S. S.

"Out of the Storm"

(Pathe—Drama—Two Reels)

This is the third of the series of four "True Detective Stories" based on data gathered by Major Ross D. Whytock, war correspondent. It details the adventure of an assistant district attorney with a criminal gang that kidnaps him and steals papers convicting one of its members of murder. The film depicts how the police dragnet is drawn around the gang and the attorney rescued. A cast consisting of Leslie Austin, Ed. Roseman, Nellie Burt and other does some clever work, and this two-reel subject ought to please most audiences. Some of the best acting is done by Nellie Burt as the supposed victim of the hypnotist, and Ed Roseman again scores as an unusually effective villain.—S. S.

"Good Old Circus Days"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

Here we have another Paul Terry cartoon of the Aesop's Film Fables series. It shows all the animals and a few humans arriving at the circus and some of the acrobatic stunts they witness under the big tent. Suffice it to say that Paul Terry scores again.—S. S.

"Cut Loose"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

Phil Dunham and Virginia Vance are the featured players in this single-reel Cameo comedy distributed by Educational, but Miss Vance appears in only a few scenes. Dunham, as a chap who has imbibed too freely and starts out to visit a friend in a bungalow, supplies all of the comedy. He has all sorts of trouble getting into the house finally mounting a bus and entering the second story. He is scared by animal skin rugs, skids on the slippery floor and mixes things up generally, in the end he gets on a bus that runs away. The comedy gags are of the familiar type associated with persons who have sampled pre-Volstead stuff too freely and are mildly amusing, but hardly up to the Cameo standard.—C. S. S.

"Should a Husband Tell?"

(Red Seal—Comedy—One Reel)

This is one of the Gems of the Screen Series, a Cranfield and Clark Special, and by a series of fade-backs illustrates the story a married man tells his wife after an evening out. The scenes show how his "important business engagement with a Scotch business man" really was a cabaret date with a girl, and how too great indulgence in that which intoxicates, rather than indigestible food, was responsible for his pathetic condition the morning after. There is some good trick photography and editing in this, and it ought to please most audiences.—S. S.

"Finger Lakes"

(Fox—Instructive—One Reel)

In the Iriquois section of Northern New York there are five lakes known as Finger Lakes. Their name originates from their contour and juxtaposition to each other. Seen from surrounding mountains they are like the fingers of an enormous hand, and the legends of the Red Men had it that the Great Spirit once laid his hand on that country and blessed it. This Fox reel shows the beauties of these bodies of water and of surrounding glens and waterfalls. It is one of the most interesting scenics the writer has seen recently.—S. S.

Pathe Review No. 47

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

This reel embodies scenes from U. S. Navy seaplanes flying over Hawaii which show that charming island from a new angle and bring out interesting facts about its beauties and land formation. Every bit of it is well worth seeing. Part 2 of the series of "Keeping Fit" instructions makes up the second part of the reel, disclosing valuable information on how to keep the "body engines running right." The series is based on a book by a former physical director of New York City schools. The third subject is a Pathecolor on American birds.—S. S.

Some of them are: A negro baptismal rite, a circus, the Panama Canal, Yellowstone Park, the police war on gambling and dope, an unexplored section of Nevada, the similarity of an ape to a human, Mirror Lake near Seattle, black bears, a duck farm and Niagara Falls. All of the shots are well angled and the subjects are of interest to everybody. This subject is gotten out by Max Fleischer of the Inkwell Studios.—S. S.

"White Man"

B. P. Schulberg Offers Story of Romance and Adventure Against a South African Background

Reviewed By C. S. Sewell

"White Man," a Preferred picture distributed by B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc., and directed by Gasnier, is a South African story of adventure and romance. The plot hinges on the situation of a young woman who, to escape marriage to a man she does not love, persuades an unknown aviator to take her away in his machine.

This situation, while implausible, opens the way to sequences which are interesting and contain considerable drama. This man, who hides his identity and is known only as "White Man," takes the girl to his jungle home where he is surrounded by black natives. Despite a certain ruthlessness of manner, he treats her with respect and love comes to them. They both realize it when another white man, an opera singer who is a fugitive from justice, kidnaps her and White Man rescues her. But even then she will not give in, and it is only after he has taken her back to civilization and she learns who he really is that she confesses her love.

The jungle atmosphere is well reproduced and there is a fascination to this part of the picture that is enhanced by excellent photography, especially some night shots with excellent light effects. The conflict between these two and the mystery surrounding the man holds the attention. There is a good fight scene and a thrilling climax in which the hero in his aeroplane crashes through the roof of the villain's hut at the exact moment to rescue her.

Alice Joyce gives a good performance as the heroine, with Kenneth Harlan capably cast as the hero. Walter Long shows to advantage as the villain.

Mr. Gasnier has given the picture good direction, although some of the points in the story are not clearly brought out; for instance, as to just why the hero has gone to the jungle. It should prove a pleasing attraction to patrons who like romance and adventure even when probability is stretched. The dramatic value of the story is strengthened by the concentration of the action in the hands of only three players, hero, heroine and villain; all of the others are of exceedingly minor importance.

Story

About to be married to a wealthy South African mine owner whom she does not love, Lady Andrea Pellor rebels after she gets her bridal gown on, and seeing an aeroplane on the beach begs the aviator to take her away. He consents and takes her to his home in the jungle, where she is forced to stay, as the henchmen of his enemy the River Pirate have splintered the propeller and it takes weeks to send for a new one. The hero is a disappointed, disillusioned man seeking to forget and is only known as White Man. He respects her but treats her with a touch of brutality. Lady Andrea contracts jungle fever and he nurses her back to health, and they love each other but her training makes her hide it. The River Pirate pays them a visit and after a fight kidnaps Lady Andrea. White Man goes in his aeroplane, crashes through the roof of the house and rescues her. He then takes her back to civilization. He follows and turns out to be her brother's war buddy. Finally she confesses her love as he is about to return to the jungle.
